

T
1A
1914

v.1, C.1

THE LIBRARY OF
THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
LOS ANGELES

SCHOOL OF LAW

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF AGENCY

INCLUDING NOT ONLY A DISCUSSION OF THE GENERAL SUBJECT

BUT ALSO

SPECIAL CHAPTERS ON
ATTORNEYS AUCTIONEERS BROKERS AND FACTORS

By FLOYD R. MECHEM, LL. D.

AUTHOR OF MECHEM ON PUBLIC OFFICERS, MECHEM ON SALES, ETC.; FORMERLY TAPPAN
PROFESSOR OF LAW IN THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN; PROFESSOR OF LAW IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

SECOND EDITION
IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOLUME I

CHICAGO
CALLAGHAN AND COMPANY
1914

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1888, by

FLOYD R. MECHEM,

In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

Copyright, 1914,

by

FLOYD R. MECHEM.

114
1914

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION

The writer would deem himself sadly lacking in appreciation if he did not at the outset endeavor to express the gratitude he feels for the exceedingly kind reception extended to the first edition of this work, and for the unfailing support which has been given to it during the past twenty-five years. He sincerely trusts that in its revised form the book will be found worthy of continued favor.

A new edition should have appeared many years ago, but the writer has not been able to supply it until now. To properly prepare such an edition is no trifling task. Outside of the time required for his regular work of teaching, the writer has worked hard and steadily upon this edition for more than ten years. The entire book has been revised, and, in large measure, rewritten. The writer has made no attempt to make it a mere digest of the cases. Neither has he endeavored to cite every case. Hundreds of cases have been examined and discarded because they were so purely cumulative or so relatively unimportant as not to seem to justify the use of space in citing them. Nevertheless the citation of new cases will be found very extensive. The writer has felt that if, after working more or less constantly in this field for so many years, he could contribute anything of value to the profession, it would be in endeavoring to analyze and weigh the general principles which underlie the subject. This he has attempted to do, and he has stated his conclusions freely, though, he hopes, not without due consideration and becoming modesty. That he will be found to be justified in all of his conclusions, he has no right to hope.

It seems desirable to point out,—what perhaps sufficiently appears from the text itself,—that, although the title Agency in modern times is quite frequently made to include the relation of Master and Servant as well as that of Principal and Agent, this book is primarily designed to deal with the latter subject, and the former subject is dealt with only incidentally and for the purpose of rounding out the discussion of the latter. The proper discussion of the law of Master and Servant, in all of its bearings, would require volumes, rather than the few sections which can be given to it here.

The general arrangement and classification have not been materially changed, but the great addition of new matter has made it necessary to number the sections anew. It is hoped that the index will be found sufficiently specific to enable those who are familiar with the old edition to find what they are looking for in this one.

Although the amount of matter in this edition is nearly three times as great as that in the first edition, it has, by the use of a large page and very generous measure, been kept within the compass of two volumes.

It is proper to say, so far as it bears upon the citation of recent cases, that more than a year has been consumed in putting the book through the press.

FLOYD R. MECHEM.

The University of Chicago,

June 1, 1914.

PREFACE TO FIRST EDITION

What here follows is the result of an earnest endeavor to make a reliable, useful and comprehensive statement of the law of Agency, including not only its general form, but certain also of its more important special forms. How far this effort has been successful, those who use the book can alone determine.

The plan pursued has been to state in as clear and accurate form as possible, the principles of law involved, supported by a full citation of the authorities, and to illustrate and fortify these statements by examples and quotations from leading and characteristic cases. Upon doubtful questions there has been given, either in the text or in the notes, a more or less full presentation of the conflicting views, and the writer has endeavored to extract from them what seemed to him to be the true principle. This has involved, in many cases, an expression of his own opinion, for which he is, of course, alone responsible.

For the benefit of those to whom complete libraries are not accessible,—and they embrace the great majority of the profession,—he has, in many instances, made the statements of cases and the excerpts from the opinions of the courts, fuller than might otherwise seem necessary. While this course has added to the size of the book, the writer hopes it has also added proportionately to its value. If he has erred in this regard, it is the error of a too abundant caution. To further increase the practical usefulness of the book he has, at the expense of no little additional labor, given parallel references to those excellent series of reports, the American Decisions, American Reports, American State Reports and Moak's English Reports, as well as to the various Reporters and Law Journals. In several of the States the law of agency has been, to a greater or less extent, reduced to the form of a code. The more important of these statutory provisions will be found collected in the Appendix.

The work is divided into five parts or books. Of these, the first four are devoted to a general exposition of the law of Agency, while the fifth contains a consideration of the law applicable to Attorneys, Auctioneers, Brokers, and Factors. That this method of treatment involves something of repetition is true, but in the writer's opinion the advantages of consecutive and separate treatment more than compensate for it. The subjects of ship and bank officers, and others sometimes treated in works upon agency, have not been separately dealt with, not only because they belong more appropriately to other topics, but because the size of the work would not permit of it. Each of the four separate forms treated might well be, as each has been, made the subject of an independent treatise, and to compress them into single chapters prevents exhaustive discussion. It is believed, however, that no important principle has been omitted, and that what these chapters lack will be matter which is cumulative or of detail only. Trusting that his work will be of use to those for whom it was intended, the writer submits it to the profession.

FLOYD R. MECHEM.

16 and 17 Bank Chambers,
Detroit, October 1, 1888.

TABLE OF CONTENTS, VOL. I.

BOOK I

OF THE RELATION IN GENERAL; HOW CREATED AND TERMINATED

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Meaning of agency.....	1
Forms of acting.....	2
Lines of distinction.....	3
Other forms	4, 5
Direct and indirect representation.....	6
Degrees of authority.....	7
Nomenclature adopted.....	8
Is there a law of agency?.....	9
Agency belongs to a commercial age.....	10
Agency a modern title in our law.....	11-15
Agency in Roman law.....	16-20
Other historical references.....	21
Agency in modern Continental systems.....	22
The early treatise on agency	23
Legislation in English and American law.....	24

CHAPTER II.

DEFINITIONS AND DISTINCTIONS

Agency defined.....	25
Principal and agent.....	26
Parties involved.....	27
Relation usually a voluntary one.....	28
— Authority created by law—Authority by necessity.....	29
Contractual — Consensual	30, 31
Agency as status	32
Agency as a contract relation.....	33, 34
Contract of agency—Power of attorney defined.....	35
How agent compares with servant.....	36, 37
— Distinction often immaterial—Tendency to ignore it.....	38
— Occasionally distinction important.....	39

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

How agent compares with independent contractor.....	40
Public instrumentalities like post, telegraph, etc., not usually agents..	41
Agency differs from trust.....	42, 43
Agency to be distinguished from sale.....	44
— Agency to buy or sale.....	45, 46
— Agency to sell or sale—Goods.....	47, 48
— — Land.....	49
— How question determined—Law or fact.....	50
Agency differs from partnership.....	51
— From lease	52
— From license	53
— From bailment	54
— From borrowing	55
Classification of agents.....	56
1. Actual and ostensible agencies.....	57
2. Universal, general and special agents.....	58
— Basis of distinction.....	59
— Definitions resulting—General agent	60
— Special agent	61
— Mere messenger	62
— Person used merely as mechanical aid or instrument.....	63
— How many of each one principal may have.....	64
— Same person may be a general and a special agent.....	65
— Not special because limited to a particular business.....	66
Uses of these distinctions.....	67
— Difficulty of determination.....	68
— How determined	69
3. Special forms of agency—Professional and non-professional agents..	70
— Attorneys at law.....	71
— Auctioneers	72
— Brokers	73
— Factors or commission merchants.....	74
— Traveling salesmen or "drummers".....	75
Officers of ships.....	76
Partners	77
Bank Officers	78

CHAPTER III.

FOR WHAT PURPOSES AGENCY MAY BE CREATED

Object of this chapter.....	79
General Rule—For any lawful purpose.....	80
Exceptions—Illegal and personal acts.....	81

I. UNDERTAKINGS CONTRARY TO LAW OR OPPOSED TO PUBLIC POLICY

Preliminary considerations	82
In general—Contracts of agency in such cases are void.....	83
How these cases regarded in law.....	84

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

What elements the rule involves.....	85
— The element of contingent compensation.....	86
Distinction between validity of contract and lawfulness of service....	87
What cases here considered.....	88

1. Employment to do Acts prohibited by positive Law

Employment to commit crimes, misdemeanors, trespasses, etc.....	89
Employment to carry on forbidden occupation.....	90
Employment of unlicensed person.....	91

2. Employment to do Acts opposed to Public Policy

Employment to secure legislation—lobbying.....	92, 93
— Legitimate services	94
— Ambiguous cases	95
— How far contract affected by illegal acts done under it.....	96
Obtaining consent of property owners.....	97
Procuring contracts from government or heads of departments.....	98
— Illustrations	99
— Contrary views	100
Services in prosecuting claims.....	101
Compromise of crime.....	102
Encouragement of crime—Agreements to defend future violations....	103
Services in securing appointment of office.....	104
Same rule applies to private offices and employments.....	105
Services in improperly influencing elections.....	106
— What services legitimate.....	107
Services in securing pardons.....	108
— How when conviction illegal.....	109
Services in procuring or suppressing evidence.....	110
Unlawful dealing in stocks and merchandise.....	111, 112
Employments creating monopolies or in restraint of trade.....	113
Employment to induce violation of contracts.....	114
Deception or defrauding of third persons or the public.....	115
Voting trusts	116
Marriage brokerage	117
Corruption of agents, corporate officers, etc.....	118
Corruption of public officers.....	119
Other cases involving same principles.....	120
Agent must participate in unlawful purpose.....	121
Whole contract void when entire.....	122
Distinction between illegal and merely void contracts.....	123

II. ACTS OF A PERSONAL NATURE

Personal duty, trust or confidence cannot be delegated to agent.....	124
Illustrations—Voting—Affidavits—Statutory requirements	125
— Assignments—Wills—Marriage	126

CHAPTER IV.

WHO MAY BE PRINCIPAL OR AGENT; AND HEREIN OF JOINT PRINCIPALS AND AGENTS

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of this chapter.....	127
------------------------------	-----

I. WHO MAY BE PRINCIPAL

What considerations involved.....	128
General rule—Every person competent to act in his own right.....	129
Private corporations	130
Public corporations	131
Partnerships	132
Incompetency—In general	133

1. Persons Naturally Incompetent

Persons of unsound mind—Idiots, Lunatics, Habitual Drunkards, etc..	134
— Contracts through agents usually voidable.....	135
— Torts of their servants or agents.....	136
Drunken persons as principals.....	137
Ratification or disaffirmance by these persons.....	138

2. Persons Legally Incompetent

Who included	139
Infants as principals.....	140
— Infant's appointment of agent generally held void.....	141
— Ratification by infant.....	142
— Further concerning rule.....	143
— Dissent—Exceptions	144
— How in reason.....	145
— Effect of proposed rule.....	146
— Liability of infant for torts of agent or servant.....	147
Married woman as principal—Not at common law—Now generally by statute	148
— How agent appointed by—General effect.....	149
— Liability of married woman for torts of agents or servants.....	150
Aliens—Alien enemies	151

II. WHO MAY BE AGENTS

In general	152
------------------	-----

1. Competency in General

What questions involved.....	153
Less competency required in agent than in principal.....	154
Infant as agent.....	155
Child as agent of parent.....	156
Parent as agent of child.....	157
Slaves as agents.....	158

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Women	159
Married women—As agents for third person.....	160
— Illustrations	190
— Assent inferred from conduct.....	191
— Rules stated	192
Inchoate corporations	193

2. Execution in Behalf of Joint Principals

Authority usually to be executed in behalf of all jointly.....	194
--	-----

IV. JOINT AGENTS

Authority to several agents.....	195
Legal effect of appointing joint agents.....	196
— Notice to one—Liability of one for acts of others.....	197
Private joint agency must usually be executed by all.....	198
Public agency may be executed by majority.....	199
— Committees—Boards—Directors—Majority of quorum.....	200

CHAPTER V.

OF THE APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORIZATION OF AGENTS BY THE PRINCIPAL AND THE EVIDENCE THEREOF

Purpose of the chapter.....	201
Questions which are not here considered.....	202
— Authority created by law.....	203
— Authority resulting merely from relation of parties.....	204
— Authority by necessity.....	205
Subject here considered is appointment and authorization of agents...	206
What considerations involved.....	207
Partnerships as agents.....	174
Alien enemies as agents.....	175

2. Disqualification from Adverse Interest

What here included.....	176
One cannot be agent if duty and interest conflict.....	177
One cannot usually be agent of both parties.....	178
One cannot be both party and agent for opposite party.....	179
Other party as agent to sign memorandum under Statute of Frauds....	180

3. Incompetence from Lack of Professional Standing

Lack of professional standing may disqualify.....	181
---	-----

III. JOINT PRINCIPALS

One person as agent for several.....	182
--------------------------------------	-----

1. Appointment by Several Principals

Usually all must unite in appointing.....	183
— Joint power must be contemplated.....	184
Partners	185
Joint tenants and tenants in common.....	186

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Associations—Clubs—Societies—Committees	187
— How assent may be given.....	188
— Liability may be limited to funds.....	189
Wife as agent for husband—1. In domestic affairs.....	161
— Wife as domestic manager.....	162-164
— Authority when no domestic establishment.....	165
— Wife may bind herself although domestic manager.....	166
Wife as agent for husband—2. In non-domestic affairs.....	167
— Wife as husband's sub-agent.....	168
Husband as agent for his wife.....	169
— Usual attributes attach.....	170
— Proof required	171
— Statutory provisions	172
Corporations as agents.....	173
Use of persons as instrumentalities is not appointment of agents—Acts done in presence and by direction of principal.....	208

I. HOW AGENT MAY BE APPOINTED AND AUTHORIZED

Two persons involved here.....	209
--------------------------------	-----

1. On the Part of the Principal

Only by the act of the principal.....	210
The method to be pursued.....	211

a. Authority to Execute Instruments under Seal

Such authority must be conferred by instrument under seal.....	212
— Authority to fill blanks in deeds and bonds.....	213
— Estoppel	214
— How when seal superfluous.....	215
— How when instrument executed in presence and by direction of principal	216
— How when principal adopts deed prepared by another.....	217
— Instrument not good as deed sometimes effective as contract.....	218
Appointment by corporations.....	219
— To execute deed of corporate realty.....	220

b. Authority required by Statute to be in Writing

Common law rules do not require written authority.....	221
Statutes often require it for selling or leasing land—English Statute of Frauds	222
— American statutes requiring writing.....	223
— Acknowledging or recording.....	224
Statutes requiring written authority in other cases—Suretyship—Writ- ten instruments	225
Employments for more than one year.....	226
What writing sufficient when writing required.....	227
c. In other Cases Authority may be conferred by Words or Conduct
No formal method required.....	228
By parol—To sell or lease land.....	229

TABLE OF CONTENTS

xiii

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— To purchase land.....	230
— To deliver deed.....	231
— To demand and collect rent.....	232
— To find purchaser for land—Employment of broker.....	233
— To grant licenses respecting land—To sell standing timber.....	234
— To subscribe for stock.....	235
— To execute written instruments not under seal.....	236
— To fill blanks in written instruments.....	237
— To buy or sell goods.....	238
— To “accept and receive” under statute of frauds.....	239
Authority may be partly written and partly oral.....	240
Authority need not be express—Authority by implication.....	241
Conferring certain powers by the creation of others—Incidental powers	242
— Customary powers	243
— Powers established by the course of business.....	244
— Powers resulting from estoppel.....	245
— General rule	246
Intention to create agency.....	247
Names not controlling.....	248
When principal’s act becomes effective.....	249

2. On the Part of the Agent

In general	250
Agent must be notified of appointment.....	251
Agent must accept appointment.....	252
— How acceptance established	253

II. EVIDENCE OF APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORIZATION

Purpose of this subdivision	254
Authority must be proved—Burden of proof.....	255
Authority under seal or in writing.....	256
Written authority—When must be produced.....	257
— Collateral inquiry	258
— Unnecessary writing	259
In other cases may be proved by parol—By any competent witness....	260
By informal writings—By conduct—By facts and circumstances.....	261
By proof of agency on other occasions.....	262
By acquiescence in or recognition of similar acts.....	263
— Acquiescence to show expired authority apparently continues....	264
— Acquiescence to construe authority	265
By acts so open or notorious as to justify inference of acquiescence...	266
By regular and public exercise of office or agency.....	267
Presumptions based upon ordinary course of conduct—Answering let- ters, telephone, etc.....	268
By proof of an express authority to which this is an incident.....	269
By proof of a custom covering the case.....	270
By proof of an established course of dealing.....	271
By ratification	272

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Limitations upon these rules	273
What facts sufficient—Illustrations	274-280
What facts not sufficient—Illustrations	281-284
Agent's authority cannot be established by his own statements or ad- missions	285
— When admissible	286
— To show attitude or intention of parties.....	287
— Mere order of proof not material.....	288
Or by his own acts only.....	289
Or by general reputation.....	290
Agent must be called as a witness.....	291
— Agent's testimony—Effect	292
How question of agency determined—Court or jury.....	293
— Construction of writing for court.....	294
— Effect of undisputed facts for court.....	295
— In other cases for jury	296
— Court should instruct jury as to their functions.....	297
Burden of proof	298
Amount of evidence required.....	299
Whose agent is he	300
— Stipulations declaring—Testimony of parties.....	301

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE APPOINTMENT OF AGENTS BY OTHER AGENTS, AND HEREIN OF DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY

In general—What here included	302
Same Subject	303

I. OF DELEGATION BY THE AGENT

What included here	304
Delegatus non potest delegari	305
The general rule	306
Judgment and discretion not to be delegated.....	307, 308
Attorneys may not delegate personal undertaking.....	309
Arbitrators may not delegate their duties.....	310
Auctioneers, brokers and factors may not delegate.....	311
Executors, etc., may not delegate.....	312
Same rule applies to municipal corporations and officers.....	313
Exceptions and modifications	314
I. Subagent may be employed to perform acts which are mechanical or ministerial merely	315
II. When the proper conduct of the business demands it.....	316, 317
III. When justified by usage or course of trade.....	318
IV. When originally contemplated	319
V. When necessity or emergency requires it.....	320
— Assistants employed by servants.....	321

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

VI. Ratification of unauthorized employment.....	322
Care required in making authorized appointment	323
Re-delegation—Subdelegation	324
What the delegate may be.....	325
Whose agent, etc., is the subagent.....	326-329
Is there privity between principal and subagent.....	330, 331
Effect of employment—Subagent is principal's agent, etc., if employ- ment was authorized.....	332
— But he is agent's agent, etc., in other case.....	333
II. OF AUTHORITY OF AN AGENT TO EMPLOY AGENTS, SERVANTS AND OTHERS FOR HIS PRINCIPAL
Agents generally have no such power.....	334
Servants usually have no such authority.....	335
Independent contractors have usually no such authority.....	336
Authority to appoint may be expressly conferred.....	337
Authority to employ may arise by implication.....	338
Sudden emergency or special necessity may justify it.....	339
— Authority so arising is a narrow one.....	340
— Employment of physicians and surgeons in emergencies.....	341
Privity between principal and persons thus employed.....	342

CHAPTER VII.

OF RATIFICATION

Purpose of this chapter.....	343, 344
------------------------------	----------

I. WHAT IS MEANT BY RATIFICATION

In general	345
Fictitious character of the doctrine.....	346
Ratification defined	347
Ratification not a form of authorization.....	348
Ratification differs from estoppel.....	349
Ratification not a contract.....	350
No new consideration required.....	351
Ratification wholly optional with principal.....	352

II. WHAT ACTS MAY BE RATIFIED

In general	352
The general rule	354
What acts need ratification.....	355
— Waiver rather than ratification.....	356
Torts may be ratified as well as unauthorized contracts.....	357
Void acts cannot be ratified—Voidable acts may be.....	358
Illegal acts may be made legal by ratification.....	359
Forgery	360
— Ratification	361-363
— Estoppel	364

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

III. WHO MAY RATIFY

General rule	365
State may ratify	366
Municipal corporations	367
Private corporation	368
Partners	369
Infants	370
Insane persons—Persons under duress	371
Married women	372
Executor, administrator, etc.	373
When agents may ratify	374
— Subagents	375

IV. CONDITIONS OF RATIFICATION

Certain conditions must be satisfied.....	376
1. Principal must have been identified.....	377
2. Principal must have been in existence.....	378
— Administrator, assignee, etc.....	379
— Corporations subsequently organized	380-383
3. Transaction must still stand.....	384
4. Principal must have present ability.....	385
5. Act must have been done as agent.....	386-392
6. Principal must have knowledge of material facts.....	393-396
— What facts are material within this rule.....	397
— Illustrations	398-402
— Actual knowledge required	403
— Wilful ignorance	404
— Presumption of knowledge	405
— Knowledge inferred from facts.....	406
— Imputed knowledge—Knowledge of agents—Of the particular agent	407
— Duty to inquire.....	408
— Effect of ratification without knowledge.....	409
7. No ratification of part of an act only.....	410
— Responsibility for instrumentalities employed.....	411
— Limitations—Collateral contracts	412, 413
— Collateral stipulation which makes whole contract illegal.....	414
— Divisible acts—Involuntary receipt, etc.....	415
Intention to ratify.....	416

V. WHAT AMOUNTS TO A RATIFICATION

Importance of question.....	417
Written or unwritten—Express or implied.....	418
1. Express Ratification
General rule	419
a. By Instrument under Seal
Deed at common law ratified only by instrument under seal.....	420
— Rule relaxed in partnership cases.....	421

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Massachusetts rule	422
— Modern rule more liberal.....	423
— Unnecessary seal may be disregarded.....	424
— By power of attorney subsequently granted.....	425

b. By Instrument in Writing

Where authority must be conferred by writing, ratification in writing necessary	426
— Contracts for sale or leasing of land.....	427
Written ratification not otherwise required.....	428
"Lawfully authorized" under statute of frauds.....	429

2. Implied Ratification

In general	430
Variety of methods	431
1. By declaring approval	432
2. By proceeding to perform	433
3. By accepting benefits	434
— Must take benefits with burdens.....	435
— Duty to restore what he has received.....	436
— Principal must have received proceeds—Money apparently free from trust	437
— Knowledge of facts indispensable.....	438
— Acceptance and receipt must have been voluntary and confirmatory	439
— Mere efforts to avoid loss no ratification.....	440
— Illustrations of general rule.....	441-443
— Other instances	444, 445
4. By bringing suits based on validity of agent's act.....	446
— Illustrations	447, 448
— Suits based on invalidity of agent's act no ratification.....	449
— Delay in suing to disaffirm	450
5. By acquiescence	451
— What meant by acquiescence	452
— Mere silence or failure to repudiate.....	453
— How differs from estoppel.....	454, 455
— Elements of estoppel may be present.....	456
— Other statements of the rule	457
— Relations of the parties	458
Failure to dissent as between principal and agent.....	459, 460
— As between principal and the other party	461, 462
Principal must act within a reasonable time.....	463
Same rules apply to private corporations.....	464
— And to municipal and quasi-municipal corporations.....	465
How when assumed agent is a mere stranger.....	466
— The contrary view.....	467
— The true rule.....	468
— Silence does not ratify if stranger acts in his own name.....	469
— How when former agent continues to act.....	470
Acquiescence coupled with conduct inconsistent with disapproval	471

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Illustrations of ratification by acquiescence.....	472-474
Retaining in employment as ratification.....	475
Rule of ratification by acquiescence applies only to principals.....	476

VI. MANIFESTATION OF RATIFICATION

Manifestation necessary	477
—— To whom	478

VII. PROOF OF THE RATIFICATION

Burden of proof.....	479
Amount of proof—Liberal interpretation of facts.....	480
Court or jury	481
What for this subdivision.....	482

VIII. THE RESULTS OF RATIFICATION

1. In General

Usually equivalent to precedent authority.....	483
—— Scope and duration	484
—— May be so alleged in pleadings.....	485
Cannot affect intervening rights of third persons.....	486
—— Defenses, conditions, right to cancel.....	487
Law of what place governs	488
Ratification irrevocable—changing repudiation to ratification.....	489

2. As between Principal and Agent

In general	490
General effect to release agent, etc.....	491
—— Limitations	492, 493
—— Methods of ratification	494
—— Ratification of entire act.....	495
—— Knowledge of the facts.....	496
—— Agent's motives unimportant.....	497
—— Liberal interpretation	498
—— Acts of subagent.....	499
Gives agent claim for compensation, reimbursement, etc.....	500
Entitles principal to benefits as against agent	501

3. As between Principal and other Party

In general	502
------------------	-----

a. Other Party against Principal

What considerations involved	503
1. In contract cases	504, 505
2. In tort cases	506
—— Unique character of doctrine	507

b. Principal Against the Other Party

What considerations involved here	508
1. In contract—May principal ratify and enforce unauthorized contract	509, 510

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

If agent and other party have previously consented to cancel the contract	511, 512
If other party has attempted to withdraw from the contract.....	513
If agent and other party have done nothing to cancel the contract....	514
— The Wisconsin cases—Dodge v. Hopkins.....	515
— The English cases—Bolton v. Lambert	516-518
— American cases	519-521
— Rules compared—The weight of authority	522
— Applications of the rule	523
— Ratification by insured of insurance effected for his benefit....	524, 525
— Defence based on ratification	526
2. In tort cases	527
3. Other acts creating rights or duties	528
— Actions, ratification of unauthorized	529
— Assignment of cause of action	530
— Adding parties to existing actions.....	531
— Attachment affidavits and bonds.....	532
— Declaration of maturity to accelerate action.....	533
— Demand of payment, delivery, etc.	534
— Notice of abandonment	535
— Notice of dishonor	536
— Notice to quit	537
— Options	538
— Stoppage in transit	539
4. As Between Agent and Other Party
In general	540, 541
Ratification releases agent in contract cases.....	542
— Limitations—Ratification after suit begun—Change in conditions	543
— Failure of the ratification.....	544
Ratification releases agent on justifiable trespass.....	545
In tort case ratification does not release agent but charges principal..	546

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE TERMINATION OF THE RELATION

Purpose of this chapter	547
Variety of methods	548
Classification adopted	549

I. BY ACT OF THE PARTIES

1. By Force of Their Original Agreement

a. By efflux of time	550, 551
b. By accomplishment of object	552-554
Where object contemplated involved a series of acts.....	555
Authority does not necessarily continue until object accomplished.....	556
c. Termination in pursuance of a term in the contract.....	557

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

2. By Their Subsequent Acts

What here included 558

A. Termination by Mutual Consent

Authority so terminable 559

B. Revocation by the Principal

Rules different in public and in private agency..... 560

1. Private Agency

a. Power of Revocation

In general	561, 562
General rule—Authority revocable at any time.....	563
— If not already executed.....	564
Rule applies though authority called “exclusive” or “irrevocable”.....	565
Rule applies though principal may have agreed that authority should continue for a definite period.....	566
Or though agent may have performed some service or incurred some expense	567
Distinction between power to revoke and right to revoke—Between authority and contract of employment.....	568
Exceptions—Authority not revocable	569
1. Authority “coupled with an interest”.....	570
— Variety of forms	571
— American use of term.....	572
— English use of term.....	573
— Difference in results	574
— Power irrevocable by death irrevocable by act of principal.....	575
2. Power given as security and therefore “coupled with an interest”... ..	576
— Power forming part of a contract.....	577
— Power given for a valuable consideration.....	578
3. Authority “coupled with an obligation”.....	579, 580
“Interest” of third person.....	581
Provisions for agency in contracts with third persons.....	582
“Interest” and authority from same source.....	583
Express language as to revocability	584
Illustrations—Sufficient interest—Powers given for security.....	585
— What interest not sufficient—Instances.....	586
— Bare powers	587
New nomenclature needed	588
— What may be the subject matter of power given as security.....	589
— Necessary characteristics of such a power.....	590
— Against whom power given as security enforceable.....	591
Contracts of employment—When right to terminate exists—Employments at will	592
— Employment on condition—“Satisfaction”—“Good cause”.....	593
— Termination for cause specified.....	594

TABLE OF CONTENTS

XXI

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Implied conditions	595
Contracts for definite time cannot be terminated without liability except for legal cause	596
What amounts to contract for definite time.....	597
— Unilateral stipulations	598, 599
— Contrary views	600
— Mutuality under statute of frauds.....	601
Contract for a definite time implied from circumstances.....	602
— Implications from yearly or periodical salary or accountings....	603
Stipulation for "permanent" employment.....	604
Continuing under prior contract—Holding over.....	605
Agency terminable for agent's incompetence	606
Agency terminable for agent's disobedience, dishonesty, or other misconduct	607
Agency terminable for agent's disloyalty.....	608
— Illustrations	609, 610
— Limitations—Waiver—Condonation	611
Even though employed for definite time, agent may be discharged subject to liability for damages.....	612

b. Manner of Revocation

How authority may be revoked.....	613
By sealed instrument	614
Express revocation not required.....	615
Revocation may be implied.....	616
— Reducing rank, changing duties, etc.	617
— Acts not working a revocation.....	618
— By disposing of subject matter.....	619
— By dissolution of partnership or corporation.....	620
— By severance of a joint interest	621
— Subagent's authority terminated by termination of principal's authority	622

c. Notice of Revocation

Notice usually necessary	623
1. To the agent—When notice must be given to him.....	624
— When notice not necessary	625
— Constructive notice	626
2. To subagents—When notice must be given.....	627
3. To third persons—Where authority was general.....	628
— Where authority was special.....	629-631
— Theory of necessity of notice	632, 633
Notice how given—What sufficient	634, 635
When power of attorney recorded, revocation should be recorded.....	636
Notice should be unequivocal	637
How sufficiently determined	638
Burden of proof as to notice.....	639

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

2. Public Agency

Statutory authority not revocable at will of principal.....	640
---	-----

C. Renunciation by Agent

General rule—Agent may renounce at any time.....	641
Enforcement of contract—Specific performance—Injunction to prevent breach	642
— Injunction when services unique and damages not adequate.....	643
— Mutuality	644
Renunciation by mutual consent	645
Abandonment may be treated as renunciation.....	646
Agent may lawfully renounce if required to do illegal acts.....	647
Agent's abandonment may be justified by principal's misconduct.....	648
Notice of renunciation	649

II. BY OPERATION OF LAW

In general	650
------------------	-----

1. By Death of One of the Parties

a. By Death of the Principal

In general	651
General rule—Death of principal terminates agency.....	652
— Even though not terminable by principal's act in his life time....	653
Consideration of this rule.....	654
Authority not revocable by death when coupled with an interest.....	655
— What constitutes such an interest	656
— What meant by interest—Difficulty in applying rule.....	657
— The real reason—That the agent may act in his own name.....	658
What interest sufficient—Instances	659-661
What interest not sufficient—Instances	662, 663
How when death unknown	664, 665
— Instances	666, 667
Effect of principal's death on contract of employment.....	668
Death of partner or joint owner dissolves agency.....	669
Death of principal dissolves authority of substitute.....	670

b. By Death of the Agent

General rule—Death of agent terminates agency.....	671
— Not when coupled with an interest.....	672
When death of one of two agents terminates agency.....	673
Dissolution of artificial person which was the agent.....	674
Effect of agent's death on authority of substitute.....	675

2. By Insanity of One of the Parties

a. By Insanity of the Principal

In general	676
General rule	677
— Ignorance of insanity	678

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

When authority coupled with an interest.....	679
What evidence of insanity required.....	680
b. By Insanity of the Agent
In general	681
General rule—Terminates agency unless coupled with interest.....	682
How when insanity unknown	683
Insanity of one of two or more agents.....	684
Effect on subagents.....	685
3. By Bankruptcy of One of the Parties
In general—Effect of bankruptcy.....	686
a. Bankruptcy of Principal
General rule—Bankruptcy of principal terminates agent's authority...	687
Mere insolvency not enough	688
Authority not terminated when coupled with interest.....	689
How when bankruptcy unknown	690
b. Bankruptcy of the Agent
General rule	691
4. By Marriage
a. Marriage of the principal	692
b. Marriage of the agent	693
5. By War
In general—War between countries of principal and of agent terminates commercial agency	694-696
6. By Destruction of Subject Matter
Destruction of subject matter usually terminates agency	697
7. By Termination of Principal's Interest in Subject Matter
Usually terminates authority	698
8. By Termination of Principal's Authority
Principal's removal from office removes subordinates.....	699
9. By Change in Law
Change in law rendering prosecution of agency unlawful.....	700
10. Notice of the Termination
Notice not generally necessary when authority terminated by operation of law.....	701-703

BOOK II

OF THE AUTHORITY CONFERRED; ITS NATURE AND EFFECT

CHAPTER I.

OF THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE AUTHORITY IN GENERAL

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of Book II.....	704
Scope of the questions involved.....	705
Distinctions based upon nature and extent of authority.....	706

I. EXPRESS AND IMPLIED AUTHORITY

Where authority is express—Effect of limitations.....	707
Where authority is implied	708

II. THE ELEMENTS OF AUTHORITY

Authority an attribute of character bestowed by principal.....	709
Limitations—Apparent authority cannot be limited by secret instructions	710
Distinction between authority and power.....	711
What constitutes authority.....	713
Elements of authority—I. Authority intentionally and directly conferred	714
— II. Incidental authority—Ordinary and necessary acts.....	715
— III. Authority conferred by custom or usage.....	716
— IV. The customs of the particular business, or an established course of dealing in it.....	717
— V. Authority by necessity or special emergency.....	718, 719
— VI. Apparent authority	720, 721
— VII. Liability by estoppel.....	722-726
— VIII. Liability by ratification.....	727
— Recapitulation	728, 729
The province of "instructions".....	730
— What constitute instructions.....	731-735

III. UNIVERSAL, GENERAL AND SPECIAL AGENTS

In general	736
General and special agents.....	737
— Distinctions sometimes made.....	738
— The true distinction.....	739
General agency not unlimited.....	740
General agent binds principal only within scope of his authority.....	741
Special agent's authority must be strictly pursued.....	742

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

IV. ASCERTAINING THE EXISTENCE OF THE AUTHORITY

Persons dealing with an agent must ascertain his authority.....	743
— What is meant by this.....	744
— What such person is bound to ascertain.....	745
— Not an unfair rule.....	746
— Other theories	747, 748
— The dilemma of choosing between two innocent persons.....	749
— Through whom must authority be ascertained.....	750
Persons dealing with agent must act in good faith.....	751
Must exercise reasonable prudence.....	752
— Notice of limitations.....	753
— Notice of adverse interests.....	754
— Effect of principal's negligence.....	755
Must ascertain whether necessary conditions exist.....	756
— Agent's representations as to his authority not to be relied upon	757, 758
— Facts peculiarly within agent's knowledge.....	759, 760
— Fixed pecuniary limits.....	761
— Corporate agents	762
Authority of public agents must be ascertained.....	763

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE AUTHORITY IN GENERAL

Purpose of this chapter	764
-------------------------------	-----

I. WHEN AUTHORITY IS CONFERRED BY WRITING

Construction of writing for court.....	765
Intention to govern.....	766
How intention discovered—Language used	767
Entire writing—Other writings	768
When drawn with reference to statute, to be interpreted in light of statute	769
Admissibility of parol evidence—To show surroundings of the parties..	770
— Latent and patent ambiguities	771
— Identifying subject-matter	772
— To show usage of business or of agents of a particular class....	773
— Parol evidence cannot enlarge authority.....	774
— Parol evidence cannot contradict writing.....	775
Effect must be given to every word and clause.....	776
Transaction to be upheld rather than defeated.....	777
Authority to be interpreted in light of lex loci	778
Authority limited by ordinary meaning of words and by plain import of language	779
General powers limited by specific object or recital.....	780
Authority by joint principals usually to be exercised only in behalf of all jointly.....	781

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Power of attorney referring to several interests can not be applied to joint interests	782
Power construed to apply only to principal's private business.....	783
Formal powers strictly construed—Only those powers expressly given or necessarily implied.....	784
Practical construction by the parties may aid.....	785

II. WHERE AUTHORITY IS UNWRITTEN OR IMPLIED

Where authority is unwritten but express.....	786
Where authority is unwritten but implied.....	787
Authority to be construed in the light of established usages.....	788
Authority carries with it every power necessary to accomplish object..	789
Implied authority not to be extended beyond its legitimate scope.....	790
Implied power limited to principal's business.....	791

III. WHERE AUTHORITY IS AMBIGUOUS

Duty of principal to make his instructions clear.....	792
When ambiguous, construction adopted in good faith sufficient.....	793

CHAPTER III.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF AUTHORITIES OF CERTAIN KINDS

Purpose of this chapter.....	794
In general	795

I. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL LAND

What here included.....	796
— Authority to sell rather than merely to find a purchaser—Mere broker no authority to make a binding contract.....	797
— But authority to make a binding contract may be found to exist..	798
Agent usually a special agent—Authority strictly construed.....	799
Mere preliminary correspondence or negotiations not enough to confer authority	800
Conditional authority	801
Authority to sell land not ordinarily to be inferred from mere general authority to act.....	802, 803
What may be sold.....	804, 805
When authority to be exercised.....	806
What execution authorized.....	807, 808
Authority to make representations as to value, quantity, location, boundaries or title.....	809
Authority to make contract of sale justifies written contract, in usual form	810
Authority to sell and dispose of land implies right to convey.....	811
To insert usual covenants of warranty.....	812
Authority to sell does not justify a mortgage.....	813
Authority to receive payment.....	814
Conveyance must be for consideration moving to principal.....	815

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Authority to give credit.....	816
Authority to sell does not authorize exchange or barter.....	817
— Or gift	818
— Or giving option to buy.....	819
— Or permitting waste or sale of timber separate from land.....	820
— Or changing boundaries of land.....	821
— Or partition	822
— Or dedication to public use.....	823
— Or conveyance to pay principal's debts or assignment for creditors.....	824
— Or conveyance in payment of agent's debts.....	825
— Or conveyance in trust for support of principal's child, etc.....	826
— Or rescinding or altering contract.....	827
— Or discharge of mortgage.....	828
— Or investment of proceeds of sale.....	829

II. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO LEASE LAND

In general	830
What execution authorized.....	831
Authority to execute a lease, in the usual form, with usual terms.....	832
Authority to make representations as to condition of premises, ownership, etc.	833
Authority to receive payment of rent.....	834
Authority to lease does not authorize lease to begin in future.....	835
Authority to change terms, substitute tenants, accept surrender of lease, or give notice to quit.....	836
— To renew or extend a lease.....	837
Authority to bind principal to furnish irrigation, supplies, stock, etc..	838
Authority to waive liens.....	839
Authority to mortgage, or to impair or defeat the principal's title.....	840

III. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE LAND

When authority exists.....	841
Authority to make a binding contract.....	842
Authority to agree upon terms.....	843
Authority to bind principal for ordinary expenses in purchase.....	844
Authority to receive the deed.....	845
Authority to assume mortgages.....	846
No authority to sell or mortgage land purchased.....	847

IV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL PERSONAL PROPERTY

When authority exists.....	848
— Limited or qualified authority.....	849
What may be sold—All—Part.....	850
— Commingling with other goods for sale.....	851
Authority when to be executed.....	852
No authority to sell at auction—When.....	853
Authority to fix price and terms of sale.....	854
— Further as to price.....	855-857
— Terms or conditions attached.....	858, 859

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Failure to impose conditions prescribed by principal.....	860
Authority to make binding contract.....	861
— To execute and deliver necessary documents or memoranda.....	862
Authority of selling agent to receive payment—In general.....	863
Authority to receive payment not implied from possession of bill.....	864
Agent authorized to deliver possession may receive payment.....	865
Payment to general sales-agent.....	866
Payment to agent as ostensible owner.....	867, 868
Agent to sell merely or to solicit orders, without possession of goods, not authorized to receive payment.....	869
When traveling salesmen may receive payment.....	870
— When payment to agent part of terms of sale.....	871
— Notice of want of authority.....	872
— What may be received in payment when receipt is authorized....	873
— Purchaser cannot set off debt due from agent.....	874
Implied authority of traveling salesmen to hire horses.....	875-877
— Authority to procure personal supplies.....	878
— No implied authority to sell his samples.....	879
Implied authority to warrant quality.....	880
— Authority to warrant as a necessary incident.....	881
— Authority to warrant because warranty usual.....	882
Authority to give warranties which the law would imply.....	883
Authority to warrant in accordance with descriptions furnished by principal	884
Illustrations of rules—Commercial paper—Agricultural implements— Sample, etc.	885
— Horses	886
— Limitations upon custom.....	887, 888
Limits of this rule—No extraordinary warranty.....	889
Authority to make representations concerning goods.....	890
Authority to warrant title.....	891
Authority to advertise the property.....	892
No implied authority to give credit.....	893
No authority to appropriate to his own use.....	894
No implied authority to exchange or barter.....	895
No authority to buy goods.....	896
No authority to pledge goods.....	897
No authority to mortgage.....	898
No authority to promise commissions for sub-sales.....	899
Authority to guarantee exclusive markets, particular prices, etc.....	900
No implied authority to compromise, release principal's rights, or pay his debts	901
Authority to rescind the sale.....	902
Authority to waive performance of terms of contract.....	903
— Alterations of contract.....	904, 905
May not sell to or deal with himself.....	906
Authority to receive notice.....	907

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

V. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE PERSONAL PROPERTY

When authority exists.....	908
— Authority from conduct.....	909
— Limitations	910
— Ratification	911
Powers and limitations incident to authority to purchase.....	912
Agent with general authority may buy on credit.....	913
May not buy on credit, when furnished with funds.....	914-917
May buy on credit when not supplied with funds.....	918
Agent with general authority to purchase has authority to agree upon price and terms.....	919
May not exceed limits as to quantity.....	920
Must observe limits as to quality or species.....	921
Must observe limits as to price.....	922
May be restricted as to persons with whom to deal.....	923
May make representations as to principal's credit.....	924
May not borrow money to pay for goods.....	925
May not execute negotiable paper.....	926
May not guarantee payment by his vendor.....	927
May not sell goods.....	928
Authority to alter or cancel contract.....	929
Authority to make admissions after the purchase.....	930
Agent can buy only for principal.....	931

VI. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO COLLECT OR RECEIVE PAYMENT

What here involved.....	932
What constitutes such authority.....	933
When implied from making the loan or negotiating the contract.....	934
When implied from possession of the securities.....	935
— Possession by agent who negotiated loan evidence of authority....	936
— Possession indispensable	937
Authority by conduct independent of possession.....	938
— Estoppel to deny authority.....	939
— Limitations	940
Payment to agent of the owner of record.....	941
Payment to agent as ostensible principal.....	942
Authority to receive proceeds of securities entrusted to agent for delivery	943
When authority implied from having sold the goods or land.....	944
Authority to receive interest does not authorize receipt of principal...	945
Can receive nothing but money.....	946
— Debt payable in goods.....	947
— Enlarged authority—Authority by conduct or ratification.....	948
No authority to take checks, certificates of deposit, etc.....	949-951
If authorized to take check or note, has no authority to indorse and collect it	952, 953
No authority to release or compromise the debt.....	954

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Authority to receive part payment.....	955
May not extend time.....	956
Or otherwise change the terms of the contract.....	957
Not authorized to receive before due.....	958
Not authorized to accelerate maturity.....	959
Authority to collect does not authorize sale of debt.....	960
No authority to deal with funds collected.....	961
May give receipts or discharge.....	962
Authority to sue.....	963
Authority to sue in his own name.....	964
Authority to foreclose mortgages.....	965
May not submit claim to arbitration.....	966
May employ counsel.....	967
Authority to employ sub-agents.....	968

VII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO MAKE OR INDORSE NEGOTIABLE PAPER

An important power, not lightly inferred.....	969
How authority conferred.....	970
When authority implied.....	971, 972
Authority strictly construed.....	973
— Illustrations of acts not authorized.....	974
— Illustrations of acts authorized.....	975
Must be confined to principal's business.....	976
Execution must be confined to limits specified.....	977
Negotiable paper delivered to agent in blank.....	978

VIII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO MANAGE BUSINESS.

What is meant.....	979
Extent of authority depends on nature of business.....	980
Execution must be confined to principal's business and for his benefit..	981
Authority to pledge principal's credit—Supplies for store or business..	982
— Supplies for hotel.....	983
— Supplies for farm or plantation.....	984
— Board and provisions for help.....	985
— Supplies procured by husband as manager of wife's business....	986
— Supplies procured by wife as domestic manager.....	987
Hiring help	988
Other incidental contracts.....	989
Authority to waive liens, rights, conditions, notices, etc.....	990, 991
Contracts by architects, superintendents, etc.....	992
Contracts by station and ticket agents.....	993
Contracts for medical aid or nursing.....	994
Implied authority to sell product of business.....	995
Authority to collect or receive payment.....	996
Authority to revive debt barred by limitation.....	997
Authority to make negotiable instruments.....	998-1000
When may borrow money.....	1001, 1002
May not make accommodation paper.....	1003

TABLE OF CONTENTS

xxx

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

May not pledge or mortgage the property of his principal.....	1004
May not sell or lease principal's land.....	1005
May not embark in new and different business.....	1006
May not sell the business or property.....	1007
Authority to pay debts.....	1008
Authority to make assignment for creditors.....	1009
Authority to sue.....	1010
— To employ attorney.....	1011

IX. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SETTLE

Of the nature of the authority.....	1012
Burden of proof.....	1013
When authority exists.....	1014-1016
What terms of settlement binding.....	1017, 1018
— Illustrations	1019-1021
May receive the proceeds.....	1022
May not submit to arbitration.....	1023
May not assign the demand.....	1024
May not assign or transfer proceeds.....	1025

X. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO BORROW MONEY

When the authority exists.....	1026
What execution authorized.....	1027
Authority to give necessary securities.....	1028
Authority to receive the money.....	1029
Liability of principal for money borrowed without authority.....	1030

XI. AGENT AUTHORIZED TO LEND MONEY.

When authority exists.....	1031
What execution authorized.....	1032
Authority to take usurious interest.....	1033
Authority to receive payment.....	1034
Authority to extend time or change terms.....	1035
No authority to loan to himself.....	1036
Authority to purchase securities.....	1037

XII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO BIND PRINCIPAL AS SURETY

When authority exists.....	1038
Authority strictly construed.....	1039

XIII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO EMPLOY

What here included.....	1040
When authority exists.....	1041, 1042
What employment authorized.....	1043

XIV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SHIP GOODS

How authority arises.....	1044
How authority to be exercised—Agreeing upon terms of shipment....	1045
— Agreements limiting liability of carrier.....	1046, 1047

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

XV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO CARE FOR PROPERTY

Nature and extent of authority.....	1048
-------------------------------------	------

XVI. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO REPRESENT INSURERS

What here included.....	1049
How classified.....	1050
How appointed	1051
Whose agent he is.....	1052
What kind of an agent he is.....	1053
Authority to appoint sub-agents.....	1054
Authority to make oral contracts.....	1055
Authority to renew insurance.....	1056
Authority to make alterations—Waiver—Estoppel—In general.....	1057
Authority at time of issuance to alter policy or waive provisions there- in	1058
— By parol	1059, 1060
— Waiving prepayment of premiums.....	1061
— Restrictions on authority.....	1062
Authority after issuance—Waiver of forfeitures.....	1063
— Waiving proofs of loss.....	1064
— Express restrictions on authority.....	1065
Knowledge of agent imputed to principal.....	1066
— Facts affecting the risk.....	1067, 1068
— Statements in application	1069, 1070
— Express restrictions	1071
— Subsequent causes of forfeiture.....	1072
— Collusion	1073
Authority to adjust losses.....	1074
Miscellaneous cases—Instituting legal proceedings.....	1075
Authority to bind principal by admissions, representation.....	1076
Territorial limitations	1077
May not act in his own behalf.....	1078

BOOK III

OF THE EXECUTION OF THE AUTHORITY

CHAPTER I.

IN GENERAL

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of Book III.....	1079
Primary purpose to bind principal and not agent.....	1080
Must act within scope of authority.....	1081
Necessity of proper execution.....	1082
How question determined.....	1083
Execution within, and exceeding authority.....	1084
Slight deviation does not invalidate.....	1085
When separable, authorized part may stand.....	1086
When execution lacks essential elements.....	1087
Summary of the rules.....	1088
Should act in name of the principal.....	1089

CHAPTER II.

OF THE EXECUTION OF SEALED INSTRUMENTS

Purpose of this chapter.....	1090
The questions involved.....	1091
Rules may differ with class of instrument.....	1092
Deed by agent must purport to be made and sealed in the name of the principal	1093
— Exceptions—Powers exercisable in name of donee of power.....	1094
— Rule different in Texas.....	1095
— Rule changed by statute in a few states.....	1096
— Effect of statutes abolishing seals or making them unnecessary..	1097
— How where instrument valid without a seal.....	1098
Instrument may bind neither principal nor agent.....	1099
— Or be simply inoperative as conveyance—Agent's liability on covenants—Estoppel	1100
Whose deed is a given deed—How question determined.....	1101
Not enough to make deed the principal's that the agent is described as such	1102
Not principal's deed where agent appears as grantor and signer...	1103, 1104
— Agent named as grantor but deed signed in name of principal...	1105
— Agent purporting to act "as agent for" or "in behalf of" the principal	1106, 1107

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Deed naming principal as grantor but signed by agent personally	1108-1110
— Mere descriptive words will not change personal grants or covenants	1111, 1112
Distinction in case of public agents.....	1113
Whether necessary that deed should purport to be executed by an agent	1114
— Further of this rule.....	1115-1117
— How in reason.....	1118
Parol evidence not admissible to discharge agent.....	1119

CHAPTER III.

OF THE EXECUTION OF SIMPLE CONTRACTS

Purpose of this chapter.....	1120
------------------------------	------

I. OF THE EXECUTION OF NEGOTIABLE PAPER

In general	1121
------------------	------

I. Form and Interpretation

In general	1122
General rule as to form.....	1123
Method of signing.....	1124-1126
— The Negotiable Instruments Act.....	1127
— Not necessary that agent's name appear.....	1128
Not enough that principal be named only in body of instrument..	1129-1132
— Where intent to charge principal is manifest.....	1133, 1134
— Effect of printed headings or titles on paper.....	1135
— Effect of corporate seal.....	1136
— Other evidences of intent—Direction to charge to principal..	1137, 1138
When no principal is disclosed, agent is bound notwithstanding he signs as "Agent".....	1139-1142
Negotiable paper drawn upon an agent and accepted by him.....	1143, 1144
Negotiable paper drawn payable to an agent and indorsed by him....	1145
— Paper payable to cashier of bank.....	1146
— Other similar cases.....	1147
How when made by public agents.....	1148, 1149

2. The Admissibility of Parol Evidence to show Intent

In general	1150, 1151
Cases holding such evidence admissible.....	1152-1156
Cases holding such evidence not admissible.....	1157, 1158
What rules applied.....	1159-1161
The true rules.....	1162
Further of these rules.....	1163

II. OF THE EXECUTION OF OTHER SIMPLE CONTRACTS

In general	1164
------------------	------

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

1. Written Contracts

I. The proper manner.....	1165
Intention of the parties as expressed in the instrument the true test..	1166
Principal alone bound by contract made in his name by an authorized agent	1167
Presumption that known agent does not intend to bind himself.....	1168
Agent bound who conceals fact of agency or name of principal.....	1169
Known agent may bind himself by express words.....	1170, 1171
— Contrary intention manifest.....	1172-1174
Personal liability excluded by terms of contract.....	1175
II. The admissibility of parol evidence to show intent.....	1176
Right acquired under agent's contract.....	1177
Contracts involving the Statute of Frauds.....	1178

2. Oral Contracts

How to be executed.....	1179
Principal presumptively bound where agency disclosed.....	1180
Agent may bind himself by special agreement.....	1181
— How question determined.....	1182
Or by failing to disclose his principal.....	1183

BOOK IV

OF THE RIGHTS, DUTIES AND LIABILITIES ARISING OUT OF THE RELATION

CHAPTER I.

IN GENERAL

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of Book IV.....	1184
What parties interested.....	1185
How subject divided.....	1186
In general—Duty the measure of liability.....	1187
I. TO BE LOYAL TO HIS TRUST
Loyalty to his trust, the first duty of the agent.....	1188
May not put himself in relations antagonistic to his principal.....	1189, 1190
May not deal in business of his agency for his own benefit.....	1191
Agent authorized to purchase for his principal may not purchase for himself—Agent charged as trustee.....	1192
— Same principle applied to leases.....	1193
— What evidence of trust sufficient.....	1194
— When rule does not apply.....	1195, 1196
Agent authorized to sell can not sell for himself.....	1197
Agent authorized to sell, exchange, or lease may not become the purchaser or lessee.....	1198
— Injury to principal not test—Sale at fixed price.....	1199
— Public sale equally voidable.....	1200
— Effect of fraud or concealment.....	1201
To what agents this rule applies.....	1202
Further of this rule—Indirect attempts.....	1203
Agent authorized to insure may not issue policies to himself.....	1204
Agent authorized to purchase or hire may not purchase or hire of himself	1205
Double agency—Agent may not represent other party also without consent of principal.....	1206
Agent must fully inform the principal.....	1207
Agent liable for misrepresentations.....	1208
Agent may not take advantage of confidential information acquired in the business to make profit of principal's expense.....	1209
— After termination of agency.....	1210
— Information respecting trade secrets, names of customers, etc.....	1211
— Ordinary experience, learned in the business.....	1212
— Information leading to outside profit.....	1213
— Information leading to patents or inventions.....	1214

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Agent employed to settle claim, may not buy and enforce it against his principal	1215
Agent may not acquire rights against his principal based on his own neglect or default.....	1216, 1217
Agent may not acquire adverse rights in principal's property confided to his care.....	1218, 1219
These rules can not be defeated by usage.....	1220
Agent may purchase, sell, etc., with principal's consent.....	1221
Principal may ratify act.....	1222
Gratuitous agents—Volunteers.....	1223
Profits made in the course of the agency belong to the principal....	1224, 1225
— Illustrations	1226
— Further illustrations—Rebates, Commissions, Rewards, Overcharges	1227
— Profits must be fruits of the agency.....	1228
Whether principal entitled to agent's earnings.....	1229
— Work out of hours.....	1230
— Gratuities	1231
Representing other principals—Exclusive service.....	1232
Remedies of the principal.....	1233, 1234
Agency must exist.....	1235
— Other limitations	1236
— Proof of the agency.....	1237
Against whom trust enforced.....	1238
Principal must not have consented to, waived or condoned the act....	1239

II. NOT TO EXCEED HIS AUTHORITY

Duty of agent not to exceed his authority.....	1240
Duty of principal to make clear the extent of authority.....	1241
Duty of agent to know extent of authority.....	1242
Liability of agent for exceeding his authority.....	1243

III. TO OBEY INSTRUCTIONS

Agent's duty to obey instructions.....	1244
Results of disobedience—Agent liable for losses caused by it.....	1245, 1246
— Illustrations	1247-1252
Form of action—When agent liable in trover.....	1253
— Mere breach of instructions.....	1254
— Conversion	1255, 1256
— The rule stated—Intent immaterial.....	1257
How when agency is gratuitous.....	1258
Exceptions to rule requiring obedience.....	1259
— Agent not bound to perform illegal or immoral act.....	1260
— Agent not bound to impair own security.....	1261
— Departure from instructions may be justified by sudden emergency	1262, 1263
— Limitations	1264
Where the authority has been substantially pursued agent not liable for immaterial departure.....	1265

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Where instructions are ambiguous, and agent acts in good faith	1266, 1267
How affected by custom.....	1268
— When presumption as to custom conclusive.....	1269
No presumption of disobedience.....	1270
Measure of damages.....	1271
Ratification	1272
Liability for subagents.....	1273

IV. NOT TO BE NEGLIGENT

In general	1274
Agent bound to exercise ordinary and reasonable care.....	1275
Agent bound to exercise usual precautions.....	1276
— But not liable for mere accident or mistake.....	1277
— Not bound to exercise highest care.....	1278
— Good faith—Reasonable diligence.....	1279
When agent warrants possession of skill.....	1280
How when agency is gratuitous.....	1281
— When employed in a capacity which implies skill.....	1282
— Bound to exercise the skill he possesses.....	1283
Agent not liable for unforeseeable dangers.....	1284
But liability increased if special risks disclosed.....	1285
Agent presumed to have done his duty.....	1286
Agent not liable if principal also negligent.....	1287
When agent liable for neglect of subagent.....	1288
When agent liable for neglect of co-agent.....	1289
Effect of ratification upon the agent's liability.....	1290
The measure of damages.....	1291
— Judgments, costs, counsel fees.....	1292
The principal's remedies.....	1293
Illustrations of agent's liability.....	1294
1. Neglect of agents in making loans and investments
Degree of care required.....	1295
Liability for resulting loss.....	1296

2. Neglect of agent to effect insurance

When duty to insure arises.....	1297
What the duty requires.....	1298

3. Neglect of agent in making collections

Liable for loss from negligence.....	1299
Forms of negligence.....	1300
Negligence as to medium of payment.....	1301
— Illustrations	1302
Negligence in proceedings.....	1303-1306
Neglect to give principal notice of material facts.....	1307
Neglect in granting or permitting delays, extensions or forbearances..	1308
Neglect in keeping the money.....	1309
Neglect in making remittances.....	1310

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Liability for neglect of correspondence and subagents.....	1311
Liability of banks.....	1312
— For the neglect of the notary.....	1313
— For the neglect of a correspondent bank.....	1314
Liability of attorneys.....	1315
Liability of mercantile or collection agencies.....	1316-1318
Liability of express companies.....	1319
The measure of damages for agent's negligence.....	1320
Principal's right of action against subagent.....	1321
Del credere agents—How liable to principal.....	1322

4. Neglect of agent in making sales

Nature of duty.....	1323
When agent liable for selling to irresponsible parties.....	1324
Conditions of agent's liability.....	1325

5. Neglect of agent in making purchase

Nature of duty.....	1326
---------------------	------

V. TO ACCOUNT FOR MONEY AND PROPERTY

In general	1327
Account only to principal—Joint principals.....	1328
Accounting by joint agents.....	1329
Subagents—Account to whom.....	1330
Agent may not dispute his principal's title.....	1331
May not allege illegality of transaction to defeat principal's claim....	1332
When may maintain interpleader.....	1333
Agent's duty to keep correct accounts.....	1334
Duty to keep principal's property and funds separate from his own— Liability for commingling.....	1335
At what time agent should account.....	1336-1338
Necessity for demand before action.....	1339
Exceptions	1340
When agent liable for interest.....	1341
Form of action.....	1342
— When equitable	1343
The burden of proof.....	1344
Proof of amount due—Special method agreed upon—Conclusiveness of agent's accounts.....	1345
When liability barred by statute of limitations.....	1346-1348
Of the agent's right of set-off.....	1349
How far principal may follow trust funds.....	1350
Conclusiveness of account—Failure to object—Account stated.....	1351
— Reopening account—Impeachment for fraud or mistake.....	1352

VI. TO GIVE NOTICE TO PRINCIPAL OF MATERIAL FACTS

Duty of agent to give principal notice of facts material to agency.....	1353
---	------

CHAPTER III.

THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF THE AGENT TO THIRD PERSONS

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of this chapter.....	1354
------------------------------	------

A. PRIVATE AGENTS

How subject divided.....	1355
--------------------------	------

I. IN CONTRACT

In general	1356
Agent not personally liable upon authorized contract made in principal's name	1357
Liability of agent as here discussed assumes that agent is of normal legal capacity	1358

1. Where he acts without authority

In general	1359-1361
------------------	-----------

A. Assuming to act for a disclosed principal.

Theories of liability.....	1362
Deceit—Warranty of authority.....	1363
Agreement to indemnify.....	1364
Objections—A fiction—Conflict with Derry v. Peek.....	1365
Liability not based on theory of agent's actual wrong.....	1366
Liability based on representations of matters of fact only.....	1367
Doctrine not confined to the making of contracts.....	1368
How where other party knows or agent discloses all the facts relating to his authority.....	1369
Where agent disclaims present authority.....	1370
How in case of public agent.....	1371
To whom the liability extends.....	1372
Application of these rules.....	1373
I. Where authority never conferred.....	1374
II. Where authority once existing has terminated.....	1375
— Authority terminated by act of principal.....	1376, 1377
— Authority terminated by death of principal.....	1378, 1379
— Authority terminated by principal's insanity.....	1380
— Authority terminated by other events.....	1381
— Authority terminated by act of agent.....	1382
III. Where no principal in existence—Inchoate corporations—Promoters	1383
— Provisional arrangements with promoters.....	1384
— Principal dead at time authority supposed to be conferred.....	1385
IV. Where principal in existence but principal had not the authority to confer— Ultra vires acts—Liability of corporate directors and agents	1386

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Where principal temporarily forbidden to act.....	1387
— Where principal's insolvency destroys his legal status.....	1388
— When no legally responsible principal—Unincorporated associations	1389
— Meetings, committees, etc.....	1390
Legal competency of an existing principal.....	1391
— Infant principals	1392
— Married woman	1393
— Where principal insane at time authority was supposed to be conferred	1394
When agent liable on the contract itself.....	1395, 1396
— Agent not liable merely because principal is not.....	1397
In what form of action is agent liable.....	1398
Burden of proof.....	1399
The measure of damages.....	1400
— To give damages for loss of a particular contract, it must have been one of value against principal if authorized.....	1401
Effect of ratification.....	1402
Where a nominal agent is the real principal.....	1403

B. Assuming to act for an undisclosed principal

Liability of pretended agent.....	1404
-----------------------------------	------

2. Where, though authorized to bind his principal, he binds himself or no one

In general	1405
Authorized agent contracting in name of principal incurs no personal liability	1406
Where agent intending to bind principal, binds no one.....	1407
Where agent intending to bind principal, inadvertently uses apt words to bind himself.....	1408
— Reformation of contract to release agent.....	1409
Where agent conceals fact of agency or name of principal.....	1410
— Disclosing fact of agency, but concealing identity of principal...	1411
— Identity of principal sufficiently disclosed—What terms sufficiently exclude personal liability—Liability by custom.....	1412
— Burden on agent to disclose principal.....	1413
— Disclose when	1414
Agent liable although principal might also be held.....	1415
— Dealing with agent must have resulted in contract, etc.....	1416
Where agent acts for a foreign principal.....	1417
Where there is no responsible principal.....	1418
Where agent pledges his own responsibility.....	1419-1421
— How determined	1422
— What facts not conclusive	1423
— Principal also may be bound—Election.....	1424
— Agent alone liable on negotiable and sealed instruments.....	1425
Agent may be jointly liable with principal	1426

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Agent may bind himself by collateral contract	1427
How in case of public agent.....	1428
Agent's right of set off and recoupment	1429

3. Where the agent has received money

In general	1430
------------------	------

a. Where Money Has Been Paid to Agent for Principal

No liability where money properly paid to which principal was entitled	1431
Liability for money paid to him by mistake	1432, 1433
Liability for money received by him through wrongful act of principal alone	1434
— Change in agent's situation as equivalent of payment	1435
Liability where principal's right terminated after payment	1436-1438
Agent liable for money mispaid though paid over, if agency was not known	1439
Agent liable without notice for money illegally obtained.....	1440
Agent liable without notice for money obtained through his misconduct	1441
Agent liable where money is proceeds of act which principal could not lawfully authorize	1442
Agent liable for money received without authority and not paid over to the principal	1443
Agent personally liable for return of deposits where he has pledged his own responsibility	1444
Where agent is a mere stakeholder	1445
Agent for undisclosed principal liable for returnable deposit	1446

b. Where Money Has Been Paid to Agent for Third Person

Where agent's liability to such third person attaches—Revocation by principal	1447
— What constitutes assent—Consideration.....	1448
Action at law by beneficiary against agent	1449
— Trusts for the benefit of third persons	1450

II. IN TORT

In general	1451
Agency usually no defense in tort cases	1452
Agent liable for negligent acts outside the scope of his agency.....	1453
When agent ostensible principal	1454
Liability of agent for trespass	1455
— Principal's knowledge or direction no defense	1456
Liability of agent for conversion	1457
Agent's liability for fraud, misrepresentation or deceit.....	1458
Agent's liability for his wilful or malicious acts	1459
Agent liable to third persons for negligent injuries committed by him while acting in performance of agency	1460, 1461
Agent must have been an actor, not a mere automaton	1462
— Mere intermediate agent not liable	1463
Agent's liability for negligent omissions—Misfeasance—Nonfeasance..	1464

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Certain rules quoted	1465
Attempted distinction between misfeasance and nonfeasance	1466, 1467
— Further of this distinction	1468-1470
— Effect of beginning performance	1471-1473
Agent liable for condition of premises over which he has control	1474
— Agent must be responsible	1475
— Duration of liability	1476
— Other cases involving the same principle.....	1477, 1478
Cases in which agent held not liable	1479-1481
Agent not liable in tort to third persons for breach of principal's contract with them	1482
Liability of servant or agent to fellow servant or agent	1483
No liability for negligence of fellow agent or servant	1484
Liability in respect to subagents	1485
— Agent who conceals principal liable as principal to subagent	1486
Joinder of agent and principal in same action	1487

B. PUBLIC AGENTS

What here included	1488
--------------------------	------

I. LIABILITY FOR THEIR CONTRACTS

Already considered	1489
--------------------------	------

II. LIABILITY FOR THEIR OWN TORTS

In general—Classification	1490
No action by individual for breach of duty owing solely to the public	1491
Liability for wrongs committed in private capacity	1492

1. Superior Governmental Officers

Not usually subject to private action	1493
---	------

2. Judicial Officers

Judicial officers not liable when acting within their jurisdiction	1494
Liability not affected by motive	1495
This immunity extends to judicial officers of all grades	1496

3. Quasi-judicial Officers

Quasi-judicial officer exempt from civil liability for his official actions	1497
Illustration	1498
Liability not affected by motive	1499

4. Legislative Officers

Same immunity extends to legislative action	1500
---	------

5. Ministerial Officers

In general—Liable to party specially injured	1501
--	------

III. LIABILITY FOR THE TORTS OF THEIR OFFICIAL SUBORDINATES

Public officer of government not liable for acts of his official subordinate	1502
To what officers this rule applies—Post officers	1503

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Public trustees and commissioners	1504
— Not to ministerial officers	1505
IV. LIABILITY FOR TORTS OF THEIR PRIVATE SERVANTS OR AGENTS
Liable for torts of private servant or agent	1506

CHAPTER IV.

THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF THE PRINCIPAL TO THE AGENT

In general—Employment—Payment of Compensation—Reimbursement
—Indemnity—Lien	1507

I. THE AGENT'S RIGHT TO EMPLOYMENT

What here included	1508
The right to be received into the employment	1509
Right to be given work to do	1510
Compensation dependent upon work done	1511

II. THE AGENT'S RIGHT TO PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION

What here included	1512
--------------------------	------

1. The Agent's Right to Compensation

Agreement to pay compensation—Express—Implied	1513
Express agreement conclusive	1514
When agreement must be express	1515
When agreement to pay will not be implied	1516, 1517
When promise to pay will be implied	1518-1520
Unauthorized agent entitled to compensation if acts are ratified	1521
When agent can recover for extra services	1522
Agent cannot recover compensation if agency was unlawful	1523

2. The Amount of the Compensation

Express contract governs	1524
May be left for principal to determine	1525
In the absence of express agreement—How amount determined—Market—Usage—Reasonable value	1526
What elements may be considered	1527
What evidence as to value is admissible	1528, 1529
Agent continuing after expiration of term presumed to be at prior compensation	1530

3. When Compensation is Considered to be Earned

In general	1531
Compensation earned when undertaking fully completed	1532
When full performance a condition precedent	1533, 1534
Agent's right not defeated by principal's default	1535-1537
Same subject—No defense that principal realized no profit	1538

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

4 Effect of Termination of Agency

1. Termination by the Act of the Principal

When agent is entitled to compensation if agency is terminated before performance 1539, 1540

a. Agency Rightfully Terminated

When agency may be terminated without liability 1541
 Agency at will of the principal 1542, 1543
 Agency terminable on contingency..... 1544
 Agency terminable only on breach of express or implied conditions.. 1545
 When terminated for agent's misconduct 1546-1548

b. Agency Wrongfully Terminated

When agent discharged without cause—Breach of implied contract 1549, 1550
 What cases involved 1551
 Breach of contract with agent to do particular acts 1552 Breach of express contract of employment—Agent's remedies 1553 — Theory of these remedies 1554
 — A middle ground 1555
 — When action may be brought 1556
 — The measure of damages 1557
 — Same subject 1558
 — Duty of agent to seek other employment 1559
 — New employment offered by defendant 1560 — Duty to take service of a different sort 1561
 — Work for himself 1562
 — When right of action accrues 1563, 1564
 No damages if agent acquiesces in discharge 1565

2. Termination by Operation of Law

No damages where agency terminated by death of principal 1566
 — Joint principals—Partnership 1567
 Same rule where agency terminated by insanity of the principal 1568
 Rule where agency terminated by bankruptcy of principal..... 1569
 Rule where agency terminated by death of the agent..... 1570
 Rule where agency terminated by insanity of the agent 1571
 How when agency terminated by agent's sickness or incapacity 1572

3. Abandonment by Agent

1. When abandonment lawful 1573
 2. When abandonment wrongful 1574
 Entire and severable contracts—Right to compensation 1575, 1576
 Full performance of entire contract usually required 1577
 The more liberal rule—Britton v. Turner 1578
 Recovery for services under contract unenforceable under Statute of Frauds 1579
 Brief absences as abandonment 1580
 Condonation of abandonment 1581

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

What will excuse abandonment—Sickness—Epidemic—Physical violence	1582
— Recovery for services actually rendered	1583
— Recovery of wages during illness	1584
— Principal's right to terminate employment	1585
Contracts not to terminate without notice—Forfeiture for breach....	1586
— What works a forfeiture	1587

5. Effect of Agent's Disloyalty upon Compensation

Disloyal agent cannot recover compensation	1588
— Good faith does not save—Nor custom—Divisible transactions...	1589
Double agency—Agent cannot recover compensation from either party when double agency unknown	1590
How when agent mere middleman	1591
May recover when double agency was fully known and assented to ...	1592

6. Effect of Agent's Wilful Disobedience

Forfeiture by wilful disobedience	1593
---	------

7. Principal's Right of Recoupment

Principal may recoup damages	1594
What damages may be recouped	1595, 1596
Limit of recovery	1597
Right not cut off by assignment	1598
No recoupment against an infant	1599

III. THE AGENT'S RIGHT TO REIMBURSEMENT

What here included	1600
Agent must be reimbursed for proper outlays	1601
— When not entitled	1602

IV. THE AGENT'S RIGHT TO INDEMNITY

Agent must be indemnified against consequences of lawful acts	1603
Liability must be a direct consequence of the execution of this agency	1604
— Illustrations	1605, 1606
Right to indemnity extends to contractual obligations properly incurred	1607
No indemnity where loss caused by agent's default	1608
No indemnity where obligation incurred in excess of authority	1609
— Unless lack of authority attributable to principal's default.....	1610
No indemnity where act is unlawful	1611, 1612
Agent indemnified only against loss, not mere liability	1613

V. THE AGENT'S RIGHT TO PROTECTION FROM INJURY

In general	1614
------------------	------

1. Risks Incident to the Business

General rule—Master not liable	1615, 1616
--------------------------------------	------------

2. Negligence of the Master

Master responsible for his own negligence	1617
---	------

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

I. For dangerous premises	1618
— Warning	1619
— Unsafeness where servant has no business to be	1620
— Unsafeness resulting from doing of the work itself	1621
— Unsafeness caused by conditions upon adjacent premises	1622
— Liability for places and instruments used, but not owned, by the master	1623
II. For dangerous appliances, tools and machinery	1624
— Warning	1625
— Inspection—Maintenance	1626
— Repairing defective tools, etc.	1627
— Servants having no business to use—Using for unexpected purposes	1628
— Dangers arising from dangerous use of proper appliances, etc.	1629
III. For injuries resulting from failure to repair as agreed.	1630, 1631
IV. For employment of incompetent servants	1632
— Sufficient number	1633, 1634
V. For not making and enforcing rules	1635
VI. For not furnishing necessary superintendence	1636
VII. For injuries outside of employment.	1637, 1638

3. Negligence of His General Superintendent or Other Representative

Principal cannot relieve himself by delegating duties	1639
Liable for negligence of general agent or superintendent—Vice-principal	1640

4. Negligence of Independent Contractor Performing Master's Duties

Liable for negligence of independent contractor performing master's duties	1641
When liable to agents of contractor	1642

5. Negligence of Fellow-servant

Master not liable to one servant for negligence of a fellow-servant	1643-1648
Who is a fellow-servant?	1649
— Association rule	1650
— Departmental rule	1651
— Superior servant distinction	1652
— The general rule	1653-1656
What risks within the rule	1657
Volunteer assisting servant cannot recover	1658

5. Assumption of Risks

In general	1659
— Assumption of risks resulting from master's negligence	1660-1666
Obviousness of the risk	1667
Voluntary action—Coercion—Command	1668
— Emergencies—Assurances of safety	1669
— Inexperience—Youth, etc.	1670

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Assumption of risks existing in violation of statute	1671, 1672
— Assumption of risk distinguishable from contributory negligence	1673
— How determined—Court or jury	1674
— Protests against doctrine	1675

6. Contributory Negligence

Contributory negligence of servant defeats his recovery.....	1676, 1677
— Effect of express command of master	1678

7. Statutes Changing Common Law Rules

Statutory changes	1679, 1680
-------------------------	------------

8. Contracts Waiving Master's Liability

Agreements to waive liability invalid	1681
---	------

VI. AGENT'S RIGHT TO A LIEN

In general	1682
Lien defined—General and particular liens	1683
Foundation of the claim of a lien	1684
Nature of lien	1685
Requisites of lien—Possession	1686
Possession must have been lawfully acquired	1687
Possession must be continuous	1688
Possession must have been acquired in course of employment	1689
No lien if contrary to intention of parties—Waiver	1690
Waiver by inconsistent conduct	1691
Claim of lien no waiver of personal remedies	1692
How lien may be enforced	1693
How these rules apply to agents	1694
— Illustrations	1695
Agent's lien ordinarily a particular lien	1696
For what sums the lien attaches	1697

VII. AGENT'S RIGHT OF STOPPAGE IN TRANSIT

Agent liable for price of goods, may stop them in transit	1698
Right exercised as in other cases	1699
Right of such an agent to retain the title until paid for	1700

VIII. RIGHTS OF SUB-AGENT AGAINST PRINCIPAL

When principal liable for his compensation	1701
— Effect of ratification	1702
Same rules govern reimbursement and indemnity	1703
How as to protection against injury	1704
When subagent entitled to a lien	1705

TABLE OF CONTENTS, VOL. II.

CHAPTER V.

THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF THE PRINCIPAL TO THIRD PERSONS

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of chapter	1706
--------------------------	------

I. THE LIABILITY OF THE PRINCIPAL UPON CONTRACTS MADE BY AN AGENT

In general	1707
------------------	------

1. The Contractual Liability of the Disclosed Principal

In general	1708
Principal liable on contracts made in his name by his authority	1709
Principal liable on informal contracts not expressly charging agent's responsibility	1710
— Informal entries or charges against agent not conclusive	1711
Principal may often be liable though agent also bound	1712
— Written contract in agent's name—Principal not liable	1713
— Same subject—Principal liable	1714-1716
Principal not liable where credit given exclusively to agent	1717
For what contracts and contractual acts of agent is principal liable...	1718
Qui facit per alium, facit per se	1719
Principal liable for acts and contracts within scope of authority.....	1720
Third person must ascertain agent's authority	1721
What constitutes authority	1722
— Secret instructions and restrictions of principal or secret motives of agent—Mistake of agent	1723
General and special agents	1724
— Special agent's authority must be strictly pursued	1725
Effect of ratification	1726
Performance of unlawful act not enforced	1727
Principal not bound where agent had an adverse interest	1728

2. The Contractual Liability of an Undisclosed Principal

Preliminary considerations as to liability	1729, 1730
General rule—Undisclosed principal liable when discovered	1731
Rule applies to all simple contracts	1732
Parol evidence to identify the principal	1733
Does not apply to contracts under seal	1734, 1735
Does not apply to negotiable instruments	1736
Exceptions to the general rule	1737
Of the first exception—Change in accounts—Misleading conduct	1738
— Thompson v. Davenport	1739
— Heald v. Kenworthy	1740

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Armstrong v. Stokes	1741
— Irvine v. Watson—In the Queen's Bench	1742
— Irvine v. Watson—In the Court of Appeal	1743
— What is misleading conduct	1744
— Delay, etc.	1745-1747
— The rule in the United States	1748
— General conclusions	1749
Of the second exception—"Election"	1750
— Theories of election	1751
— Knowledge necessary	1752, 1753
What constitutes an election	1754
I. Before discovery of principal.....	1755
II. After discovery of principal	1756
— Presenting claim	1757
— Commencement of action	1758
— Taking judgment against agent	1759
— Taking agent's note	1760
— Charging goods to agent	1761
— Mere delay—Statute of limitations	1762
Intermediate party must have been agent and not principal	1763
Alleged agent must have been really such	1764-1766
— "Apparent" authority	1767, 1768
Right of assignee of other party against principal.....	1769
Apparent agent the real principal	1770
Excluding principal's liability by terms of contract	1771
Cases in which the agent may not be liable	1772

II. RESPONSIBILITY OF THE PRINCIPAL FOR THE AGENT'S STATEMENTS, REPRESENTATIONS AND ADMISSIONS

In general	1773
Agent's authority must be first shown	1774
Authority cannot be shown by agent's admissions	1775
Representations by agent	1776
Principal liable for statements and representations expressly authorized	1777
Statements of agent expressly authorized to give, or referred to for, information	1778
Statements of agent impliedly referred to for information	1779
Statements of agent made as incidents of his position—General manager—General agents, etc.....	1780
Statements of agent made as incident to an authorized act—Res gestae	1781
— Various statements of the doctrine	1782
— Limitations upon the rule	1783
— Further limitations	1784
— How question determined	1785
Effect of these statements not dependent upon their being true	1786
Statements showing notice to or knowledge by the agent	1787
Statements of agent made to modify, qualify or explain the act	1788
— Illustrations	1789

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Statements indicative of the agent's state of mind	1790
Words themselves constituting or aggravating the wrong	1791
Admissions of agent generally not competent to charge principal	1792
Declarations and admissions of agent as part of res gestae	1793
— Meaning of res gestae as here used	1794
— What sort of statements admissible	1795
— What embraced within res gestae	1796
— How admissibility determined	1797
Illustrations of what has been called part of the res gestae —Inadmissible declarations	1798
— Illustrations—Admissible declarations	1799
When principal bound by agent's representation of extrinsic facts upon which authority depends	1800
— Illustrations—Bills of lading—Warehouse receipts—Certified checks	1801
III. THE EFFECT UPON THE PRINCIPAL'S RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF NOTICE TO OR KNOWLEDGE IN HIS AGENT
In general	1802
General rule—Notice to the agent is notice to the principal	1803
— Illustrations	1804
The theory of the rule— a. Identification	1805
— b. Conclusive presumption of communication	1806
I. Notice acquired during agency	1807
II. Knowledge acquired prior to agency	1808
— Requirements of present knowledge	1809-1811
— What is meant by notice acquired "during the agency" or "prior to agency"	1812
The resulting rule	1813
The first exception—Privileged communications	1814
The second exception—Agent acting adversely to principal	1815
— Reasons for the exception	1816
— Further of these reasons	1817-1821
The true exception	1822-1824
— Applicability of exception to corporate agents	1825
The third exception—Collusion of party claiming benefit of notice	1826
Who can avail himself of the notice	1827
What notice includes—Actual and constructive notice	1828, 1829
Agent must be agent of person to whom notice is to be imputed	1830
Rule applies only to notice respecting matters within agent's authority	1831
Notice after termination of authority does not bind	1832
— Notice must be of some material matter	1833
Notice must come to someone who is an agent	1834
— Ratification	1835
Releasing agent from duty—Enlarging it	1836
Agent of two principals	1837-1839
Two agents of same principal	1840

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Notice to subagent when notice to principal	1841
Notice of what sort of facts imputed	1842
These rules apply to corporations—Notice to agent	1843
—What officer or agent	1844
—Ordinary exceptions apply here	1845-1847
—When notice must be acquired	1848-1850
—When notice to director is notice to corporation	1851-1853
—Notice to stockholder not notice to the corporation	1854

IV. THE LIABILITY OF THE PRINCIPAL FOR HIS AGENT'S TORTS AND CRIMES

In general	1855
Theories of liability	1856, 1857

1. Did Relation of Principal and Agent or of Master and Servant Exist

Necessity for existence of the relation	1858
When relation exists	1859
—Several masters of one servant—General and special master—
Lending servants—Adopting servants of others	1860 —Servant performing his own master's business under direction of master's employer	1861
—Furnishing persons to be employed as servants	1862
—Tests for determining question	1863
—Court or jury	1864
Contractual agreement as to who shall be principal	1865
Strangers assisting servants	1866-1869
Independent contractors	1870, 1871
Subagents	1872

2. Liability for Acts Expressly Directed

Principal liable for acts expressly directed	1873
--	------

3. Liability for Negligent Act of Servant or Agent

Liable for agent's negligent act in course of employment	1874
Liability dependent upon agency	1875
Rules stated	1876, 1877
Forms of negligence	1878
—What meant by course of employment	1879
Not merely a question of time or place	1880
Master's prohibition or warning not conclusive	1881
Intention to benefit the master not the test	1882
Principal's ignorance or good faith will not exonerate him	1883
Ordinary and natural attributes in the light of the event	1884
The question of apparent powers	1885
Illegal or unlawful acts	1886
Application of rules	1887
Illustrations	1888
Further illustrations	1889-1891
—Forbidden acts	1892, 1893
—Act of servant having large degree of discretion	1894

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Servant combining his own business with that of master.....	1895
— Servant using master's vehicle, implement, etc., upon servant's business—Facilitating master's business.....	1896
— Servant under immediate direction of patron of master	1897
Master not liable for negligence not in course of employment	1898
Departure from service—Detour	1899
— Distinction between a mere detour and a departure	1900
— Illustrations	1901-1904
— Resumption of service after departure	1905, 1906
— Comments on these views	1907, 1908
— Other acts not within course of employment	1909-1911
— Further illustrations	1912
— Injuries to servants' invitees	1913
Negligence when servant off duty	1914, 1915
— How question determined	1916
Master's liability for acts of independent contractor	1917-1920
Effect of ratification	1921

4. Liability for Trespass or Conversion

Liable for trespass or conversion in course of employment.....	1922
— Special cases	1923
— Illustrations	1924
Not liable if acts were not within course of employment	1925

5. Liability for Wilful or Malicious Acts of Servant

In general	1926-1929
— Special classes of cases	1930
I. Where the master owed the plaintiff a special duty	1931
— Non-delegable duties	1932
— Rule applied to carriers of passengers	1933
— Illustrations of the carrier cases	1934
— Plaintiff provoking assault	1935
— Limitations of doctrine	1936
— Servant a public officer	1937
— Servant insane	1938
— Application to other cases—Difficulty of determining classes	1939-1944
II. Where master confides to servant the care of a dangerous instrumentality	1945-1950
III. Where the master entrusts to servant performance of duties involving the use of force	1951
— Breach of instructions no defense	1952
— Master not liable for servant's personal malice	1953
— Act must have been within course of employment	1954
— Use of force must have been authorized	1955
— Other limitations	1956
IV. Master's liability for malicious acts in other cases	1957
— Illustrations	1958-1972
— False imprisonment and unauthorized arrest.....	1973, 1974

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Unfounded prosecutions	1975
— Malicious prosecution	1976
— Assaults	1977, 1978
— Shooting	1979
— Slander and libel	1980, 1981
How question decided—Court or jury	1982
Ratification	1983

6. Liability for Fraudulent Acts and Representations

Liability for agent's fraudulent act	1984, 1985
— Agent's fraud supplemented by some act or omission of the principal	1986
Liability of principal for agent's false or fraudulent representations..	1987
— No liability for representations if any representation is outside authority	1988
— Representations within apparent authority.....	1989
— Liability for representations not made for principal's benefit....	1990
— Representations concerning facts which condition authority 1991, 1992
— Liability by ratification or adoption of act	1993
Effect of misrepresentations—Remedies	1994
— Action of deceit.....	1995, 1996
Effect of fraud not avoided by recitals in contract that there was none	1997

7. Liability for Penal or Criminal Acts of Agent

What here involved	1998
--------------------------	------

a. Civil Liability

Principal's civil liability for agent's criminal or penal act	1999
Civil liability for statutory torts committed in course of employment	2000
No civil liability for acts not in course of employment	2001
Usury	2002, 2003
Liability by ratification	2004, 2005

b. Criminal or Penal Liability

Principal's criminal liability for agent's criminal or penal acts	2006
Penal acts	2007
— Illustrations	2008
— Contrary holdings	2009

8. Matters Relating to Procedure

Joinder of principal and agent in one action	2010
— Weight of authority permits joinder	2011
— Master cannot be held if servant not liable	2012
The measure of damages against the principal—Compensation	2013
— Exemplary damages	2014
— Exemplary damages not allowed	2015
— Exemplary damages allowed	2016
Unsatisfied judgment against agent no bar to action against principal	2017
Principal or master liable although other's negligence also contributed	2018

CHAPTER VI.

THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF THIRD PERSONS TO THE AGENT

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

What here involved	2019
--------------------------	------

I. IN CONTRACT

In general—Right of action in principal alone	2020
— Considerations affecting this rule	2021
How cases may be classified	2022
Agent may sue when principal has clothed him with title or authority for that purpose	2023
Agent may sue on contract made with him personally	2024
— Undisclosed principal	2025
— Disclosed principal	2026
When agent only can sue	2027
Statutes requiring suit by real party in interest	2028
— Assignees of bankrupt agent	2029
Illustrations of rule permitting agent to sue	2030-2032
Agent may sue when he has a beneficial interest	2033
— What meant by rule	2034
— What interest suffices	2035, 2036
Although agent may thus sue, principal may usually sue or control ac- tion	2037
Action on sealed contract, negotiable instrument, or contract made with agent personally must be in agent's name	2038
Agent's rights depend upon the contract	2039
Right of assumed agent to show himself principal	2040
— 1. Where he contracted for a named principal	2041, 2042
— 2. Where he contracted for an unnamed principal	2043
Agent may recover money paid by him under mistake or illegal con- tract	2044
What defenses open to third person	2045
— Set-off	2046
— Admissions—Discovery	2047
What damages agent may recover on contract	2048

II. IN TORT

Agent may sue for personal trespass	2049
When agent may sue for injuries to principal's property	2050

CHAPTER VII.

THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF THIRD PERSONS TO THE PRINCIPAL

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

In general	2051
The rule stated	2052

1. Right to Sue on Contracts Made by Agenta. The Disclosed Principal

In general	2053
May sue on contracts in the name of the principal	2054
May usually sue on contracts made in his behalf but in agent's name	2055
May sue on contracts made on his account without authority but subsequently ratified	2056
— But principal must take contract as he finds it	2057
Defenses of other party based upon dealings with agent	2058

b. The Undisclosed Principal

May sue on contracts made in his behalf but in agent's name	2059
— One of several undisclosed principals cannot sue on entire contract	2060
— One of several apparently joint parties may show himself to be the real principal	2061
— Right of one who contracted as agent to show himself to be the real principal	2062
— What actions included	2063
Exceptions — Instruments under seal	2064
— Negotiable instruments	2065
— Principal's remedies here—Rescission—Enforcement of trust.....	2066
How when contract involves elements of personal trust and confidence	2067
— What contracts do involve personal elements	2068
— Contracts of suretyship	2069
Principal cannot sue where terms of contract exclude him or where contract is solely with agent personally	2070, 2071
Principal's right of action usually superior to agents	2072
Principal's rights governed by the contract	2073
When principal subject to defenses which could have been made against agent— a. Those arising out of terms of contract itself	2074
— b. Payment to agent	2075, 2076
— c. Set-off of claims against agent	2077, 2078
— Limitations of rule	2079
Performance by agent	2080
— Release by agent	2081

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Assignment by agent	2082
Repudiation of unauthorized contract by other party	2083
How principal affected by agent's fraud	2084
How principal affected by notice to or knowledge of his agent	2085
Principal's action—Measure of damages	2086
Third person cannot set up agent's want of authority to dispute principal's right	2087

2. Right to Recover Money Paid or Used by Agent

In general	2088
------------------	------

a. Money Wrongly Paid on Principal's Account

Right to recover money wrongly paid on principal's account	2089
--	------

b. Money Wrongfully Appropriated to Agent's Uses

Principal's right to recover money wrongfully disposed of by agent on agent's account	2090-2094
— Illustrations—Bank deposits	2095-2100
— Other illustrations	2101-2103
— Further illustrations—Restrictive indorsements	2104

3. Right to Recover Property

In general	2105, 2106
Principal's title cannot be divested except by his consent or voluntary act	2107
Recovery of property disposed of by agent in excess of authority	2108
Recovery of property wrongfully disposed of by one alleged to be ostensible agent or owner	2109
Possession as evidence of ownership or authority	2110
— Money—Negotiable paper	2111
Possession confided to recognized sales agent	2112-2114
Possession coupled with indicia of ownership	2115
— Principal may lose through agent's fraud	2116
— But other party must have acted in good faith and with reasonable prudence	2117
— Illustrations—Pickering v. Busk	2118
— McNeil v. The Tenth National Bank	2119
— Commercial Bank v. Armsby	2120
— Calais Steamboat Co. v. Van Pelt	2121
— Nixon v. Brown	2122
— Other cases—Title put in agent's name—Instruments delivered in blank	2123
— Limitations on doctrine in general	2124
— Limitations on rule of McNeil v. Tenth National Bank	2125
— Notice of principal's right from descriptive words in document ..	2126
— Rule of McNeil v. Tenth National Bank does not apply to ordinary chattels	2127
Possession under the Factor's Acts	2128

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Principal may recover his property appropriated to payment of agent's debts or seized by agent's creditors	2129
Right to recover securities wrongfully released	2130
Right to recover property wrongfully sold to third person for the agent's benefit	2131

4. Right to Recover for Torts

Principal may recover for injuries to his interests by third person's torts	2132
For enticing agent away	2133
For preventing agent from performing	2134
For personal injury to agent causing loss of service	2135
Third person not liable to principal for agent's fraud or neglect	2136

5. Remedies for Double Dealing

How when third person conspires with agent	2137
How when agent in secret employment of the other party	2138, 2139
One of two principals not liable to other for defaults of their common agent	2140

6. Conclusiveness upon Principal of Judgment against Agent

Principal not bound by judgment respecting property rights against agent in action to which he was not a party.....	2141
— Otherwise as to contract rights.....	2142

BOOK V

PARTICULAR CLASSES OF AGENTS

CHAPTER I.

OF ATTORNEYS AT LAW

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Scope of chapter.....	2143
-----------------------	------

I. OF THE OFFICE

Who meant by attorney at law.....	2144
Attorney at law defined.....	2145
Is an officer of the court.....	2146
Who may be.....	2147
Party may appear in person.....	2148
May not appear by agent.....	2149

II. OF THE RELATION OF ATTORNEY AND CLIENT

1. A Relation of Agency

Rules of agency govern.....	2150
-----------------------------	------

2. How Created

No formal power necessary.....	2151
--------------------------------	------

III. APPEARANCE PRESUMPTIVELY AUTHORIZED

Presumption of authority.....	2152
The presumption not conclusive.....	2153

a. While Proceedings Are Pending

— 1. Opposite party may require production of authority.....	2154
— 2. What evidence sufficient.....	2155
— 3. Client may dispute authority.....	2156

b. In Actions upon the Judgment

— 1. Foreign judgments	2157
— 2. Domestic judgments	2158

IV. IMPLIED AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY

In general	2159
Has general control of conduct of suit.....	2160
— Presumption of authority.....	2161
— What included	2162
— What not included.....	2163

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Can not delegate his powers.....	2164, 2165
May not employ counsel.....	2166
May employ subordinates.....	2167
Authority to institute action.....	2168
Authority to incur expense on client's account.....	2169
Authority to bind client by contracts.....	2170
Authority to bind clients by bonds.....	2171-2174
Authority to bind client by receipt of notice—Notice to attorney as notice to client.....	2175-2177
Authority to bind client by admissions.....	2178, 2179
Authority to receive payment.....	2180, 2181
— After judgment	2182
— What constitutes payment.....	2183
Authority to enforce judgment.....	2184-2186
Ratification	2187

V. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF ATTORNEY TO CLIENT

Bound to highest honor and integrity.....	2188
Duty to disclose adverse interests—Must not assume antagonistic positions	2189
Duty to remain loyal—Incapacities resulting.....	2190
— Effect on opposite party.....	2191
Duty to use reasonable care and skill.....	2192
— Errors in law or judgment.....	2193-2195
— Negligence in collecting.....	2196, 2197
— Negligence in bringing suit.....	2198-2200
— Negligence in trial of action.....	2201
— Negligence in examining titles.....	2202
— Neglect in preparing contracts, etc.....	2203
— Neglect of partners, clerks, etc.....	2204
— Neglect of subagent in collecting.....	2205
Liability for exceeding authority, or violating instructions.....	2206
Liability for money collected.....	2207
— When action may be brought.....	2208
— Statute of limitations.....	2209
— Liability for interest.....	2210
Attorney liable through acting gratuitously.....	2211
The burden of proof and measure of damages.....	2212

VI. LIABILITY OF ATTORNEY TO THIRD PERSONS

Not liable for breach of duty owing to client only.....	2213
— Cases in which he would be liable.....	2214, 2215
Liable where he contracts personally.....	2216
Liability for clerk's, officer's, witnesses's and other fees.....	2217
Liability to third person in tort.....	2218-2223
— Liability for words written or spoken.....	2224
Liability for money received.....	2225

TABLE OF CONTENTS

lxi

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

VII. LIABILITY OF CLIENT TO THIRD PERSON

In contract	2226
In tort	2227, 2228

VIII. LIABILITY OF CLIENT TO ATTORNEY

1. Attorney's Right to Reimbursement and Indemnity

Attorney entitled to reimbursement and indemnity.....	2229
---	------

2. Attorney's Right to Compensation

a. In General

Attorney entitled to compensation.....	2230
Attorney may sue for compensation.....	2231

1. Where There Was a Special Contract

In general	2232
Parties may agree upon amount of compensation.....	2233
— Where such a contract is fairly made it is conclusive.....	2234
— Extra compensation	2235
Contracts for contingent compensation.....	2236
What contracts champertous.....	2237
— Statutory changes	2238
— The effect of champerty.....	2239
What contracts barratrous.....	2240
Quantum meruit when contract void for champerty.....	2241
Agreements restricting settlement.....	2242
Contracts for contingent fees do not defeat settlement by client....	2243
But attorney may recover from client.....	2244

2. Where There Was No Special Contract

Attorney entitled to statutory or usual rate, if any, otherwise to reasonable value of his services.....	2245
What evidence admissible.....	2246
What evidence not admissible.....	2247

b. When Compensation Deemed to be Earned

In cases of ordinary retainer.....	2248
Compensation under express contract earned when undertaking substantially performed	2249
Lack of success no defense.....	2250
Negligence or bad faith may be shown.....	2251
Fees forfeited by breach of trust.....	2252
How when attorney abandons service.....	2253
— What will justify abandonment.....	2254
When discharged by client.....	2255
— In violation of agreement.....	2256

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— What will justify discharge	2257
Effect of death of attorney or client.....	2258
— Irrevocable power—Powers coupled with an interest.....	2259, 2260
Right to interest	2261
When attorney's claim barred by limitation	2262

3. Attorney's Right to Lien

Two kinds of lien.....	2263
------------------------	------

1. The General or Retaining Lien

General nature of this lien.....	2264
Declared by statute in some states.....	2265
What this lien adheres to.....	2266
— a. Upon papers	2267
— b. Upon property	2268
— c. Upon money	2269
What charges the lien secures.....	2270
Against what parties lien prevails.....	2271
How lien may be lost	2272
How lien may be waived.....	2273
Enforcement of lien.....	2274

2. The Special or Charging Lien

General nature of this lien.....	2275
In what states it exists.....	2276
Whom this lien protects	2277
What this lien protects.....	2278
When lien attaches	2279
To what the lien attaches.....	2280
How lien protected—Settlement—Set off—Notice.....	2281
— Abandonment—Discharge	2282
How lien enforced.....	2283
— If the judgment has resulted in a fund.....	2284
— Statute of limitations, etc.	2285
Liens by contract—Equitable protection independent of lien.....	2286
How lien lost or waived.....	2287
By what law governed	2288

IX. DEALINGS BETWEEN ATTORNEY AND CLIENT

In general—Good faith and perfect fairness required.....	2289
Purchases from and sales to client—Adverse purchases.....	2290
— Private purchases by the attorney of the client's property.....	2291
— Gifts from client to attorney.....	2292
— Other dealings	2293
— Contracts for compensation made after relation exists.....	2294
Relation of attorney and client must exist.....	2295
— Former relation terminated	2296

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

X. PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS

Confidential communications privileged.....	2297, 2298
What communications included—By client to attorney.....	2299, 2300
By attorney to client	2301
Under what circumstances privileged—No suit need be pending—
Must be confidential	2302
— Criminal acts	2303
— Fraudulent or illegal acts.....	2304
Non-confidential communications	2305
— Non-professional employments	2306
— Collateral facts	2307
Relation of attorney and client must exist	2308
— Attorney as scrivener.....	2309
Communications must have been made to an attorney.....	2310
Privilege is the client's—Waiver.....	2311
How long it continues.....	2312
Attorney may disclose for his own protection.....	2313

XI. TERMINATION OF THE RELATION

By operation of law.....	2314
By act of the parties.....	2315
Notice of termination.....	2316

CHAPTER II.

OF AUCTIONEERS

Purpose of this chapter	2317
-------------------------------	------

1. Of the Auctioneer

Definition	2318
Who may be	2319
Whose agent he is.....	2320

2. How Authorized

Like other agents	2321
-------------------------	------

3. Auctioneer's Implied Authority

To fix terms of sale.....	2322
To accept the bid.....	2323
To make the necessary memorandum.....	2324
To receive the price.....	2325
To sue in his own name for the price.....	2326
None—To delegate his authority	2327

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

None—To sell on credit	2328
None—To rescind or alter sale.....	2329
None—To sell at private sale.....	2330
None—To bid for himself.....	2331
None—To warrant quality.....	2332

4. Auctioneer's Duties and Liabilities to Principal

Bound for reasonable skill and diligence	2333
To act with loyalty and good faith.....	2334
To obey instructions	2335
To account for proceeds	2336
To take care of goods.....	2337
To sell for cash only.....	2338
To sell to third parties only.....	2339
To sell in person.....	2340
To disclose his principal.....	2341

5. Auctioneer's Duties and Liabilities to Third Persons

Liable where he conceals principal.....	2342
Liable where he exceeds his authority.....	2343
Liable where he contracts personally.....	2344
Liability for selling property of stranger.....	2345
Not liable for not holding auction as advertised.....	2346
Liable for refusing to surrender properly bought.....	2347
Liability for money received.....	2348

6. Auctioneer's Rights Against his Principal

Compensation—Reimbursement—Indemnity	2349
— Recoupment of damages of principal.....	2350
Auctioneer's lien	2351
Cannot dispute principal's title	2352

7. Auctioneer's Rights against Third Persons

Right to sue bidder.....	2353
Right to sue wrong-doer.....	2354

8. Principal's Rights against Third Persons

To recover purchase price.....	2355
Where bidder refuses to complete purchase.....	2356

9. Rights of Third Persons against Principal

Principal's liability for auctioneer's acts.....	2357
Liability for breach of contract.....	2358
Liability for not holding sale, withdrawing property, etc.	2359
Liability for failure of title to goods sold.....	2360

CHAPTER III.

OF BROKERS

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Purpose of this chapter.....	2361
------------------------------	------

I. DEFINITIONS AND DIVISIONS

Brokers—In general	2362
Different kinds of brokers	2363
Bill and note-brokers	2364
Exchange-brokers	2365
Insurance-brokers	2366
— Distinctions	2367-2369
— Broker's duties to employer	2370
— Right to sue	2371
— Right to lien	2372
Merchandise brokers	2373
— As agent of both parties	2374
— How authorized	2375
— When special agent	2376
— When not authorized to sign.....	2377
— "Bought and sold notes" in the English practice.....	2378
— English rules governing "bought and sold notes.....	2379, 2380
— "Bought and sold notes" in the United States.....	2381
Pawnbrokers	2382
Real estate brokers	2383
Ship brokers	2384
Stock brokers	2385
New York rules governing relation	2386
— Broker a pledgee	2387
Massachusetts rule	2388
New York view generally adopted—Substitution of other shares—Re- pledge	2389

II. APPOINTMENT AND TERMINATION

Appointed like other agents	2390
How authority terminated	2391

III. IMPLIED AUTHORITY OF BROKERS

In general	2392
How affected by usage	2393
— Local usages or customs.....	2394
Usual and necessary authority	2395
Authority to make and sign necessary memorandum.....	2396
Effect of instructions	2397

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Acting for both parties	2398
May not delegate his powers	2399
Usually must act in the name of his principal.....	2400
Implied authority to fix the price.....	2401
— Terms of sale	2402
May sell with warranty—When	2403
When may sell on credit	2404
No authority to receive payment	2405
No authority to rescind or arbitrate.....	2406
No authority to accept or waive performance.....	2407
Authority to sell property purchased by him	2408
Authority to pledge property.....	2409

IV. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES TO PRINCIPAL

Reasonable skill and diligence required.....	2410
Fidelity to his principal—Concealing facts—Dealing with or for him- self	2411
— Acting for both parties	2412
— How when mere “middle-man”.....	2413
Duty to obey instructions.....	2414
— Illustrations	2415
— Imperiling broker's security.....	2416
Duty to keep and render accounts and to pay proceeds and deliver property	2417

V. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES TO THIRD PERSONS

Not liable when he contracts for a principal disclosed.....	2418
Liability when principal concealed	2419
Liable when he expressly charges himself	2420
Liable when he acts without authority.....	2421
Liability for money received	2422
When guilty of a conversion	2423

VI. RIGHTS OF BROKER AGAINST PRINCIPAL

1. Right to Compensation

Entitled to compensation	2424
How amount determined	2425
Broker must show employment—Volunteer—Ratification.....	2426
Broker must have performed undertaking.....	2427
Real estate broker—Nature of his undertaking.....	2428, 2429
Usually need not conclude a binding sale—Find purchaser ready, will- ing and able to buy	2430
When is such a purchaser “found?”.....	2431, 2432
Contract in particular cases may require less.....	2433
Contract with broker need not be in writing.....	2434
Broker must be procuring cause—May be such though not present at sale—Directness of cause	2435, 2436

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Must be on terms required—1. Where terms were prescribed.....	2437
—2. Where no terms were prescribed	2438
Must be within time limited.....	2439
Readiness and willingness of purchaser.....	2440
Pecuniary responsibility of purchaser	2441
Abandonment by broker before success	2442
Must be sale, not mere option or conditional contract.....	2443
Must be sale, not exchange.....	2444
—Sale by principal in person—Exclusive agencies.....	2445
Giving time	2446
Broker's right not defeated, how—Principal's default.....	2447
—Buyer's default	2448
Revocation of authority	2449
Reasonable time in which to find purchaser.....	2450
Definite time—Contract for.....	2451
When such contract exists—Consideration for.....	2452-2454
Performance liberally viewed in order to avoid hardships to broker....	2455
Employment of two or more brokers.....	2456
When one entitled—How determined.....	2457
—Same subject—Interpleader.....	2458
—Abandonment by one broker—Termination of his authority.....	2459
—Duty to notify principal, when purchaser found.....	2460
How much compensation broker entitled to—Quantum meruit.....	2461
At what time commission payable.....	2462
Broker to sell chattels.....	2463
—Abandonment by one broker—Termination of his authority.....	2459
—Revocation of authority.....	2465
—Several brokers	2466
Broker to effect loan	2467
Broker to effect exchange	2468
—Bringing parties to terms.....	2469
—Failure of contract	2470
Broker to purchase land	2471
Broker to find a tenant	2472
Other cases within the same principles.....	2473
Commissions from both parties	2474
—How in case of mere middle-man	2475
How affected by misconduct	2476
How affected by disloyalty, double dealing, etc.	2477
No compensation where undertaking illegal	2478
How when not licensed	2479
 2. Right to Reimbursement and Indemnity
Entitled to reimbursement.....	2480
—Needless expenses—Illegal transactions	2481
How when undertaking not performed	2482
 3. Right to a Lien
No general lien	2483

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

Liens in special cases—Stock brokers—Real estate brokers—Insurance brokers	2484
— Equitable liens	2485
No lien except for debt due from principal	2486

VII. RIGHTS OF BROKER AGAINST THIRD PERSONS

1. In Contract

In general, no right of action on contracts	2487
When he may sue	2488
What defenses may be made when broker sues.....	2489

2. In Tort

May recover when he sustains injury in the line of his business.....	2490
--	------

VIII. RIGHTS OF PRINCIPAL AGAINST THIRD PERSONS

Same as in other cases of agency	2491
No set-off of broker's debts or obligations	2492
Right to recover money and property.....	2493

IX. RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS AGAINST PRINCIPAL

Same as in other cases of agency	2494
No remedy if broker did not act as defendant's agent	2495

CHAPTER IV.

OF FACTORS

Purpose of this chapter	2496
-------------------------------	------

I. DEFINITIONS AND DISTINCTIONS

Factor or commission merchant defined	2497, 2498
Distinction between factor and purchaser.....	2499

II. HOW APPOINTED

Same as other agents.....	2500
---------------------------	------

III. IMPLIED AUTHORITY OF FACTORS

In general	2501
How affected by usage	2502
To fix price and terms.....	2503
To sell on credit	2504
To sell in his own name.....	2505
To warrant quality	2506
To warrant title	2507
To receive payment	2508
To pledge	2509, 2510
— Under factor's act.....	2511

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

To pay his own debts	2512
To barter or exchange	2513
To delegate his authority	2514
To compromise or compound the debt.....	2515
To submit to arbitration	2516
To rescind sale	2517
To extend time of payment	2518
To receive anything but money in payment.....	2519
To make negotiable paper	2520
To insure property	2521
To sell to himself	2522

IV. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES TO PRINCIPAL

To use reasonable care and prudence	2523
To be loyal to his principal's interest.....	2524
To obey instructions	2525
— Instructions to sell	2526
— Factor's right to sell, or to decline to sell, for his own protection	2527
— The measure of damages	2528, 2529
— Instructions to sell for cash	2530
— Instructions to insure	2531
Duty to inform principal	2532
Duty to sell only to responsible purchaser.....	2533
— Del credere commission	2534
Factor's duty to care for property	2535
— Unforeseen contingency—Sudden emergency.....	2536
General duty as to sales.....	2537
Duty as to place of sale.....	2538
Duty as to time of sale.....	2539
Duty as to price	2540
Duty in collecting price.....	2541
Factor's duty in keeping account	2542
Not obliged to keep funds separate.....	2543
Factor's duty to account for money and property.....	2544, 2545
— Set-off	2546
Conclusiveness of accounts	2547
Duty in remitting money	2548
When principal may sue factor	2549
Liability for acts of sub-agents	2550

V. RIGHTS OF FACTOR AGAINST PRINCIPAL

a. Commissions

Factor entitled to compensation	2551
When factor may have commissions from both parties.....	2552
When commission earned—Upon what computed.....	2553

b. Reimbursement

Factor entitled to reimbursement	2554, 2555
--	------------

[References are to sections: §§ 1-1705, Vol. I; §§ 1706-2588, Vol. II.]

— Interest upon advances	2556
— Conclusiveness of accounts	2557

c. Indemnity

Factor entitled to indemnity against losses.....	2558
--	------

d. Lien

Factor entitled to lien	2559
When lien does not exist.....	2560
Nature of the lien	2561
When lien attaches	2562-2564
Who may confer lien	2565
How lien may be lost	2566
How lien enforced	2567

VI. RIGHTS OF FACTOR AGAINST THIRD PERSONS

a. In Contract

May sue for price of goods sold.....	2568, 2569
— Defences	2570
May sue on contracts made in his name.....	2571

b. In tort

May maintain trespass, replevin or trover.....	2572
Actions against carriers	2573

VII. RIGHTS OF PRINCIPAL AGAINST THIRD PERSONS

a. In Contract

May sue for price of goods sold	2574
— What defenses principal subject to.....	2575
Right to follow property	2576, 2577

b. In Tort

For injuries to or conversion of the goods.....	2578
---	------

VIII. RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS AGAINST PRINCIPAL

Same as in other cases.....	2579
How when principal undisclosed	2580
How when exclusive credit given to the factor.....	2581

IX. RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS AGAINST FACTOR

Same as in other cases	2582
When liable for conversion	2583
How in case of foreign factor.....	2584

X. HOW RELATION TERMINATED

As in other cases of agency—Revocation by principal.....	2585
— Renunciation by agent	2586
— Lapse of time, etc.	2587
— War, death, bankruptcy	2588

THE LAW OF AGENCY

BOOK I.

OF THE RELATION IN GENERAL; HOW CREATED AND TERMINATED

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

- | | |
|---|--|
| § 1. Meaning of agency. | 11-15. Agency a modern title in our law. |
| 2. Forms of acting. | 16-20. Agency in Roman law. |
| 3. Lines of distinction. | 21. Other historical references. |
| 4, 5. Other forms. | 22. Agency in modern Continental systems. |
| 6. Direct and indirect representation. | 23. The early treatises on agency. |
| 7. Degrees of authority. | 24. Legislation in English and American law. |
| 8. Nomenclature adopted. | |
| 9. Is there a law of agency? | |
| 10. Agency belongs to a commercial age. | |

§ 1. Meaning of agency.—Considered from the standpoint of etymology, the word “agency” or “agent” (ago, agere, agens, agentis) denotes an actor, a doer, a force which accomplishes things. Such an actor or force may be personal or impersonal, corporeal or incorporeal. Thus, we speak of a mechanical or chemical “agent,” or say that this or that institution or influence is a great moral “agent,” or is an “agency” for good or evil. In such cases we use the words “agent” and “agency” as practically synonymous.¹

The force or actor which we call an agent or an agency may be one which operates independently, or one which accomplishes results for the account or benefit of something or some one else. It may be used prescribing “any drug, or medicine or other agency for the treatment,” etc., except under certain prescribed conditions. The same expression is found in other similar statutes. See Bennett v. Ware, 4 Ga. App. 293.

¹ Thus for example in State v. Liffing, 61 Ohio St. 39, 76 Am. St. R. 358, 46 L. R. A. 334, the court had occasion to consider whether osteopathy was an “agency” within the meaning of a statute which forbade

for a person without his knowledge or consent; it may also be used against him. It may be also used by a person for his own benefit, being set in motion and controlled by him for that purpose. It is in the latter case that it becomes significant here. Thus, we speak of an agency, or more frequently of an agent, which acts or operates for a person. It may be a mechanical agent or a personal one. In the latter case we have one person acting for another.

At this point we are likely to make a distinction between agency and agent. We apply the word agent to the actor, and the word agency to the relation or condition or fact of his being the actor.

§ 2. Forms of acting.—One person may act for another in a great variety of ways. Thus one may render to another a purely personal service, as where he acts as the valet or body servant of the latter or as a member of his domestic establishment. He may act for another in aiding to carry on the latter's industrial or mechanical enterprises, as where he tills his employer's fields, tends his flocks, works in his shop or factory or mine, or is employed upon his roads or ways. He may act for the other in aiding in the performance of the latter's legal or contractual obligations to third persons, as where he serves a public carrier, warehouseman or innkeeper in the performance of the latter's duties to the public. Or he may act as the representative of the other in business negotiations, that is to say in the creation, modification or termination of contractual obligations between that other and third persons.

§ 3. Lines of distinction.—Between the last of these forms and all of the others, there runs a line of cleavage which is of much importance. The person who represents another in business negotiations necessarily has to have contractual relations and dealings with third persons—that is the very essence of business. Of none of the others is this necessarily true. The serving man or the working man may never come into contact with third persons at all. He may work entirely alone, or, if he is associated with others at all, it may be with those only who stand in a situation similar to his own. Moreover, even when his functions bring him into contact with third persons, it is not for the purpose of business dealings with them, that is to say, it is not for the purpose of entering into contractual relations with them on account of his employer.

§ 4. Other forms.—One who undertakes to accomplish work for his employer, may do so under one of two radically different methods. (1) He may undertake to do so under the direction and subject to the commands of his employer. Or (2) he may undertake to bring about the result which the employer desires and for which he is willing to pay, but be at liberty to do so wholly by his own methods, in his own way, and free from the directions of his employer, being responsible to the latter for the result only, and not for the means and agencies by which it is brought about.

Thus, in actual practice, if I wish a house built, I may employ a person to proceed to buy material and hire laborers for me and supervise the building of it as my representative, or I may undertake to pay him so much if he, buying material and hiring laborers on his own account, shall turn over to me the completed structure.

§ 5. — Again, if I wish property to be held or used on my account, I may proceed in two radically different methods. (1) I may convey the legal title to another with the understanding that he shall hold and deal with it to my use. Or (2) I may retain the title and deliver to the other the possession or perhaps merely the custody with the understanding that he shall hold and use the property as I shall direct.

§ 6. Direct and indirect representation.—The person who is to represent another in his contractual dealings with third persons may do so in a great variety of forms; but here also a clear line of demarcation may well be drawn. The representative may be authorized and expected (1) to bind his principal directly to and with the third persons with whom he deals, or (2) he may bind himself only to and with them, and then be held to account for the results to his principal and be entitled to demand reimbursement from him. Although the latter form is, as will be seen, unusual, it is entirely possible, and there have been systems of law which, in the main, recognized no other.

§ 7. Degrees of authority.—This person who is to bring about contractual relations between his principal and third persons may be clothed with many degrees of authority. The whole matter may be entrusted to his discretion. He may be restrained by minute and specific instructions. He may be a mere messenger who carries propositions back and forth until the chief parties have arrived at an agreement. Thus, to borrow an illustration from another, if I bargain with a horse dealer and refuse his price, but afterwards, when he has gone away, I send a messenger after him to say that I agree to the price, it is obvious that I and not the messenger will be the real negotiating party.

§ 8. Nomenclature adopted.—A satisfactory nomenclature is exceedingly desirable, but difficult to attain. If we call the whole field Agency, as is now often done, we may call the non-contractual field service, but we have left no familiar term to apply to the contractual field. It has been suggested that the generic term may be representation, and we are then left at liberty to designate the non-contractual species as service and the contractual one as agency.

It has been proposed that we call the whole field Agency, and subdivide it into Principal and Agent and Master and Servant, to which may be added the relation of Employer and Independent Contractor. Historically just the reverse of this was the practice,—that is to say, Agency was simply a branch of Master and Servant. There is also a considerable tendency in recent times—perhaps more popular than legal—to group everything under the general head of Employment, affixing a different name to the actor according to his undertaking. Thus an employer employs an agent to make a contract, a workman to do work, a contractor to erect a house, and the like. Nevertheless, the method which makes Agency the generic term and classifies these three relations under it, seems best to conform to actual legal practice in modern times, and is the one which will be adopted in this book.

§ 9. Is there a law of agency.—It is sometimes said that there is no distinct law of agency at all,—that is, that there is no body of rules peculiar to it, but that it is simply a case in which we apply the familiar rules of contract, tort, etc., to a new set of facts. If this latter statement be true, then, however desirable it might be to collect and classify the cases in which these familiar rules have been applied, the result would not be to develop a law of agency. If, on the other hand, there should be found to exist a respectable body of rules peculiar to this situation, without which its phenomena could not be satisfactorily explained, then it might fairly be said that there is a law of agency.² That there are some unique cases,—like the rules respecting the undisclosed principal, for example—cannot be denied; though some have preferred to treat these merely as anomalies rather than as the subject of a distinct system of rules.

² Thus it is said by Mr. Justice Holmes: "If agency is a proper title of our corpus juris, its peculiarities must be sought in doctrines that go farther than any yet mentioned [in this article]. Such doctrines are to be found in each of the great departments of the law. In tort, masters are held answerable for conduct on the part of their servants, which they not only have not authorized, but have forbidden. In contract, an undisclosed principal may bind or may be bound to another, who did not know of his very existence at the time he made the contract. By a few words of ratification a man may make a trespass or a contract his own in which he had no part in fact. The possession of a tangible object may be attributed to him although he never saw it, and may be denied to another who has it under his actual custody or control. The existence of these rules is what makes agency a proper title in the law." 4 Harv. L. Rev., p. 348 (an extract from an article on "Agency").

§ 10. Agency belongs to a commercial age.—If agency be deemed to belong to contractual representation properly, it will at once be seen that it belongs to a condition of society in which commercial transactions are highly developed. A non-commercial society, while it might have much use for servants, would have little need of agents. The historical condition seems to accord with this conclusion.

§ 11. Agency a modern title in our law.—The title agency, as the name of a distinct subject, belongs to a comparatively recent period in our law. Blackstone scarcely refers to it. "The law of principal and agent," says one of Blackstone's most learned editors, Professor Hammond,³ "is derived from the canon law, and has only been introduced into the common law in recent times. If the older books of English law are examined, no such words as 'principal and agent' will be found in them. Wherever any question is discussed which would now be treated under that head, it is treated of as master and servant. Principal and agent does not occur in Viner's Abridgement, or those preceding it; and it is only at the end of the eighteenth century that we find it beginning to appear as a separate title, as yet of very limited application."

§ 12. ——— "As late as Blackstone," says Mr. Justice Holmes in his book on the Common Law ⁴ "agents appear only under the general head of servants, and the first precedents cited for the peculiar law of agents were cases of master and servant. Blackstone's language ⁵ is worth quoting: 'There is yet a fourth species of servants, if they may be so called, being rather in a superior, a ministerial capacity; such as stewards, factors and bailiffs; whom, however, the law considers as servants pro tempore, with regard to such of their acts as affect their master's or employer's property.'"

§ 13. ——— Writing in 1811, Mr. Paley thought it necessary to apologize for offering to the profession a treatise on agency, saying, "The law of principal and agent appears, at first view, to be founded upon principles so few and simple, and in general so easy of application, that a treatise upon such a subject may seem altogether superfluous. And indeed the decisions upon this branch of the law, which are to be met with in the older reports, are neither numerous nor important."⁶

§ 14. ——— Pollock and Maitland in their History of English Law before the time of Edward I, say: ⁷ "The whole law of agency is ³ Hammond's Blackstone, Bk. I, p. 719.

⁴ P. 228. See also his articles on Agency, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 354, 5 id. 1.

⁵ 1 Blackstone's Com. 427.

⁶ Preface to Paley on Agency.

⁷ 2d ed., p. 228.

yet in its infancy. The King indeed ever since John's day has been issuing letters of credit empowering his agents to borrow money and to promise repayment in his name. A great prelate will sometimes do the like. It is by this time admitted that a man by his deed can appoint another to do many acts in his name, though he can not appoint an attorney to appear for him in court until litigation has been begun. Attorneys were appointed to deliver and to receive seisin. Among the clergy the idea of procuration was striking root; it was beginning to bear fruit in the domain of public law; the elected knights and burgesses must bring with them to parliament 'full powers' for the representation of the shires and boroughs. But of any informal agency, of any implied agency, we read very little. We seem to see the beginning of it when an abbot is sued for the price of goods which were purchased by a monk and came to the use of the convent.

"The germ of agency is hardly to be distinguished from the germ of another institution which in our English law has an eventful future before it, the 'use, trust or confidence.' In tracing its embryonic history we must first notice the now established truth that the English word use when it is employed with a technical meaning in legal documents is derived, not from the Latin word usus, but from the Latin word opus, which in old French becomes os or ocs. * * * In the thirteenth century we commonly find that where there is what to our eyes is an informal agency, this term ad opus is used to describe it. Outside the ecclesiastical sphere there is but little talk of 'procuration'; there is no current word that is equivalent to our agent; John does not receive money or chattels 'as agent for' Roger; he receives it to the use of Roger (ad opus Rogeri)."

§ 15. — Sir Henry Maine has no references to agency in his "Ancient Law." The index to Reeves' History of English Law contains no reference either to agency or to principal and agent. Mr. Holdsworth gives a few pages to it, but his instances are chiefly of the sort which would now be classed under the head of Master and Servant.

It is unnecessary to multiply quotations. Enough have been given to show, what was stated at the outset, that agency as a separate subject is a matter of late development in our law.

§ 16. Agency in Roman law.—Nor does this appear to be a peculiarity of English law. "The early Roman law of Contracts," says Mr. Hunter, "was absolutely destitute of the notion of agency. Two reasons may be assigned for this poverty. In the first place, the rule that everything acquired by a slave or son under potestas belonged to the pater familias, removed to a certain extent any urgent necessity for an elastic law of agency. But, in the second place, it must be remarked that the absence of agency characterizes every department of the ancient law."⁸

§ 17. — Proceeding to explain his statement concerning the Roman law of agency, Mr. Hunter says: "A perfect type of agency implies three things—(1) that the authority of the agent is derived from the consent of the principal; (2) that the agent can neither sue nor be sued in respect of the contracts he makes for his principal; and (3) that the principal alone can sue or be sued. If A acts for B without B's knowledge or consent, he may make himself responsible to B, but he is not an agent. If the agent alone can sue or be sued, there is no real agency. Thus in an ordinary mandate, if A asks B to buy the farm of C, and B does buy it, A cannot sue C on the contract; he can only compel B to sue C, or rather compel B to allow him to sue C in B's name. In like manner C cannot sue A the principal, but must sue B, who has in turn an action against A for indemnity. Again if either the agent or the principal may be sued, then the agent is personally responsible for the performance of the contract, and is in effect a surety. In order, therefore, to have true agency, it is necessary that the agent should act by the authority of the principal, that the agent should be entirely irresponsible, and the principal exclusively responsible."⁹

Without necessarily committing ourselves to the soundness of all of these conclusions, we may accept Mr. Hunter's statement of the condition of the Roman law as trustworthy.

§ 18. — In a number of cases, however, the Roman law presented situations which had some of the characteristics or results of agency, and which may be briefly and generally enumerated. Thus all rights acquired (whether in rem or in personam) by a person under the power of another (no distinction being made between slaves, persons under the potestas, wives in manu, and free persons in mancipio) belonged to the person in whose power they were.¹⁰

With respect of liability upon contracts made, if the contract were made by one in the power of another but having property (peculium) of his own, an action (actio de peculio) would in general lie against the person having him in power to the extent of the property.¹¹

If a contract were made by one in power, e. g. by a slave, for the ⁸ Hunter's Roman Law (4th ed.) p. 609. See also Roby's Roman Private Law, vol. II, p. 248.

⁹ Hunter's Roman Law, p. 609.

¹⁰ Hunter's Roman Law, p. 610.

¹¹ Hunter's Roman Law, p. 614; Roby's Roman Private Law, vol. II, p. 238.

benefit of his master, an action (actio de in rem verso) would lie against the master to the extent of the benefit conferred or intended to be conferred.¹²

If a contract were made by the command of the one in power, an action (actio quod jussu) would lie based upon the command.¹³

§ 19. — In addition to these, were cases having more of the aspects of agency. Thus if a master provided a ship and put a captain or skipper in charge, he was liable (in an action exercitoria) upon contracts made relating to the ship, its seaworthiness and freight.¹⁴ So if the master established a shop or business and put another in charge, he was liable (in an action institoria) upon contracts made by the one so put in charge in the proper conduct of the business.¹⁵

"The same actions," says Professor Sohm,¹⁶ "by which a pater familias or dominus can be rendered liable for acts performed by the son or slave on the strength of a general authority bestowed upon them, are equally available where the person upon whom the authority is conferred is not subject to the power of another. Thus the actio exercitoria and institoria are equally applicable where a free person is appointed captain of a ship or manager of a business. Wherever an authority—whether general or special—is conferred for any other purposes, wherever, that is to say, in the case of an unfree representative the actio quod jussu would lie, in all such cases, where the representative is a free person, the actio quasi institoria is available. If the contract, though concluded without authority, was nevertheless entered upon in the interest of another party (e. g., a contract made by a negotiorum gestor), the creditor with whom the contract was concluded may sue the other party by the actio utilis de in rem verso. The defendant, in such cases, is liable to the extent to which he was enriched by the transaction, in other words, to the extent to which he himself would be compellable to compensate the negotiorum gestor."

§ 20. — Aside from these cases in which, to some extent, a direct liability was enforced against or rights were acquired by the one on whose behalf the act was done, the general rule of the Roman law was that the rights or obligations arising existed only between the immediate parties, and the actor and the person acted for then settled their respective rights between themselves. Mandatum (gratuitous

¹² Roby's Roman Private Law, vol. II, p. 245; Hunter's Roman Law, p. 616.

¹³ Hunter, p. 615.

¹⁴ Roby, vol. II, p. 248 et seq.; Hunter, p. 617.

¹⁵ Roby, supra; Hunter, supra.

¹⁶ Institutes of Roman Law (4th ed.) trans. by J. C. Ledlie. (The later editions of the original present some verbal changes which do not alter the meaning.)

agency) and negotiorum gestio (unauthorized agency) furnish many illustrations.

§ 21. Other historical references.—The late Professor Brissaud, in his History of French Private Law, has some interesting comments which it is worth while to reproduce here.¹⁷ “In the very old law juridical acts should be carried out by the interested party himself; this is a consequence of their formalistic character; ceremonies or words which they assume imply his own presence; they would have no meaning if they came from a third party. Under the system of non-formal transactions (for example, contracts by mutual consent) representation became possible; each one could make known his will, not only by means of a letter or a ‘nuncius’ (‘epistola loquens’) but by an agent furnished with powers and instructions which were sufficiently broad for one not to be able to term him merely a mouthpiece. Owing to a rather natural fiction, however, he is likened to a mere messenger; the act of the agent is looked upon as the act of the principal. Cases in which it is necessary to act through a representative have occurred at all times—for example, one is absent or ill. How did one proceed in the formalistic period to do a legal act in such a case as this? Inaction is not always possible; for example, if one is summoned to appear in court, one is compelled to appear so as to avoid the penalties which fall upon the defaulter. The head of the family sometimes escaped this necessity by using the people dependent upon him, the people of his household; but their sphere of action was rather limited, for it is evident that they could not bind the master ‘in infinitum.’ To be sure, representation was less called for than one might believe, for every act which involved a person under disability was performed by his custodian, who acted in his own name by reason of his status as head of the family; such would also be the case when an individual ‘sui juris’ had an interest in giving up his independence and placing himself under the custody of some other person, with the result of placing that other person over his affairs. As far as obligations were concerned, bills to bearer furnished a means of dispensing with representation. Besides the preceding cases, it was possible to secure the performance of the majority of acts by a third person in his own name, assuming that one obtained afterwards from him the transfer of the advantage or the burden which resulted therefrom. Thus one person bought a piece of land and paid for it, after which he resold it to the one on whose account the purchase had been made; but this complicated proceeding is not without its risks; one of the parties may suffer by reason of the insolvency of the other; if the transaction is an advantageous one, the third party may possibly want to keep it for himself; he may die before having carried out the transfer, and his heirs may refuse to carry it out; if the transaction is a bad one, it is the third party who is liable to lose, as a consequence of a change of will or the death of the one who is chiefly interested. Nothing can take the place of representation, properly so called. It entered the customary law in proportion as formalism disappeared. But, in order to show how slow was its progress, it is sufficient to establish that it was not allowed, upon principle, in Germany before the thirteenth century. * * * And, when representation is accepted, it is not a rare thing to find that there are doubts cast upon the validity of the act of the representative, and that this act must be confirmed by the man who is represented as soon as that becomes possible. Scruple and hesitation have disappeared towards the end of the fourteenth century in a general way, and before that period in many instances. The status of agents for business transactions (by contrast with agents or attorneys at law) was worked out by borrowing from the rules of the Roman law and the Canon law."

¹⁷ The quotation is reproduced from the English translation in volume III of The Continental Legal History

Series, § 398. (Little Brown & Co., Boston, 1912.)

§ 22. Agency in modern Continental systems.—Modern Continental legal systems exhibit agency in its full and true form. The German civil and commercial codes provide many express regulations;¹⁸ and the French civil code does the same, though with less fullness and carefulness of statement.¹⁹

§ 23. The early treatises upon agency.—The first systematic and separate English treatise upon the law of agency seems to have been that of William Paley on Principal and Agent, which appeared in 1812, and has passed through several English and American editions.

The first similar treatise produced by an American writer was that of Samuel Livermore, in one volume, published at Boston in 1811. There was a second edition in two volumes published at Baltimore in 1818.

Judge Story's Commentaries on Agency appeared in 1839, and at once became the leading American authority. The book has also frequently been cited in English cases. The latest edition, the ninth, by Mr. Charles P. Greenough, appeared in 1882. Judge Story made many ¹⁸ There are two recent English translations of the German Civil Code—one by Wang, 1907, and one by Loewy, 1909. Of the Commercial Code, one by Schuster, 1911.

¹⁹ There is an English translation of the French Civil Code by Wright, 1908.

references to the Civil law, but the direct and acknowledged influence of that system has been less obvious in the American courts than in the English tribunals. Since then the literature upon all aspects of the subject has come to be extensive.

§ 24. Legislation in English and American law.—No legislative statement of the law of agency has as yet been attempted in England, though Mr. Bowstead, in his Digest of the Law of Agency, has done much to pave the way for such an undertaking.

In the United States, several states have statutory statements of the law of agency as part of a general code. In California, and the states which have followed it, the code is that of David Dudley Field. The Louisiana code is based upon the Code Napoleon. The Georgia code is of local origin. The most important of these codes will be found in the appendix to this work. Nothing like uniform state legislation upon the subject has been thus far undertaken.

CHAPTER II

DEFINITIONS AND DISTINCTIONS

- § 25. Agency defined.
26. Principal and agent.
27. Parties involved.
28. Relation usually a voluntary one.
29. — Authority created by law
— Authority by necessity.
30, 31. Contractual—Consensual.
32. Agency as status.
33, 34. Agency as a contract relation.
35. Contract of agency—Power of attorney defined.
36, 37. How agent compares with servant.
38. — Distinction often immaterial—Tendency to ignore it.
39. — Occasionally distinction important.
40. How agent compares with independent contractor.
41. Public instrumentalities like post, telegraph, etc., not usually agents.
42, 43. Agency differs from trust.
44. Agency to be distinguished from sale.
45, 46. — Agency to buy or sale.
47, 48. — Agency to sell or sale — Goods.
49. — — Land.
50. — How question determined
— Law or fact.
51. Agency differs from partnership.
52. — From lease.
53. — From license.
54. — From bailment.
55. — From borrowing.
56. Classification of agents.
57. 1. Actual and ostensible agencies.
58. 2. Universal, general and special agents.
59. — Basis of distinction.
60. — Definitions resulting — General agent.
61. — Special agent.
62. — Mere messenger.
63. — Person used merely as mechanical aid or instrument.
64. — How many of each one principal may have.
65. — Same person may be a general and a special agent.
66. — Not special because limited to a particular business.
67. Uses of these distinctions.
68. — Difficulty of determination.
69. — How determined.
70. 3. Special forms of agency— Professional and non-professional agents.
71. — Attorneys at law.
72. — Auctioneers.
73. — Brokers.
74. — Factors or commission merchants.
75. — Traveling salesmen or "drummers."
76. Officers of ships.
77. Partners.
78. Bank officers.

§ 25. Agency defined.—The word agency, when used in its broad meaning as pointed out in the preceding chapter, indicates the relation which exists when one person is employed to act for another. In this aspect, it has, in our modern law, three chief forms: 1. The relation of principal and agent; 2. The relation of master and servant, or, in the more modern phrase, the relation of employer and employee; and 3. The relation of employer or proprietor and independent contractor. All of these have some points of similarity but, at the same time, many aspects of real distinction.

Of the three forms here suggested, the one with which this work has chiefly to do, is the first, or the relation of principal and agent. At the same time the three relations, and particularly the first two, are so closely related, and the actor in these first two forms so frequently acts in both capacities or so largely combines them both in his own person, that it is convenient and often desirable to consider them side by side. Moreover, even though they be distinct, the rules which govern one relation are so frequently identical with those which apply to the other, that one statement will suffice for both, and illustrations may be freely drawn from either field. A full discussion, however, of all of the aspects of all of these relations is far beyond the scope of the present endeavor, and, where time or space requires, the other two forms are herein constantly subordinated to the first.

This much being determined, it will be next appropriate to make the definitions and point out the distinctions which the method of treatment here decided upon will make necessary.

§ 26. Principal and agent.—The relation of principal and agent, or the relation of agency in the narrower sense in which it is chiefly employed in this work, is the legal relation which exists where one person, called the agent, is authorized—usually by the act of the parties, but occasionally perhaps by operation of law¹ to represent and act for another, called the principal, in the contractual dealings of the latter with third persons.² The distinguishing features of the agent may

¹ See post § 29.

² See Chapter I. Many definitions of Agency have been proposed, some of which may prove of interest: "Agency is founded upon contract, either express or implied, by which one of the parties confides to the other, the management of some business to be transacted in his name or on his account, and by which the other assumes to do the business and to render an account of it." Kent, Com., II, p. 784.

"An agent is a person duly authorized to act on the behalf of another, or one whose unauthorized act has been duly ratified." Ewell's Evans' Agency, 1.

"An agent is one who acts for and in the stead of another, termed the principal, either generally or in some particular business or thing, and either after his own discretion in full or in part, or under a specific command." Bishop on Contracts, § 1027.

"In the common language of life, he, who being competent and sui juris, to do any act for his own benefit or on his own account, employs another person to do it, is called the principal, constituent or employer, and he who is thus employed is called the agent, attorney, proxy or delegate of the principal, constituent or employer. The relation thus created be-briefly be said to be his representative character and his derivative authority.³

The names principal and agent, though the usual ones, are not the only ones used to designate the parties to this relation. The agent is frequently called an attorney, or an attorney in fact, and occasionally is spoken of as a proxy, delegate or representative. The person represented, though usually called the principal, is sometimes called the employer, constituent or chief.

§ 27. Parties involved.—Agency, in the sense in which it is here used, contemplates three parties—the principal, the agent, and the third party with whom the agent is to deal. Each of these parties may incur obligations to each of the others and there are therefore presented six possible aspects, namely—the principal against the agent, the agent against the principal, the principal against the third party, the third tween the parties is termed an agency. Story, Agency, § 3.

"Agency is a contract by which one person, with greater or less discretionary powers, undertakes to represent another in certain business relations." Wharton, Agency, § 1.

"An agent is one who represents another, called the principal, in dealing with third persons. Such representation is called agency." Code, Cal., § 2295; Dakota, Code, § 1337.

"An 'agency' is a contract of employment for the purpose of bringing another in legal relations with a third party." An agent is "a person either actually or by law held to be authorized and employed by one person to bring him into contractual or other legal relations with a third party." Wright, Principal and Agent, p. 3.

"An agent is a representative vested with authority, real or ostensible, to create voluntary primary obligations for his principal, by making contracts with third persons, or by making promises or representations to third persons calculated to induce them to change their legal relations." Huffcut on Agency, 2d ed. p. 17.

"An agent is a person having express or implied authority to represent or act on behalf of another person, who is called his principal." Bowstead on Agency, 3d ed. p. 3.

When used in statutes, the word agent may have a more or less flexible meaning according to the context.

When used in statutes against embezzlement, see Pullam v. State, 78 Ala. 31, 56 Am. Rep. 21; Brewer v. State, 83 Ala. 113, 3 Am. St. R. 693; Echols v. State, 158 Ala. 43; People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 226; Wynegar v. State, 157 Ind. 577; State v. Hubbard, 58 Kan. 797, 39 L. R. A. 860; State v. Phillips, 105 Minn. 375; State v. Barter, 58 N. H. 604; Territory v. Maxwell, 2 N. Mex. 250.

Statutes requiring notice to an owner or his agent are usually held to contemplate an agent having authority or power of control and not mere laborers or servants. Regina v. Watson, 19 Ont. 646; Lofink v. Schuette, 14 Pa. Dist. 558; City of St. Paul v. Clark, 84 Minn. 138.

A statute requiring a license where a business is carried on by a party or his agent means the managing or superintending agent. Stewart v. Kehrer, 115 Ga. 184, 197 U. S. 60.

Under a statute requiring an affidavit to be made by the plaintiff or his agent, one who is merely described as a "bookkeeper" can not be presumed to be an agent. Merriman Co. v. Thomas, 103 Va. 24.

³ See Ewell's Evans on Agency, 1; Walton v. Dore, 113 Iowa, 1.

party against the principal, the agent against the third party, and the third party against the agent.

§ 28. Relation usually a voluntary one.—The position of the parties to this relation is usually a voluntary one, that is to say, in general no one is bound to enter into it against his will. Speaking first of the agent,—a master may command his slave to act for him; to some extent the parent may do so with reference to his child; at common law the husband had some power of control over his wife; a hired servant may to some degree in fact have subordinated his will to that of his master; adventitious circumstances in other situations may in fact have given one a temporary though actual power to dominate another; but these cases in modern times are practically all exceptional, and in general no one is bound to be the agent of another against his will. Even if he has agreed to be, his power to renounce, as will be seen, is usually absolute and the law will not as a rule attempt to coerce specific performance.

Speaking next of the principal, his independence is usually still more complete. As a rule no one can be bound by the act of another unless he has in fact, expressly or by implication, consented that that other shall represent him.

§ 29. — Authority created by law—Authority by necessity.—To this rule, however, there are several more or less real exceptions,—cases in which it is said that the principal's assent is unnecessary and in which his dissent would be unavailing.

Thus with reference to the power of a married woman to buy necessities on her husband's credit when he has failed to supply her, it has been said: "In those cases where the law authorizes a wife to pledge her husband's credit, even against his will, it creates a compulsory agency, and her request is his request."⁴ The same thing has been said where a child is allowed to buy necessities on his parent's credit. Both of these cases may doubtless be put on different grounds.

It has been said that an unpaid seller of goods, who makes a sale of the goods for the purpose of foreclosing his lien, acts as the agent of the buyer in making the sale; but, as has been pointed out in several cases, this is an inaccurate statement of the situation.⁵ Somewhat like this is the power of a pledgee to sell.

⁴ Per HOLMES, J. in Benjamin v. Dockham, 134 Mass. 418. See also per POLLOCK, C. B., in Johnston v. Sumner, 3 H. & N. 261; Cantine v. Phillips, 5 Harr. (Del.) 428; Bostwick v. Brower, 22 Misc. 709; Hendricks v. American Express Co., 138

Ky. 704, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 867; Evans v. Crawford Co. Ins. Co., 130 Wis. 189, 118 Am. St. R. 1009, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485; and many other cases cited in Chapter V on Appointment of Agents.

It is sometimes said that the master of a ship in buying supplies or in making a sale of the ship, and the like, is an agent by necessity; but this authority is doubtless not a legally created one at all, but merely the outgrowth of custom and the presumed intention of the owner in view of the special facts of exigency. Other instances of what are called agencies by necessity are occasionally to be found, but they are usually only agencies implied in fact; and, as will be seen hereafter, the whole matter is confined within much narrower limits than is often supposed.

There are, however, cases in which authority seems to be created by mere rule of law. In a great variety of cases statutes provide for the service of process, the giving of notice, and the like, upon particular persons as agents of those sought to be reached. This is particularly true in the case of corporations. Many of these cases can actually be based upon assent; but in some of them the element of assent seems to be largely lacking.

All of these various cases will be more fully considered in a later chapter.⁶

§ 30. Contractual—Consensual.—Authority or power in one person to bind another as his agent may be conferred without any contract between the principal and the agent, and even, in some cases as will be seen, without any actual or effective consent upon the part of the agent. In many of these cases the alleged agent would more properly be deemed an instrument or an agency than a true agent. The command or direction of the principal given to one who is subject to his command will, if acted upon, suffice to bind him, or his mere assent, express or implied, may be adequate to the purpose. Mere assent upon the part of the agent may be sufficient to make him an agent, upon his side, so far as he actually enters upon the performance. Any agreement, however, on the one side, that one will act as agent or any agreement on the other side that one may act as agent, in order to be binding as such, must take the form of a contract, and be based upon a sufficient consideration. This consideration may be of various kinds. It is perhaps ordinarily found in the express or implied agreement that one will act if the other will pay compensation, or vice versa; but this is not the only form. It may be found in other mutual promises of the parties. A promise that one will act as agent in a particular case or for a particular period may find a sufficient consideration in the assent of the other party that the first may so act, and vice versa. It is often said that there can be no contract for a gratuitous agency,—by which is meant a contract to serve without pay; but this is not sound; there is no doubt that there may be such a contract, though it is probably true that in the ordinary case of this sort the parties do not intend to create a binding obligation.

⁵ See Moore v. Potter, 155 N. Y. 481, 63 Am. St. R. 692; Ackerman v. Rubens, 167 N. Y. 405, 82 Am. St. R. 728, 53 L. R. A. 867.

⁶ See post. Book I, Chapter V.

§ 31. — In many cases a unilateral obligation only will be intended. There may be the offer of a promise for an act, the actor being at liberty to act or not as he pleases. The common case of the employment of a real-estate broker is often of this sort. The principal promises to pay a commission if the broker finds a purchaser, but the broker does not promise to find one or even to make any effort to find one. The case may also be the reverse of this; the offer of an act for a promise. If I turn over to you this purchaser will you promise to pay me a commission?

The obligation may also be bilateral. I will promise to find you a purchaser if you will promise to pay me a commission, and the like.

§ 32. Agency as status.—It is sometimes disputed whether agency is a matter of status. It really seems, however, to be of very little consequence whether it is so or not. It is, in the end, largely a question of definition. What is meant by status? The persons who use the term do not agree, and many conflicting definitions are proposed. Professor Holland in his book upon Jurisprudence collects a number of them, most of which he rejects, and concludes—and the present writer entirely agrees with him,—that the true test of status is to be found in some peculiarity of the person unconnected with the act which he undertakes to perform.⁷ According to this view, the law of status is the law of abnormal personality. Applying such a test, the infant, the idiot, the insane person, the slave, the alien, the felon, the outlaw, the married woman at common law, and the like, present instances of status. Agency, on the other hand, does not necessarily involve or result in abnormal personality, and agency is no more a relation of status than landlord and tenant, bailor and bailee, and the like.

§ 33. Agency as a contract relation.—Is agency then a contract relation? That will, of course, also depend upon the definition. The writer ventures to define a contract relation as one which, under normal conditions, results from the contract or agreement of the parties to it, which may ordinarily be terminated at their pleasure, and whose rights and obligations, as between the parties to it, are in general capable of being enlarged, diminished or modified by the contract or agreement of the parties.

⁷ Holland's Jurisprudence (10th ed.) pp. 136, 137. See also Appendix, Note L in Sir Frederick Pollock's edition of Maine's Ancient Law; Markby's

Elements of Law, 4th ed. § 178; Salmond's Jurisprudence, 3d ed. p. 213; Hunter's Roman Law, 4th ed. p. 138.

The relations of parent and child, of guardian and ward, of master and slave, of sovereign and subject, and the like do not fall within this definition. Neither does that of husband and wife. For while this relation may freely be entered into, it may not yet, whatever the future may have in store for it, be terminated at will, nor may its duties and obligations be substantially altered by the agreement of the parties.

On the other hand, the relations of landlord and tenant, of bailor and bailee, of carrier and passenger, of vendor and purchaser, of partner and partner, and the like, do fall within the definition. Within this class also falls agency, whether in the form of master and servant in modern times or of principal and agent.

It is realized, of course, that all attempts at definition are dangerous; that definitions are easily made to fit the facts in the desired way; and that human relations do not develop along defined lines, and may at any time take on new aspects. What is finally to be dealt with is the facts as they from time to time present themselves.

§ 34. — Although, as has been pointed out, agency may exist so far as third persons are concerned without any formal contract, between the principal and the agent, or even where the agent has no capacity to contract, yet in the great majority of the cases with which the law, in modern times, has to deal, there is an actual contract between the parties to the relation. In those cases in which one of the parties, usually the agent, has no contractual capacity, the relation is at best an imperfect one, and does not furnish the mutual rights and liabilities which ordinarily exist.

As to the obligations resting upon the parties to the relation in any given case, certain of them will be imposed by the express contract of the parties; most if not all of the remainder may be based upon contract implied in fact from the acts and situation of the parties; as to a few, other than those which may be regarded as equitable in their nature, there may be dispute as to whether they are implied in fact or are purely legally created obligations imposed by law upon the parties and enforceable at option by actions either of tort or of quasi-contract. Either view can find authority for its support. For himself, the present writer has no hesitation in expressing his preference for the conclusion which bases them wherever it is possible upon contract implied in fact. Practically all of these obligations, moreover, may, subject to the ordinary rules of public policy which govern similar contracts in general, and subject also to the rules governing the legal capacity of the particular parties, be limited, extended or superseded by the actual agreement of the parties.

In practically all of the cases in which the obligations of the principal and agent to one another become material, the matter will have gone so far that a real contract will have arisen between them—if they be competent to contract—whatever the initial absence of contractual elements may have been. If, for example, I request another to do some act for me as my agent, while he may be under no obligation to do it, yet if he does do it, a contractual obligation on my part to compensate, or reimburse or indemnify him will arise; and, on his part, a like obligation to follow my instructions or act with appropriate care or fidelity.

So far as the obligations of the principal or agent to third persons are concerned, they will, from the nature of the case, be, in principal and agent, generally contractual, or, if in tort, generally in those kinds of tort like deceit and fraud which ordinarily accompany contractual dealings; in master and servant, on the other hand, the obligations will usually be in tort.

§ 35. "Contract of agency"—"Power of attorney."—The contract, when one exists, by which the relation of principal and agent is created is called a "contract of agency;" the right of the agent to represent the principal is called his "authority" or "power;" when the authority is conferred by formal instrument in writing, it is said to be conferred by "letter of attorney," or, more commonly by "power of attorney."^s When the authority is conferred by power of attorney, the agent is frequently called an "attorney," or more commonly, an "attorney in fact," in order to distinguish him from the attorney at law.

§ 36. How agent compares with servant.—The distinction between the relation of principal and agent and that of master and serv-

^s "This power of attorney," said Parke, B., in Hibberd v. Knight, 2 Exch. 11 (a case involving the question of admitting secondary evidence of its contents rather than subpoenaing the agent to produce it), "is the deed of the attorney to whom it was given, and he is to keep it and, under it, to show that he has authority for what he has done. The witness should have been duly served with a subpoena duces tecum."

One who makes payment to an agent having a power of attorney to receive it, is not entitled to demand and receive the power of attorney. As between these parties, it belongs to the attorney. Pridmore v. Harrison, 1 Car. & Kir. 613.

But upon the termination of the agency, the principal must have the right to have the power of attorney returned or cancelled in any case at least in which its continued possession by the agent might be a menace to the principal's interests.

ant is not always easy to define. As has been seen,⁹ the relation of principal and agent is of comparatively late development in our law; it was preceded by the relation of master and servant, and from the law respecting that relation the earliest precedents concerning agents were drawn. The two relations are therefore very closely allied, and it is sometimes said that they are not distinguishable. Nevertheless, notwithstanding this common origin, it is entirely possible to distinguish them; the line of distinction seems in the main to be a logical and natural rather than a purely artificial one; and there can be no doubt that now for many years there has been developing a body of law known as the law of agency or of principal and agent and that a distinction between this relation and that of master and servant has come to be generally recognized.¹⁰ It is upon the basis of this fact, that the present discussion proceeds, and an attempt is made to show what the line of demarcation is thought to be.

⁹ See ante, Chapter I.

¹⁰ "The distinction between a servant and an agent," it is said by Mr. Justice Holmes in his edition of Kent's Commentaries (12th ed. vol. II, p. 260, note), "is the distinction between serving and acting for."

"The great and fundamental distinction between a servant and an agent," said Professor Dwight (Persons and Personal Property, p. 323), "is, that the former is principally employed to do an act for the employer, not resulting in a contract between the master and a third person, while the main office of an agent is to make such a contract. Servants may make contracts incidentally, while agents may in the same way render acts of service. The principal distinction between them, however, is as above stated."

Professor Huffcut (Agency, 2d ed. § 4) says: "The primary distinction between representation through an agent, and representation through a servant, lies in the nature of the act which the representative is authorized to perform. An agent represents his principal in an act intended, or calculated, to result in the creation of a voluntary primary obligation or undertaking. A servant represents his master in the performance of an operative or mechanical act of service not resulting in the creation of a voluntary primary obligation but which may result, intentionally or inadvertently, in the breach of an existing one. An agent makes offers, representations, or promises for his principal, addressed to third persons, upon the strength of which such third persons change their legal relation or position. A servant performs operative acts not intended to induce third persons to change their legal relations. An agent has to take account of the mind and will of two persons, namely, of his principal whose mind he represents, and of the third person whose mind he seeks to influence. A servant has to take account of the mind and will of one person, namely, of his master whose existing obligations and duties he is to perform. An agent may cause damage by inducing a third person to act. A servant may cause damage by acting upon a third person in his property or rights. In representation through an agent there are always three persons involved, the principal, the agent, and the third person. In representation through a servant, there are only two persons primarily involved, the master and the servant, and the third person is introduced only when the

The characteristic of the agent is that he is a business representative. His function is to bring about, modify, affect, accept performance of, or terminate contractual obligations between his principal and third persons. To the proper performance of his functions therefore, it is absolutely essential that there shall be third persons in contemplation between whom and the principal legal obligations are to be thus created, modified or otherwise affected by the acts of the agent.¹¹ servant commits, in the course of his master's business, a breach of the obligations owing by the master to a third person. In the first case, there are three persons and the third is induced to act. In the second case, there are three persons and the third is acted upon." See also the discussion in Merriman v. Thomas, 103 Va. 24 (holding a bookkeeper to be a servant but not an agent within a statute requiring an affidavit by a party or his agent).

On the other hand, Mr. Charles Claffin Allen contributes an article in 28 American Law Review, 9, on "Agent and Servant essentially Identical." This view is approved in Brown v. Germ. Am. Title & Tr. Co., 174 Pa. 443.

The codes distinguish between the two relations thus: "An agent is one who represents another called the principal in dealings with third persons." Cal., § 2295; Dakota, § 1337.

"A servant is one who is employed to render personal service to his employer, otherwise than in the pursuit of an independent calling, and who in such service remains entirely under the control and direction of the latter, who is called his master." Cal., § 2009; Dakota, § 1157.

"A preliminary remark," says Judge Cooley, "is essential regarding the employment, in the law, of the words master and servant. The common understanding of the words and the legal understanding is not the same; the latter is broader and comprehends some cases in which the parties are master and servant only in a peculiar sense, and for certain purposes; perhaps only for a single purpose. In strictness, a servant is one who, for a valuable consideration, engages in the service of another, and undertakes to observe his directions in some lawful business. The relation is purely one of contract, and the contract may contemplate or stipulate for any services, and any conditions of service not absolutely unlawful." Cooley on Torts, 531.

"The word servant," says Mr. Parsons, "seems to have in law two meanings. One is that which it has in common use, when it indicates a person hired by another for wages, to work for him as he may direct. We may call such a person a servant in fact; but the word is also used in many cases to indicate a servant by construction of law; it is sometimes applied to any person employed by another, and is scarcely to be discriminated in these instances from the word agent. This looseness in the use of the word is the more to be regretted, because it seems to have given rise to some legal difficulties and questions which might have been avoided." 1 Parsons on Contracts, 101.

"The word servant," says Mr. Wood, "in our legal nomenclature, has a broad significance, and embraces all persons of whatever rank or position who are in the employ and subject to the direction or control of another in any department of labor or business." Wood, Mast. & Serv., § 1.

¹¹A person may be employed to render service either to his employer directly, as in the case of the cook, the butler, the gardener, the coachman, or to some other person whom the employer has undertaken to serve. In the first case the person so employed comes in contact with his employer only; in the latter case he in some measure represents his employer in rendering the service to third persons. Although he thus comes in contact with third persons, he is none the less a servant. The case of a porter on a sleeping car may be used as illustration. He comes in contact with third persons; a large portion of his duties is to assist passengers and look out for their comfort and convenience; but he is still a servant. The essence of his duty is to render service for his employer to the passengers, and he has neither power nor occasion to make contracts with them.

The function of the servant, on the other hand, as his name suggests, is the rendition of service,—not the creation of contractual obligations. He executes the commands of his master, chiefly in reference to things, but occasionally with reference to persons when no contractual obligation is to result.¹²

§ 37. — The agent usually is vested with more or less of discretion as to the time and manner of acting, while the servant is commonly required to act according to the directions of his master; and this has sometimes been suggested as the basis for distinguishing between the two relations.¹³ It is not, however, a satisfactory basis. I may limit my broker (who would everywhere be regarded as an agent) to sales or purchases at a particular place, time or amount, while I may give to my gardener (who would everywhere be regarded as a servant) the utmost discretion as to how or when or where or what he shall plant or cultivate or gather.

The case of the conductor, on the other hand, is not so simple. If he has no other duties than to manage the train; if he has no power to make contracts for carriage; if his sole duty with respect to the passengers is to perform the ministerial act of collecting the tickets, and there is no occasion in which he has the right to bind his employer by contracts, then he also is purely a servant. But if he is authorized not only to manage his train but to make contracts for carriage—to make the ordinary bargains which are made between carrier and passenger, then he is also an agent. As to the situation of the conductor, see the remarks of Field, J., in Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 390, since overruled upon the main question involved.

¹² "As an agent is a person employed to bring the principal in legal relations with a third party, it is absolutely necessary, in order to carry out the contract of employment between the agent and his principal, that there should be a third party with whom the principal is to be brought into relation. (See Robinson v. Mollett, 7 Eng. & Ir. App. 802, and see Brett, J., at p. 820.) The contract between the principal and agent is primarily a contract of employment to bring him into legal relations with a third party, or to conduct such business as may be going on between him and the third party." Wright, Principal and Agent, p. 4.

¹³ In McCroskey v. Hamilton, 108 Ga. 640, 75 Am. St. R. 79, this distinction is made use of in order to hold that the act of a given person was not the act of an agent or sub-agent, but of a servant, a mere instrument, a messenger. In Flesh v. Lindsay, 115 Mo. 1, 37 Am. St. R. 374, it is used to show that while a married woman might not have an agent she might have a servant. In Kingan v. Silvers, 13 Ind. App. 80, the

The true distinction is that already indicated, namely, the distinction between representing another in business dealings with third persons, and working for or serving another when no contractual obligation or relation is to result.

A person who is ordinarily a servant may at times act as agent, and vice versa. And a person may be an agent as to one branch of a transaction and a servant as to another.¹⁴

§ 38. — Distinction often immaterial—Tendency to ignore it.—While the distinction between agency and service is thus quite radical in theory, there is a marked tendency in many cases to ignore it. There is in the first place, a strong popular inclination to use the word agent to indicate any one who acts for another without distinguishing between those acts which are designed to create contractual relations and others.¹⁵ This popular use is more and more reflected from the courts and text books.

There is, moreover, in many quarters, a strong repugnance to the use of the word "servant," because it is supposed to emphasize social distinctions which, it is thought, ought not to exist among us.¹⁶ This leads in popular language to the substitution of the word "agent," and this popular use is often exhibited by legislatures and courts, with the result that even in legal language the word "agent" is coming to be distinction is used to hold that while one might be an agent in negotiating for a note, he became a servant in receiving it to carry to his principal, and that therefore his act of altering it was not the act of his principal.

In Baltimore & Ohio Employees' Relief Ass'n v. Post, 122 Pa. 579, 9 Am. St. Rep. 147, 2 L. R. A. 44, the court adopts the distinction made by Mr. Wharton in his book on Evidence (sec. 1182) that "An agent is authorized to exercise discretion; when a servant is authorized to exercise discretion then he ceases to be a servant and becomes an agent." In Singer Mfg. Co. v. Rahn, 132 U. S. 518, 33 L. Ed. 440, a sewing machine salesman was held to be a servant, so far as to make his employer liable for his negligence, largely because the contract under which he was employed gave the company a large measure of control as to the manner in which he should conduct the business.

¹⁴ If, for example, I request a person to buy a horse for me, and he does so, he will in the purchase act as my agent. If I then request him to drive or care for the horse for me, and he does so, he will as to those acts be ordinarily my servant. See also Kingan v. Silvers, supra.

¹⁵ Thus, in Kennedy v. DeTrafford [1897] App. Cas. 180, Lord Herschell says: "No word is more commonly and constantly abused than the word 'agent.' A person may be spoken of as an 'agent,' and no doubt in the popular sense of the word may properly be said to be an 'agent,' although when it is attempted to suggest that he is an 'agent' under such circumstances as create the legal obligations attaching to agency that use of the word is only misleading."

¹⁶ See § 11 of article on "Agent and Servant essentially Identical," in 28 American Law Review, 23.

more and more used where the word "servant" would be more appropriate.¹⁷

Fortunately, the rules regulating the two relations are in the main so much alike, that nice distinction is usually not material and the tendency referred to leads to no serious difficulty.

§ 39. — Occasionally distinction important.—There is, however, occasionally a case in which the distinction becomes important. A statute, for example, may use one word or the other under circumstances which call for strict construction, and it then becomes material to distinguish. Thus a statute aimed at embezzlement by "servants" will not necessarily extend to embezzlement by agents;¹⁸ and statutes extending special privileges to "servants" or "laborers" will not ordinarily apply where the person claiming their protection is an agent or other employee of superior rank.¹⁹

¹⁷ Statutes often use the word agent as synonymous with servant. Thus a prohibition against the doing of an act by one or his agents would usually have the same effect as though it were prohibited to himself, his servants or agents. See St. Johnsbury, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt, 59 Vt. 294.

A privilege extended to one and his agents would also usually include servants and vice versa.

¹⁸ Thus in Regina v. Walker, Dearsly & B. Cr. Cas. 600, the defendant was prosecuted for embezzlement under a statute as a "servant." The defendant had been employed to solicit orders for goods, with which he was supplied by his employers; he was also to collect payment and remit the proceeds to his employers. Having appropriated money so received, he was prosecuted under the statute. There was much discussion of the distinction between an agent and a servant, though no definite rule was laid down or principle evolved. The defence contended that the prisoner was an agent, i. e. a factor, and not a servant, and this view was finally adopted by the court, though without an extended discussion.

¹⁹ Thus in Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 213, an act was construed making stockholders in a corporation liable for all debts owing to "their laborers, servants and apprentices." A person who was "bookkeeper and general manager" of the corporation sought the benefit of the statute as a "servant," but it was held that he was not within that class. So also of a "secretary." Gordon v. Jennings, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 45; Coffin v. Reynolds, 37 N. Y. 640. An attorney at law is not within a statute securing "wages or salaries to clerks, servants or employees." Lewis v. Fisher, 80 Md. 139, 26 L. R. A. 278, 45 Am. St. Rep. 327. Nor is a "mine agent." Dean v. De Wolf, 16 Hun, 186, affirmed 82 N. Y. 626; Krauser v. Ruckel, 17 Hun, 463. The salary due a travelling salesman is not a "labor debt." Jones v. Avery, 50 Mich. 326; Epps v. Epps, 17 Ill. App. 196; Eppstein v. Webb, 44 Ill. App. 341. He is not "a clerk employed in a store or elsewhere." Mulholland v. Wood, 166 Pa. 486. But he is within a statute protecting "laborers, servants, clerks, and operatives." Hand v. Cole, 88 Tenn. 400, 7 L. R. A. 96. So also Wildner v. Ferguson, 42 Minn. 112, 6 L. R. A. 338. An assistant chief engineer of a railroad company is not a "laborer." Brockway v. Innes, 39 Mich. 47, 33 Am. Rep. 348. Same effect: Pennsyl-

§ 40. How agent compares with independent contractor.—Although all three are, in a large sense, agents, yet in ordinary legal usage the agent—and the servant also—is further to be distinguished from the “independent contractor,”²⁰ who is one who exercises some independent employment, in the course of which he undertakes, supplying his own materials, servants and equipment, to accomplish a certain result, not being subject while doing so to the direction and control of his employer, but being responsible to him for the end to be achieved rather than for the means by which he accomplishes it.

Such a person is not an agent, in the sense in which that term is here used, and has no authority to bind his employer in any form of contractual dealings.²¹ The employer, moreover, in the ordinary vanias, etc., R. Co. v. Leuffer, 84 Pa. 168, 24 Am. Rep. 189; Ericsson v. Brown, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; Mis-souri, etc., R. Co. v. Baker, 14 Kan. 563. Nor is a bookkeeper. Signor v. Webb, 44 Ill. App. 338. The commissions of a broker or factor are not the “wages of a laborer.” Ham-berger v. Marcus, 157 Pa. 133, 37 Am. St. Rep. 719.

In Tete v. Lanaux (1893), 45 La. Ann. 1343, there was a necessity, in view of a peculiar statute, to determine whether a certain person was a clerk, or a broker. Said the court: “A clerk is one who hires his services to an employer at a fixed price under a stipulation to do and perform some specific duty or labor which requires the exercise of skill. ‘The broker is he who is employed to negotiate a matter between parties, and who for that reason is the mandatory of both.’ R. C. C. 3016. The leading and essential difference between a clerk and a broker is that the former hires his services exclusively to one person, while the latter is employed to make bargains and contracts between other persons in matters of trade, commerce and navigation. For the services of the former there is a fixed stated salary, while for the latter a compensation, commonly styled brokerage, is allowed.”

²⁰ See post, Book IV, Chap. V, under head of Independent Contractor, where the subject is more fully considered.

²¹ Thus in a case wherein a loaded vessel just leaving port was found to be on fire, and the master employed S. & Co., who were doing business as shipping-merchants, to take charge of her and rescue her cargo, the court said: “The employment of S. & Co., under these facts, was something more than the appointment of an agent. It was more in the nature of an employment or hiring than an appointment to an agency. It was in the nature of a contract between the captain of the vessel, as the owner’s agent, and S. & Co., whereby the latter agreed to extinguish the fire, and if necessary unload the vessel of its cargo, and do everything else for the protection of the vessel and cargo. They were employed to do a particular thing, and were contractors, instead of agents, in the general understanding of agency.” Horan v. Strachan (1890), 86 Ga. 408, 22 Am. St. Rep. 471.

So where a state made a contract with a publisher to stereotype and print certain state reports, the court said: “In the case at bar the defendant was not employed as an agent to carry on a printing and publishing business for the state. Its contract was to manufacture certain plates case, not having the legal power of control, is not responsible to third persons for the neglects or defaults of the independent contractor occurring in the performance of his undertaking, while he would ordinarily be responsible for like neglects or defaults if the person employed were his servant. There are, however, as will be seen, a number of well defined exceptions to this rule.²² Under statutory obligations even the word "agent" is sometimes construed to include independent contractors.²³

Of the two, the agent more nearly corresponds to the independent contractor than does the servant, but they are both distinguishable.

§ 41. Public instrumentalities like mail, telegraph, etc., not usually agents.—Usually to be regarded rather as a sort of independent contractor, than as agents or servants whom the principal may direct and control, and for whose acts or defaults he is responsible, are such public instrumentalities as the mail, the telegraph, the public carrier, and the like, when employed in their ordinary capacity. Certain of them may, undoubtedly, undertake to act as agent, and some of them and certain books for the state. When they were manufactured they were to be delivered to the state, and the defendant was to be paid a certain price therefor. This was the special employment of the defendant by the plaintiff [the state]. It was not acting as the agent of the state in making these plates and books. It did the work in its own name. The state could not be held responsible for any acts or omissions of the defendant, or any contracts entered into, or liabilities incurred by it in carrying out this contract with the state." State v. State Journal Co., 75 Neb. 275, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 174.

Though a transfer company employed to receive goods from a carrier may be an independent contractor as to the transportation of them, it may also be so far an agent as to charge the employer with its notice as to the condition of the goods. Rothchild v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 68 Wash. 527.

Where a lumber company induced a physician to locate at its plant and undertook to collect for him certain sums from its employees monthly, it was held to be an absolute contract on the part of the company to pay him those sums, and not merely an undertaking as agent to collect and pay over to him. Texarkana Lumber Co. v. Lennard, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 116.

Independent contractor and not agent. McKenna v. Stayman Mfg. Co., 112 N. Y. Supp. 1099.

²² See post, Book IV, Chap. V, Independent Contractors.

²³ Thus, under statutes requiring the fencing of railways and imposing liability for not doing it upon railway companies and their "agents," the word agent is often construed in a wide sense to include independent contractors and others acting for and by the authority of the railway company. See Gardner v. Smith, 7 Mich. 410, 71 Am. Dec. 722; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McCarthy, 20 Ill. 385, 71 Am. Dec. 285.

So a lessee may be included. Clement v. Canfield, 28 Vt. 303.

Same within statute giving right of action for death by wrongful act. Peters v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 150 Mo. App. 721.

frequently do. Express companies, for example, often undertake to purchase or sell goods, as well as to carry them, or to collect money as well as to transmit it. Banks often act as agents, though whether they are agents or independent contractors in the ordinary case of receiving checks, notes, drafts, etc., for collection,—is a disputed question, as will be seen hereafter.

The distinction in the case of a governmentally conducted institution, like the post office, is not difficult. And in the case of the telegraph, though the authorities are not uniform, the tendency of the more recent cases is to regard it not as the agent of one who undertakes to deal through its instrumentality but as a public institution undertaking to serve all who employ it and liable for its own negligence or default.²⁴

So it is held that members of a public fire department, who undertake to extinguish fires, are not the agents or servants of those upon whose property they attempt to extinguish a fire.²⁵

§ 42. Agency differs from trust.—Agency differs in material respects from the ordinary trust.²⁶ It is true that agency is often said to be a relation of trust and confidence, and that property in the hands of an agent is often held to be impressed with a trust for the benefit of the principal,²⁷ yet the two relations are not identical. A trust involves control of property; agency may be totally disconnected with any particular property. The trustee holds a legal title; the agent has usually no title at all. The trustee may act in his own name; the agent acts regularly in the name of his principal. Trust is not necessarily a ²⁴ See the discussion in Pepper v. Western Union Tel. Co., 87 Tenn. 554, 10 Am. St. R. 639, 4 L. R. A. 660; Shingleur v. West. Un. Tel. Co., 72 Miss. 1030, 48 Am. St. R. 604, 30 L. R. A. 444; Pegram v. West. Un. Tel. Co., 100 N. C. 28, 6 Am. St. R. 557; Postal Tel. Co. v. Schaefer, 110 Ky. 907; Strong v. West. Un. Tel. Co., 18 Idaho, 389, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 409, where the cases will be found more fully cited. But compare the rule in Georgia as found in West. Un. Tel. Co. v. Shotter, 71 Ga. 760; West. Un. Tel. Co. v. Flint Riv. Lumber Co., 114 Ga. 576, 88 Am. St. R. 36; Brooke v. West. Un. Tel. Co., 119 Ga. 694.

²⁵ Eriksen v. Great North. Ry. Co., 117 Minn. 348, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 237.

²⁶ See Taylor v. Davis, 110 U. S. 330, 28 L. Ed. 163; Hartley v. Phillips, 198 Pa. 9; Knowles v. Scott, [1891] 1 Ch. 717; James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384; Cleghorn v. Castle, 13 Hawaiian, 186; Owen v. Cronk, [1895] 1 Q. B. 265; Shepard v. Abbott, 179 Mass. 300; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 53 Vt. 345; Simon v. Burgess, 71 Misc. 300; Weer v. Gand, 88 Ill. 490.

See also per Bramwell, L. J., in New Zealand Land Co. v. Watson, 7 Q. B. D. 374.

²⁷ See post, under the head of Loyalty; Central Stock Exchange v. Bendinger, 109 Fed. Rep. 926, 56 L. R. A. 875; Roller v. Spillmore, 13 Wis. 26; Long v. King, 117 Ala. 423; Conan v. Riseborough, 139 Ill. 383.

contractual relation; agency is properly to be so regarded. A trust does not necessarily or even usually involve any authority to enter into contracts which shall bind another; the authority to make such contracts is the distinguishing characteristic of agency. Trusts are usually not revocable; agency usually is revocable.²⁸

§ 43. — Occasion to distinguish between the two relations may arise in many ways. A general statute may use one term under circumstances which make discrimination necessary,²⁹ and the statute of frauds or the statute of limitations may operate differently upon them.³⁰ But the question most commonly arising is, whether the person who may be either cestui que trust or principal is liable upon contracts made by the person claimed to be agent or trustee. If the person acting be agent the other, whether disclosed or not, may be liable as principal; if the person acting be a trustee merely he may bind himself by his contracts, but he can not make the cestui que trust personally responsible.³¹ This question difficult enough at best, is often rendered doubly so by contracts apparently drawn purposely in such ambiguous terms as to leave room for the one construction or the other as shall best serve the purpose of the parties when the controversy arises.

For the solution of this difficulty, no inflexible rule can be laid down. Names used are not conclusive, and the case must be determined by the preponderance of the conflicting characteristics contending for recognition.

§ 44. Agency to be distinguished from sale.—Agency is, further, to be distinguished from sale. In the ordinary case the two contracts ²⁸ See this distinction in Flaherty v. O'Connor, 24 R. I. 587; Lyle v. Burke, 40 Mich. 499; Kraft v. Neuffer, 202 Pa. 558.

²⁹ Thus a trustee may acquire a copyright, while an agent may not. Petty v. Taylor, [1897] 1 Ch. 465.

³⁰ Thus the statute of frauds has distinguished in the way in which agency, on the one hand, and trust or confidence, on the other may be proved. James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384.

³¹ If the person who made the contract is a trustee he binds himself and not the cestui que trust. Chaffee v. Rutland Railroad Co., 53 Vt. 345; Everett v. Drew, 129 Mass. 150; Shepard v. Abbott, 179 Mass. 300; Hartley v. Phillips, 198 Pa. 9; McGovern v. Bennett, 146 Mich. 558.

"If, on the other hand, the so-called trustee is a mere nominee or 'dummy,' put forward for no other purpose but to screen the so-called cestui que trust from responsibility, the relation between them is that of principal and agent, and the principal is liable." 8 Law Quar. Rev. article, "Trusteeship and Agency," p. 220, citing inter alia Cox's Case, 4 De Gex, J. & S. 53; Pugh and Sharman's Case, L. R. 13 Eq. 566. See also Coventry's Case, [1891] 1 Ch. 202.

Where the person is trustee it is held that the rule exempting an agent who has, before notice, paid over to his principal money voluntarily paid to him by mistake, does not apply. Cleghorn v. Castle, 13 Hawaiian 186.

are, of course, readily enough distinguished; but there also arise cases wherein, because of the mixed motives of the parties or the artless or artful framing of the contract, it is not easy to distinguish. The question, in these doubtful cases, usually takes one of two forms: 1. Is the party in question an agent to buy goods for the other or is he buying the goods on his own account and then himself selling them to that other? 2. Is the party in question an agent to sell goods for the other, or is he really buying the goods from that other to sell upon his own account?

§ 45. ——— Agency to buy or sale.—A typical case of the first sort is presented where, under an ambiguous contract, one party is accumulating goods to be delivered to another. After the goods have been accumulated in whole or in part but before delivery, they are accidentally destroyed. Upon whom does the loss fall? If the person who was accumulating them was a vendor, the loss ordinarily will fall upon him. If he was an agent to buy, the loss ordinarily will fall upon the other party. Hence arises the controversy—a controversy which can be determined only by an investigation of all of the facts and a balancing of the opposing features of agency and sale. In the leading case upon the question,³² the contract was thus found to be one of sale rather than agency to buy; while in another presenting some of the same features the opposite conclusion was reached.³³

§ 46. ——— The form of the contract, while not at all conclusive, may go far in determining the question. The weight of this evidence is increased by the extent to which the contract appears to disclose the real intention of the parties rather than to be an artful and wordy cover of the real purpose. Who is to be affected by fluctuations in price, is often significant. If the one who is to supply the goods is to do so at a fixed price regardless of market fluctuations, there is strong evidence of sale rather than of agency. Upon whose responsibility are the goods to be procured, is also a significant question. If they are to be obtained upon the credit of the person, who is to supply them without possibility of recourse to the person to whom they are to be supplied, this also is strong evidence of sale. Who is to determine of whom, where, to what extent, upon what terms, the goods to be supplied are to be procured? If the person who is to supply them is to determine these matters, then, as stated in one case,³⁴ "there is nothing characteristic of agency in this."

³² Black v. Webb, 20 Ohio, 304, 55 Am. Dec. 456, discussed more fully in Mechem on Sales, § 41. So in a prosecution for embezzlement, the transaction was held to be a sale rather than an agency to buy. State v. Brown, 171 Mo. 477. See also St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Blocker (Tex. Civ. App.), 138 S. W. 156.

³³ Hatch v. McBrien, 83 Mich. 159; Mechem on Sales, § 42. In Keswick v. Rafter, 35 App. Div. 503, affirmed on opinion below, 165 N. Y. 653, the correspondence between the parties was held to show an order to the plaintiff to buy for the defendant and not a sale by the plaintiff to the defendant.

The writer has, however, so fully discussed this question in another place,³⁵ as to make further examination here unnecessary.

§ 47. — Agency to sell or sale of goods.—Agencies to sell are very numerous, the most familiar types being those of the auctioneer, the broker, the factor or commission merchant, and the general dealer who receives goods for sale under what is commonly termed a "consignment." These present no peculiar difficulties and will be more fully dealt with in their appropriate place. Anomalous cases, however, do arise which are difficult of determination. The most common are those wherein goods have been delivered to another for sale, but it is not certain whether he is to sell them as agent of the person from whom he received them, or whether he has purchased them from that person and is to sell them on his own account.³⁶ This uncertainty is to be attributed sometimes to the ignorance or inattention of the parties in making their contracts, sometimes to the desire of the parties to evade the operation of a particular statute, like a recording act,³⁷ but more frequently to the conscious desire of one of the parties at least—usually the one from whom the goods are received—to have the transaction afterward take the form either of agency or sale as shall best suit his purposes.³⁸

§ 48. — These doubtful cases are to be determined, not by the name which the parties have seen fit to apply to their contract but by its true nature and effect.³⁹ The essence of sale is the transfer of the title to the goods for a price paid or to be paid. Such a transfer puts the transferee, who has obtained the goods to sell again, in the attitude of one who is selling his own goods, and makes him liable to the person from whom he received them as a debtor for the price to be paid and not liable as an agent for the proceeds of the resale. The essence of agency to sell is the delivery of the goods to a person who is to sell them, not as his own property but as the property of the principal,

³⁴ Black v. Webb, supra.

³⁵ Mechem on Sales, §§ 41 et seq.

³⁶ See Mechem on Sales, § 43 et seq.

³⁷ Norwegian Plow Co. v. Clark, 102 Iowa, 31; Braunn v. Keally, 146 Pa. 519, 28 Am. St. Rep. 811.

³⁸ Arbuckle v. Kirkpatrick, 98

Tenn. 221, 36 L. R. A. 285, 60 Am. St. Rep. 854.

³⁹ Heryford v. Davis, 102 U. S. 235; Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 37 L. Ed. 1093; Hervey v. Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664; Mennis v. Manning, 136 Ill. App. 406.

who remains the owner of the goods and who therefore has the right to control the sale, to fix the price and terms, to recall the goods, and to demand and receive their proceeds when sold, less the agent's commission, but who has no right to a price for them before sale or unless sold by the agent.

In doubtful cases, the courts in endeavoring to extract the meaning will incline against the party whose mixed motives or ambiguous language has caused the uncertainty, where such a course is demanded for the protection of innocent persons against whom the contract is sought to be enforced.⁴⁰

In the application of these principles, the courts have been called upon to examine a great variety of contracts, holding some to create agency⁴¹ and others to create sale.⁴² The most important cases thus

⁴⁰ Arbuckle v. Kirkpatrick, 98 Tenn. 221, 36 L. R. A. 285, 60 Am. St. Rep. 854.

⁴¹ Ex parte White, L. R. 6 Ch. App. 397; Eldridge v. Benson, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 483; Walker v. Butterick, 105 Mass. 237; Barnes Safe & Lock Co. v. Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co., 38 W. Va. 158, 22 L. R. A. 850, 45 Am. St. Rep. 846; National Cordage Co. v. Sims, 44 Neb. 148; Lenz v. Harrison, 148 Ill. 598; Burton v. Goodspeed, 69 Ill. 237; Barr v. Am. Copying Co., 142 Ill. App. 92; Holleman v. Bradley Fertilizer Co., 106 Ga. 156; National Bank v. Goodyear, 90 Ga. 711; Balderston v. Rubber Co., 18 R. I. 338, 49 Am. St. Rep. 772; Norton v. Melick, 97 Iowa, 564; Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Peak, 89 Tex. 209; Moline Plow Co. v. Rodgers, 53 Kan. 743, 42 Am. St. Rep. 317; McKinney v. Grant, 76 Kan. 779; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Benedict Co., 36 U. S. App. 604, 74 Fed. 182; Joslyn v. Cadillac Auto Co., 101 C. C. A. 77, 177 Fed. 863; Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 37 L. Ed. 1093; Sturtevant Co. v. Dugan & Co., 106 Md. 587; Sligh & Co. v. Kuehne Commission Co., 135 Mo. App. 206; Barteldes Seed Co. v. Border, etc., Co., 23 Okla. 675, 101 Pac. 1130; Sioux Remedy Co. v. Lindgren, 27 S. Dak. 123, 130 N. W. 49; Lindsey Lumber Co. v. Mason, 165 Ala. 194; Coll- yer v. Krakauer, 122 App. Div. (N.

Y.) 797; Arkansas Fertilizer Co. v. Banks, 95 Ark. 86; Lance v. Butler, 135 N. Car. 419.

⁴² Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Park, 164 Fed. 803, 220 U. S. 373; Arbuckle Bros. v. Kirkpatrick, 98 Tenn. 221, 36 L. R. A. 285, 60 Am. St. Rep. 854; Snelling v. Arbuckle, 104 Ga. 362; Arbuckle Bros. v. Gates, 95 Va. 802; In re Linforth, 4 Sawy. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 8,369; Ex parte Flannagans, 2 Hughes, 264, Fed. Cas. No. 4,855; Nutter v. Wheeler, 2 Low. 346, Fed. Cas. No. 10,384; Mack v. Tobacco Co., 48 Neb. 397, 58 Am. St. Rep. 691; Norwegian Plow Co. v. Clark, 102 Iowa, 31; Alpha Checkrower Co. v. Bradley, 105 Iowa, 537; Armstrong v. St. Paul, etc., Co., 48 Minn. 113; Granite Roofing Co. v. Casler, 82 Mich. 466; Peoria Mfg. Co. v. Lyons, 153 Ill. 427; Yoder v. Haworth, 57 Neb. 150, 73 Am. St. Rep. 496; Chickering v. Bastress, 130 Ill. 206, 17 Am. St. Rep. 309; Mennis v. Manning & Co., 136 Ill. App. 406; Ætna Powder Co. v. Hildebrand, 137 Ind. 462, 45 Am. St. Rep. 194; Aspinwall Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 97 Mich. 531; Kellam v. Brown, 112 N. C. 451; Heywood v. Doernbecher Mfg. Co., 48 Oreg. 359; Hessig-Ellis Drug Co. v. Sly, 83 Kan. 60; Jackson v. State, 2 Ala. App. 226, 57 So. 110; Conn v. Chambers, 123 App. Div. (N. Y.) 298, affirmed in 195 N. Y. 538; Baldwin v. Feder, 135 App.

arising are cited in the notes, but as the writer has dealt with them at large in another place,⁴³ it seems neither necessary nor excusable to repeat the discussion here.

§ 49. ——— Land.—The same questions may arise with reference to land. An authority to sell land is not an offer to sell it to the agent, and he will not be permitted to buy it and hold it on his own account without his principal's consent.⁴⁴ The instrument creating the authority may, however, be so broad or be couched in such language as to amount to an option to the agent to purchase or to authorize him to sell upon the basis that he is or may become the owner.⁴⁵

On the other hand, while an option or a contract for the sale of land does not per se create an agency to sell it,⁴⁶ its language may be broad enough to compass that result, with the effect that the giver may be responsible for the acts of this agent like any other.⁴⁷

§ 50. ——— How question determined—Law or fact.—Where the contract is in writing, or the facts are not disputed and only one in-

Div. (N. Y.) 97; Poirier Mfg. Co. v. Kitts, 18 N. Dak. 556.

⁴³ See Mechem on Sales, §§ 41 et seq.

⁴⁴ Thus in Chezum v. Kreighbaum, 4 Wash. 680, an instrument giving the agent "the exclusive sale" of certain lands for a certain price, and providing that he must get his commission in addition to the price named, was held not to authorize the agent to take the land himself and demand a conveyance from the principal. See also Meek v. Hurst, 223 Mo. 688, 135 Am. St. R. 531; Raddle v. Lindemann, 151 Ill. App. 441.

⁴⁵ In Robinson v. Easton, 93 Cal. 80, 27 Am. St. R. 167, an instrument authorizing certain persons to sell land for a certain price "net" to the owner and providing that for that sum "they may sell said property with our consent," was held to authorize them to make themselves the buyers.

Instrument in form of power of attorney construed as deed. Sims v. Sealy, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 518.

⁴⁶ Thus in Reeves v. McCracken, 103 Tex. 416, the owners contracted to sell land to a certain party "or order." The latter made a contract, induced by fraud, to resell the land to a third person. When the sales were consummated, it was agreed, as a short cut, that the owners should convey directly to the subpurchaser and receive directly from him the price agreed to be paid by the original vendee. This arrangement was carried out in entire ignorance of the fraud. Held, that the original owners did not thereby become responsible for the fraud of the intermediate party. To same effect. Alger v. Keith, 44 C. C. A. 311, 105 Fed. 105.

⁴⁷ Shepard v. Pabst, 149 Wis. 35, where it is said: "There is nothing inconsistent in a contract which creates an agency to sell and also gives the agent an option to himself purchase, which he is at liberty to avail himself of at any time during his agency, but is not bound to do so. Russell v. Andrae, 79 Wis. 108; Puffer v. Welch, 144 Wis. 506; Arnold v. Nat. Bank, 126 Wis. 362, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 580."

One holding an option on land, and who undertakes to sell "subject to the approval of the owner," is not ipso facto made the agent of either buyer or owner. Cartwright v. Ruffin, 43 Colo. 377.

ference can fairly be drawn from them, the determination of the legal effect of the writing or the facts in creating agency or sale, is a matter for the court; but where there is no writing and the facts are in dispute, or where there is no dispute as to the facts but more than one inference may fairly be drawn from them, the jury must determine, under proper instructions from the court, not only what the facts are but also what is their effect under the court's instructions upon the law.⁴⁸

§ 51. Agency differs from partnership.—Agency also differs from partnership. For while partnership results in a certain type of agency, and while the existence of agency has often been said to be the modern test of partnership,⁴⁹ not every agent is a partner with his principal even when he obtains his compensation by sharing in the profits of the business which his principal carries on with his aid.⁵⁰ Where there has been no holding out of the agent as a partner, the matter must be determined by the agreement of the parties themselves,⁵¹ and while parties may create partnership, without actually intending that specific result where they voluntarily enter into an arrangement whose necessary legal effect is the creation of partnership, courts are reluctant to surprise parties into that relation when they clearly did not intend it. "Every doubtful case," it has been well said,⁵² "must be solved in favor of their intent; otherwise we should 'carry the doctrine of constructive partnership so far as to render it a trap to the unwary.'"

§ 52. Agency differs from lease.—So agency may be distinguished from lease. As in the preceding case of sale, the two contracts are usually very much unlike; but, here as there, cases are met with wherein one relation has apparently been disguised under the name of the other. Here, as there, also, names are of no consequence, and the true nature of the contract determines the case. If, therefore, though the contract be called a lease, the alleged tenant is so far under the direction and control of the alleged landlord as to make the latter the real party in

⁴⁸ See Mechem on Sales, § 50; Rauber v. Sundback, 1 S. D. 268.

⁴⁹ See Cox v. Hickman, 8 H. L. Cas. 268.

⁵⁰ See for example Sodiker v. Applegate, 24 W. Va. 411, 49 Am. Rep. 252; Zuber v. Roberts, 147 Ala. 512; Buzard v. Bank of Greenville, 67 Tex. 83, 60 Am. Rep. 7.

⁵¹ See Grinton v. Strong, 147 Ill. 587, where the relation was held to be agency and not partnership. So also in National Lumber Co. v. Gray's Harbor Com'l Co., — Wash. —, 127 Pac. 577; Duensing v. Paine, 150 Iowa, 417; Lance v. Butler, 135 N. Car. 419; Heidenheimer v. Waltheu, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 501.

⁵² Per Cooley, J., in Beecher v. Bush, 45 Mich. 188, 40 Am. Rep. 465, quoting Kent, C. J., in Post v. Kimberly, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 470, 504.

interest and the former merely his representative, the contract will be held to be one of agency.⁵³

Where, however, the relation is that of landlord and tenant merely, the tenant is not an agent for whose contracts the landlord is responsible,⁵⁴ nor a servant for whose torts the landlord can be held liable.⁵⁵

§ 53. Agency differs from license.—Also to be distinguished from an agent is a mere licensee. The fact that one who has the power to give or withhold permission, grants to another, gratuitously or for a consideration, the right, for the grantee's benefit, to use the grantor's property, operate under his patent, publish under his copyright, sell under his trade marks, and the like, does not of itself make the grantee an agent to bind the grantor by contracts respecting the property involved or otherwise, or make the grantor responsible for the acts or omissions of the licensee.⁵⁶ On the other hand, where the act is being done for the grantor and to accomplish his ends and purposes, agency may more readily be found.⁵⁷

§ 54. Agency differs from bailment.—Equally clear is it that the mere bailment of property does not make the bailee an agent to make contracts respecting the property or otherwise, or a servant for whose acts or defaults the bailor will be responsible. Mere possession gives ⁵³ Petteway v. McIntyre, 131 N. Car. 432. See also Ragsdale v. Meridian Land Co., 71 Miss. 284.

⁵⁴ Hawley v. Curry, 74 Ill. App. 309. A lessee, allowed a certain amount out of the rent with which to make certain agreed repairs and supply furnishings, is not the agent of the lessor. Pray v. Appledore Land & Bldg. Co., 76 N. H. 167.

Very similar to the last case is Rothe v. Bellingrath, 71 Ala. 55, where it was held that an agreement that the tenant might make certain improvements, which the lessor was to take and pay for at the end of the term, did not make the tenant the lessor's agent to bind the lessor for the cost. In Oriental Investment Co. v. Barclary, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 543, a so-called lease was held to be a mere cover for an agency, and that the lessor was liable for an injury.

⁵⁵ Marsh v. Hand, 120 N. Y. 315; Miller v. New York, etc., R. Co., 125 N. Y. 118; Harrison v. McClellan, 137 App. Div. 508. See also Moors- head v. United Railways Co., 119 Mo. App. 541, 203 Mo. 121.

⁵⁶ See American Press Association v. Daily Story Pub. Co., 120 Fed. 766, 66 L. R. A. 444, 193 U. S. 675. Or charge the licensee as a fiduciary. Thomson v. Batcheller, 201 N. Y. 551; State v. State Journal Co., 75 Neb. 275, 9 L. R. A. (N S.) 174.

⁵⁷ See Bingamen v. Hickman, 115 Pa. 420, where the creditors of an insolvent debtor who had made an assignment for creditors, entered into an arrangement with the assignee by which a committee of three were to be allowed to take the assigned property—a manufacturing establishment—and operate it with a view to paying the creditors. Held, that the committee were agents of the creditors in such wise that they were entitled to compensation and reimbursement, and were not compelled to look merely to the proceeds of the factory. Compare with Cox v. Hickman, 8 H. L. Cas. 268.

no authority to sell or otherwise dispose of, unless aided by such a statute as the Factor's Act. Possession, however, may be delivered to such a person or under such circumstances or accompanied with such indicia of authority or ownership, as to estop the true owner if the bailee has thereby been enabled to deceive an innocent taker for value, as will be seen in a later chapter wherein the subject is fully discussed.⁵⁸

§ 55. Agency differs from borrowing.—There would seem to be no difficulty in the ordinary case in distinguishing the relation of principal and agent from that of lender and borrower, yet cases are by no means infrequent in which one who claims to have been merely a lender has so stipulated for a share of profits in lieu of interest or for such an interest in the venture as to raise a serious question whether he is not a principal or more commonly a partner. Where there has been no holding out as principal, courts in modern times endeavor to give effect to the real intention of the parties, and not to charge one as a principal or a partner who did not intend to become such, unless that is the necessary legal effect of the arrangement into which the parties have entered.⁵⁹ Agency rather than loan has, however, been found in some cases,⁶⁰ and where it exists it may be undisclosed, with the same consequences as in other cases.

Some other cases of relations which may be distinguished from agency are given in the notes.⁶¹

⁵⁸ See Book IV, Chap. VII, Right to Recover Property.

⁵⁹ See the discussion in Meehan v. Valentine, 145 U. S. 611, 36 L. Ed. 835 (where partnership was charged but not sustained); Harvey v. Childs, 28 Ohio St. 319, 22 Am. Rep. 387 (same). There are many others.

In Davis, etc., Com. Co. v. Mt. Vernon Bank, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 133 S. W. 448, one who had advanced money to enable another to buy cattle was held to be merely a lender and not a principal. So, in the purchase of a mine. Krohn v. Lambeth, 114 Cal. 302.

⁶⁰ In Dows v. Morse, 62 Iowa, 231, followed in Van Sandt v. Dows, 63 Iowa, 594, 50 Am. Rep. 759, where money was advanced to another for the purchase of corn, under a contract providing that it should be used for no other purpose, that the title to the corn should be deemed to be in the one who advanced the money; that the latter should sell it and receive the money and retain the amount advanced and interest at 10 per cent and expenses and a compensation of one cent a bushel, there was held to be agency between the parties, even though the person to whom the money was advanced was to guarantee the other against all loss and to make good the investment with interest, compensation and expenses. See also Hartshorne v. Thomas, 43 N. J. Eq. 419, where the question was likewise between the immediate parties only.

Compare Cassiday Fork Boom Co. v. Terry, 69 W. Va. 572.

⁶¹ Relation of officials in church organization.—In Evangelista v. Ver, 8 Philip. 653, the supreme court of the Philippine Islands held that the relation of officials of a religious denomination to one another is that

§ 56. Classification of agents.—Agencies and agents may be classified according to several lines of distinction. A statutory distinction based upon a deeply rooted and natural line of demarcation is that drawn between actual and ostensible agencies.⁶² The nature and extent of the authority conferred have led to the classification of agents as universal, general, and special or particular.⁶³

Other classifications, based (a) upon the nature of the agency into mercantile and non-mercantile agents; or (b) with regard to their obligations in selling, into del credere agents, and agents not del credere; or (c) in regard to the degree of skill required of them, into gratuitous and paid agents and professional and non-professional agents, are sometimes made for convenience of treatment.⁶⁴

Each of these general groups will be given some attention.

of ecclesiastical subordination to a common superior, rather than of master and servant, principal and agent, or landlord and tenant. The court said, "In the United States it has been held that the relation between a Roman Catholic bishop and a pastor of a church in his diocese is not that of master and servant (Baxter v. McDonnell, 155 N. Y. 83, p. 99), not that of hirer and hired, nor of principal and agent (Tuigg v. Sheehan, 101 Pa. 363). They are fellow-servants of their church, for which the bishop acts merely as a superior agent and not as a principal (Rose v. Vertin, 46 Mich. 457). Nor are they landlord and tenant (Chatard v. O'Donovan, 80 Ind. 20). A like rule in respect of master and servant has been laid down as to bishops and clergy of the Methodist Episcopal Church (Bristol v. Burr, 120 N. Y. 427)."

Agency or Cotenancy.—For cases holding a given situation to be the former rather than the latter, see Davis v. Peterson, 59 Minn. 165; Ellwell v. Coon (N. J.), 46 Atl. 580.

Agency or Joint Venture.—In Mancker v. Tough, 79 Kan. 46, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 675, 17 Ann. Cas. 208, a contract between a real estate owner and a broker by which the broker was to undertake the sale of the land for an interest in the proceeds above a certain sum, was said to be "a contract of agency and not a joint venture."

Vendor delivering goods to carrier not agent of buyer.—A seller of goods delivering them to a carrier in pursuance of the contract of sale is not thereby the agent of the buyer to make the shipment so as to charge the latter with the former's negligence. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Harman, 91 Va. 601.

Vendor obtaining deed to perfect his own title not agent of buyer.—A vendor of land who, in order to perfect his own title to the satisfaction of the buyer, obtains a quit-claim deed from a third person, does not do so as the agent of his vendee in such wise that the latter is charged with the notice which the vendor acquires, while obtaining the quit-claim deed, of the outstanding title of another person. Riley v. Robinson, 128 App. Div. 178, aff'd, no opinion, 202 N. Y. 531.

Receiver not an agent.—Wildberger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 72 Miss. 338, 48 Am. St. R. 558.

⁶² Cal. Code, § 2300; N. Dak. Code, § 4308; S. Dak. § 5151; Montana Code, § 3075.

⁶³ See Ewell's Evans' Agency, 2; Story on Agency, § 17; Wharton on Agency, § 116.

⁶⁴ Ewell's Evans' Agency, 2.

§ 57. 1. Actual and ostensible agencies.—The distinction which leads to the division of agencies into actual and ostensible is one which is deeply rooted in the law of agency. In the nature of the case, as will be more fully seen hereafter, the law must often, for the protection of third persons, proceed upon the appearance of authority created by the alleged principal without stopping to determine critically whether the appearance corresponded in all respects with the fact. The formal distinction was made in the proposed code for New York and has been adopted in California and other of the western states.⁶⁵ As there stated, the agency is actual when the agent has really been employed and authorized by the principal; the agency is ostensible when the principal intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, leads a third person to believe another to be his agent who has not really been employed and authorized by him.

§ 58. 2. Universal, general and special agents.—The classification of agents usually deemed to be the most important, is that based upon the nature and extent of the authority conferred upon them, into universal, general, and special agents. Those who recognize the classification, however, are by no means entirely agreed upon the basis of it, and it is undoubtedly difficult to frame a definition which will prove satisfactory in every case.⁶⁶ To some extent, the words explain themselves, but so far as further statements will be of aid, the following are, perhaps, the ones most generally agreed upon:

A universal agent is one authorized to do all acts for his principal which can lawfully be delegated to an agent. So far as such a condition is possible, such an agent may be said to have universal authority.

⁶⁵ See California Code (Pomeroy 1901) §§ 2298–2300, 2334; North Dakota, Rev. Codes (1899) §§ 4320–4322; South Dakota Ann. Stats. (1901) §§ 5149–5151; Montana Codes (Sanders' Ed. 1895) §§ 3073–3075.

⁶⁶ Judge Story has said: "A special agency properly exists, when there is a delegation of authority to do a single act; a general agency properly exists where there is a delegation to do all acts connected with a particular trade, business or employment." Story on Agency, § 17. Professor Parsons has said: "A general agent is one authorized to transact all his principal's business, or all his business of some particular kind. A particular [special] agent is one authorized to do one or two special things." 1 Parsons on Contracts, *41. Mr. Evans says: "General agents are such as are authorized to transact all business of a particular kind; whilst a special agent is authorized to act only in a single transaction." Evans on Agency (Ewell's Ed.) p. 2.

Mr. Wright says that the general agent "is usually a person to whom the principal has entrusted the management of a particular business, such as an estate agent, or the manager of a business;" while the special agent is "an agent given authority to deliver a particular message or buy a particular thing on one occasion, or do some special thing, and has no implied authority aliunde

§ 59. Basis of distinction.—With respect of the general and the special agents two bases of classification are possible, one the extent of the authority and the other the extent of the act, that is to say, we may distinguish between a general or unlimited authority on the one hand and a particular or limited one on the other; or we may distinguish between authority to do all the acts of a particular kind or class and authority to do a single and particular act only. Logically it might seem that the classification based upon the extent of the authority was the one to be preferred, but actually the one based upon the extent of the act has been the one commonly relied upon. Treating this as the principal line of division and the other as subordinate, it is possible to have a general agent with general powers, a general agent with special and limited powers, a special agent with general powers and a special agent with special or limited powers. It happens, however, in the majority of cases that an agent who under the familiar classification is a general agent is clothed with powers which under the other would be deemed general, and that the special agent has usually special powers—a fact which doubtless accounts for the failure to press the logic of the classification with more vigor.

§ 60. ——— Definitions resulting—General agent.—Adopting for the present the current basis of classification—a general agent is one to do all the acts pertaining to a business of a certain kind or at a particular place, or all the acts of a particular class or series. He has usually authority either expressly conferred in general terms or in effect made general by the usages, customs or nature of the business which he is authorized to transact. A general authority may arise from the creation or the recognition of authority in many particular cases concerning the same subject matter.⁶⁷ It is usually general from from his position or the nature of his business." Wright on Principal and Agent, 2d ed. 87, 88.

In Butler v. Maples, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 766, 19 L. Ed. 822, it is said: "The distinction between a general and a special agency is in most cases a plain one. The purpose of the latter is a single transaction, or a transaction with designated persons. It does not leave to the agent any discretion as to the persons with whom he may contract for the principal, if he be empowered to make more than one contract. Authority to buy for a principal a single article of merchandise by one contract, or to buy several articles from a person named, is a special agency, but authority to make purchases from any persons with whom the agent may choose to deal, or to make an indefinite number of purchases, is a general agency. And it is not the less a general agency because it does not extend over the whole business of the principal. * * * The distinction between the two kinds of agencies is that the one is created by power given to do acts of a class, and the other by power given to do individual acts only."

⁶⁷ See Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400, where Lord Ellenborough

the difficulty or impossibility of enumerating specifically what shall be deemed to be the authority in each particular contingency which may arise in accomplishing the general purpose.⁶⁸ An agent, therefore, who is empowered to transact all the business of his principal of a particular kind or in a particular place, would, for this reason, be ordinarily deemed a general agent.⁶⁹

§ 61. — Special agent.—A special agent is one authorized to do some particular act or to act upon some particular occasion. He acts speaks of a general authority as "that which is derived from a multitude of instances."

⁶⁸ Something of the distinction may be made clear by an illustration. If I have a business which I cannot conduct in person, I may employ an agent to manage it for me. In the very nature of the case, however, in conferring his authority, I must do so in general terms. I cannot easily do more than to empower him to manage it according to his best judgment for my best interest. I cannot well go into details and prescribe how he shall conduct himself and what he shall do in all the multitudinous contingencies which may arise. I must give him authority in general terms and leave the details to his discretion. On the other hand, if I need a horse, I may send a person into the market to buy one only on condition that it shall be of the age, size, color, weight, disposition, speed and price which I prescribe. This case admits of special and particular instruction; the other did not. The former, the business manager, would be a general agent. The latter, who is to buy the horse, would be a special agent. But suppose I say to an agent, "Go into the market and buy me a horse," and limit him neither as to age, size, color, price or otherwise. What kind of an agent is he? He has general powers, but is to act only on a particular occasion.

⁶⁹ South Bend Toy Co. v. Dakota F. & M. Ins. Co., 3 S. Dak. 205; Cruzan v. Smith, 41 Ind. 288; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Owen, 43 Ind. 405. An agent authorized to manage a business is a general agent. Fisk v. Greeley Elec. L. Co., 3 Colo. App. 319.

"Power to act generally in a particular business or a particular course of trade in a business, however limited, would constitute a general agency, if the agent is so held out to the world, however restricted his private instructions may be." Crain v. First Nat. Bank, 114 Ill. 516; St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Elgin Milk Co., 74 Ill. App. 619, 175 Ill. 557.

On the distinction between general and special agency, see a few of the great number of cases: Gilman v. Robinson, Ry. & Moo. 226; Kaye v. Brett, 5 Ex. 269; Brady v. Todd, 9 C. B. (N. S.) 592; Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400; Loudon Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Pa. St. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Lobdell v. Baker, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 193, 35 Am. Dec. 358; Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612; Manning v. Gasharie, 27 Ind. 399; Anderson v. Coonley, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 279; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Butchers', etc., Bank, 16 N. Y. 125, 69 Am. Dec. 678; Tomlinson v. Collett, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 436; Walker v. Skipwith, Meigs (Tenn.) 502, 33 Am. Dec. 161; Savage v. Rix, 9 N. H. 263; Union Stock Yards Co. v. Mallory, 157 Ill. 554, 48 Am. St. R. 341; Great West. Min. Co. v. Woodmas Min. Co., 12 Colo. 46, 13 Am. St. R. 204; McIntosh v. Rice, 13 Colo. App. 393; Dowden v. Cryder, 55 N. J. L. 329; Davis v. Talbot, 137 Ind. 235; First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105 Iowa, 463.

usually in accordance with specific instructions or under limitations necessarily implied from the nature of the act to be done.

§ 62. — Mere messenger.—Lower in rank even than the special agent is the mere messenger, whose character and functions, however, have been very little considered in English law.⁷⁰ He was well known to the Roman law (nuntius)⁷¹ and his case (bote) has been carefully differentiated by the German lawyers.⁷² If I have negotiated the terms of a contract which shall be operative or not according to the message which I am to send to the other party, the person whom I employ to deliver the message may be the instrument or agency through which I make the contract, but he does not make it for me. He is no more an agent in the true sense than is the mail or the telegraph which is the instrumentality through which a contract may be negotiated.

§ 63. — Person used merely as mechanical aid or instrument.—Lower still in the scale of true agency is the person employed as a mere mechanical aid or instrument. Thus, where one person, in the presence and by the express direction of another, serves as an aid in performing some purely ministerial or mechanical part,—such as signing the other's name, attaching his seal, and the like,—of an act which that other is engaged in performing and to which he brings his own volition, judgment and determination in all matters which concern the essence of the transaction, the act is regarded in law as the direct and personal act of the latter, and the person who aided ministerially or mechanically is deemed to be a mere tool or instrument. In a large sense he is an agency, but in the legal sense he is not an agent within the rules governing the method of authorization, at least; for, as will be seen, it is settled that, even though the person so employed ⁷⁰ In Johannson v. Gumundson, 19 Manitoba L. Rep. 83, 11 West. L. Rep. 176, a distinction is made by Perdue, J., between a messenger or intermediary and an agent.

⁷¹ Mr. Hunter (Roman Law, 4th ed. p. 622) has some interesting comments. Among other things he says, answering an argument of Savigny, "Although upon particular states of fact a doubt may arise whether a person is an agent, yet there is a broad distinction between a messenger (nuntius) and an agent. A messenger, like a letter, is simply a medium of communication; he exercises no judgment of his own, but merely repeats what is told him. An agent, on the other hand, acts on his own judgment, of course within the limits of his instructions. These instructions may be minute and precise, leaving little to the exercise of the agent's judgment, but unless they do away with the necessity of his exercising his judgment altogether, the agent is distinguishable from a mere messenger."

⁷² See, for example, Planck, Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch, 4th ed. Vol. I, p. 283.

is to sign a written instrument or an instrument under seal, he requires only the oral direction or consent of the principal.⁷³

§ 64. ——— How many of each one principal can have.—It has been said that a principal can have but one universal agent, by which is probably meant simply that the nature of such a universal power excludes the possibility of its being shared with others—a proposition by no means free from doubt.

Universal agencies are very rare, and it has been doubted whether such an agency could practically exist,⁷⁴ although the books furnish illustrations of agencies called universal.⁷⁵ Such an agency, however, can only be created, if at all, by clear and unambiguous language, and will not be inferred from any general expressions however broad.⁷⁶

A principal may have several general agents, and as many special agents, messengers, and the like, as occasion may require.

§ 65. ——— Same person may be a special and a general agent.—The same person may at one time or in regard to one transaction be a special agent of his principal and at another time or in reference to other transactions he may be a general agent. So, though he may be authorized to act only in a particular case he may, with respect of that transaction, have general power.⁷⁷

§ 66. ——— Not special because limited to a particular business.—The fact that the authority of the agent is limited to a particular business does not make it special; it may be as general in regard to that business as though its range were unlimited.⁷⁸

§ 67. Uses of these distinctions.—Distinctions of this sort may be of use in securing a logical statement of the law, and they are also of some importance because of the more or less arbitrary rules which have been based upon them; but unless it be held clearly in mind that they are aids only, and are not conclusive, in controversies between the principal and third persons, they will often prove to be misleading rather than useful.⁷⁹

⁷³ See Gardner v. Gardner, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 483, 52 Am. Dec. 740; Lewis v. Watson, 98 Ala. 479, 39 Am. St. R. 82, 22 L. R. A. 297; Jansen v. McCall, 22 Cal. 563, 83 Am. Dec. 84; Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402, 68 Am. Dec. 506; People v. Organ, 27 Ill. 27, 79 Am. Dec. 391; Lord v. Lord, 58 N. H. 7, 42 Am. Rep. 565 (will); Hart v. Withers, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 285, 21 Am. Dec. 382; Blood v. Goodrich, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 68, 24 Am. Dec. 121, and many others cited post, Chapter V.

⁷⁴ See Story on Agency, § 21.

⁷⁵ See Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

⁷⁶ Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 97 Am. Dec. 728; Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612.

⁷⁷ Jeffrey v. Bigelow, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 518, 28 Am. Dec. 476.

⁷⁸ Anderson v. Coonley, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 279; Cruzan v. Smith, 41 Ind. 288.

⁷⁹ See post, Book II, Chap. I.

§ 68. ——— Difficulty of determination.—It is often difficult to determine whether a given agency shall be deemed general or special, and cases frequently occur, as will be seen hereafter,⁸⁰ where the agency, though it may be special as between the principal and the agent, must be regarded as general as between the principal and third persons. The distinction is of chief importance in determining the liability of the agent to his principal, because, as will be seen,⁸¹ the agent by exceeding the limits set to his authority or by violating express instructions may make himself liable to his principal for the loss or damage occasioned thereby.

§ 69. ——— How determined.—No abstract presumption of law is made in reference either to the existence or to the nature or extent of an agency. These are facts to be proved. If the agency is created by writing, or, though there was no writing, if the facts are not disputed, and but one inference can be drawn from them the question addresses itself to the court; but if the facts are in dispute or if different inferences may be drawn from the undisputed facts it is for the jury to determine, under proper instructions from the court, both the existence of the agency and its character and extent.⁸² Where, however, an agency is shown to exist, it is said that the presumption would be that the agent's authority was general rather than limited.⁸³

It is however always true that anybody who relies upon the existence of agency has imposed upon him the burden of proving it. He must not only prove that it exists, but he must also show what kind of an agency it is. The law never simply presumes that agency exists, and it never simply presumes that an agent is general or special. When it appears that an agency does exist, the court, since it cannot presume any particular limitation without proof, must, if it makes any presumption at all, except such as grows out of the very nature of the agency, presume it to be general rather than limited; but, speaking generally, not only must the fact of the agency be shown but also the nature and extent of it.

⁸⁰ See post, Book II, Chap. I.

⁸¹ See post, Book II, Chap. I.

⁸² Dickinson County v. Mississippi Valley Ins. Co., 41 Iowa, 286; Morrison v. Whiteside, 17 Md. 452, 79 Am. Dec. 661; Loudon Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Pa. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Beringer v. Meanor, 85 Pa. 223; Bean v. Howe, 85 Pa. 260; Dale v. Pierce, 85 Pa. 474. "The existence of an agent's authority, is purely a question of fact. What he may do by virtue of it is a question of law." Glenn v. Savage, 14 Ore. 567; Long Creek Bldg. Ass'n v. State Ins. Co., 29 Ore. 569.

⁸³ Trainer v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; Methuen Co. v. Hayes, 33 Me. 169; Sharp v. Knox, 48 Mo. App. 169; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Simons, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 621; Oak Leaf Mill Co. v. Cooper, — Ark. —, 146 S. W. 130; Austrian v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343, 34 Am. St. R. 350.

§ 70. 3. Special forms of agency—Professional and non-professional agents.—Certain forms of agency are of such great importance and of such universal use that many of them have come to be regarded as distinct professions or occupations, and around each of them has grown up a special body of the law that requires distinctive consideration. Of this class are attorneys, auctioneers, bank officers, brokers, factors, ship masters, and the like, some of which will be specially considered hereafter.

§ 71. ——— Attorneys at law.—As has been seen, the term attorney is often used in the law of agency as synonymous with the word agent, particularly when the authority is conferred by a written instrument. An agent of this sort is often further distinguished as an attorney in fact.

The term has also its well understood significance of attorney at law, by which is meant, in modern times, one whose profession it is to give advice and assistance in legal matters, and to prosecute and defend in courts, the causes of those who may employ him for that purpose.⁸⁴

§ 72. ——— Auctioneers.—An auctioneer is one whose business it is to sell or dispose of property, rights or privileges at public competitive sale, to the person or persons offering or accepting the terms most favorable to the owner.⁸⁵ He differs from a broker in several ⁸⁴ Weeks on Attorneys at Law, § 31. See the subject treated at length in the chapter on Attorneys at Law.

⁸⁵ Mr. Bishop defines an auctioneer as "one who dealing with assembled persons competing, sells property to those who make or accept the offers most favorable to the owner." As will be observed, the definition in the text is based largely upon this. Of this definition Mr. Bishop says: "I have not observed in the books any satisfactory definition of an auctioneer. Even Story puts what seems to have been meant for a definition, very loosely, thus: 'An auctioneer is a person who is authorized to sell goods or merchandise at public auction or sale for a recompense or (as it is commonly called) a commission.' Story, Agency, § 27. My definition is silent as to his remuneration, or the manner of it; in which respect Story's is to be preferred if this is really an element in the question. But though ordinarily, an auctioneer, like any other agent, is paid, he is not the less such if he does the work gratuitously. State v. Rucker, 24 Mo. 557. Nor does he cease to be an auctioneer though he sells his own property. Bent v. Cobb, 9 Gray (Mass.), 397, 69 Am. Dec. 295. Therefore the definition may well be silent as to the matter of agency. Nor is he less an auctioneer though, selling his own property, he conducts the competition by some method other than outcry. Rex v. Taylor, McClell. 362, 13 Price, 636. Story's definition is defective in not comprehending the auctioneer of real estate. Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38, 47; Dobell v. Hutchinson, 3 A. & E. 355. It may be a question whether mine is not defective in not extending to such a case as the letting out of the board of paupers to the lowest bidder, and various other cases of procuring a contract other than a purchase of property." Bishop on Contracts, New Ed. § 1131, and note.

particulars, chief among which are that he is employed to sell or dispose of, only, and that his sales are always public. He is primarily deemed to be the agent of the seller, but in the performance of his functions he becomes the agent of the buyer also, as when he accepts the buyer's bid and enters his name upon the memorandum of the sale.⁸⁶

§ 73. — Brokers.—A broker is one whose occupation it is to bring parties together to bargain, or to bargain for them, in matters of trade, commerce or navigation.⁸⁷ He is essentially a middle-man or go-between. He differs from an auctioneer in that he has no special property in the goods which he may be authorized to sell; that he must sell them in the name of the principal, and that his sales are private and not at auction. He ordinarily receives a compensation or commission, usually called brokerage, but he may also serve gratuitously. He differs from a factor, also, in that he does not ordinarily have the possession of the property which he may be employed to sell and that his contracts are always made in the name of his employer. He is primarily the agent of the person who first employs him, and he cannot, without the full and free consent of both, be, throughout the transaction, the agent of both parties. Without such consent, he can only act as the agent of the other party when the terms of the contract are fully agreed upon between the principals and he is instructed to close it up or where he acts as a mere middle-man who brings the parties together to then deal in person.

Brokers are of many kinds, according to the particular class of transactions in which they engage. Thus there are money-brokers, stock-brokers, ship-brokers, bill-brokers, insurance-brokers, real estate-brokers, pawnbrokers, and general merchandise-brokers.⁸⁸

§ 74. — Factors or commission merchants.—These terms, as is said by a learned writer,⁸⁹ are nearly or quite synonymous. The

"An auctioneer," says Mr. Wharton, "is a person employed to sell at public sale, after public notice, property to the highest bidder." Agency, § 638.

⁸⁶ See chapter on Auctioneers, where the subject is separately treated.

⁸⁷ "A broker is one, who, as middleman, brings persons together to bargain or bargains for them, in the private purchase or sale of property of any sort, not ordinarily in his possession." Bishop, Contracts, § 1135.

"A broker is a specialist employed as a middleman to negotiate between the parties, a sale or other business contract." Wharton on Agency, § 695. Hamberger v. Marcus, 157 Pa. 133, 37 Am. St. R. 719.

Judge Story says that a broker "is an agent employed to make bargains and contracts between other persons, in matters of trade, commerce or navigation, for a compensation, commonly called brokerage." Agency, § 28. This definition is the one given by Evans' Agency, 4.

⁸⁸ See this subject fully discussed in the chapter on Brokers.

⁸⁹ Bishop, Contracts, § 1138. See former is the more common in the language of the law, the latter in the language of commerce. A factor is one whose business it is to receive and sell goods for a commission. He differs from a broker in that he is entrusted with the possession of the goods to be sold and usually sells in his own name.⁹⁰ He is invested by law with a special property in the goods to be sold and a general lien upon them, for his advances; and unless there be an agreement or usage to the contrary, he may sell upon a reasonable credit.⁹¹

Del credere commission. Not unfrequently, in consideration of an increased commission, the factor guarantees the payment of debts arising through his agency, in which case he is said to sell upon a del credere commission.⁹²

Supercargo. A factor is called a supercargo when authorized to sell a cargo which he accompanies on the voyage.⁹³

also, Hamberger v. Marcus, 157 Pa. 133, 37 Am. St. R. 719; Perkins v. State, 50 Ala. 154.

⁹⁰ "The distinction between a broker and a factor," said Chief Justice Abbott, "is not merely nominal, for they differ in many important particulars. A factor is a person to whom goods are consigned for sale by a merchant residing abroad, or at a distance from the place of sale, and he usually sells in his own name without disclosing that of his principal. The latter, therefore, with full knowledge of these circumstances, trusts him with the actual possession of the goods, and gives him authority to sell in his own name. But the broker is in a different situation,—he is not trusted with the possession of the goods and he ought not to sell in his own name." And in the same case it is said by Holroyd, J., that a factor "is a person to whom goods are sent or consigned, and he has not only possession, but in consequence of its being usual to advance money upon them, he has also a special property in them, and a general lien upon them. When, therefore, he sells in his own name it is within the scope of his authority, and it may be right therefore that the principal should be bound by the consequences of such sale—amongst which the right of setting off a debt due from the factor is one. But the case of a broker is different; he has not the possession of the goods and so the vendee cannot be deceived by that circumstance; and besides, the employing of a person to sell goods as a broker does not authorize him to sell in his own name. If, therefore, he sells in his own name, he acts beyond the scope of his authority and his principal is not bound." Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 143.

⁹¹ See the subject discussed in the chapter on Factors.

⁹² See the question of his duties and liabilities discussed in the chapter on Factors, post.

BANIAN—A peculiar sort of agent, known only in India, is the Banian, who is a del credere agent with respect of his employer but a principal with reference to third persons. He has been described as follows: "He often, if not generally, advances money to the firm in which he is employed; he gives security; if he sells the goods of the firm he is a sort of del credere agent, guaranteeing the payment of the price by the bazaar dealers or other purchasers to his principal, and as to purchases he is the direct purchaser in the bazaar." Per Norman, C. J., in Grant v. Shaw, 2 Hyde, 302, 309.

⁹³ Ewell's Evans on Agency, 3.

"Supercargoes are persons em-

Mercantile agent. The English Factors Act of 1889, defines a "mercantile agent," within the meaning of that act, as "a mercantile agent having in the customary course of his business as such agent authority either to sell goods or to consign goods for the purpose of sale, or to buy goods or to raise money on the security of goods." Other similar statutory definitions are to be found.

§ 75. — Traveling salesmen.—In many respects unlike either the broker or the factor is the traveling salesman commonly called a "drummer." "A traveling salesman," said the court in Pennsylvania, "who exhibits samples of, and takes orders from purchasers for, his employer's goods is not, in a technical or popular sense, a broker, or factor, although he may be compensated for services by commissions on the sales so effected by him."⁹⁴ He differs from the broker in that he is a traveling agent rather than one having a fixed place of business; he does not undertake to serve anyone who may desire his services but is usually in the regular employment of a particular principal; and he has not usually, as the broker often has, the power to make a binding contract, but merely to solicit orders for his principal's approval or disapproval. He differs from the factor in the same particulars, and also in the fact that he is not usually entrusted with the possession of the goods but is merely provided with samples of them which he is to exhibit for the purpose of securing orders.

§ 76. Officers of ships.—Certain officers of ships, as the master and the ship's husband, present well recognized forms of agency, but the consideration of their rights, authority and duties belongs rather to a treatise upon shipping or maritime law than to one upon the subject of agency generally.⁹⁵

§ 77. Partners.—The transaction of the business of an ordinary partnership furnishes frequent opportunity for the application of the law of agency, but this subject is also deemed to be beyond the scope of the present treatise.

§ 78. Bank officers.—Certain officers of banks, and particularly the cashier, also present familiar forms of agency, which will receive some attention herein, though no attempt is made to deal with them extensively or separately.

ployed by commercial companies or private merchants, to take charge of the cargoes they export to foreign countries, to sell them there to the best advantage, and to purchase proper commodities to relade the ships on their return home. For this reason supercargoes generally go out and return home with the ships on board of which they were embarked, and therein differ from factors, who reside abroad at the settlements of the public companies for whom they act." 1 Beawes Lex Mer., 47 (nth ed.)

⁹⁴ Hamberger v. Marcus, 157 Pa. 133, 37 Am. St. R. 719.

⁹⁵ See Parsons on Maritime Law; Abbott on Shipping.

CHAPTER III

FOR WHAT PURPOSES AGENCY MAY BE CREATED

- § 79. Object of this chapter.
80. General Rule—For any lawful purpose.
81. Exceptions—Illegal and personal acts.
- I. UNDERTAKINGS CONTRARY TO LAW OR OPPOSED TO PUBLIC POLICY
82. Preliminary considerations.
83. In general — Contracts of agency in such cases are void.
84. How these cases regarded in law.
85. What elements the rule involves.
86. — The element of contingent compensation.
87. Distinction between validity of contract and lawfulness of service.
88. What cases here considered.
1. Employment to do Acts prohibited by positive Law
89. Employment to commit crimes, misdemeanors, trespasses, etc.
90. Employment to carry on forbidden occupation.
91. Employment of unlicensed person.
2. Employment to do Acts opposed to Public Policy
- 92, 93. Employment to secure legislation—Lobbying.
94. — Legitimate services.
95. — Ambiguous cases.
96. — How far contract affected by illegal acts done under it.
97. Obtaining consent of property owners.
98. Procuring contracts from government or heads of departments.
99. — Illustrations.
100. — Contrary views.
101. Services in prosecuting claims.
102. Compromise of crime.
103. Encouragement of crime — Agreements to defend future violations.
104. Services in securing appointment of office.
105. Same rule applies to private offices and employments.
106. Services in improperly influencing elections.
107. — What services legitimate.
108. Services in securing pardons.
109. — How when conviction illegal.
110. Services in procuring or suppressing evidence.
- 111, 112. Unlawful dealing in stocks and merchandise.
113. Employments creating monopolies or in restraint of trade.
114. Employment to induce violation of contracts.
115. Deception or defrauding of third persons or the public.
116. Voting trusts.
117. Marriage brokerage.
118. Corruption of agents, corporate officers, etc.
119. Corruption of public officers.
120. Other cases involving same principles.
121. Agent must participate in unlawful purpose.
122. Whole contract void when entire.
123. Distinction between illegal and merely void contracts.

II. ACTS OF A PERSONAL NATURE

124. Personal duty, trust or confidence cannot be delegated to agent.

125. Illustrations — Voting — Affidavits — Statutory requirements.

126. — Assignments — Wills — Marriage.

§ 79. Object of this chapter.—Having now seen something respecting the nature of the relation of agency, it is desirable next to consider what are the purposes for which it may be created. As to this—

§ 80. General rule.—For any lawful purpose.—It is the general rule that an agency may be created for the performance of any lawful act, and that whatever a person may lawfully do, if acting in his own right and in his own behalf, he may lawfully delegate to an agent.¹

This general rule applies, ordinarily,² as much to acts done under a statute, or by the authority of a statute, as to any other class of acts.³

§ 81. Exceptions.—Illegal and personal acts cannot be delegated.—In dealing with this general rule, two principles are important to be considered. One of them results as the direct and natural effect of the rule itself; the other is an exception to it. These are, 1. That authority cannot lawfully be delegated to do an act which is illegal, immoral or opposed to public policy; and 2. That the performance of an act which is personal in its nature cannot be delegated. Separate consideration will be given to each of these exceptions.

I.

UNDERTAKINGS CONTRARY TO LAW, OR OPPOSED TO PUBLIC POLICY.

§ 82. Preliminary considerations.—The first corollary to the general rule is based upon the nature of the service to be rendered. Three classes of cases are suggested under it. While these cases have some aspects in common, they differ radically in others. The objections urged

¹ Story on Agency, § 6; Com. Dig. "Attorney," C. I. "An agent may be authorized to do any acts which his principal might do, except those to which the latter is bound to give his personal attention." Cal. Code, § 2304; Dak. Code, § 1343.

² For exceptions, common to statutory as well as to other acts, see post §§ 125, 126.

³ Jackson v. Napper, 35 Ch. Div. 162; Reg. v. Kent, L. R. 8 Q. B. 305; In re Whitley Partners, 32 Ch. Div. 337; Dennison v. Jeffs, [1896] 1 Ch. 611; McClanahan v. Breeding, 172

Ind. 457; Cain v. Allen, 168 Ind. 8; Ludwig v. Cory, 158 Ind. 582; Fried v. Nelson, 30 Ind. App. 1; Finnegan v. Lucy, 157 Mass. 439; In re Hannan's Express, etc., Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 643.

Thus subscriptions to stock in a corporation may be made by agent. In re Hannan's Empress, etc., Co., supra; In re Whitley Partners, supra. So may an affidavit for the registration of a trade mark (Jackson v. Napper, supra); or a statutory consent to the dissolution of a partnership (Dennison v. Jeffs, supra); or a against them are founded upon different reasons. Certain of the employments are said to be opposed to positive law; others are contrary to good morals; and still others are deemed to be opposed to that important but somewhat vague principle which is denominated public policy. It is not within the present purpose to attempt to distinguish these various grounds with any nicety; but, recognizing them as more or less familiar principles of our law, to attempt to discover how they apply to the present subject. Starting from this point and attempting to state a general principle, it may be said that —

§ 83. In general, contracts for agency in such cases are void.—The law will not sanction the creation, or enforce the performance, of an agency which has for its object, or which naturally and directly tends to promote, the commission of an act which is either illegal or immoral in itself, or which is opposed to the public policy. It may be thought at first view that the case here considered is not an exception to the rule at all—that the principal himself could not do any of the acts which are so condemned. It is true that there may be no difference in the moral quality of the acts, but there may be great difference in the practical ability of the law to deal with them. There are many cases in which the principal might, with impunity, do the act in person, because there is no statute which would enable the court to reach it. But there are abundant common law principles which would enable the court to deal with a contract of agency for the doing of the same act, in any case in which the contract was before the court for enforcement.⁴ Thus, for example, one may very frequently resort to personal persuasion to procure legislation, or obtain a contract or a pardon by personal influence, and the like, and incur thereby no legal penalty, because no remonstrance against the granting of liquor licenses where no discretion is involved (Ludwig v. Cory; McClanahan v. Breeding; Cain v. Allen; Fried v. Nelson, supra); or a notice not to sell liquor to one's husband, (Finnegan v. Lucy, supra); or a memorandum under the statute of frauds where the statute, unlike most of the sort, makes no provision for signing by agent (Fordyce v. Seaver, 74 Ark. 395).

STATUTES sometimes declare the same rule. Thus the Indiana statute (§ 240, Rev. Stat. 1881) provides "when a statute requires an act to be done which, by law, an agent or deputy as well may do as the principal, such requisition shall be satisfied by the performance of such act by an authorized agent or deputy."

For cases holding statutory powers non delegable for various reasons, see post, §§ 125, 126.

⁴ Thus in State v. Brandenburg, 232 Mo. 531, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 845; it was held that even though a mother might not be liable, under a statute against enticing children away from their parent, for "kidnapping" her child from its father, she could not lawfully appoint an agent to do it, and the agent would be liable if he did do it.

express statute has made it an offense. Such practices, however, are undesirable, because they tend to substitute personal influences for considerations of the public good. They are opposed to public policy, and though the courts may not be able to reach them directly, they will at least refuse to lend their aid to enforce them.

§ 84. How these cases regarded in law.—Pursuing this general principle more fully into details, it may be further said that the law scrutinizes undertakings of this nature with great strictness, and judges of their validity by their general character and their natural and probable results. It makes no difference in many instances, that in the particular case nothing improper was done or intended to be done. The law seeks to prevent, not only the evil itself, but the very temptation to evil. It concerns itself rather with the public weal than with individual interest. The law therefore ordinarily determines the case by the tendency of undertakings of that kind, and holds the particular contract unlawful if its general nature brings it within the prohibited class.⁵ It refuses, ordinarily, to assist either party, but leaves them both in the situation in which their own cupidity has placed them.

These principles which apply here are the well established and familiar ones which regulate the formation and performance of contracts generally. They are not in any sense distinctively a part of the law of agency, and no attempt will be made here to discuss them fully. Their application to the law of agency, however, is frequent, and some illustrations of that aspect will be given in the following sections.

§ 85. What elements the rule involves.—So far as the rule stated condemns contracts of employment in direct violation of the dictates

⁵ Institutes Justinian, Liber 3, Title 19, Par. 24; Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449; Marshall v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 314, 14 L. Ed. 953; and see generally the cases cited in the following sections.

"Contracts," says Devens, J., "which are opposed to open, upright and fair dealing are opposed to public policy. A contract by which one is placed under a direct inducement to violate the confidence reposed in him by another is of this character. No one can be permitted to found rights upon his own wrong, even against another also in the wrong. A promise made to one in consideration of doing an unlawful act, as to commit an assault or to practice a fraud upon a third person, is void in law, and the law will not only avoid contracts the avowed purpose or express object of which is to do an unlawful act, but those made with a view to place, or the necessary effect of which is to place, a person under wrong influences, and offer him a temptation which may injuriously affect the rights of third persons. Nor is it necessary to show that injury to third persons has actually resulted from such a contract, for in many cases where it had occurred it would be impossible to be proved. The contract is avoided on account of its necessarily injurious tendency." Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133, 18 Am. Rep. 459.

of positive law, there is not much difficulty in its application. The same thing may ordinarily be said of employments to violate the familiar principles of good morals, though with reference to other alleged principles of morals there might be hopeless conflict. With reference to the employments which are alleged to be opposed to public policy, there is much room for controversy. As to some questions of public policy, popular and judicial opinion seem pretty well agreed; but as to other questions courts differ widely in their views, and as to some there is irreconcilable conflict.

The vice in any given employment may be found either in the end to be attained, or in the means employed to accomplish it. (1) The end objected to may be either the direct and immediate one, or a consequential one. In an employment to commit bribery, the wrongful end is direct. In an employment to endeavor to procure a repeal of the laws against bribery, the end objected to may be the more remote one that thereby bribery will be encouraged. (2) With reference to the means employed, it may be that while the end might be proper in itself, the contract prescribed methods for attaining it which must be condemned; or, though no methods are prescribed, none but bad ones are possible; or, though good ones are possible, bad ones are so likely to be resorted to as to invalidate the employment; or, still further, though good methods are possible and perhaps not unlikely, bad ones are also possible and perhaps likely, and therefore the employment should be condemned. So far as the first two of these cases are concerned, there is not much room for doubt; but with the third and more so with the fourth, the solution is not so easy. Where a contract unobjectionable as to end is silent as to methods, but is perfectly capable of execution without resorting to undesirable methods, shall the mere fact that objectionable methods may be resorted to, be sufficient to condemn it without any evidence that such methods were contemplated or intended?

§ 86. ——— The element of contingent compensation.—It will be noticed in many of the illustrations hereafter given that particular stress is laid upon the fact that the undertaking was for a compensation contingent upon success. In some of the cases, the employment was per se objectionable, and the element of contingent compensation was not needed to make it invalid. In some cases courts seem to have been doubtful about the nature of the employment and to have seized upon the contingent compensation as an element sufficient to turn the scale. In other cases, though they are relatively few, an otherwise apparently unobjectionable employment has been held bad simply because of this feature.

Making compensation contingent upon success is undoubtedly to put a spur to effort, but in many cases this is not deemed objectionable. In many kinds of familiar employment, this is the regular and usual method of making compensation. All cases wherein the employee is paid by commissions, present this aspect. The real estate broker, the stock and merchandise broker, the auctioneer, the factor or commission merchant, the agent who solicits life or fire insurance, the book agent, and many others are regularly and usually paid only upon and in proportion to their success. In most states now, attorneys may lawfully take cases upon contingent fees.

In addition to being an incentive to effort, a contingent fee may also undoubtedly be an inducement to the use of unfair means.⁶ In the cases just referred to, that evil is met as it arises, but its possibility does not invalidate all such employments. In the cases now being dealt with in this chapter, if contingent fees are held to make the employment bad, it must be because of the peculiar nature of the employment, or because the courts taking that view have over estimated their significance. Some courts have declined to adopt this view; and it would seem that they are right. Contracts of this nature are not robbed of their viciousness because the agent is certain of his compensation; nor is his undertaking any more righteous because it is surely to be paid for. On the other hand,—questions of champerty and maintenance aside—legitimate services ought not to be rendered unlawful because the agent is to be rewarded only in case of his success. The nature of the undertaking and its natural and proximate results should be the criterion.⁷

§ 87. Distinction between validity of contract and lawfulness of services.—It must also be kept in mind that the primary question here in issue is as to the validity of the employment and not as to the lawfulness of what may be done under it. Unlawful acts may be done

⁶ Thus in Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45, 17 L. Ed. 868, Justice Field said: "Agreements for compensation contingent upon success, suggest the use of sinister and corrupt means for the accomplishment of the end desired. The law meets the suggestion of evil and strikes down the contract from its inception;" and similar language has been used in many other cases, e. g., Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 375, 34 Am. St. R. 608, 15 L. R. A. 727. But that this is not always the case is recognized by the same learned justice in Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 276, 26 L. Ed. 539, where he says that the commissions allowed by established custom to commission merchants and brokers, though dependent upon sales made, are not regarded as contingent compensation in the obnoxious sense of that term so often the subject of animadversion by that court.

⁷ Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548 23 L. Ed. 983; Bergen v. Frisbie, 125 Cal. 168; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Botsford, 56 Kan. 532; Kansas City

under a lawful contract, and the question whether compensation may be recovered for them may present a very different aspect from that which is presented when the question is as to the validity of the employment itself.

§ 88. What cases here considered.—As has already been pointed out, the general question of the legality of contracts is too great and too remote to the present purpose to be here considered.⁸ All that can be here attempted is to give some illustrations of the application of the rules involved to contracts of employment, and in doing this attention will be confined to the cases most frequently arising and most fully discussed by the courts.

The cases dealt with may be somewhat roughly divided into two classes: 1. Acts prohibited by positive law; and 2. Acts opposed to public policy.

1. Employments to do Acts Prohibited by Positive Law.

§ 89. Employments to commit crimes, misdemeanors, trespasses and the like, are so clearly within the prohibited class, as to require no extended discussion. An employment to abduct, assault, bribe, conspire, forge, imprison, ravish, rob, seduce, and so on through the category of crimes, needs no comment to show its illegality. Fortunately such employments are not common.

Employments to convert the property of another, to libel or slander him, to knowingly trespass upon his property or person, to infringe his patent or copyright, and many others of the same sort, though they may not involve acts specifically made crimes or misdemeanors, are nevertheless clearly illegal, and fall within the class here being considered. Fortunately these also are not very common.

§ 90. Employments to carry on forbidden occupations.—Employments of this sort also, by reason of their very obviousness, are not particularly common. But wherever they do occur, there is usually no difficulty in dealing with them. If the doing of the very thing contemplated is prohibited by the express terms of a statute, the employment to do it or to aid in doing it, must be illegal. Thus an employ-

Paper House v. Foley Ry. Printing Co., 85 Kan. 678, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 747; Disbrow v. Cass Co., 119 Iowa, 538; Shinn v. Cunningham, 120 Iowa, 383.

What might be regarded as objectionable between private persons is not necessarily so when the state (which may determine public policy) is a party. Opinion of Justices, 72 N. H. 601. As to champerty and maintenance, see Peck v. Heurich, 167 U. S. 624, 42 L. Ed. 302; post, Attorneys at Law, Book V, Ch. I.

⁸ See the elaborate treatise of Mr. Greenwood on "The Doctrine of Public Policy in the Law of Contracts."

ment to aid in carrying on a forbidden lottery;⁹ or saloon¹⁰ or billiard table;¹¹ to serve at a time when work is forbidden, as upon Sunday;¹² to procure and ship goods in violation of legislation in time of war;¹³ to secure business for a foreign corporation not authorized to do business within the state and forbidden to do business by officers or agents;¹⁴ to obtain forbidden rebates on the shipment of goods;¹⁵ to acquire lands in a forbidden territory, c. g. in the Cherokee Nation;¹⁶ to sell goods in a prohibited territory;¹⁷ and the like, is illegal, and will not be enforced.

§ 91. Employment of unlicensed person to serve in occupation for which a license is required.—The same principles apply to cases in which a person without a license is employed to serve in an occupation for which a license is required. If the statute or ordinance which requires the license expressly or by clear implication forbids acting in a given capacity or occupation without a license, or expressly or by clear implication makes such acting illegal, a contract to so act must be itself illegal and unenforceable.¹⁸ This question has arisen many times with ⁹ Mexican International Banking Co. v. Lichtenstein, 10 Utah, 338; Rolfe v. Delmar, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 80; Davis v. Caldwell, 2 Rob. (La.) 271; Roby v. West, 4 N. H. 285, 17 Am. Dec. 423; Roselle v. McAuliffe, 141 Mo. 36, 64 Am. St. Rep. 501, 172 U. S. 641.

¹⁰ Bixby v. Moor, 51 N. H. 402. To same effect: Sullivan v. Horgan, 17 R. I. 109, 9 L. R. A. 110.

Where a sale of liquor within the state is forbidden, an employment of an agent to order from or buy in another state where the sale is legal, is not unlawful. Whitmore v. State, 72 Ark. 14.

¹¹ Badgley v. Beale, 3 Watts (Pa.), 263.

¹² Watts v. Van Ness, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 76. Compare Boland v. Kistle, 92 Iowa, 369.

¹³ Irwin v. Levy, 24 La. Ann. 302. See also Williams v. Gay, 21 La. Ann. 110; Haney v. Manning, 21 La. Ann. 166; Rhodes v. Summerhill, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 204.

¹⁴ Dudley v. Collier, 87 Ala. 431, 13 Am. St. R. 55; Lowey v. Granite State, etc., Ass'n, 8 Misc. 319, 59 N. Y. St. Rep. 246.

¹⁵ Parks v. Dold Packing Co., 6 Misc. 570, 57 N. Y. St. Rep. 788.

¹⁶ Alexander v. Barker, 64 Kan. 396.

¹⁷ Crigler v. Shepler, 79 Kan. 834, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 500; Rocco v. Frapoli, 50 Neb. 665.

¹⁸ ATTORNEYS: Ames v. Gilman 10 Metc. (Mass.) 239; Hittson v. Browne, 3 Colo. 304. But see Yates v. Robertson, 80 Va. 475. In Harland v. Lilienthal, 53 N. Y. 438, an attorney not admitted to practice in that particular court, was allowed to recover.

PHYSICIANS: Gardner v. Tatum, 81 Cal. 370; Puckett v. Alexander, 102 N. C. 95, 3 L. R. A. 43; Deaton v. Lawson, 40 Wash. 486, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 392. (Compare Zeigler v. Illinois T. & S. Bank, 245 Ill. 180, 28 L. R. A. [N. S.] 1112.)

MERCHANDISE BROKERS: Hustis v. Pickands, 27 Ill. App. 270; Holt v. Green, 73 Pa. 198, 13 Am. Rep. 737.

REAL ESTATE BROKERS: Denning v. Yount, 62 Kan. 217, 50 L. R. A. 103; Buckley v. Humason, 50 Minn. 195, 16 L. R. A. 423, 36 Am. St. R. 637; Johnson v. Hulings, 103 Pa. 498, 49 Am. Rep. 131; Stevenson v. Ewing, 87 Tenn. 46.

reference to attorneys, physicians, real estate and merchandise brokers, and the like. As in many other cases of statutory prohibition, it is often difficult to determine whether a statute or ordinance, not specific in its terms, was designed to render the business unlawful when carried on without a license, or merely to impose a personal penalty upon the individual, often as a mere revenue measure, leaving the legality of the business unaffected.¹⁹

2. Employment to do Acts Opposed to Public Policy.

§ 92. Employment to secure legislation—Lobbying agents.—It is of the utmost importance to the preservation and protection of the state that the sources of its legislative enactments be kept uncontaminated by any improper or debasing influence. Considerations of the public good, motives of high policy, arguments based solely upon the true interests of the people, are the only elements which can properly enter into the question of the right discharge of the important functions of the legislator. Personal solicitation, private intrigue, secret persuasion, arguments based upon the legislator's duty or obligations to individuals or societies or parties, to say nothing of offers of personal or pecuniary profit or advancement, are utterly hostile to the public good. Courts of law and equity have not been slow to recognize this evil, or to declare that all attempts to influence the course of legislation by secret or sinister means, or even by using personal influence, solicitation or persuasion with the members of the legislative body, are inconsistent with sound public policy.

Any contract, therefore, for services to be performed in procuring or attempting to procure the passage or defeat of any public or private act by the use of any improper means or the exercise of undue influence, or by using personal solicitation, influence or persuasion with the members is void;²⁰ and any agreement for the payment of a fee for such services is likewise void.²¹ Moreover, where the fee is made contingent upon success many courts seem to hold contracts otherwise unobjectionable to be invalid because in such a case there would be such a strong incentive to the exercise of personal and sinister means to effect the object that it probably would not be resisted.²²

¹⁹ This was held to be the situation in Fairly v. Wappoo Mills, 44 S. Car. 227, 29 L. R. A. 215; Hughes v. Snell, 28 Okla. 828, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1133, 25 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 374.

²⁰ Marshall v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 314, 14 L. Ed. 953 (here the real attitude of the agent was to be concealed); Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45, 17 L. Ed. 868; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. Ed. 539; Nutt v. Knutt, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. Ed.

348; Hazelton v. Scheckells, 202 U. S. 71, 50 L. Ed. 939; Burke v. Wood, 162 Fed. 533; Globe Works v. U. S., 45 Ct. Cl. 497; County of Colusa v. Welch, 122 Cal. 428; Weed v. Black, 2 McArthur (D. C.), 268, 29 Am. Rep. 618; Owens v. Wilkinson, 20 D. C. App. 51; Cook v. Shipman, 24 Ill. 614; Crichfield v. Bermudez Asphalt Paving Co., 174 Ill. 466, 42 L. R. A. 347; Elkhart County Lodge v. Crary, 98 Ind. 238, 49 Am. Rep. 746; Kansas Pacific Ry. Co. v. McCoy, 8 Kan. 538; McBratney v. Chandler, 22 Kau. 692; Burney v.

§ 93. — So jealously do the courts scrutinize such contracts that they condemn the very appearance of evil, and often declare that it matters not that in the particular case nothing improper was done or was expected to be done. It is enough that such employments tend necessarily and directly to such results, even though in the particular case the end desired was or might have been attained by wholly unexceptionable means.²³ Neither is it material in such a case that the

Ludeling, 47 La. Ann. 73, 96; Frost v. Belmont, 6 Allen (Mass.), 152; Houlton v. Dunn, 60 Minn. 26, 51 Am. St. R. 493, 30 L. R. A. 737; McDonald v. Buckstaff, 56 Neb. 88; Richardson v. Scott's Bluff Co., 59 Neb. 400, 80 Am. St. R. 682, 48 L. R. A. 294; Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 489; Rose v. Truax, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 361; Harris v. Simonson, 28 Hun (N. Y.), 318; Carey v. Western U. Tel. Co., 47 Hun (N. Y.), 610, 20 Abb. N. C. 333, 15 N. Y. St. Rep. 204; Mills v. Mills, 40 N. Y. 543; Veazey v. Allen, 61 App. Div. (N. Y.) 119, aff'd, 173 N. Y. 359; Sweeney v. McLeod, 15 Oreg. 330; Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 315, 40 Am. Dec. 519; Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. St. 375, 34 Am. St. R. 608, 15 L. R. A. 727; Powers v. Skinner, 34 Vt. 274, 80 Am. Dec. 677; Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200, 68 Am. Dec. 55; Chippewa Valley, etc., Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 75 Wis. 224, 6 L. R. A. 601; undertaking to get legislation for the mere purpose of affecting the market value of certain stock is unlawful. Veazey v. Allen, 173 N. Y. 359, 62 L. R. A. 362.

²¹ Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & Serg. (Penn.) 315, 40 Am. Dec. 519; Wood v. McCann, 6 Dana (Ky.), 366; Gil v. Williams, 12 La. Ann. 219, 68 Am. Dec. 767; and cases supra.

²² See ante, § 86; and especially Chippewa Valley, etc., Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 75 Wis. 224, 6 L.

R. A. 601; Richardson v. Scott's Bluff Co., 59 Neb. 400, 80 Am. St. R. 682, 48 L. R. A. 294 [but compare Stroeimer v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132, 121 Am. St. R. 713, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 212]; Coquillard v. Bearss, 21 Ind. 479, 83 Am. Dec. 362; Crichfield v. Bermudez Paving Co., 174 Ill. 466, 42 L. R. A. 347; Gil v. Williams, 12 La. Ann. 219, 68 Am. Dec. 767; Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 375, 34 Am. St. R. 608, 15 L. R. A. 727; Owens v. Wilkinson, 20 D. C. App. 51. But see cases contra, in next section.

²³ Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, supra; Chippewa Valley, etc., Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., supra; Mills v. Mills, supra; McKee v. Cheney, 52 Howard Pr. (N. Y.) 144; Gil v. Williams, supra; Powers v. Skinner, supra; Atcheson v. Mallon, 43 N. Y. 147, 3 Am. Rep. 678; Spence v. Harvey, 22 Cal. 337; Thomas v. Caulkett, 57 Mich. 392, 58 Am. Rep. 369.

"It matters not," says Rogers, J., in Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, supra, "that nothing improper was done or was expected to be done by the plaintiff. It is enough that such is the tendency of the contract, that it is contrary to sound morality and public policy, leading necessarily, in the hands of designing and corrupt men, to improper tampering with members, and the use of an extraneous secret influence over an important branch of the government. It may not corrupt all; but if it corrupts, or tends to cor-contract expressly stipulates that no improper influence is to be used.²⁴

The rule respecting contingent fees applies equally whether a fixed sum was agreed upon or whether the amount was left to be subsequently determined, as for example, where the promise is to pay a large or a liberal fee. Such a transaction furnishes no foundation for a recovery quantum meruit.²⁵

§ 94. — Legitimate services.—It is not to be understood, however, that every contract for services to be rendered in endeavoring to procure or defeat legislation is unlawful. Services may be rendered, public in their nature and intended to reach the understandings of the legislators rather than to exercise any personal influence over them, which are perfectly legitimate.

Thus a person may lawfully be employed to draft a bill and request its introduction, prepare a petition, attend the taking of testimony, collect facts, prepare arguments and to submit them publicly, either before a committee of the legislature or the legislature itself, if permitted to do so, "because," as it is said by a learned judge, "a public discussion could not tend to deceive or corrupt the legislature, while personal solicitation and influence might produce that result."²⁶ rupt some, or if it deceives or tends to deceive or mislead some, that is sufficient to stamp its character with the seal of reprobation before a judicial tribunal."

[There is, however, no doubt that courts, in their zeal to overthrow questionable contracts, often state too strongly the effect of a possible use of unlawful means and impute unlawful purposes to a degree that they would not do in other cases. See § 95, post.]

²⁴ Chippewa Valley, etc., Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., supra; Marshall v. Balt. & O. R. Co., supra; Elkhart County Lodge v. Crary, supra; Sweeney v. McLeod, supra.

²⁵ Richardson v. Scott's Bluff Co., 59 Neb. 400, 80 Am. St. R. 682, 48 L. R. A. 294.

²⁶ Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200, 68 Am. Dec. 55; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; Saffnas v. Stillman, 66 Fed. 677; Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289; Chesebrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 382; Wildey v.

Collier, 7 Md. 273; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335, 99 Am. Dec. 384; Foltz v. Cogswell, 86 Cal. 542; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Botsford, 56 Kan. 532; Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. McCoy, 8 Kan. 538; Denison v. Crawford Co., 48 Iowa, 211; Cole v. Hardware Co., 139 Iowa, 487, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1161; Cavanagh v. Beer Co., 136 Iowa, 236; Stroemer v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132, 121 Am. St. R. 713, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 212. "It must be the right of every citizen who is interested in any proposed legislation to employ an agent for compensation payable to him, to draft his bill and explain it to any committee or to any member of a committee or of the legislature fairly and openly, and ask to have it introduced; and contracts which do not provide for more, and services which do not go farther, in our judgment violate no principle of law or rule of public policy." Earl, J., in Chesebrough v. Conover, supra.

In Eisenstein v. Maiden Lane Safe Deposit Co., 113 N. Y. Supp. 967, the

It has sometimes been thought that this rule could apply only to lawyers or similar professional advocates, but it is clear that it is properly subject to no such limitation. It is the nature of the methods used, rather than the profession of the advocate, which is material.

In several cases of this sort, the fact that compensation was contingent upon success was held not of itself to invalidate the contract.²⁷

§ 95. — Ambiguous cases.—But conceding that all contracts for the use of unlawful means or even for personal solicitation and influence, are void, and granting, as we must, that contracts for open presentation and legitimate argument or for professional services as an advocate openly avowed, are valid, what shall be done with a contract for services which does not on its face disclose whether it belongs to the one class or the other? It may be that, in such a case, the end to be accomplished is such, or the character, position or relation of the parties is such, that the court can see clearly, although it is nowhere so stated, that personal solicitation or other improper influence was contemplated or could alone be resorted to.²⁸ In such a case, the contract is properly to be condemned. But suppose that the contract neither by its terms nor by any necessary implication involves the use of such improper means. Suppose that while improper means might be resorted to, the end could equally be attained by proper means, and the parties offer to show or can show that in fact no improper means defendant needed from the city council a permit for the construction of railing near defendant's building, and a lawyer was employed "to examine the law with respect to such matter, and to present the resolution to the board of aldermen, and to see various aldermen and explain to them the reasons and necessity for favorable action on said resolution and to explain its purport to the mayor, so that it would meet his approval." For successful accomplishment of his employment the lawyer was to have a $300 fee. The contract was held not improper and the defendant was held liable for the lawyer's fee to one who had employed the lawyer at the defendant's request.

²⁷ Chesebrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 382; Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335, 99 Am. Dec. 384; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Botsford, 56 Kan. 532; Stroemer

v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132, 121 Am. St. R. 713, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 212.

²⁸ Such was the case which the court had in mind in Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200, 68 Am. Dec. 55 [although opinions might differ as to whether the principle was correctly applied to the case then in hand], when it said "We know of no way by which a person who is not a member of the legislature can prosecute or superintend a claim before that body, except by means of the members themselves, or some of them. He could not, therefore, comply with the contract on his part without resorting to personal solicitation with the members of the legislative body. We therefore think that the contract was by its terms an agreement to pay money for a consideration which is inconsistent with public policy, and that the agreement is for that reason void."

were contemplated or employed. Shall the court, in such a case, presume that improper means were used or intended to be used, and that the contract is therefore invalid? To this question there should, it would seem, be but one answer, though in fact another answer seems sometimes to be given. In their zeal to defeat questionable contracts, courts appear at times to have over looked presumptions of innocence which are ordinarily given effect even in much more serious matters.²⁹ As stated in a recent case, "It is sometimes lost sight of that the presumptions in human affairs are in favor of innocence rather than of guilt, and that such rule applies in testing such a contract as the one we have here by the principles of sound morals."³⁰

The principle which should control in dealings of this nature was stated in the same case as follows: "If, properly construed, the contract does not, by its terms or by necessary implication, contain anything illegal, or tend to any violation of sound morals, the fatal element should not—through any over zealous desire to fortify against the deplorable effects of lobbying contracts, strictly so called, which all recognize and should unhesitatingly condemn—be injected into it by mere suspicion and conjecture that the parties intended to do some illegal act, or a legal act by illegal means, or that the agreement might probably have led to improper influences upon, or tampering with, official conduct, and thereby defeat the contract."

§ 96. — How fair contract affected by illegal acts done under it.—Moreover, where the contract itself is unobjectionable upon its face, the mere fact that the party employed did objectionable acts in the execution of it, will not necessarily render the contract invalid, although that fact may be of importance in determining the tendency of such contracts.³¹ As said in one case,³² "The plaintiff may have rendered illegal services and yet the defendant's promise may have ²⁹ See, for example, what is said in Houlton v. Dunn, 60 Minn. 26, 30 L. R. A. 737, 51 Am. St. Rep. 493, disapproved in Houlton v. Nichol, 93 Wis. 393, 33 L. R. A. 166, 57 Am. St. R. 928. The case of Chippewa Valley Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc. Ry. Co. 75 Wis. 224, 6 L. R. A. 601, cited supra, although not disapproved in Houlton v. Nichol, is certainly questionable for the same reason.

That the presumption of innocence should be indulged, see Salinas v. Stillman, 66 Fed. 677; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Botsford, 56 Kan. 532; Knut v. Nutt, 83 Miss. 365, 102 Am.

St. R. 452, 200 U. S. 12; Drake v. Lauer, 93 App. Div. 86, 15 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 58, 182 N. Y. 533; Cole v. Brown-Hurley Hardware Co., 139 Iowa, 487, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1161.

³⁰ Houlton v. Nichol, supra.

³¹ Barry v. Capen, 151 Mass. 99, 6 L. R. A. 808; Dunham v. Hastings Pavement Co., 56 N. Y. App. Div. 244; Chesebrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 382; Kerr v. American Pneumatic Service Co., 188 Mass. 27; Fox v. Rogers, 171 Mass. 546; Church v. Proctor, 66 Fed. 240; Hardy v. Stonebraker, 31 Wis. 640.

³² Barry v. Capen, supra.

been in consideration of the plaintiff's promising to perform or performing legal ones only. If the contract was legal, it would not be made illegal by misconduct on the part of the plaintiff in carrying it out.³³ The judge having found that the contract was legal, the fact that the plaintiff did things against public policy, if it be a fact, can be considered only as bearing by way of illustration upon the question whether the tendency of the contract necessarily was to induce the doing of such things. If that was its necessary tendency to an appreciable degree, it was void, whether it induced the acts or not."

§ 97. Obtaining consent of property owners to proposed public improvements or to proposed business, etc.—Analogous to the questions considered in the preceding sections is that which arises upon employments to obtain the consent of property owners to proposed public improvements, such as the paving of streets, and the like, or to the licensing of saloons and similar places in particular localities, where the consent of a prescribed proportion is made by law a condition precedent to the action. Such a condition is prescribed in order to guard against ill advised or extravagant proposals, and contemplates the actual consideration of the question by those whose interests it most directly affects. That such consents should be procured by bribery or personal solicitation is prejudicial to the public welfare, and an employment to so procure them could not be upheld.³⁴ But it is ordinarily necessary that some one shall undertake to interview the persons interested and obtain their consent if they are in favor of the project. This may be done gratuitously by some one of the parties concerned, but as it may often require more time than any one interested can defendant's property. Such consent was necessary under the state statute before a license could be obtained. After the plaintiff had spent the money and successfully obtained the consent, he was denied recovery against the defendant on the ground that his contract was contrary to public policy.

³³ Citing Howden v. Simpson, 10 Ad. & El. 793, 818, 819, s. c. 2 Per. & Dav. 714, 740, 9 Cl. & Fin. 61, 68; Barrett, J., in Powers v. Skinner, 34 Vt. 274, 284, 285, 80 Am. Dec. 677. In Mulligan v. Smith, 32 Colo. 404, it is held that the fact that the employer thought the agent would use unfair means, would not defeat the contract if the contract did not contemplate that he would, if he did not agree to do so, and did not in fact do so.

³⁴ In Riggs v. Ryan, 121 N. Y. App. Div. 301, the defendant had promised to reimburse the plaintiff if the plaintiff would pay $50 to a specified owner of neighboring property and thereby obtain such owner's consent to the presence of a saloon upon the

See also Howard v. First Independent Church of Baltimore, 18 Md. 451; Farson v. Fogg, 205 Ill. 326; Doane v. Chicago Cy. Ry. Co., 160 Ill. 22, 35 L. R. A. 588; Maguire v. Smock, 42 Ind. 1, 13 Am. Rep. 353, which are not agency cases but involve this kind of contract; but compare Makemson v. Kaufman, 35 Ohio St. 444.

devote to it, there seems to be no good reason why an agent may not be employed to do the work or why his employment should per se be deemed illegal. That he is to be paid only in case he secures the requisite number ought not, of itself alone, to invalidate the employment, even though it may be admitted that it should subject the contract to close scrutiny.³⁵

§ 98. Procuring contracts from government or heads of departments.—Employments to procure contracts from federal, state or municipal governments, boards or bodies for the purchase of supplies, the leasing of buildings, or the employment of labor, and the like, rest upon the same principles as those considered in the preceding sections. It is legitimate and proper to lay before the officer having the matter in charge, facts, information and arguments intended for the public good and calculated to enlighten the understanding and secure wise and intelligent action. Parties desiring to furnish to the government—whether national, state or municipal,—its necessary supplies, or to undertake the performance of its public works, may lawfully employ an agent to present their bids or offers; to call attention to their facilities for the proper performance of their undertakings, and to make, in their

³⁵ In Union Elevated R. Co. v. Nixon, 199 Ill. 235, the defendant wished to construct an elevated loop in the city of Chicago, an ordinance authorizing such construction was necessary and no such ordinance could be passed by the city council except upon petition signed by the owners of land representing one half of the frontage. The plaintiff was hired for $500 a month "to use best efforts" to obtain the signatures of property owners to their consent. In case of success the plaintiff was within thirty days to have an additional $5,000. The contract was held valid and not opposed to public policy. The court said: "The obtaining of consents was legitimate and the employment of the plaintiff legal, and we fail to see how the actions of the plaintiff in obtaining consents can be said to be contrary to public policy by reason of the fact, alone, that he was to be paid extra compensation for such services after the ordinance permitting the improvement had been passed. While a contract to obtain the passage of an ordinance, would be void, as against public policy, because under our system of law and morals, influence to be exercised over a legislative body to secure the passage of a law or an ordinance, cannot legally be made the subject matter of contract, a contract to obtain consents from the property owners abutting upon streets upon which improvements are to be made, payment for such services to be made after the ordinance permitting such improvement shall be passed, would not, when, as here, the person obtaining such consents had nothing to do with the legislative body or the passage of the ordinance, make the obtaining of such consents contrary to public policy, so that the person obtaining such consents could not recover the compensation agreed to be paid him therefor."

See also Sussman v. Porter, 137 Fed. 161.

behalf, such public and open arguments in favor of their propositions as they may be afforded opportunity.³⁶

But where the employment contemplates the bringing to bear of improper, sinister or personal influence, or where its natural and direct tendency is in that direction, it is opposed to public policy and void.³⁷

The fact that the compensation was to be contingent upon success

³⁶ Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441, 22 L. Ed. 623; Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548, 23 L. Ed. 983; Lyon v. Mitchell, 36 N. Y. 235, 93 Am. Dec. 502; Pease v. Walsh, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 269; Swift v. Aspel, 40 Misc. 453; Bergen v. Frisbie, 125 Cal. 168; Kerr v. American Pneumatic Service Co., 188 Mass. 27; Kansas City Paper House v. Foley Ry. Printing Co., 85 Kan. 678, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 747.

Thus in Beal v. Polhemus, 67 Mich. 130, Polhemus gave Beal a note to be paid "as soon as the postoffice is moved into" a building which Beal was then erecting on property near that belonging to Polhemus, the latter believing that its location there would enhance the value of his own property. Beal was an active and prominent politician, but while there was some evidence that he had said in relation to similar contracts with other parties that he could control the senators from his state, there was no evidence that he made any such representations to Polhemus or that the using of any such influence constituted any part of the consideration of the contract. The postoffice was duly moved into the building, but Polhemus refused to pay the note, alleging it to be invalid as against public policy. In an action to recover upon it the trial court found as a fact that in securing the postoffice to be placed and located in his building, Beal used no undue influence upon any department or officers of the government, and was not guilty of any corruption or corrupt practice in making the contract, and did no more than any honorable man might do in renting his building to the government for the use of a postoffice, and he was allowed to recover.

See also Green Co. v. Blodgett, 159 Ill. 169, 50 Am. St. R. 146; Fearnley v. De Mainville, 5 Colo. App. 441. But compare Benson v. Bawden, 149 Mich. 584, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 721.

³⁷ Thus in a case very similar to Beal v. Polhemus, supra, the party had given his notes in consideration that the owners of the building "would use all proper persuasion to secure the location of the postoffice in their room." One of the owners was a personal friend of the postmaster-general and represented to him that the location was a suitable one and urged upon him the propriety of placing the postoffice in their building and this was done. The court, however, held that the agreement was against public policy and that the notes were void: Elkhart County Lodge v. Crary, 98 Ind. 238, 49 Am. Rep. 746. See also, Woodman v. Innes, 47 Kan. 26, 27 Am. St. R. 274; Spence v. Harvey, 22 Cal. 336, 83 Am. Dec. 69; Hutchen v. Gibson, 1 Bush (Ky.), 270; Hayward v. Nordberg Mfg. Co., 85 Fed. 4; Garman v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 237; Russell v. Courier Co., 43 Colo. 321; Flynn v. Bank of Mineral Wells, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 481; Hovey v. Storer, 63 Maine, 486; Benson v. Bawden, 149 Mich. 584, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 721; Edwards v. Goldsboro, 141 N. Car. 60, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 589, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 479.

An employment to procure contracts through "favoritism" is within the forbidden class. Drake v. Lauer, 93 N. Y. App. Div. 86, 15 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 58, aff'd 182 N. Y. 533.

has been given substantially the same effect here as in the cases dealt with in the preceding sections.³⁸

§ 99. — Illustrations.—Thus in a leading case decided by the supreme court of the United States, one Norris had been employed by the Providence Tool Company to endeavor to obtain from the war department an order for a large number of muskets, and, for his compensation, he was to receive whatever the government should agree to pay for each musket above a certain sum. Norris thereupon set himself to work, to use his own language, “concentrating influence at the war department,” and finally succeeded in obtaining a favorable contract. Afterwards a dispute arose between him and the tool company, as to the amount of his commission, and he brought an action to recover it.

The supreme court, by Mr. Justice Field, said: “The question then is this: Can an agreement for compensation to procure a contract from the government to furnish its supplies be enforced by the courts? We have no hesitation in answering the question in the negative. All contracts for supplies should be made with those, and with those only, who will execute them most faithfully and at the least expense to the government. Considerations as to the most efficient and economical mode of meeting the public wants should alone control, in this respect, the action of every department of the government. No other element can lawfully enter into the transaction so far as the government is concerned. Such is the rule of public policy; and whatever tends to introduce any other element into the transaction is against public policy. That agreements like the one under consideration have this tendency is manifest. They tend to introduce personal solicitation and personal influence as elements in the procurement of contracts, and thus directly lead to inefficiency in the public service, and to unnecessary expenditures of the public funds. * * * Agreements for compensation contingent upon success suggest the use of sinister and corrupt means for the accomplishment of the end desired. The law meets the suggestion of evil, and strikes down the contract from its inception.”³⁹

§ 100. — Contrary views.—The broad doctrine thus laid down by the supreme court has not, however, passed unchallenged. Thus in a case soon after decided by the New York court of appeals, ³⁸ Held not to make an otherwise good contract bad. Kansas City Paper House v. Foley Ry. Printing Co., 85 Kan. 678, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 747.

³⁹ Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45, 17 L. Ed. 868, and the same rule was laid down and applied in Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. Ed. 539.

See also Russell v. Courier Co., 43 Colo. 321; Coquillard's Adm'r v. Bearss, 21 Ind. 479, 83 Am. Dec. 362.

that court, one judge dissenting, held that a contract, fair upon its face, to obtain contracts from the government for a commission, which might be carried out by perfectly legitimate methods, could not be deemed to be opposed to public policy where it did not appear that unobjectionable methods were contemplated.⁴⁰ Other courts have also reached the same conclusion.⁴¹

§ 101. Services in prosecuting claims.—Contracts for services to be rendered in the prosecution of claims against governments and municipal bodies stand upon the same footing. As is said by a learned judge in a case involving the right of an attorney to recover upon such a contract: "Professional services, to prepare and advocate just claims for compensation, are as legitimate as services rendered in court in arguing a cause to convince a court or jury that the claim presented, or the defence set up against a claim presented by the other party, ought to be allowed or rejected. Parties in such cases require advocates, and the legal profession must have a right to accept such employment, and to receive compensation for their services; nor can courts of justice adjudge such contracts illegal, if they are free from any taint of fraud, misrepresentation or unfairness."⁴²

But where the contract contemplates that the allowance of the claim is to be sought by using improper means or by bringing personal solicitation, influence or persuasion to bear upon the officer vested with the duty of decision, the undertaking is unlawful and the courts will not enforce it.⁴³

⁴⁰ Lyon v. Mitchell, 36 N. Y. 235, 682, 93 Am. Dec. 502. (It was said in this case that the fact that the agent was of the same political party as the government executives, did not change the rule.)

In Swift v. Aspell, 40 Misc. 453, the court expresses the opinion that this is still the law in New York notwithstanding that in Veazey v. Allen, 173 N. Y. 359, 62 L. R. A. 362, the federal cases were cited with apparent approval.

⁴¹ In Kerr v. American Pneumatic Service Co., 188 Mass. 27, a contract of employment, for a compensation in part contingent upon success, to procure franchises from governmental bodies, was held valid since it was not invalid upon its face, and could be executed without resorting to objectionable methods.

⁴² Clifford, J. in Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548, 23 L. Ed. 983; Burbridge v. Fackler, 2 McArthur (D. C.), 407; Foltz v. Cogswell, 86 Cal. 542; Denison v. Crawford Co., 48 Iowa, 211; Knut v. Nutt, 83 Miss. 365, 102 Am. St. R. 452, aff'd 200 U. S. 12. The prosecution of a claim cannot be deemed to be opposed to public policy where the legislature authorizes it. Davis v. Com., 164 Mass. 241, 30 L. R. A. 743; Pennebaker v. Williams, 136 Ky. 120.

⁴³ Devlin v. Brady, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 518; McCallum v. Corn Products Co., 131 App. Div. 617. A fortiori, is the undertaking void where the claim is a fictitious one and is to be presented as the claim of the agent rather than as that of the principal. Spotswood v. Bentley, 130 Ala. 310.

Where the claim requires legisla-

§ 102. Compromise of crime.—It is a high requirement of the public policy that crimes should be investigated and punished, and the law frowns upon all attempts to suppress investigation or to defeat the administration of justice. Any contract, therefore, for services to be rendered for the purpose of stifling prosecutions, or of obstructing, delaying or preventing the due course of public justice in its efforts to punish crime, is opposed to public policy and void.

Thus an agreement with an attorney, for a contingent fee, to settle a criminal case so as to avoid a prosecution;⁴⁴ an agreement to pay one for endeavoring to induce the complainant in a prosecution for felony to discontinue the proceedings;⁴⁵ an undertaking for compensation to endeavor to prevent the finding of an indictment;⁴⁶ and, if found, to endeavor to have the public authorities dismiss it;⁴⁷ an agreement for a contingent fee to use one's influence with a prosecuting attorney to induce him to bring about a lighter punishment than otherwise, and to permit the accused to turn state's evidence with the hope of receiving a pardon therefor;⁴⁸ and an agreement with an attorney to attempt to induce the sheriff to refrain from arresting A, who is charged with murder, the object being to give A an opportunity to escape,⁴⁹ are void.

tion to make it payable, and the attorney is to procure this, and the fee is contingent upon success, the contract, upon analogy to those involving the procurement of legislation, is held invalid. Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 375, 15 L. R. A. 727, 34 Am. St. Rep. 608.

⁴⁴ Ormerod v. Dearman, 100 Penn. St. 561, 45 Am. Rep. 391.

⁴⁵ Rhodes v. Neal, 64 Ga. 704, 37 Am. Rep. 93; Ricketts v. Harvey, 78 Ind. 152; Averbeck v. Hall, 14 Bush. 505 (Ky.); Crisup v. Grosslight, 79 Mich. 380.

See also, Henderson v. Palmer, 71 Ill. 579, 22 Am. Rep. 117; Smith v. Blachley, 188 Pa. 550, 68 Am. St. R. 887; Smith v. Richmond, 114 Ky. 303, 24 Ky. L. 1117, 102 Am. St. Rep. 283; McNeese v. Carver, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 129.

⁴⁶ Weber v. Shay, 56 Ohio St. 116, 60 Am. St. Rep. 743, 37 L. R. A. 230. See also Kirkland v. Benjamin, 67 Ark. 480; Shaw v. Reed, 30 Me. 105; Sumner v. Summers, 54 Mo. 340; Riddle v. Hall, 99 Pa. 116.

⁴⁷ Barron v. Tucker, 53 Vt. 338, 38 Am. Rep. 684.

⁴⁸ Wight v. Rindskopf, 43 Wis. 344.

⁴⁹ Arrington v. Sneed, 18 Tex. 135. See also Buck v. First National Bank, 27 Mich. 293, 15 Am. Rep. 189; Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301, 37 Am. Rep. 202; McMahon v. Smith, 47 Conn. 221, 36 Am. Rep. 67; Dodson v. Swan, 2 W. Va. 511, 98 Am. Dec. 787; Way v. Greer, 196 Mass. 237.

In Arlington Hotel Co. v. Ewing, 124 Tenn. 536, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 842, an attorney undertook to suspend the enforcement of a prohibition statute by obstructive tactics calculated to discourage prosecution. In a suit for compensation the court held that such a contract was necessarily void as are all contracts made with a view to the violation of a statute.

In Small v. Lowrey, — Mo. App. —, 148 S. W. 132, a contract for services in endeavoring to get the complaining witness to leave the state, was held bad.

§ 103. Encouragement of crime—Agreement by attorney to defend future prosecutions.—It needs no citation of authorities to show that contracts for the commission of crimes are void, and so are contracts for participation in or aid to be rendered in furthering criminal acts and practices.⁵⁰ And even though the contract may not take on these grosser forms, yet if its natural and necessary tendency is to encourage the commission of crimes it will fall within the prohibited class. Thus a contract by an attorney to defend future prosecutions for violations of the law,—for example, a contract by an attorney to defend all members of a liquor dealers' association for a fixed salary for a definite period,—is held to be opposed to public policy as directly tending to encourage violations of the law which but for the existence of the contract the parties might never have committed.⁵¹

§ 104. Services in procuring appointment to office.—Contracts to procure the appointment of a person to public office fall within the same principles.⁵² These offices are trusts, held solely for the public good, and should be conferred from considerations of the ability, integrity, fidelity and fitness for the position of the appointee. No other considerations can properly be regarded by the appointing power. Whatever introduces other elements to control this power must necessarily lower the character of the appointments to the great detriment of the public. While, therefore, a candidate for such an office may undoubtedly lawfully employ an agent to openly urge his fitness for the place, agreements for compensation to procure these appointments by personal persuasion or influence tend directly and necessarily to introduce such elements. The law, therefore, from this tendency alone, adjudges these agreements inconsistent with sound morals and public policy.⁵³

⁵⁰ See ante § 89; Cook v. Shipman, 24 Ill. 614.

⁵¹ Bowman v. Phillips, 41 Kan. 364, 3 L. R. A. 631, 13 Am. St. R. 292.

⁵² See Mechem on Public Officers, § 350 et seq., where the subject is more fully discussed.

⁵³ Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45, 17 L. Ed. 868; Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449; Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175, 33 Am. Rep. 548; Filson v. Himes, 5 Penn. St. 452, 47 Am. Dec. 422; Faurie v. Morin, 4 Martin (La.), 39, 6 Am. Dec. 701; Outon v. Rodes, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 432, 13 Am. Dec. 193; Basket v. Moss, 115 N. C. 448, 44 Am. St. R. 463, 48 L. R. A. 842;

Hager v. Catlin, 18 Hun (N. Y.), 448; Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kans. 601; Liness v. Hesing, 44 Ill. 113, 92 Am. Dec. 153; Edwards v. Randle, 63 Ark. 318, 58 Am. St. Rep. 108, 36 L. R. A. 174; Harris v. Chamberlain, 126 Mich. 280; McCall v. Whaley, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 64. See also Caton v. Stewart, 76 N. C. 357, in which a contract by which a government employee hired the plaintiff to continue a business, that the need for the employee's place should not cease, was held void as against public policy.

Employment to get the present officer to resign and to get the plaintiff appointed in his place, is opposed to § 105. Same rule applies to private offices and employments.—The same principles apply to contracts to procure private offices and employments, as well as those which are public or political in their nature. Open and fair presentation of an applicant's qualifications for the position is legitimate, and such presentation may lawfully be undertaken for a compensation, where the agent's relations to the subject matter and the appointing power will permit, and the fact that he comes as a hired advocate is disclosed.

But where it is contemplated that the agent is to conceal his agency and assume the position of a disinterested friend or adviser;⁵⁴ or where the appointment is to be sought by bringing to bear personal influence or persuasion;⁵⁵ or where the undertaking of the commission at all is inconsistent with duties already assumed or imposed by law, the contract is repugnant to the public policy.⁵⁶

Thus where A, an attorney, employed B, the agent of C, to endeavor to persuade C to discharge a certain other attorney he was then employing, and to employ A instead, and promised B, by way of compen-public policy. Eversole v. Holliday, 131 Ky. 202. See also Hunter v. Nolf, 71 Pa. 282.

In Law v. Law, 3 P. Wms. 391, 24 Eng. Reprints, 1114, equitable relief including a surrender of the bond and injunction against suit upon it, was granted against a bond for the payment of an annual sum actually in consideration of personal influence used to secure appointment to office. The court acted upon the doctrine of public policy.

⁵⁴ See Bollman v. Loomis, 41 Conn. 581, where A. for a fee from C. undertook to pose as the confidential friend and adviser of B. and thus induce him to purchase property of C. Followed in Simon v. Garlitz, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 133 S. W. 461. See also Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 130 Wis. 318.

"This," says Chief Justice Shaw, in Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472, in speaking of this rule, "is founded upon the general consideration of fitness and expediency. Such advice and solicitation, in whatever form the agency may be exerted, are understood to be disinterested and to flow from a single regard to the interests of the parties. They are lawful only so far as they are free and disinterested. If such advice and solicitation, thus understood to be pure and disinterested, may be justly offered from mercenary motives, they would produce all the consequences of absolute misrepresentation and falsehood. It is understood to be the offer of disinterested good offices, and the measure proposed, to be recommended by the unbiased judgment of the person offering it; whereas, it is in fact an offer flowing from unwavering motives of pecuniary interest, and the recommendation is the result of a judgment biased by a hope of a large reward. If rewards might be taken in consideration of the exertion of direct or indirect influence, either by the person acting under it, or by others who should be influenced and moved by him, it would destroy all confidence, it would lead to false and unfair representations and dealings, and be productive of infinite mischief."

⁵⁵ See note 57, post.

⁵⁶ See note 57, 58 and 59, post.

sation, to divide with him such fees as A might receive, it was held that the agreement was void.⁵⁷ So a contract that in consideration of B's purchasing of A certain stock in a corporation, A would procure B's appointment as treasurer⁵⁸ or manager⁵⁹ or cashier⁶⁰ thereof, is void. Such appointments should be made because of the personal fitness of the applicant, and not because the appointing power is open to personal influence or can be bought for a price. So A, who has been requested to recommend to C, a suitable person for employment whom he could endorse as in every way responsible and reliable, cannot lawfully undertake to secure the position for B in consideration of B's paying him a fee.⁶¹

§ 106. Services in improperly influencing elections.—Purity of elections, and the free, fair and intelligent exercise of the ballot, uninfluenced by other considerations than the candidate's fitness and the general good of the community, are of paramount public importance, and any agreement for the rendition of services which have for their object, or which immediately tend to, the introduction of other elements, as the bribery of voters or the bringing to bear upon them of personal influence, solicitation or persuasion, is, in accordance with the principles already referred to, clearly opposed to public policy and void.

Thus where one who was a candidate for the office of district attorney, employed another to "use all of his influence" with the voters of the county to secure the candidate's election, and who promised as compensation therefor, that if he should be elected, he would divide the fees of the office with the other, the court said: "Such a contract can-⁵⁷ Byrd v. Hughes, 84 Ill. 174, 25 Am. Rep. 442; Meguire v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108, 25 L. Ed. 539.

An employment to induce prospective litigants to employ the defendant as attorney, the agent to be compensated by a share of the fees which may be received, is opposed to public policy. Langdon v. Conlin, 67 Neb. 243, 108 Am. St. R. 643, 60 L. R. A. 429; Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78, 21 Am. St. R. 17, 9 L. R. A. 483.

A contract with the large creditor of a firm to secure A's appointment as special receiver, the creditor to be compensated by $1,000 out of receiver's commissions to apply upon its claims against the firm is invalid. McGraw v. Trader's National Bank, 64 W. Va. 509. See also Hirshback v. Ketchum, 5 App. Div. 324 (under a code); In re Clark, 184 N. Y. 222 (a disbarment proceeding).

⁵⁸ Guernsey v. Cook, 120 Mass. 501; Noyes v. Marsh, 123 Mass. 286; Jones v. Scudder, 2 Cin. Sup. Ct. 178.

⁵⁹ Wilbur v. Stoepel, 82 Mich. 344, 21 Am. St. R. 568. To like effect: Dickson v. Kittson, 75 Minn. 168, 74 Am. St. Rep. 447; West v. Camden, 135 U. S. 507, 34 L. Ed. 254; Wood v. Manchester F. Ins. Co., 30 N. Y. Misc. 330, aff'd 54 App. Div. 522. Compare Almy v. Orne, 165 Mass. 126.

⁶⁰ As of a National Bank, Noel v. Drake, 28 Kan. 265, 42 Am. Rep. 162; see also Railroad Co. v. Ryan, 11 Kan. 602; Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601; Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45, 17 L. Ed. 868.

⁶¹ Holcomb v. Weaver, 136 Mass. 265.

not be upheld. Its tendency was to corrupt the people upon whose integrity and intelligence the safety of the state and nation depends,—to lead voters to work for individual interests rather than the public welfare.”⁶²

So where one agreed to render services in procuring the election of a certain candidate to the office of sheriff upon consideration that if successful he should be appointed deputy, the court held the agreement void.⁶³ And where one for money or other personal profit, agrees to use his influence in an election against what he believes to be for the public good, the contract is void, though as a matter of fact he uses no unlawful means.⁶⁴

§ 107. — What services legitimate.—But it is not unlawful for a candidate for a public office, particularly where his candidacy extends over a considerable territory, to employ another to make public speeches in his behalf, or to prepare, print or distribute arguments upon the questions at issue, or to use other open and honorable means to promote the success of his candidacy, where the object is to convince the understandings of the voters by public means and not to bring personal or other improper influences to bear upon their weaknesses or prejudices.⁶⁵

⁶² Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175, 33 Am. Rep. 548; Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168; see also Swayze v. Hull, 3 Halstead (N. J.), 54, 14 Am. Dec. 399. An agreement to pay another to “work and canvass” voters for the purpose of securing the promisor’s nomination for an office is void. Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555. A contract to use the influence of plaintiff’s newspaper to secure defendant’s nomination to public office, is opposed to public policy. Livingston v. Page, 74 Vt. 356, 93 Am. St. R. 901, 59 L. R. A. 336; King v. Raleigh, etc., Railroad Co., 147 N. C. 263, 125 Am. St. R. 546.

⁶³ Stout v. Ennis, 28 Kan. 706. And a like ruling was made in Robertson v. Robinson, 65 Ala. 610, 39 Am. Rep. 17. See also Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh (Va.), 42, 19 Am. Dec. 722; Groton v. Waldborough, 11 Me. 306, 26 Am. Dec. 530.

⁶⁴ Nichols v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546.

⁶⁵ “There is a clear distinction,” says Lewis, P. J., in Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555, “between the purchase of services to be devoted only to an advertising of the fact that one is or desires to be a candidate, and the purchase of services to be employed in advocating his peculiar merit and eligibility so as to influence the choice of the voter. No public policy forbids the making of compensation, under agreement or otherwise, for printing or distributing announcements, or for the employment of any proper agency which may bring the fact of a person’s candidacy more prominently before the public eye. The information thus disseminated is essential to the intelligent determination of the voter’s choice. But it becomes a very different thing when money is paid or promised for efforts to control the voter’s free agency in selecting the object of his suffrage.” See also Murphy v. English, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 362.

§ 108. Services in procuring pardons.—The same general principles which underlie the questions just discussed, govern here. An agent or attorney may lawfully be employed to attend an open or public hearing of the executive or board of pardons, and make such legitimate arguments and present such petitions, memorials, statements of fact and evidence as are appropriate to bring before the pardoning power all the considerations which may be properly taken into account in behalf of the convicted person;⁶⁶ but all employments having for their object or natural tendency the using of any improper or sinister means, or which contemplate the exercise of personal influence or solicitation, especially if for a contingent fee, are looked upon by the law as demoralizing in their tendency, opposed to public policy and void, even though in the particular case no improper means were used or contemplated.⁶⁷

§ 109. ——— How when conviction illegal.—But where the conviction was unwarranted, as because the court had no jurisdiction, or where there was a grave doubt as to the constitutionality of the statute under which the conviction was had, it is held that no rule of public policy would be violated by legitimate endeavor to secure the pardon or release of the accused.⁶⁸

§ 110. Services in procuring or suppressing evidence.—Like considerations apply to undertakings to procure evidence for use before legal tribunals. It is entirely lawful and proper for a party to an action or controversy to employ another to ascertain what documentary and other evidence, and what witnesses are available; to obtain the names of the witnesses and a memorandum of their testimony; to cause them to be duly subpoenaed for attendance upon trial, and to take such other steps as may be necessary and proper to enable the party to present all the existing and lawful evidence that is pertinent to his case. This service is legitimate, and tends to promote and secure the due administration of justice.⁶⁹

⁶⁶ Moyer v. Cantieny, 41 Minn. 242; Chadwick v. Knox, 31 N. H. 226, 64 Am. Dec. 329; Bremsen v. Engler, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 172; Formby v. Pryor, 15 Ga. 258; Bird v. Breedlove, 24 Ga. 623.

But contra, see Norman v. Cole, 3 Esp. 253.

⁶⁷ Deering v. Cunningham, 63 Kan. 174, 54 L. R. A. 410; Hatzfield v. Gulden, 7 Watts (Penn.), 152, 32 Am. Dec. 750; Thompson v. Wharton, 7

Bush (Ky.), 563, 3 Am. Rep. 306; Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301, 37 Am. Rep. 202; Kribben v. Haycraft, 26 Mo. 396; McGill's Admr. v. Burnet, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 640.

⁶⁸ Thompson v. Wharton, supra; Timothy v. Wright, 8 Gray (Mass.), 522.

⁶⁹ Chandler v. Mason, 2 Vt. 193; Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 126; Wilkinson v. Oliveira, 1 Scott (Eng. C. P.) 461, 1 Bing. N. C. 490; Cobb v. Cowdery, 40

But contracts by which the agent undertakes, or which have for their object, the procuring or furnishing, not simply of such evidence as actually exists and may lawfully be produced, but of evidence sufficient to win the case or to establish a certain fact or to convict a certain person, or the procuring of witnesses to testify in a certain manner, or to procure the production of testimony which could be produced only by a violation of a legal duty, stand upon a different basis. The intention and methods of the parties in a given case may be honorable and proper, but the natural and probable result of such an undertaking is to defeat the administration of justice and corrupt the morals of the people by putting a premium upon perjury and by holding out a direct incentive to the subornation of witnesses. It requires no extended argument to establish that such undertakings are contrary to sound public policy and void.⁷⁰

Vt. 25, 94 Am. Dec. 370; Johnson v. Pietsch, 94 Ill. App. 459.

It is not unlawful to employ persons to ascertain whether offences are being committed, it not being contemplated that they shall encourage or bring about violations of the law. People v. Whitney, 105 Mich. 622.

Neither is it objectionable to agree to pay another for producing or disclosing existing and lawful evidence within his knowledge or control and which he can produce or disclose without violating any legal duty. Casserleigh v. Wood, 14 Colo. App. 265, aff'd as Wood v. Casserleigh, 30 Colo. 287, 97 Am. St. R. 138; Lucas v. Pico, supra; Cobb v. Cowdery, supra; Smith v. Hartsell, 150 N. Car. 71, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 203. But compare Casserleigh v. Wood, with Young v. Thompson, reported in the same volume, and referred to in the following notes, where a contract not only to supply certain evidence but also to suppress certain testimony was held invalid. (Wood v. Casserleigh in the state court is also denied in Casserleigh v. Wood, 119 Fed. 308.) But where a person had conspired with another to defraud the government and then agreed to furnish evidence of his conspiracy, for a consideration, to a person interested in showing it in order to establish his own right, it was held that the agreement to pay the consideration would not be enforced. Hagan v. Wellington, 7 Kan. App. 74.

A contract by which plaintiff agreed to pay $1,000 for evidence that R. Co. was selling machines at less than a certain price, the evidence to be obtained by entering into a contract with the R. Co. was not invalid. Case Threshing Mch. Co. v. Fisher, 144 Iowa, 45.

⁷⁰ Gillette v. Logan County, 67 Ill. 256; Goodrich v. Tenney, 144 Ill. 422, 36 Am. St. R. 459, 19 L. R. A. 371; Heyt v. Macon, 2 Col. 502; Lucas v. Allen, 80 Ky. 681; Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369; Hughes v. Mullins, 36 Mont. 267, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 209; Harris v. More, 70 Cal. 502; Sherman v. Burton, 165 Mich. 293, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 87; Quirk v. Muller, 14 Mont. 467, 43 Am. St. R. 647, 25 L. R. A. 87; Lyon v. Hussey, 82 Hun (N. Y.), 15, 63 N. Y. St. Rep. 531; Kennedy v. Hodges, 97 Ga. 753; Getchell v. Welday, 2 Ohio N. P. 390, 4 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 65; Bowling v. Blum (Tex. Civ. App.), 52 S. W. 97; Neece v. Joseph, 95 Ark. 552, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 278; Barngrover v. Pettigrew, 128 Iowa, 533, 111 Am. St. R. 206, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 260. See also Delbridge v. Beach, 66 Wash. 416.

Equally pernicious, and for similar reasons, are undertakings to suppress or destroy evidence by concealing, removing or tampering with witnesses, or by compassing the destruction of the means of proof.⁷¹

§ 111. Unlawful dealings in stocks and merchandise—Gambling in “futures,” etc.—So a contract for services to be rendered in unlawful dealings in stocks or merchandise is void. These contracts as-

“We fully agree,” said the court in Patterson v. Donner, “that a stipulation that one shall, in consideration of a large sum of money, not only procure witnesses, but procure them to swear to a particular fact, is unlawful.”

In Gillett v. Logan County, supra, the board of supervisors of the county desiring to prove a certain election to have been carried by illegal means employed an agent to procure testimony for that purpose, agreeing to pay him $100 for the first ten votes which the testimony procured by him proved to be illegal, $200 for the next ten votes, and so on, and an additional sum of $1,200, to be paid when the case was decided in the county's favor. These agreements were held to be void.

In Perry v. Dicken, 105 Pa. 83, 51 Am. Rep. 181, an agreement with an attorney to take a case upon a contingent fee was upheld, even though it was known that the attorney was an indispensable witness.

So public policy requires that witnesses shall testify as to facts within their knowledge without any extra fee beyond the legal fee whether fixed or contingent. See Clifford v. Hughes, 139 App. Div. 730; Burnett v. Freeman, 125 Mo. App. 683; s. c. 134 Mo. App. 709; and the following cases in which a physician's contract for fees for expert testimony in amount contingent upon the amount recovered was held bad. Laffin v. Billington, 86 N. Y. Supp. 267, 14 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 360; Sherman v. Burton, 165 Mich. 293, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 87.

In Feltner v. Feltner, 132 Ky. 705, a witness in a pending suit who had been employed for $1,000 to remain out of the state over the time of the trial sued a third person to whom the money had been given to hold until the trial was over and the witness had performed. On the ground of the illegality of the whole contract, as one against public policy, recovery was denied.

In Hough v. State, 145 App. Div. 718, a contract to pay an expert witness for his services, provided his estimate should be substantially less than that of the expert on the other side, was held to be opposed to public policy.

⁷¹ Cobb v. Cowdery, 40 Vt. 25, 94 Am. Dec. 370; Bostick v. McLaren, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 275; Badger v. Williams, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 137; Hoyt v. Macon, 2 Col. 502; Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387.

An agreement to pay an employee his salary and expenses to keep out of the reach of process issued to compel him to be a witness against his employer is void. Bierbauer v. Wirth, 5 Fed. Rep. 336, 10 Biss. 60.

So an agreement to keep off the stand is likewise void. Young v. Thompson, 14 Colo. App. 294.

So of an agreement to get a certain witness out of jail and “get him away.” Crisup v. Grosslight, 79 Mich. 380.

In Lazenby v. Lazenby, 132 Ga. 836, an agreement “to remain non-committal” as to a pending suit “and not to volunteer any information or assistance to the other side” was held invalid. The court said “If it is not a contract in terms to suppress testimony, it * * * is so closely akin that it falls falls under the condemnation which the law pronounces against contracts entered into for the purposes of suppressing testimony.”

sume a great variety of forms but one of the most common is the agreement by a broker to buy or sell goods for future delivery upon "margins." As has been shown in another place,⁷² there is no legal objection to a sale of goods to be delivered in the future, even though the seller is not now possessed of the goods and has no other means of acquiring them than to go into the market and buy them. If the parties actually intend a sale and delivery of the goods, the contract is entirely valid;⁷³ but if, under the guise of such a contract, valid on its face, the real intention of the parties is not to deliver the goods, but merely to speculate in the rise or fall of prices and to pay the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time agreed upon, then the transaction becomes a mere wagering one and is unlawful.⁷⁴ In some of the states, this rule is confirmed or extended by statute.⁷⁵

⁷² See Mechem on Sales, § 1030 et seq., where this subject is more fully discussed.

⁷³ If the parties intend actual purchase or sale and delivery of the goods on the part of the broker the contract is valid, even although it is the contemplation of the parties that there shall be no delivery into the principal's personal possession, but that the broker shall again turn the transaction for him. Thompson v. Williamson, 67 N. J. Eq. 212. See Wagner v. Engel-Millar Co., 144 Wis. 486.

⁷⁴ Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 33 L. Ed. 172; Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 481, 37 L. Ed. 819; Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. Ed. 1183; Cobb v. Prell, 15 Fed. 774; Union Nat'l Bank v. Carr, 15 Fed. 438; Lehman v. Feld, 37 Fed. 852; Marengo Abstract Co. v. Hooper, — Ala. —, 56 So. 580; Raymond v. Parker, 84 Conn. 694; Cunningham v. Nat'l Bank, 71 Ga. 400, 51 Am. Rep. 266; Hentz v. Booz, 8 Ga. App. 577; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33, 25 Am. Rep. 349; Pearce v. Foote, 113 Ill. 228, 55 Am. Rep. 414; Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73; Pope v. Hanke, 155 Ill. 617, 28 L. R. A. 568; Whitesides v. Hunt, 97 Ind. 191, 49 Am. Rep. 441; Wilson v. Nat'l Fowler Bank, 47 Ind.

App. 689; Murry v. Ocheltree, 59 Iowa, 435; Timmons v. Timmons, 145 Ky. 259; O'Brien v. Luques, 81 Me. 46; Morris v. Western U. Tel. Co., 94 Me. 423; Stewart v. Schall, 65 Md. 289, 57 Am. Rep. 327; Burt v. Myer, 71 Md. 467; Billingslea v. Smith, 77 Md. 504; Gregory v. Wendell, 39 Mich. 337, 33 Am. Rep. 390; Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228; Crawford v. Spencer, 92 Mo. 498, 1 Am. St. R. 745; Connor v. Black, 119 Mo. 126; Sprague v. Warren, 26 Neb. 326, 3 L. R. A. 679; Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308; Cameron v. Durkheim, 55 N. Y. 425; Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202, 26 Am. Rep. 573; Dows v. Glaspel, 4 N. Dak. 251; Kahn v. Walton, 46 Ohio St. 195; Peters v. Grim, 149 Pa. 163, 34 Am. St. R. 599; Wagner v. Hildebrand, 187 Pa. 136; Riordan v. Doty, 50 S. Car. 537; Waite v. Frank, 14 S. Dak. 626; Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593; Everingham v. Meighan, 55 Wis. 354; Wall v. Schneider, 59 Wis. 352, 48 Am. Rep. 520; Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. R. 928; Wagner v. Engel-Millar Co., 144 Wis. 486; and many other cases cited in Mechem on Sales, § 1031.

⁷⁵ See for example: Arkansas, Dig. Stats. 1894, §§ 1634, 1635; Georgia, Code 1895, § 3537; Illinois, Hurd's Stats. 1901, ch. 38, §§ 120, 131; Iowa,

§ 112. — Unless otherwise declared by statute it is not enough to make the contract invalid that one party only intended merely to speculate; it must appear that such was the intention of both parties⁷⁶ and that this was their intention when they made the contract.⁷⁷ By the weight of authority, a party who alleges that a contract, fair

Code 1897, § 4967; Michigan, C. L. 1897, §§ 11, 373; Mississippi, Ann. Code, §§ 2117, 1120, 1121; Missouri, Rev. Stats. 1899, §§ 2337, 2338; Ohio, Bates' Ann. Stats. § 6934a, et seq.; South Carolina, Code 1902, § 2310 et seq.; Wisconsin, Stats. 1898, § 2319a. In California, see Constitution, art. IV, sec. 26; Montana, Rev. Codes § 8416.

If contract void when made, it is not validated by subsequent change in statute. Willcox v. Edwards, 162 Cal. 455.

⁷⁶ See Mechem on Sales, § 1032; Crawford v. Spencer, 92 Mo. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 745; Wall v. Schneider, 59 Wis. 352, 48 Am. Rep. 520; Murry v. Ocheltree, 59 Iowa, 435; Scanlon v. Warren, 169 Ill. 142; Nash-Wright Co. v. Wright, 156 Ill. App. 243; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 351; Ennis v. Edgar, 154 Ill. App. 543; Conner v. Robertson, 37 La. Ann. 814, 55 Am. Rep. 521; Ponder v. Cotton Co., 100 Fed. Rep. 373; Donovan v. Daiber, 124 Mich. 49; Gregory v. Wendell, 40 Mich. 432; Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228; Barnes v. Smith, 159 Mass. 344; Hocomb v. Kempner, 214 Ill. 458; Thompson v. Williamson, 67 N. J. Eq. 212. But see McGrew v. Produce Exchange, 85 Tenn. 572, 4 Am. St. Rep. 771, and Connor v. Black, 119 Mo. 126.

The question of the intention of the parties is not to be determined simply by what the parties call their contract or by their professed declarations therein or by the form they have given it. It is a question of fact and in deciding it the circumstances of the parties, their position, their facilities to actually deliver or receive the goods, their ability to pay for them, and the like, may all be taken into account. Mechem on Sales, § 1036; Gaw v. Bennett, 153 Pa. 247, 34 Am. St. Rep. 699; Rogers v. Marriott, 59 Neb. 759; Sprague v. Warren, 26 Neb. 326, 3 L. R. A. 679; Press v. Duncan, 100 Iowa, 355; Whitesides v. Hunt, 97 Ind. 191, 49 Am. Rep. 441; Nave v. Wilson, 12 Ind. App. 38; Kullman v. Simmens, 104 Cal. 595; Jamieson v. Wallace, 167 Ill. 388, 59 Am. St. Rep. 302; Dows v. Glaspel, 4 N. Dak. 251; Waite v. Frank, 14 S. Dak. 626; Burt v. Myer, 71 Md. 467; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 33 L. Ed. 172.

⁷⁷ If the parties really intended an actual sale and delivery at the time they made the contract, the mere fact that they afterwards settle upon the basis of differences does not destroy the validity. Wall v. Schneider, 59 Wis. 352, 48 Am. Rep. 520; Conner v. Robertson, 37 La. Ann. 814, 55 Am. Rep. 521. Or that one of them thought the other would be willing to settle upon that basis, if there was no agreement to that effect. Barnes v. Smith, 159 Mass. 344; MacDonald v. Gessler, 208 Pa. 177.

But though they may not originally have intended an actual delivery, if the buyer afterwards elects to treat it as an actual purchase this is held to validate the contract. Estate of Taylor, Appeal of Lex, 192 Pa. 313; Young v. Glendinning, 194 Pa. 550.

In an action against a broker under Massachusetts Statutes 1890 c. 437, § 2, for money paid on margins, the fact that the defendant actually purchased the stock at the request of the plaintiff and held it subject to his own control until his lien was paid properly may be considered by the jury upon the question whether the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the plaintiff was carrying on a wagering contract. Post v. Leland, 184 Mass. 601.

upon its face, was really intended as a cover for an illegal transaction, has the burden of proving it.⁷⁸ Parol evidence may be used to show the intention though the contract was in writing.⁷⁹

Where the contract is really of the forbidden sort, the courts will not lend their aid to either party in enforcing it, but will usually leave the parties where they have put themselves. The agent, therefore, where he must be deemed a guilty participant, cannot recover his commissions, nor can he have indemnity for liability incurred or reimbursement for advances made, moneys paid or losses sustained.⁸⁰

Moreover, even though the contract be not invalid because both parties did not have an intention to gamble, it is held that, on general grounds of public policy, the one who did intend to gamble can not recover. The other party's innocence while it may enable him to recover on the contract, is held not to enure to the benefit of the guilty party.⁸¹

⁷⁸ Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. Ed. 1183; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. Ed. 225; Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 27 L. Ed. 722; Crawford v. Spencer, 92 Mo. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 745; Cockrell v. Thompson, 85 Mo. 510; Pratt v. Boody, 55 N. J. Eq. 175; First Nat. Bank v. Oskaloosa Packing Co., 66 Iowa, 41; Conner v. Robertson, 37 La. Ann. 814, 55 Am. Rep. 521; Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202, 26 Am. Rep. 573; Story v. Salomon, 71 N. Y. 420; Rumsey v. Berry, 65 Me. 570; Williams v. Carr, 80 N. Car. 294; Whitesides v. Hunt, 97 Ind. 191, 49 Am. Rep. 441; Clay v. Allen, 63 Miss. 426; Perryman v. Wolffe, 93 Ala. 290; Marengo Abstract Co. v. Hooper, — Ala. —, 56 So. 580; Beadles v. McElrath, 85 Ky. 230, 8 K. L. R. 848; Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 351.

The rule in Wisconsin seems to be the other way. Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593; Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. R. 928; Cassoday, C. J., dissenting in a strong opinion.

In Nebraska it is held that when doubt is thrown by the testimony upon the validity of the transaction, it then devolves upon the defendant to show that the purchase was bona fide and for actual delivery. Sprague v. Warren, 26 Neb. 326, 3 L. R. A. 679; Cobb v. Prell, 15 Fed. 774, 5 McCrary, 80, at circuit, is to the same effect.

⁷⁹ Wheeler v. Metropolitan Stock Exchange, 72 N. H. 315; Hentz & Co. v. Booz, 8 Ga. App. 577; Wright v. Vaughan, 137 Ga. 52. See Collins v. Blanterm, 2 Wilson, 347; In re Canfield, 190 Fed. 266.

⁸⁰ This question is more fully discussed, post, Book IV, Chap. IV, on the Liability of the Principal to the Agent.

⁸¹ Most of these cases cited above are ones in which the claim of an innocent broker was not allowed to be defeated by the principal's proof that the principal intended an illegal transaction. But in Barnes v. Smith, supra, the broker who expected that the contract which he secured for his principal would be used as a wagering contract was nevertheless allowed his commission, because the contract was good in form and the other party to it did not appear to have intended or treated it as a wagering contract. On the other hand in Hurd v. Taylor, 181 N. Y. 231, a broker was denied recovery of his

§ 113. Employments creating monopolies or in restraint of trade.— Again, contracts whose purpose is to create an unlawful combination, to bring about a monopoly in articles of common need, to unreasonably restrain trade, to create “corners” in wheat, stock, and other commodities, to control the price of staple articles of commerce, and the like, are opposed to public policy and unenforceable by the rules of the common law, and these rules have frequently been confirmed or extended by express statutes. No contract of agency can lawfully be made for such a purpose.⁸²

But a contract to make one the exclusive agent of a certain person or for a certain commodity or in a certain place is not opposed to public policy;⁸³ nor is a contract to act only as agent for a certain person commissions in a case when he failed to show any actual purchase or sale of stock and admitted that he regarded the transaction as a wagering arrangement. The court did not disclose certainly what was thought to be the intention of the defendant, and so far as appears he may have been innocent.

In Nash-Wright Co. v. Wright, 156 Ill. App. 243, there was evidence that Wright, the broker's principal, intended to gamble and did not contemplate an actual delivery of the grain; there was no evidence, however, from which such an intention could be imputed to the third persons with whom the contracts were made. In speaking of the contracts, Mack, J., said: “It does not, however, follow that Wright could have enforced them; in fact the law is clearly settled that the gambling intent on his part, even though not participated in by the other side, would prevent him from suing on the contract. This is not because the contract is in itself illegal; mutual illegal intent is necessary for this; but because it is against a sound public policy to permit one who has entered into transactions with an illegal intent, to recover thereon.” In Higgins v. McCrea, 116 U. S. 671, 29 L. Ed. 764, which was relied on in the above case, the question was as to whether the defendant could recover under a counterclaim certain sums which he had advanced to the plaintiffs, who were brokers, for the purpose of negotiating gambling contracts. The plaintiffs who were innocent of any intention to participate in gambling had improperly cancelled certain contracts which had been entered into on behalf of the defendant. The court held that the defendant was not entitled to recover, and that the fact that the plaintiffs were innocent of any unlawful purpose, and might themselves have sued on the contract, did not enure to the benefit of the defendant, who confessed that he was attempting to promote an illegal and criminal venture.

⁸² Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73; Leonard v. Poole, 114 N. Y. 371, 11 Am. St. Rep. 667, 4 L. R. A. 728; Raymond v. Leavitt, 46 Mich. 447, 9 N. W. 525, 41 Am. Rep. 170; Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 145, 3 Am. Rep. 327; Wright v. Crabbs, 78 Ind. 487; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Penn. St. 173; Arnot v. Coal Co., 68 N. Y. 558; Street v. Houston Ice Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 55 S. W. 516. Services in bringing about the consolidation of competing corporations stand upon the same footing. Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. Ed. 979.

⁸³ Woods v. Hart, 50 Neb. 497; New York Trap Rock Co. v. Brown, 61 N. J. L. 536.

or for the sale of a certain commodity⁸⁴ although a contract to sell only goods of a certain sort might be deemed in violation of some of the statutes;⁸⁵ nor is a contract that, for a given time after the termination of such an agency, the former agent will not engage with a rival firm or carry on the same business or solicit the former customers.⁸⁶

§ 114. Employment to induce violation of contracts.—Where the act of inducing the violation of a contract would be a legal wrong,—as it often is,—an employment to accomplish that result would also be legally wrong and unenforceable.

§ 115. Deception or defrauding of third persons or the public.—Contracts which have for their purpose, or whose natural and necessary tendency is, to deceive and defraud third persons or the public are clearly opposed to public policy although they may not be forbidden by enactment, and any undertaking to act as agent in promoting or executing such contracts is therefore unenforceable.⁸⁷ A typical illustration is found in the familiar “Bohemian Oats” swindle in which a person, who was usually being himself deluded and defrauded, undertook to sell oats or other grain to others upon terms and conditions which could only be carried into effect by deceiving and defrauding those who might be induced to buy.⁸⁸

⁸⁴ Weiboldt v. Standard Fashion Co., 80 Ill. App. 67.

⁸⁵ See White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Hertzberg (Tex. Civ. App.), 51 S. W. 355.

⁸⁶ Eureka Laundry Co. v. Long, 146 Wis. 205, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 119; Carter v. Alling, 43 Fed. Rep. 208; Mills v. Dunham, [1891] 1 Ch. 576; Rosenbaum v. U. S. Credit System Co., 65 N. J. L. 255, 53 L. R. A. 449; Rogers v. Maddocks, [1892] 3 Ch. 346; Dubowski v. Goldstein, [1896] 1 Q. B. 478, but compare Perls v. Saalfeld, [1892] 2 Ch. 149. [Contra, where the restraint is without territorial limitation. Kinney v. Scarborough Co., 138 Ga. 77, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 473.]

So, of a contract that an agent would not, after the termination of the relation, “interfere directly or indirectly with the business” of his former employer, it being limited to a certain district. Barr v. Craven, 89 L. T. Rep. 574.

⁸⁷ See Scott v. Brown, [1892] 2 Q. B. 724.

⁸⁸ Davis v. Seeley, 71 Mich. 209; McNamara v. Gargett, 68 Mich. 454, 13 Am. St. R. 355; Sutton v. Beckwith, 68 Mich. 303, 13 Am. St. R. 344; Merrill v. Packer, 80 Iowa, 542; Shipley v. Reasoner, 80 Iowa, 548. Compare Rush v. Broussard (Miss.), 30 So. Rep. 635.

The same principle is applied in the following cases, in which the courts thought that, on the face, contracts allowing an agent to sell an agency contract to a subagent who should have similar power to appoint another subagent, so as to provide for an endless chain, were not plans for agencies to sell the goods, but schemes for getting people to buy worthless rights and for taking each purchaser into the scheme that he might try it on others. Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 130 Wis. 318; Bank v. Hanks, 142 Mo. App. 110.

§ 116. "Voting trusts."—The constating instruments of private corporations ordinarily permit shareholders to vote at corporate meetings by agent or "proxy." Powers of attorney for that purpose are, therefore, ordinarily entirely valid. In some states, by statute, the period during which any such power may endure is limited,—for example, to one year.⁸⁹ Even though there be no such limitation upon its duration, a power of this sort, like any other, is ordinarily revocable at the pleasure of the giver.⁹⁰ The fact that a longer period is named does not alter this result, nor the fact that the authority is called "irrevocable."⁹¹

Powers of attorney to vote, like others, may be made irrevocable, in accordance with well settled rules, by being given as a security, or by being "coupled with an interest," within the legal definition of that phrase.⁹²

Beyond this, there is much apparent conflict in the cases, many holding that any attempt by the shareholder to permanently separate the voting power from the general ownership of the stock is contrary to ⁸⁹ A common sort of provision is that "No person shall vote at any meeting of the stockholders of any bank or railroad company, by virtue of any power of attorney not executed within one year next preceding such meeting; and no such power shall be used at more than one annual meeting of such corporation." Connecticut General Stats. (1888) § 1927.

⁹⁰ Vanderbilt v. Bennett, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 193, 19 Ab. N. C. 460.

⁹¹ Vanderbilt v. Bennett, supra; Blackstone v. Buttermore, 53 Pa. 266.

⁹² See for example, Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas, 93 Ala. 92; Boyer v. Nesbitt, 227 Pa. 398, 136 Am. St. R. 890.

⁹³ See, for example, the following: Shepaug Voting Trust Cases, 60 Conn. 553, in which a syndicate purchased a majority of the stock in a certain railroad and placed it in the hands of a trustee company to vote for five years as it should be directed by a committee of the members of the syndicate. At the suit of certain members of the syndicate who had declared a revocation as to so much of the stock as they owned, the contract was held invalid and said to be against the policy of the law which required that stockholders exercise their own judgment.

Harvey v. The Linville Improvement Co., et al., 118 N. C. 693, 54 Am. St. R. 749, 32 L. R. A. 265, in which a majority of stockholders in a corporation transferred their stock to a trustee to be voted in solido for five years and the pooling agreement and the trust were held invalid at the instance of a purchaser of the equitable interest in some of the shares. The court argued that every owner of stock must be free to vote for the interest of the whole corporation and not of any one clique.

Sheppard v. Power Co., 150 N. C. 776. In the case of a three year pool, the court allowed an injunction against the trustee restraining him from voting the stock at the suit of a subsequent purchaser of equitable interest in some of the stock.

Bridgers v. First National Bank, 152 N. C. 293, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1199. A voting trust was created for the purpose of keeping one particular man from gaining control of the bank. If any of the equitable own-public policy and void.⁹³ Other cases permit dealing with stock upon substantially the same conditions as any other kind of property, that is, they determine the case by reference to the nature of the acts and not solely with reference to the kind of property.⁹⁴

As the question is primarily one of corporations rather than agency, no extended discussion of it will be attempted here.⁹⁵

§ 117. Marriage brokerage.—A marriage brokerage contract is an agreement for the procurement of a marriage for a commission or other compensation. Such contracts are clearly opposed to public policy and void, even though in the given case no fraud was practiced on either party. Their tendency is to bring to pass mistaken and unhappy marriages, to countervail parental influences in the training and education of children, and to tempt the exercise of an undue and pernicious influence in respect to the most sacred of human relations.⁹⁶ ers wished to sell or pledge his stock the trustee was to have first option. At the instance of another stockholder, who had not joined in the pool an injunction was granted restraining the trustee from voting the shares.

Morel v. Hoge, 130 Ga. 625, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1136, in which it had been agreed between two factions of stockholders in a corporation, at the time of the corporate organization that one faction should indefinitely have the right to name the majority of the directors. This agreement was held bad and not to bind the parties to it, because it deprived the majority of the stockholders from acting in whatever way they might deem for the benefit of the whole corporation. Cone v. Russell, 48 N. J. Eq. 208, in which the plaintiffs had contracted with the defendants that defendants should have proxy to vote the plaintiffs' shares of stock for five years, upon consideration that one of plaintiffs should be constantly employed as manager, and the agreement was held contrary to public policy. White v. Thomas Inflatable Tire Co., 52 N. J. Eq. 178; Kreissl v. Distilling Co., 61 N. J. Eq. 5, in both of which the court holds the voting trust against public policy, because matters of discretion were irrevocably given into the hands of one who had no other or any beneficial interest in the shares which he voted or in the corporations. Warren v. Pim, 66 N. J. Eq. 353, in which a voting trust for five years was held invalid and the court said that its opinion rested both upon statutory and upon common law grounds. Moses v. Scott, 84 Ala. 608, where a court of equity refused specifically to enforce a voting "trust" agreement and placed its determination largely upon the fact that the restriction amounted to a restraint of trade.

⁹⁴ See Brightman v. Bates, 175 Mass. 105; Carnegie Trust Co. v. Security L. Ins. Co., 111 Va. 1, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186; Smith v. San Francisco, etc., Co., 115 Cal. 584, 56 Am. St. R. 119, 35 L. R. A. 309; Faulds v. Yates, 57 Ill. 416, 11 Am. Rep. 24; Kantzler v. Bensinger, 214 Ill. 587. See also Winsor v. Commonwealth Coal Co., 63 Wash. 62, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 63.

⁹⁵ For discussions, see 1 Yale L. Jour. 1, 13 id. 109; 17 Harvard L. Rev. 364; 10 Columbia L. Rev. 658; 64 Albany L. Jour. 187; 69 Central L. Jour. 390; Note, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1140; Note, 56 Am. St. Rep. 138.

⁹⁶ Hermann v. Charlesworth, [1905] 2 K. B. 123, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 691; White v. Equitable Nuptial Benefit

Moneys paid to the broker under such a contract, can, it is held, be recovered back although the broker has brought about introductions and has incurred expense in so doing.⁹⁷

§ 118. Corruption of agents, corporate officers, etc.—Contracts for services to be rendered in attempting to corrupt, bribe or mislead the servant or agent of another, whether he be the agent of a private individual or a corporate officer or agent, as by giving him secret gratuities, fees or commissions, to induce him to disregard, slight or ignore his principal's interests, or to be less zealous and watchful in the discharge of his duty, or to assume to his principal the appearance of a disinterestedness or candor which he does not in fact feel, or to enter into the secret service of the other party, or in any other manner to violate the trust and confidence reposed in him, are obviously corrupt and void.⁹⁸

Union, 76 Ala. 251, 52 Am. Rep. 325, 20 Cent. L. Jour. 288; Johnson v. Hunt, 81 Ky. 321; In re Grobe, 127 Iowa, 121; Hellen v. Anderson, 83 Ill. App. 506; Duval v. Wellman, 124 N. Y. 156; Morrison v. Rogers, 115 Cal. 252, 56 Am. St. R. 95; Place v. Conklin, 34 App. Div. 191; Wenninger v. Mitchell, 139 Mo. App. 420; Crawford v. Russell, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 92.

See also James v. Jellison, 94 Ind. 292, 48 Am. Rep. 151.

A contract to hasten an intended marriage is a marriage brokerage contract and is void. Jangraw v. Perkins, 76 Vt. 127, 104 Am. St. R. 917.

⁹⁷ Hermann v. Charlesworth, supra. But see Chalfant v. Payton, 91 Ind. 202, 46 Am. Rep. 586. Cf. Place v. Conklin, supra.

⁹⁸ See Atlee v. Fink, 75 Mo. 100, 42 Am. Rep. 385, where an agreement secretly made by a lumber dealer with one employed to supervise the erection of buildings for another and to pass upon accounts for materials, but not to make purchases, by which the lumber dealer agreed to pay him a commission on sales made to the employer through his influence, was held void as against public policy.

So where a secret gratuity is given to the agent with the intention of influencing his mind in favor of the giver of the gratuity, and the agent on subsequently entering into a contract with such giver on behalf of his principal, is actually influenced by the gratuity in assenting to stipulations prejudicial to the interests of his principal, although the gratuity was not given directly with relation to that particular contract, the transaction is fraudulent as against the principal and the contract is voidable at his option. Smith v. Sorby, 3 Q. B. Div. 552. Even though the agent was not in fact influenced against his principal's interests, the contract is corrupt. Harrington v. Victoria Graving Dock Co., 3 Q. B. Div. 549. See also Bollman v. Loomis, 41 Conn. 581; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Railroad Co., 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 418; Summers v. Carey, 69 App. Div. 428; Sirkin v. Fourteenth Street Store, 124 App. Div. 384, reversing s. c. 54 Misc. 135, 55 Misc. 288; Smith v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 500.

A contract by an architect, who is to oversee the erection of a building for the owner, to enter into relations with a builder whose work he was thus expected to supervise, cannot be enforced. Page v. Moore, 235 Pa. 161.

Where it is part of the contract of employment of a salesman that he may give bribes or bonuses to the

These principles find frequent application, among many other cases, in those in which gifts of money, land or other things have been made or promised to the officers, agents or directors of railroad companies in consideration that they will use their influence or authority in favor of locating the railroad line or its stations or shops at particular places. The interests of the railroad company and of the public are alike imperiled by such contracts.⁹⁹ The same rules also apply to undertakings to secure, by such methods, elections or appointments to corporate offices, the taking of particular corporate action, the purchase of supplies and the like.¹

§ 119. Corruption of public officers.—The doctrines of the preceding section apply also, it scarcely needs to be said, to the case of the public officer. Many specific illustrations have already been given in the preceding pages, but it may still further be laid down generally that any contract with such an officer tending to lead him to disregard his duty, or to be less zealous in its performance, or to be more partial to one than another, or to do more than his legal duty, as, for example, by promising him extra fees or rewards for doing for the promisor what it was already his duty under the law to do, or for doing for the promisor what it was not his duty to do at all, or by promising or paying him less to induce or permit the officer to do less than his legal duty, is within the prohibited class.² agents of purchasers and that his employer will reimburse him for the amounts so expended, the whole contract of employment is unenforceable. Smith v. Crockett Co., 85 Conn. 282, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1148.

⁹⁹ Woodstock Iron Co. v. Extension Co., 129 U. S. 643, 32 L. Ed. 819; Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Bestor v. Wathen, 60 Ill. 138; Linder v. Carpenter, 62 Ill. 309; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Mathers, 71 Ill. 592, 22 Am. Rep. 122; Reed v. Johnson, 27 Wash. 42, 57 L. R. A. 404; Roby v. Carter, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 295; McCowen v. Pew, 153 Cal. 735, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 800; Sauerhering v. Rueping, 137 Wis. 407; Holladay v. Patterson, 5 Ore. 177; Peckham v. Lane, 81 Kan. 489, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 967, 19 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 369; McGuffin v. Coyle, 16 Okla. 648, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 524. To same effect: Lum v. McEwen, 56 Minn. 278.

Where the agent is an officer of a municipal corporation, the same rule applies. Railroad Co. v. Morris, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. 502, 6 O. C. D. 640, 3 Ohio Dec. 479, aff'd 57 Ohio St. 658. See also Noble v. Davison, — Ind. —, 96 N. E. 325.

¹ See Singers-Bigger v. Young, 166 Fed. 82; Dieckmann v. Robyn, 162 Mo. App. 67.

² See Mechem on Public Officers, §§ 359-378; Brown v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Ind. 655, 24 L. R. A. 206; Cheney v. Unroe, 166 Ind. 550, 117 Am. St. R. 391; Adams County v. Hunter, 78 Iowa, 328, 6 L. R. A. 615; Burek v. Abbott, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 216; Gallaher v. Lincoln, 63 Neb. 339; Montague v. Massey, 76 Va. 307; Orr v. Sanford, 74 Mo. App. 187; Leveroos v. Reis, 52 Minn. 259.

Of course, if the matter lies wholly outside the domain of his official duties, he is as free to contract as an § 120. Other cases involving same principles.—Other cases involving the same principles may be cited. Thus, an undertaking for a contingent compensation to endeavor to procure the discharge of a drafted man;³ an agreement for using personal influence with public officers to secure the favorable allowance of an account;⁴ an employment for a contingent compensation of one, who ostensibly acted only as a disinterested physician, to use his endeavors in procuring from a railroad company as large damages as possible for one who has been injured in a railroad accident;⁵ an agreement to pay one for assuming to be the confidential friend and adviser of another, and in that capacity to advise the latter to buy goods of the promisor;⁶ an employment to buy shares in order to create the appearance of a demand for them so that future purchasers may be deceived as to their value;⁷ an employment to obtain government land by fraudulent and perjured testimony;⁸ and the like,—all violate the rules of public policy and are not enforceable. This list might be greatly extended, but the cases given are sufficient to illustrate the principles.

§ 121. Agent must participate in unlawful purpose.—In order, however, to render the undertaking in these cases void, as between the principal and the agent, it is necessary that the agent should have participated in the unlawful purpose of the principal, or that, knowing of that purpose, he has directly assisted in giving it effect. Thus where the agent, as for example a broker, is employed simply to bring parties together to contract, he is not affected by the illegality of the contract which they alone make, without his aid or participation, although he knew, or had reason to believe, that they intended to enter into an unlawful arrangement.⁹ But if he makes or assists in making the unlawful contract for them, or if he brings them together for the very purpose of entering into an illegal arrangement, he is particeps criminis individual. See McCandless v. Allegheny Bessemer Steel Co., 152 Pa. 139; Edmunds v. Bullett, 59 N. J. L. 312.

³ Bowman v. Coffroth, 59 Penn. St. 19; O'Hara v. Carpenter, 23 Mich. 410.

⁴ Devlin v. Brady, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 518.

⁵ Thomas v. Caulkett, 57 Mich. 392, 58 Am. Rep. 369. See also Jerome v. Bigelow, 66 Ill. 452, 16 Am. Rep. 597.

⁶ Bollman v. Loomis, 41 Conn. 581.

To same effect: McDonnell v. Rigney, 108 Mich. 276; Labinks v. Holst, 84 N. Y. Supp. 991.

⁷ Scott v. Brown, [1892] 2 Q. B. 724.

⁸ Moore v. Moore, 130 Cal. 110, 80 Am. St. R. 78.

⁹ Roundtree v. Smith, 108 U. S. 269, 27 L. Ed. 722; Ormes v. Dauchy, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 85; Patrick v. Littell, 36 Ohio St. 79; DeGroot v. VanDuzer, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 170; Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 162, 67 Am. Dec. 132; Crane v. Whittemore, 4 Mo. App. 510.

with them.¹⁰ In the cases which come most frequently before the courts the broker is so immediately a party and so clearly a participant in their means and ends, that he cannot hope to escape the consequences.¹¹

Clearly if the undertaking was lawful on its face, and the agent was ignorant of the facts or the purpose which alone rendered it unlawful, he is not affected by its illegality.¹²

The effect of the illegality upon the mutual rights of the principal and agent will be more fully discussed in later sections.¹³

§ 122. Whole contract void when entire.—It is well settled that where a contract is an entire one, and contains some elements which are legal and others which are illegal, it cannot be so apportioned as to select and sustain those elements only which are lawful. If any part of an indivisible promise, or any part of an indivisible consideration for a promise, is illegal, the whole is void, and no action can be maintained upon it.¹⁴ Where, however, the contract is a divisible or ap-

¹⁰ "It is certainly true," says Matthews, J., in Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. at p. 510, "that a broker might negotiate such a contract without being privy to the illegal intent of the principal parties to it which renders it void, and in such a case, being innocent of any violation of law, and not suing to enforce an unlawful contract, has a meritorious ground for the recovery of compensation for services and advances. But we are also of the opinion that when the broker is privy to the unlawful design of the parties, and brings them together for the very purpose of entering into an illegal agreement, he is particeps criminis, and cannot recover for services rendered or losses incurred by himself on behalf of either in forwarding the transaction."

To same effect: Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336, 33 L. Ed. 172; Pope v. Hanke, 155 Ill. 617, 28 L. R. A. 568; Kahn v. Walton, 46 Ohio St. 195; Dows v. Glaspel, 4 N. Dak. 251; Wagner v. Hildebrand, 187 Pa. 136.

¹¹ See Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. R. 928; Lyons v. Coe, 177 Mass. 382; Cashman v. Root, 89 Cal. 373, 23 Am. St. R. 482, 12 L. R. A. 511; Sprague v. Warren, 26 Neb.

326, 3 L. R. A. 679; Morris v. Norton, 75 Fed. Rep. 912; Lully v. Morgan, 21 D. C. 88; Violett v. Mangold (Miss.), 27 So. 875; Northrup v. Bufington, 171 Mass. 468; O'Brien v. Luques, 81 Me. 46; Burt v. Myer, 71 Md. 467; Floyd v. Patterson, 72 Tex. 202, 13 Am. St. Rep. 787, aff'd 18 S. W. 654; Riordan v. Doty, 50 S. Car. 537.

¹² Roys v. Johnson, 7 Gray (Mass.), 162; Wright v. Crabbs, 78 Ind. 487; Pape v. Wright, 116 Ind. 502; Haines v. Busk, 5 Taunt. (Eng. C. P.) 521.

It is enough to invalidate if he learned of the illegality before he fully performed the contract, and then went on to complete it. Small v. Lowrey, 166 Mo. App. 108.

Upon the general question of participation in unlawful purposes, see Hubbard v. Moore, 24 La. Ann. 591, 13 Am. Rep. 128; Mahood v. Tealza, 26 La. Ann. 108, 21 Am. Rep. 546; Michael v. Bacon, 49 Mo. 474, 8 Am. Rep. 138; Harris v. Woodruff, 124 Mass. 205, 26 Am. Rep. 658; Walsh v. Hastings, 20 Colo. 243.

¹³ See post, Book IV, Ch. IV.

¹⁴ Parsons on Contracts, I, 486, et seq.; Powers v. Skinner, 34 Vt. 274, portionable and not an entire one, and the lawful elements can be separated from the unlawful, the legitimate portions may be given effect.¹⁵

§ 123. Distinction between illegal and merely void contracts—Employment to make latter.—A contract may be void, without being either illegal, immoral or opposed to public policy, as, for example, a perfectly unexceptionable contract which is declared “void” for want of written evidence by the statute of frauds. The employment of an agent to make such a contract would ordinarily be subject to no prohibition, and contracts respecting it could be enforced. Other cases falling under statutes to the same effect may be met with.¹⁶

II.

ACTS OF A PERSONAL NATURE.

§ 124. Personal duty, trust or confidence cannot be delegated to an agent.—The second exception to the general rule that whatever one may lawfully do in his own right and in his own behalf he may lawfully delegate to an agent, is, that a purely personal duty, trust or power imposed upon or vested in a particular person cannot be delegated by him to another. The considerations which declare the duty personal may be found in the statute which requires or authorizes the act, in the custom which permits it, or in the inherent nature of the act itself. Thus powers which are conferred upon one in consideration of his personal qualities or characteristics, or as the result of special trust and confidence reposed in him, or which clearly contemplate the exercise of his personal knowledge, judgment or experience, should clearly be executed by him in person.¹⁷ So an authority which is con-

80 Am. Dec. 677; Filson v. Himes, 5 Penn. St. 452, 47 Am. Dec. 422; Rose v. Truax, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 361; Humbolt County v. Stern, 136 Cal. 63; Pardridge v. Cutler, 104 Ill. App. 89; McNeese v. Carver, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 129. See also Central N. Y. Tel. Co. v. Averill, 199 N. Y. 128, 139 Am. St. R. 878, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 494.

¹⁵ Bishop on Contracts, § 487; Parsons on Contracts, I, 486-488; McVicker v. McKenzie, 136 Cal. 656; Osgood v. Central Vt. Ry. Co., 77 Vt. 334, 70 L. R. A. 930; Faist v. Dahl, 86 Neb. 669. See also Piper v. Boston & M. R. R., 75 N. H. 435.

¹⁶ See Jones v. Ames, 135 Mass. 431, where a recovery was allowed upon a contract respecting dealings upon margin which a statute made void but not illegal.

¹⁷ See Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485, 37 Am. Dec. 271; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 89; Merrill v. Trust Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 300; Litka v. Wilcox, 39 Mich. 94. Contracts involving the delegation of personal official duties are opposed to public policy. Ellis v. Batson, — Ala. —, 58 So. 193.

Even though a mother might not be liable for decoying her child away from its father, she cannot lawfully appoint an agent to do it. Her natural love for the child might limit her in doing acts only for its welfare; but the agent would not be subject to such restraints. State v. Branden- ferred, or a duty which is created by statute, may, by the express terms or necessary effect of the act, be required to be performed by the person only who is named.¹⁸ So, too, where a man is enabled to do a thing by special custom it may well be that he cannot do it by an agent, if he is not warranted by the custom in so doing.¹⁹

§ 125. Illustrations — Voting — Affidavits — Statutory requirements.—Illustrations of these principles are numerous. Thus, for example, on grounds of public policy as well as the language of the law and the inherent nature of the act, an elector who is entitled to vote at a public election must do so in person, and cannot send an agent or give a proxy to vote for him, unless there be some express provision authorizing it.²⁰

So, while, as has been seen, a statutory power is ordinarily as much within the maxim qui facit per alium facit per se as any other power²¹ yet the language of the statute, the end to be accomplished, or the evil to be remedied, may be such as to demand a personal execution. Thus where it appears from the language of a statute or from its relation to other statutes, that the legislature had clearly in mind the distinction burg, 232 Mo. 531, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 845.

¹⁸ Thus where the law for the licensing of vessels required that the oath of ownership should be taken by the owner, an oath by the master, acting as agent for the owner, is not sufficient. United States v. Bartlett, Dav. (U. S. D. C.) 9, 2 Ware, 17, 24 Fed. Cas. p. 1021.

¹⁹ See Combes' Case, 9 Coke, 75a.

²⁰ See Mechem on Public Officers, § 187. A stockholder in a corporation cannot vote by proxy unless this is authorized by statute, charter or by-law. Commonwealth v. Bringham, 103 Pa. 134, 49 Am. Rep. 119; Com. v. Detwiller, 131 Pa. 614, 7 L. R. A. 357; Market St. Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571.

²¹ Ante, § 80. The mere fact that an authority is given or an act required by a statute does not exclude the doing of the act by agent unless there is something in the statute properly leading to that result. Said Sterling, J., in Jackson v. Napper, 35 Ch. Div. 162, "I understand the law to be that, in order to make out that a right conferred by statute is to be exercised personally and not by an agent, you must find something in the act, either by way of express enactment or necessary implication, which limits the common law right of any person who is sui juris to appoint an agent to act on his behalf. Of course the legislature may do so, but, prima facie, when there is nothing said about it a person has the same right of appointing an agent for the purpose of exercising a statutory right as for any other purpose." Said Quain, J., in Reg. v. Kent, L. R. 8 Q. B. 305, "We ought not to restrict the common law rule, qui facit per alium facit per se, unless the statute makes a personal signature indispensable." To same effect: In re Whitley Partners, 32 Ch. Div. 337, where it was held that a subscriber to a corporation memorandum could sign by agent; Jackson v. Napper, 35 Ch. Div. 162, where it was held that an applicant for registration of a trade mark could act by agent; Dennison v. Jeffs, [1896] 1 Ch. 611, where it was held that a statutory consent to the dissolution of a partnership could be executed by agent.

between acts in person and those done by an agent, and yet made no provision for the latter; and, still more clearly, where a statute, like the statute of frauds, in some sections expressly provides for execution by an agent but in others which are in question has made no such provision, it is held to be a fair inference that in the latter cases personal execution was intended.²² And where a statute required an affidavit to be made concerning matters peculiarly within the knowledge of a certain person, it was held that he must make the affidavit himself, and that one made by an agent would not suffice.²³

§ 126. — Assignments—Wills—Marriage.—So it has been held that a statutory power to make an assignment for the benefit of creditors so clearly contemplated that the assignor was expected to exercise his own judgment in determining whether an assignment should be made and if so to whom and when and upon what terms, that a general power to make such an assignment could not be delegated to an agent.²⁴

The same rule would apply to the making of wills. It is expected that the testator will exercise his own judgment concerning his relations to the donees, their needs, his obligations to them, and the like; and, while he may of course have clerical assistance, he doubtless may not delegate his general authority and duty in this regard to an agent.

This is doubtless also true respecting marriage. Contracts to marry, ²² In Hyde v. Johnson, 3 Scott, 239, 2 Bing. N. C. 776, where the question was whether an admission made through an agent was sufficient under the statute of limitations, as an admission signed "by the party chargeable thereby" it was held not to be, and the court referring to other statutes, and particularly to the statute of frauds, said that it appeared "that the legislature well knew how to express the distinction between a signature by the party and a signature by his agent," and that as the statute did not provide for the latter method it was to be deemed to be excluded. But however sound the rule may be, the case seems wrong on its facts. See also Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott's N. R. 147; Toms v. Cuming, 8 Scott's N. R. 910. Held, not to apply in Arkansas. Fordyce v. Seaver, 74 Ark. 395.

So under statutes excluding actions for assurances and representations as to credit, etc., "unless such representation or assurance be made in writing signed by the party to be charged therewith," signature by an agent has been held not to suffice. Williams v. Mason, 28 L. T. (N. S.) 232; Swift v. Jewsbury, L. R. 9 Q. B. 301; Swift v. Winterbotham, L. R. 8 Q. B. 244; Hirst v. West Riding, etc., Bank, [1901] 2 K. B. 560.

²³ United States v. Bartlett, Dav. 9, 2 Ware, 17, 24 Fed. Cas., p. 1021.

Where a petition proceeds upon information and belief, a verification by an agent who is not shown to be in a position to have such information and belief, is not enough. In re Roukous, 128 Fed. 648. But otherwise where the agent is the one who has the information. In re African Farms, [1906] 1 Ch. 640. See also Bangs v. McIntosh, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 591.

²⁴ Minneapolis Trust Co. v. School District, 68 Minn. 414.

may doubtless be made through a messenger; but general authority to make marriage engagements would doubtless not be upheld; and as to the act of marriage, the substitution of an agent or representative, while at times allowed to princes,²⁵ would not be tolerated generally.²⁶

The German Civil Code contains many express provisions, some of which, at least, are probably merely declaratory of principles which would be deemed general. Thus as agent may not be employed to give parental approval to the adoption of a child, to avoid a marriage, to repudiate legitimacy, to declare legitimacy, to rescind testamentary dispositions, and the like.

Many other cases are cited in the notes.

The principle which is involved here is, in many respects, the same as that which controls the delegation of authority by an agent to a sub-agent, which is fully considered in a later chapter.²⁷

It must also be kept in mind that, as will be seen in a later section²⁸ what is done in the presence and by the direction of a person, even though so done by another person, is, in law, ordinarily regarded as the personal act of the former, and therefore not involving delegation.

²⁵ See comments on "Marriage through an Agent," in Brissaud, History of French Private Law, Continental Legal History Series, Vol. II, p. 103, note.

²⁶ As to wills and marriage see dicta in Com. v. Warehouse Co., 107 Ky. 1, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 573; Minneapolis Trust Co. v. School District, supra.

Under the statute in Illinois providing for the recording of town plats, the acknowledgment cannot be made by an agent. Gosselin v. Chicago, 103 Ill. 623; Thompson v. Maloney, 199 Ill. 276, 93 Am. St. R. 133.

Under the Indiana statute (Acts 1895, p. 248, § 9) respecting licenses to sell liquor, it was held that authority given to voters to protest—not against a license to a particular person or a license to anyone—but against licenses to such persons as the attorney might "see fit" to object, could not be delegated. Such a discretionary authority must be exercised by the voter in person. Cochell v. Reynolds, 156 Ind. 14.

Duty imposed by statute upon a committee of a political party to call an election, cannot be delegated. Montgomery v. Chelf, 118 Ky. 766, 26 Ky. Law Rep. 638.

Under the early statutes authorizing a married woman to convey her land by deed signed by her and separately acknowledged, it was held that she could not convey by an agent though his power of attorney was so separately acknowledged by her. Sumner v. Conant, 10 Vt. 9; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Lewis v. Coxe, 5 Har. (Del.) 401; Steele v. Lewis, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 48.

²⁷ See post, Ch. VI.

²⁸ See post, § 208.

CHAPTER IV

WHO MAY BE PRINCIPAL OR AGENT; AND HEREIN OF JOINT PRINCIPALS AND AGENTS

§ 127. Purpose of this chapter.

I. WHO MAY BE PRINCIPAL.

- 128. What considerations involved.
- 129. General rule—Every person competent to act in his own right.
- 130. Private corporations.
- 131. Public corporations.
- 132. Partnerships.
- 133. Incompetency—In general.

1. Persons Naturally Incompetent.

- 134. Persons of unsound mind—Idiots, Lunatics, Habitual Drunkards, etc.
- 135. — Contracts through agents usually voidable.
- 136. — Torts of their servants or agents.
- 137. Drunken persons as principals.
- 138. Ratification or disaffirmance by these persons.

2. Persons Legally Incompetent.

- 139. Who included.
- 140. Infants as principals.
- 141. — Infant's appointment of agent generally held void.
- 142. — Ratification by infant.
- 143. — Further concerning rule.
- 144. — Dissent—Exceptions.
- 145. — How in reason.
- 146. — Effect of proposed rule.
- 147. — Liability of infant for torts of agent or servant.
- 148. Married woman as principal—Not at common law—Now generally by statute.

- 149. — How agent appointed by—General effect.

- 150. — Liability of married woman for torts of agents or servants.

- 151. Aliens—Alien enemies.

II. WHO MAY BE AGENTS.

- 152. In general.

1. Competency in General.

- 153. What questions involved.
- 154. Less competency required in agent than in principal.
- 155. Infant as agent.
- 156. Child as agent of parent.
- 157. Parent as agent of child.
- 158. Slaves as agents.
- 159. Women.
- 160. Married women—As agents for third person.
- 161. Wife as agent for husband—
 - 1. In domestic affairs.
- 162-164. — Wife as domestic manager.
- 165. — Authority when no domestic establishment.
- 166. — Wife may bind herself although domestic manager.
- 167. Wife as agent for husband—
 - 2. In non-domestic affairs.
- 168. — Wife as husband's sub-agent.
- 169. Husband as agent for his wife.
- 170. — Usual attributes attach.
- 171. — Proof required.
- 172. — Statutory provisions.
- 173. Corporations as agents.
- 174. Partnerships as agents.
- 175. Alien enemies as agents.

2. Disqualification from Adverse Interest.

- 176. What here included.
- 177. One cannot be agent if duty and interest conflict.
- 178. One cannot usually be agent of both parties.
- 179. One cannot be both party and agent for opposite party.
- 180. Other party as agent to sign memorandum under Statute of Frauds.

3. Incompetence from Lack of Professional Standing.

- 181. Lack of professional standing may disqualify.

III. JOINT PRINCIPALS.

- 182. One person as agent for several.

1. Appointment by Several Principals.

- 183. Usually all must unite in appointing.
- 184. — Joint power must be contemplated.
- 185. Partners.
- 186. Joint tenants and tenants in common.

- 187. Associations — Clubs — Societies — Committees.

- 188. — How assent may be given.

- 189. — Liability may be limited to funds.

- 190. — Illustrations.

- 191. — Assent inferred from conduct.

- 192. — Rules stated.

- 193. Inchoate corporations.

2. Execution in Behalf of Joint Principals.

- 194. Authority usually to be executed in behalf of all jointly.

IV. JOINT AGENTS.

- 195. Authority to several agents.

- 196. Legal effect of appointing joint agents.

- 197. — Notice to one—Liability of one for acts of others.

- 198. Private joint agency must usually be executed by all.

- 199. Public agency may be executed by majority.

- 200. — Committees — Boards — Directors — Majority of quorum.

§ 127. Purpose of this chapter.—It is proposed in this chapter to determine who are competent to enter into the relation of principal and agent, and to consider briefly the special rules which apply to those cases in which more than one person undertakes to act in either capacity. In the execution of this purpose there will be considered: I. Who may be principal; II. Who may be agent; III. Joint principals, and IV. Joint agents.

I.

WHO MAY BE PRINCIPAL.

§ 128. What considerations involved.—As has been already seen, the appointment of an agent, as distinguished from a servant, is made in contemplation of business dealing, through that agent, on account of the principal with third persons. There are thus, as has previously been pointed out, three persons and three sets of relations involved in the appointment and authorization of an agent, viz.: the principal, the agent, and the third person with whom the agent is to deal, and the relations and obligations of each one of these to every other one. This fact bears directly upon the subject matter of the present section. From the standpoint of the principal therefore there are two aspects; as between the principal and the agent, who is competent to be a principal? and as between the principal and the third person, who is competent to be a principal? If contractual obligations are to be entered into by the proposed principal both with the agent and the third person, the considerations will ordinarily be the same. If contractual obligations are to be entered into with one of them, but not necessarily with the other, the considerations may differ. If it be assumed that the characteristic of agency as distinguished from service, is that the agent is to create or modify or affect contractual relations between the principal and the third person, then, from that side of it at least, the principal must be one who has the contractual capacity to so deal with the third person. If contractual relations between the principal and the agent are also required, then contractual capacity adequate to that end is also requisite.

If service instead of agency is contemplated, the case will be different. The obligations here to third persons at least may often be in tort rather than in contract and a different degree of capacity may be required, or may suffice, in this instance from that involved in the other.

Inasmuch as agency is usually a means rather than an end, the most important aspect is usually, who can act by agent rather than who can appoint an agent. Taking up this aspect first—§ 129. The general rule—Every person competent to act in his own right.—It may be stated as the general rule that by the common law every person who is competent to act in his own right and in his own behalf may act by an agent.¹ It has been seen also that as a general rule a person may do by agent whatever he may do in person. The reverse of this is also true in general, viz.: that a person who is incompetent to act in his own right and in his own behalf cannot act by agent; neither can one do by agent what he cannot do in person.

The relation, as has been seen, is created primarily for the purpose of investing the agent with authority to act for and represent the principal in the transaction of business. His purpose is ordinarily to bring ¹ Combes' Case, 9 Co. Rep. 75: Com. Dig. "Attorney," c. I.

In the language of the codes of California, Dakota and Georgia, "Any person, having capacity to contract, may appoint an agent." Cal. Code, § 2296; Dak. Code, § 1338; Ga. Code, § 2181.

about, or in some way to affect or modify, contractual relations between his principal and third persons. For the time and to the extent limited, the agent is to be the alter ego of the principal; his act is, in law, to be the act of the principal, and the capacity and character in which the agent is to act are those of the principal. It follows, then, as a necessary conclusion, that the same kind and degree of legal competency which would be requisite were the principal present and acting in his own person, are in general necessary when he is present and acts in the person of his agent.

The converse of these principles, as it finds expression in the general rule already given, also follows as a necessary sequence, that he who has this capacity and who is thus competent to act in person in a given case, may, unless restrained by some statutory or other legal prohibition, act in that case through the agent of his choice.

§ 130. Private corporations.—The same rule applies ordinarily to artificial persons authorized to enter into contractual relations. Thus authority to appoint the necessary and proper agents for the transaction of the corporate business is usually conferred upon corporations in express terms, but in the absence of such express authority, the power to appoint will be implied. This power is a necessary incident to the power to carry on the business for which the corporation was created, inasmuch as it is only through the employment of agents that the executive functions of the corporation can be exercised.²

The existence of the agency and the effect of the agent's acts in these cases are subject to the same rules which apply to individuals. Thus it is said in a recent case, "It is well settled that a corporation may contract and be contracted with through an agent whose authority may be implied from facts and circumstances showing recognition or ratification by the corporation. Indeed, it seems that the same pre-

² Protection Life Ins. Co. v. Foote, 79 Ill. 361; Hurlbut v. Marshall, 62 Wis. 590; St. Andrews Land Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Fla. 192, 54 Am. Dec. 340; Lyman v. White River Bridge Co., 2 Aik. (Vt.) 225, 16 Am. Dec. 705; Washburn v. Nashville, etc., R. R. Co., 3 Head (Tenn.), 638, 75 Am. Dec. 784; Kitchen v. Cape Girardeau & State L. R. Co., 59 Mo. 514.

As is said in Washburn v. Nashville, etc., R. R. Co., supra, "The corporation of necessity acts through the instrumentality of its officers and agents. If not prohibited by the charter, it may delegate its authority to its officers and agents so far as may be necessary to effect the purposes of its creation. It must act in this mode or not at all."

Extended citation of the cases upon this point belongs rather to works on Corporations. See Morawetz on Corporations, I, § 503; Ang. & Ames on Corporations, § 284; Thompson on Corporations, V, § 5832.

sumptions are applicable in this respect to corporations as to natural persons.”³

§ 131. Public corporations.—The rule applies also to public corporations, towns, cities, states. Any one of these having authority to act in a matter or manner, for which a constituted public agent or officer is not by law provided, may act through agents, general or special, as the exigencies of the case may require.⁴

§ 132. Partnerships.—The same general principle applies to partnerships. It is, of course, competent for the partners to provide in their partnership articles, what agents shall be employed and in what manner. So all of the partners acting together may undoubtedly appoint agents for a purpose or in a manner other than that originally contemplated or prescribed. And in the absence of restrictions in the articles, each partner also has implied power to employ for the firm such servants and agents as are necessary and proper for the transaction of the partnership business.⁵

The rule applies to limited partnerships as well as to ordinary partnerships.⁶

§ 133. Incompetency—In general.—Incompetency to enter into this relation may arise either (a) from some defect in the mental equipment of the party or (b) from the operation of law. The former type may be chronic or temporary, curable or incurable, and may arise from a variety of causes. This form of incompetency is sometimes termed natural, while that arising from the operation of the law is termed legal incompetency.

Of the first kind are the defects of idiots, lunatics and drunken persons; while aliens, infants and married women afford illustrations of the latter.

The effect of some of these forms of incompetency, so far as they are applicable to the law of agency, will be noticed here.

³ Moyer v. East Shore Terminal Co. (1894) 41 S. Car. 300, 44 Am. St. R. 709.

⁴ See Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. Ed. 302; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1.

⁵ Beckham v. Drake, 9 M. & W. 79; Banner Tobacco Co. v. Jenison, 48 Mich. 459; Harvey v. McAdams, 32 Mich. 472; Wheatley v. Tutt, 4 Kan. 240; Charles v. Eshleman, 5 Colo. 107; Frye v. Saunders, 21 Kan. 26, 30 Am. Rep. 421; Coons v. Renick, 11 Tex. 134, 60 Am. Dec. 230; Carley v. Jenkins, 46 Vt. 721; Durgin v. Somers, 117 Mass. 55; Burgan v. Lyell, 2 Mich. 102; St. Andrews Bay Land Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Fla. 192, 54 Am. Dec. 340; Lucas v. Bank of Darien, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 280; Clark v. Slate Valley R. Co. (1890), 136 Pa. 408, 10 L. R. A. 238.

⁶ Park Bros. & Co. v. Kelly Axe Mfg. Co. 49 Fed. 618.

1. Persons Naturally Incompetent

§ 134. Persons of unsound mind—Idiots—Lunatics—Habitual drunkards, etc.—The question of the contractual capacity of persons of unsound mind presents many complications: The person may have been incompetent from birth; his unsoundness of mind may be partial only; it may not be evident to the casual observer; he may never have been judicially declared insane, and the like. The contract in question may have been one for necessities; it may have been entered into while the other party was ignorant of the insanity and may have been so far performed that the parties can not be restored to their original position.

It is often said, especially in the older cases, that the contracts⁷ and particularly the deeds⁸ of the insane person, whether made before or after an adjudication of insanity, are void; but the prevailing view according to the modern authorities is that such contracts, made before adjudication, are at most merely voidable and not void,⁹ except in cases where the infirmity is so radical and apparent as to destroy any semblance of a consenting mind. Fair contracts for necessities may be enforced to the extent of their value where the necessities were supplied in good faith;¹⁰ and, by the weight of authority, an executed contract, fairly made in ignorance of the insanity, can not be set aside on the part of the insane party, unless he restores what he may have ⁷ See American Trust & Banking Co. v. Boone, 102 Ga. 202, 66 Am. St. R. 167, 40 L. R. A. 250.

⁸ Van Deusen v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 378 (though this is not now the rule in New York: Blinn v. Schwarz, 177 N. Y. 252, 101 Am. St. R. 806); Edwards v. Davenport, 20 Fed. 756; German Savings Society v. De Lashmutter, 67 Fed. 399, following Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. 9, 21 L. Ed. 73; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 129 Ala. 279. See also Farley v. Parker, 6 Ore. 105, 25 Am. Rep. 504; Rogers v. Blackwell, 49 Mich. 192; Hanley v. National Loan Co., 44 W. Va. 450; Owings' Case, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 370 17 Am. Dec. 311; Brigham v. Fayerweather, 144 Mass. 48; Valpey v. Rea, 130 Mass. 384; Halley v. Troester, 72 Mo. 73; Galloway v. Hendon, 131 Ala. 280.

⁹ Blinn v. Schwarz, 177 N. Y. 252, 101 Am. St. R. 806; French Lumbering Co. v. Theriault, 107 Wis. 627, 51 L. R. A. 910, 81 Am. St. R. 856; Flach v. Gottschalk Co., 88 Md. 368, 71 Am. St. Rep. 418, 42 L. R. A. 745; Jordan v. Kirkpatrick, 251 Ill. 116; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Sellers, 154 Ind. 370, 77 Am. St. R. 481, citing many other Indiana cases: Castro v. Geil, 110 Cal. 292, 52 Am. St. Rep. 84; First Nat. Bank v. McGinty, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 539; Breckenridge's Heirs v. Ormsby, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 236, 19 Am. Dec. 71. See also Amos v. Amer. Trust & Sav. Bank, 221 Ill. 100; Gingrich v. Rogers, 69 Neb. 527.

¹⁰ Richardson v. Strong, 13 Ired. (N. C.) 106, 55 Am. Dec. 430; In re Renz, 79 Mich. 216. See also McKee v. Ward (Ky.), 38 S. W. 704, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 987; McKee v. Purnell (Ky.), 38 S. W. 705, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 879.

received under it.¹¹ After an adjudication of insanity, however, contracts entered into are usually held void.¹² Though ordinarily insane, the person affected may make a valid contract during a sane interval.¹³ Within the operation of these rules are to be included persons whose mental powers have been permanently impaired by dissipation or other cause attributable to their own acts, as well as those whose incapacity arises from causes beyond their own control.¹⁴

§ 135. — Contracts through agents usually voidable.—The considerations above set forth are applicable to the question of the appointment of an agent by an insane person and of the liability of an insane person for an act done by his alleged agent. Usually such an ¹¹ Molton v. Camroux, 4 Exch. 17; Beavan v. McDonnell, 9 Exch. 309; Campbell v. Hooper, 3 Smale & G. 153; Moss v. Tribe, 3 Fost. & F. 297; Blinn v. Schwarz, 177 N. Y. 252, 101 Am. St. R. 806; Feigenbaum v. Howe, 32 (N. Y.) Misc. 514; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hunt, 79 N. Y. 541; Hick v. Marshall, 8 Hun, 327; Riggs v. American Tract Society, 84 N. Y. 330; Carter v. Beckwith, 128 N. Y. 312; Young v. Stevens, 48 N. H. 133, 2 Am. Rep. 202, 97 Am. Dec. 592; Behrens v. McKenzie, 23 Iowa, 333, 92 Am. Dec. 428; Abbott v. Creal, 56 Iowa 175; Alexander v. Haskins, 68 Iowa, 73; Harrison v. Otley, 101 Iowa, 652; McCormick v. Littler, 85 Ill. 62, 28 Am. Rep. 610; Ronan v. Bluhm, 173 Ill. 277; Fay v. Burditt, 81 Ind. 433, 42 Am. Rep. 142; Rusk v. Fenton, 14 Bush (Ky.), 490, 29 Am. Rep. 413; Wilder v. Weakley, 34 Ind. 181; Northwestern Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Blankenship, 94 Ind. 535; Copenrath v. Kienby, 83 Ind. 18; Beals v. See, 10 Penn. St. 56, 49 Am. Dec. 573; Yauger v. Skinner, 14 N. J. Eq. 389; Gribben v. Maxwell, 34 Kans. 8, 55 Am. Rep. 233; Bank v. Sneed, 97 Tenn. 120, 56 Am. St. R. 788; Strodder v. Granite Co., 99 Ga. 595; More v. Calkins, 85 Cal. 177; Riggan v. Green, 80 N. Car. 236, 30 Am. Rep. 77; National Metal Edge Box Co. v. Vanderveer, — Vt. —, 82 Atl. 837.

But see Hovey v. Hobson, 53 Me.

451, 89 Am. Dec. 705; Gibson v. Soper, 6 Gray (Mass.), 279, 66 Am. Dec. 414; Bond v. Bond, 7 Allen (Mass.), 1; Chew v. Bank, 14 Md. 318; Rogers v. Blackwell, 49 Mich. 192; Edwards v. Davenport, 20 Fed. Rep. 756; Henry v. Fine, 23 Ark. 417.

In Jordan v. Kirkpatrick, 251 Ill. 116, a note and mortgage upon land executed by an insane woman, in a transaction in which her husband purported to act as her agent and having received the money abandoned her, were set aside without requiring her to return the money. The court held that the duty to restore was limited to that which the lunatic had received.

¹² See Carter v. Beckwith, 128 N. Y. 312; Boyer v. Berryman, 123 Ind. 451; American Trust & Banking Co. v. Boone, 102 Ga. 202, 66 Am. St. R. 167, 40 L. R. A. 250; Hovey v. Hobson, 53 Me. 451, 89 Am. Dec. 705; Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425.

¹³ McCormick v. Littler, 85 Ill. 62, 28 Am. Rep. 610; Beckwith v. Butler, 1 Wash. (Va.) 224; Jones v. Perkins, 5 B. Monr. (Ky.) 222; In re Gangwere, 14 Penn. St. 417, 53 Am. Dec. 554; Tozer v. Saturlee, 3 Grant (Penn.), 162; Lilly v. Waggoner, 27 Ill. 395.

¹⁴ Bliss v. Railroad Co., 24 Vt. 424; Menkins v. Lightner, 18 Ill. 282; Bush v. Breinig, 113 Penn. St. 310, 57 Am. Rep. 469.

act is voidable but not void if done before an adjudication of insanity.¹⁵ In a few cases his formal power of attorney to confess judgment or convey land is held to be void,¹⁶ but no very satisfactory reason for this view is apparent and the weight of modern authority regards this act as standing upon the same footing as the making of the conveyance itself and to be voidable rather than void.¹⁷ A fair contract, made in ignorance of the insanity, with the agent of an insane person, would, doubtless, in accordance with the general rule, only be set aside upon the application of the insane person upon condition that he restore what he had in fact received under it.¹⁸

¹⁵ Blinn v. Schwarz, 177 N. Y. 252, 101 Am. St. R. 806; Wamsley v. Darragh, 12 N. Y. Misc. 199; Merritt v. Merritt, 43 App. Div. 68; Reams v. Taylor, 31 Utah, 288, 120 Am. St. R. 930, 11 Ann. Cas. 51, 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 436.

Void after adjudication. Gillet v. Shaw, 117 Md. 508, 83 Atl. 394; Pearl v. McDowell, 26 Ky. (3 J. J. Marsh.) 658, 20 Am. Dec. 199.

The most elaborate treatment of the question is to be found in McLaughlin v. Daily Telegraph Co., 1 Commonwealth L. R. 243, a case decided by the High Court of Australia (Appeal Refused [1904] A. C. 776). In this case a married man, insane and incapable of transacting any business (though he had lucid intervals) was induced to give an absolute power of attorney to his wife, who knew the facts but was acting in good faith, authorizing her to dispose of his real or personal estate. Acting under this, the wife sold and transferred certain shares of stock held by her husband in the defendant and other companies, both the buyers and the corporations acting in good faith and in ignorance of the insanity. The husband, having recovered his sanity, brought suit to cancel these transfers and to be reinstated upon the books. Held, that the power of attorney was void; the transfers invalid, and the plaintiff entitled to relief. The plaintiff however, offered in his bill to reimburse the defendants to the extent of all moneys received by his pretended agent as the proceeds of the sale, and the decree was made upon this basis. See also McLaughlin v. City Bank of Sydney, 9 N. S. Wales, 319, cited in a following note.

¹⁶ Dexter v. Hall, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) 9, 21 L. Ed. 73; McClun v. McClun, 176 Ill. 376; Plaster v. Rigney, 97 Fed. Rep. 12.

See also Elias v. Enterprise Building & Loan Ass'n, 46 S. C. 188; Clay v. Hammond, 199 Ill. 370, 93 Am. St. Rep. 146.

¹⁷ Williams v. Sapieha, 94 Tex. 430; Wamsley v. Darragh, 12 N. Y. Misc. 199.

¹⁸ In Jordan v. Kirkpatrick, 251 Ill. 116, referred to supra, where a married woman while insane had, through the intervention of her husband who assumed to act as her agent, made a note and mortgage upon which he obtained the money and abandoned her, she was allowed to disaffirm without restoring the money, which she had never received.

In McLaughlin v. City Bank of Sydney, 9 New South Wales State Rep. 319, where a married woman, while her husband was insane and incompetent to act, obtained from him a power of attorney under which she raised money and pledged and mortgaged his property, it was held that he could repudiate the acts, but that the court, upon a proper showing, would work out a subrogation to the extent that the money had been used to pay his legally binding debts. See

§ 136. ——— Torts of servants or agents.—With respect of the torts of the alleged servant or agent of an insane person, it is held that, while the insane person's estate may be charged for his own torts, it is not liable for the tort of one who assumed to be his servant or agent.¹⁹

§ 137. Drunken persons as principals.—The fact of being a drunkard, or mere drunkenness at the time, does not of itself incapacitate.²⁰ There must be drunkenness, or the impairment of intellect as the result of drunkenness, to such an extent that the person is incapable of comprehending the nature and effect of his act.²¹

Sober interval. The contract of a habitual drunkard, however, is binding, if made during a sober interval.²² His contracts of agency, and his contracts through an agent, of course stand upon the same ground.

§ 138. Ratification or disaffirmance.—A contract made by a party during a period of incompetence may be ratified or disaffirmed by him after his competency is restored.²³ And this disaffirmance may be effected by the incompetent's guardian or committee also,²⁴ or by his personal representative after the incompetent's death.²⁵ Upon this question, the rules governing contracts generally apply.²⁶ also McLaughlin v. Daily Telegraph Co., 1 Commonwealth L. R. 243, referred to in the second preceding note.

¹⁹ Gillet v. Shaw, 117 Md. 508, 83 Atl. 394; Ward v. Rogers, 51 N. Y. Misc. 299; Reams v. Taylor, 31 Utah, 288, 120 Am. St. R. 930, 11 Ann. Cas. 51, 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 436.

²⁰ Pickett v. Sutter, 5 Cal. 412; Henry v. Ritenour, 31 Ind. 136; Caulkins v. Fry, 35 Conn. 170; Reynolds v. Dechaums, 24 Tex. 174; Cavender v. Waddingham, 5 Mo. App. 457; Joest v. Williams, 42 Md. 565, 13 Am. Rep. 377; Miller v. Finley, 26 Mich. 249, 12 Am. Rep. 306.

²¹ Bates v. Ball, 72 Ill. 108; Van Wyck v. Brasher, 81 N. Y. 260; Schramm v. O'Connor, 98 Ill. 539; Bush v. Breinig, 113 Pa. 310, 57 Am. Rep. 469.

²² Riteer's Appeal, 59 Pa. 9.

²³ Gibson v. Soper, 6 Gray (Mass.),

279, 66 Am. Dec. 414; Bush v. Breinig, 113 Pa. 310, 57 Am. Rep. 469; Allis v. Billings, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 415, 39 Am. Dec. 744; Arnold v. Richmond Iron Works, 1 Gray (Mass.), 434; Carrier v. Sears, 4 Allen (Mass.), 337; Howe v. Howe, 99 Mass. 98; White v. Graves, 107 Mass. 328; Blakeley v. Blakeley, 33 N. J. Eq. 508; Nichol v. Thomas, 53 Ind. 53; Mohr v. Tulip, 40 Wis. 82; Elston v. Jasper, 45 Tex. 409; Turner v. Rusk, 53 Md. 65; Northwestern Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Blankenship, 94 Ind. 535; Carpenter v. Rodgers, 61 Mich. 384, 1 Am. St. Rep. 595.

²⁴ McClain v. Davis, 77 Ind. 419; Campbell v. Kuhn, 45 Mich. 513, 40 Am. Rep. 479; Halley v. Troester, 72 Mo. 73; Moore v. Hershey, 90 Pa. 196; Gingrich v. Rogers, 69 Neb. 527.

²⁵ Campbell v. Kuhn, supra; Schuff v. Ransom, 79 Ind. 458.

²⁶ See Bishop on Contracts, § 974.

2. Persons Legally Incompetent.

§ 139. Who included.—Of the persons who may be regarded as legally incompetent the most important are the infant, the married woman, and the alien. The incompetency of the infant is of a mixed sort. During his early years, his incapacity is natural; this disability gradually fades away as he approaches maturity and he may in fact become fully competent before he reaches the legal age of maturity. Here however the legal incapacity attaches to him, and continues with him until the statutory age has been attained,—an age which may be and is more or less arbitrarily fixed. The incapacity of the married woman and the alien is purely artificial and depends wholly upon the rules of law which prescribe it.

§ 140. Infants as principals.—The capacity of an infant to enter into contractual and business obligations is limited; and the law respecting it is far from being in a satisfactory condition. Speaking generally an infant has, for his own protection, a limited power to charge himself for benefits actually received of the sort termed “necessaries,” though it is perhaps questionable whether this obligation is not quasi-contractual rather than contractual. Even in this field the infant is not bound by executory contracts for necessities not actually received. Outside of this field of necessities, the general rule is that the acts and contracts of the infant are voidable by him at his election.

If it be now attempted to apply these general rules to the question of agency for an infant principal, there would be at once two aspects: the relation between the infant principal and his agent, and the relation of the infant principal to third persons. As to the first, unless there might be cases in which the intervention of an agent to procure necessities might be regarded as itself a necessary, all contractual obligations between the infant and his agent, such as those of employment, payment, and the like, would be voidable at the infant's option.

With reference to third persons, the general rule of agency would permit the infant to act through an agent to the same extent that he could act in person; that is to say, most of his acts and contracts done or made through an agent would be voidable by the infant, just as they would be if done by him in person, but they would not be void. Contracts for necessities actually received, made through an agent, would bind the infant, either contractually or quasi contractually, as they would if he had made them in person.

In the analogous field of partnership, it is settled that the infant's partnership contracts are not void. He may be a partner and exercise all the rights of one, and while he may escape personal responsibility on his contract either to his copartner or to creditors, it is held that he can not, in the absence of fraud, recover what he paid for being admitted as a partner, nor can he withdraw his contributions to capital until the firm debts have been paid.

Notwithstanding these considerations, however, this is not the way in which the actual law upon the subject has been developed, and a principle quite different in theory, though perhaps not radically different in result, has been adopted.

§ 141. ——— Infant's appointment of agent generally held void.— It has been regarded as the settled doctrine of the law that an infant cannot empower an agent or attorney to act for him.²⁷ Indeed, the rule deduced from the authorities has been said to be that the only act which an infant is under a legal incapacity to perform is the appointment of an attorney, or, in fact, an agent of any kind.²⁸ The reason upon which this rule depends, has been stated by the learned editors of the American Leading Cases, as follows: "The constituting of an attorney by one whose acts are in their nature voidable, is repugnant and impossible, for it is imparting a right which the principal does not possess,—that of doing valid acts. If the acts when done by the attorney remain voidable at the option of the infant, the power of attorney is not operative according to its terms; if they are binding upon the infant, then he has done through the agency of another what he could not have done directly—binding acts. The fundamental principle of law in regard to infants requires that the infant should have nahan v. Alderdice, 4 Harr. (Del.) 99; Roof v. Stafford, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 179; Flexner v. Dickerson, 72 Ala. 318; Glass v. Glass, 76 Ala. 368; Sadler v. Robinson, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 520; Philpot v. Bingham, 55 Ala. 435; Pyle v. Cravens, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 17; Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 120; Wainwright v. Wilkinson, 62 Md. 146; Deford v. State, 30 Md. 200; State v. Field, 139 Mo. App. 20; Turner v. Bondalier, 31 Mo. App. 582; Poston v. Williams, 99 Mo. App. 513; Holden v. Curry, 85 Wis. 504; Mill-saps v. Estes, 134 N. C. 486; Lutes v. Thompson, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 451; Knox v. Flack, 22 Penn. St. 337; Doe v. Roberts, 16 M. & W. 778.

²⁷ Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124; Whitney v. Dutch, 14 Mass. 457, 7 Am. Dec. 229; Lawrence v. McArter, 10 Ohio, 37; Fonda v. Van Borne, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 631, 30 Am. Dec. 77; Trueblood v. Trueblood, 8 Ind. 195, 65 Am. Dec. 756; Pickler v. State, 18 Ind. 266; Tapley v. McGee, 6 Ind. 56; Hiestand v. Kuns, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 345; Fetrow v. Wiseman, 40 Ind. 155; Burns v. Smith, 29 Ind. App. 181, 94 Am. St. R. 268; Cole v. Pennoyer, 14 Ill. 158; Robbins v. Mount, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 553; Mustard v. Wohlford's Heirs, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 329, 76 Am. Dec. 209; Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 9, 21 L. Ed. 73; Bennett v. Davis, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 393; Robinson v. Weeks, 56 Me. 102; Wamble v. Foote, 2 Dak. 1; Waples v. Hastings, 3 Harr. (Del.) 403; Car-

²⁸ See note to Tucker v. Moreland, 1 Am. Lead. Cases, 224, 5th Ed. 280.

the power of affirming such acts done by the attorney as he chooses, and avoiding others, at his option; but this involves an immediate contradiction, for to possess the right of availing himself of any of the acts, he must ratify the power of attorney, and if he ratifies the power, all that was done under it is confirmed. If he affirms part of a transaction, he at once confirms the power, and thereby, against his intention, affirms the whole transaction. Such personal and discretionary legal capacity as an infant is vested with is, therefore, in its nature, incapable of delegation; and the rule that an infant cannot make an attorney is, perhaps, not an arbitrary or accidental exception to a principle, but a direct, logical necessity of that principle. But if the considerations suggested as the foundation of this rule be not satisfactory, the rule itself is established by a conclusive weight of authority."²⁹

This reasoning, as will be observed, is based upon the theory that an act of an infant done through an agent must in any event be more binding than if done by the infant in person; and that the assumption is that the infant can not do voidable acts through an agent as well as in person.

§ 142. — Ratification by infant.—Upon the principle that one cannot subsequently affirm what he could not previously have authorized, or that he cannot affirm a void act, it has likewise been held that an infant cannot ratify and confirm what one, as an agent, has assumed to do in his name.³⁰ Neither, if it be void, could he ratify it after he becomes of age.³¹

²⁹ Id. 247, 5th Ed. 305.

³⁰ Fonda v. Van Horne, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 631, 30 Am. Dec. 77, in which the plaintiff was an infant whose cow had been sold by her father. Later he bought another cow and gave it to her in place of the first. The father's creditors have the second cow and the plaintiff claims it against them. But the court held that she could set up no claim at all to second cow (her father was insolvent at the time and could not make a gift) even although she had subsequently assented to a sale and replacement on her behalf, for infant could not have an agent, the appointment was void and could not be ratified.

³¹ Poston v. Williams, 99 Mo. App. 513, the infant plaintiff sued in replevin to recover a horse which the defendant had received in trading, as the plaintiff's agent, the plaintiff's horse. Recovery was denied upon the ground that replevin would be an action in the nature of affirmance and that an infant's appointment of an agent was a void act incapable of ratification. But see Ward v. Steamboat, 8 Mo. 358.

Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124, a father without the infant son's knowledge made in the infant's name a contract for purchase of real estate and made part payment under the contract. The son when he learned of the contract sought to call the contract his own but on the ground of infancy to avoid it and recover the part payments that had been made. Upon the ground that an infant cannot authorize an agent, and therefore cannot ratify an agent's acts, that all

In the few cases, however, in which the act of appointment or the act done by the agent is deemed voidable only, the former infant after maturity may ratify and confirm.³² If the more liberal rule herein-after contended for should prevail, there would be no reason why the infant might not ratify, where he could authorize, even during minority.³³ such attempts are entirely void, the suit was dismissed.

Doe v. Roberts, 16 M. & W. 778. An executor on behalf of infant remaindermen accepted rent from a tenant who had held from year to year under the life tenant and with right to a notice to quit. It was held that this acceptance of rent did not make a similar contract between the infants and the tenant valid, and that the infants might bring ejectment without previous notice to quit. Baron Parke said: "If an infant appoints a person to make a lease it does not bind the infant, neither does his ratification bind him. There is no doubt about the law."

³¹ In Trueblood v. Trueblood, 8 Ind. 195, 65 Am. Dec. 756, wherein a father purporting to act for his minor son made a bond for a deed of the infant's land and it was claimed that the son, after becoming of age, had ratified it, it was held that it was not possible to ratify it. The bond, not being the act of the infant himself (in which case it would have been merely voidable) but an act by an alleged agent,—which an infant cannot have—was void, and there cannot be ratification of a void act.

See also Lutes v. Thompson, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 451; Weidenhammer v. McAdams, — Ind. App. —, 98 N. E. 883.

³² See Whitney v. Dutch, 14 Mass. 457, 7 Am. Dec. 229; (the defendant had, while still an infant, made through an agent a promissory note, and after he had attained his majority had acknowledged it and promised to pay. This ratification was held sufficient to bind the defendant).

Hastings v. Dollarhide, 24 Cal. 195; (it was held that one who after majority ratifies an endorsement made on his behalf by an agent during principal's infancy is bound by the endorsement).

Coursolle v. Weyerhauser, 69 Minn. 328 (the court held that a power of attorney, given after majority, for the purpose of ratifying the locating of a claim and a sale of land under a power of attorney which had been given before majority, was good as a ratification and binding upon the giver).

Ferguson v. Houston, etc., Ry. Co., 73 Tex. 344; (where it was held that even if the infant could not ratify the act after maturity, his conduct since that time might be sufficient to estop him).

In Stone v. Ellis, 69 Tex. 325, it was held that there might be ratification after maturity.

In Sims v. Smith, 99 Ind. 469, 50 Am. Rep. 99, it was held that if an infant married woman makes a deed with her husband of her land and authorizes him to deliver it, and he delivers it with her consent after she becomes of age, she is bound.

For ratification, or estoppel to question, where sales made without authority by a guardian are approved after wards come of age, see Tracy v. Roberts, 88 Me. 310, 51 Am. St. R. 394; Deford v. Mercer, 24 Iowa, 118, 92 Am. Dec. 460.

³³ In Johannson v. Gudmundson, 19 Manitoba L. Rep. 83, 11 West. L. Rep. 176, where the father of the infant plaintiffs paid the defendant a certain sum of money at their request upon a contract in writing by which § 143. — Further of rule.—This rule, as has been seen, as well as the rule governing the contracts of infants generally, finds its reason in the law's desire to guard and protect the interests of the infant. Like other rules, its rigor should be abated when the necessity for it no longer exists.

It is difficult to harmonize all of the cases upon this subject, but an examination of the facts of some of the leading ones will disclose the occasions upon which it was invoked, and throw light upon the limits of its application.

Thus it is held that an infant's power of attorney to sell or mortgage his lands;³⁴ his warrant of attorney to confess judgment against him;³⁵ his assent to the act of another in assuming as the infant's agent to sell his property;³⁶ or to bind him to a purchase of real estate;³⁷ his authority to another to represent him in court;³⁸ and any letter of attorney not conveying a present interest,³⁹ are void.

the defendant agreed to sell and convey to the plaintiffs a certain farm, it was held that the infants could so far ratify the act as to be able to recover damages for the breach of the contract. One judge regarded the father as a messenger rather than an agent, and also said that the contract could be enforced as a trust for the benefit of the infants. The other two judges held that an infant could always appoint an agent to do an act for the infant's benefit, and that he could even during infancy do it by subsequent ratification.

In Ward v. Steamboat, 8 Mo. 358, the owners of a boat, some of whom were minors, sued under a statute for injury to the reversionary interest; in order to show that their interest was reversionary, they had to rely upon a lease which was executed by the adult owners only; but the court held that the suit might be maintained, and said that an infant might affirm a contract made for him, and that then no one else can question its validity. But see Poston v. Williams, 99 Mo. App. 513.

³⁴ Lawrence v. McArter, 10 Ohio, 37; Philpot v. Bingham, 55 Ala. 435; Trueblood v. Trueblood, 8 Ind. 195, 65 Am. Dec. 756; Thompson v. Lyon, 20 Mo. 155, 61 Am. Dec. 599; Mort- gage: Rocks v. Cornell, 21 R. I. 532; Sawyer v. Northan, 112 N. C. 261.

³⁵ Bennett v. Davis, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 393; Knox v. Flack, 22 Penn. St. 327; Karcher v. Green, 8 Houst. (Del.) 163; Fuqua v. Sholem, 60 Ill. App. 141.

³⁶ Fonda v. Van Horne, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 631, 30 Am. Dec. 77.

³⁷ Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124.

³⁸ Tapley v. McGee, 6 Ind. 56; Starbird v. Moore, 21 Vt. 529; Somers v. Rogers, 26 Vt. 585; Fuller v. Smith, 49 Vt. 253; Millsaps v. Estes, 134 N. C. 486 (submission to arbitration by any one for infant not binding).

The question of the infant's employment of an attorney presents two aspects: first, his liability to pay for the services and second, his liability for what his attorney does. 1. Legal services required to preserve or protect the infant's person, liberty or personal rights are usually regarded as necessities to the extent of their actual value. Barker v. Hibbard, 54 N. H. 539, 20 Am. Rep. 160; Munson v. Washband, 31 Conn. 303, 83 Am. Dec. 151; Askey v. Williams, 74 Tex. 294, 5 L. R. A. 176; Petrie v. Williams, 68 Hun (N. Y.), 589; Crafts v. Carr, 24 R. I. 397, 96 Am. St. Rep. 721, 60 L. R. A. 123.

So, too, the rule has been declared without limitation in many cases where it was not necessary to the decision of the case,⁴⁰ being used merely by way of illustration or asserted in order to round out some general proposition in reference to the powers of infants.

§ 144. — Dissent, exceptions.—This unqualified statement of the rule, however, has not been without dissent in modern times, and judges have in several cases yielded to it only upon the ground that it was long established.⁴¹

So it has been held that, notwithstanding the rule, an infant might appoint an agent to do an act unquestionably to his advantage,⁴²—as to receive seizin of an estate conveyed to him,—and this exception is, in reason, undoubtedly well founded.⁴³

So what is sometimes termed a qualified form of agency may be established by the appointment by a competent court of a guardian for the infant's estate; and upon the doctrine of an agency, implied or created by law, an infant husband may be bound for necessities pur-

Services in protecting or securing his property rights have been held not necessities. Phelps v. Worcester, 11 N. H. 51; but even in these cases the tendency is to hold them necessities when they are in fact needful and beneficial. Searcy v. Hunter, 81 Tex. 644, 26 Am. St. 837.

See also Thrall v. Wright, 38 Vt. 493.

Examination of public records and advice as to infant's rights as heir of his deceased father, held not a necessary in Cobbey v. Buchannan, 48 Neb. 391. So where the attorney was appointed guardian ad litem. Englebert v. Troxell, 40 Neb. 195, 26 L. R. A. 177, 42 Am. St. Rep. 665.

2. As to the effect of admissions, waivers, receipts, etc., made by attorneys, guardians, etc., of infants, see the exhaustive note to Kromer v. Friday, 10 Wash. 621, 32 L. R. A. 671; Beliveau v. Amoskeag Co., 68 N. H. 225, 44 L. R. A. 167, 73 Am. St. Rep. 577; Glass v. Glass, 76 Ala. 368.

³⁹ Lawrence v. McArter, 10 Ohio, 37.

⁴⁰ Of this class are Cole v. Pennoyer; Robbins v. Mount; Dexter v. Hall; Robinson v. Weeks; Fetrow v. Wiseman; Flexner v. Dickerson;

Mustard v. Wohlford's Heirs; Roof v. Stafford; Fonda v. Van Horne; Bool v. Mix; Heistand v. Kuns; Harner v. Dipple; and others cited in § 141, supra.

An infant deposited money with stockbrokers to speculate in stocks. He never received the stocks and the speculation resulted in a loss. Held, he might repudiate the arrangement and recover his deposit in full. Mordecai v. Pearl, 63 Hun, 553, aff'd no opinion, 136 N. Y. 625.

⁴¹ See Philpot v. Bingham, 55 Ala. 435; Fetrow v. Wiseman, 40 Ind. 155.

⁴² See Whitney v. Dutch, 14 Mass. 457, 7 Am. Dec. 229; Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 58. In Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. I, p. 150, it is said that an agent can bind a minor for necessities; and, though no cases are cited, it is believed that no one would doubt it.

⁴³ See per Lord Mansfield in Zouch v. Parsons, 3 Burr. 1794. In Ewer v. Jones, 9 Q. B. 623, Erle, J., arguendo asks: "Cannot an infant authorize an agent to turn out a wrongdoer?" In that case it was held that an agent could justify a trespass by the command of his infant principal.

chased by his wife,⁴⁴ though neither of these cases can probably be regarded as a matter of agency at all.

In a few cases courts have gone further. Thus it has been held that a note in the firm name given by the adult partner is not so far void that it cannot be ratified by an infant partner after he becomes of age.⁴⁵ And the same conclusion was reached where an infant gave a power of attorney under which a promissory note payable to his order was indorsed and delivered;⁴⁶ and where an infant authorized his brother, also an infant, to indorse and deliver a promissory note payable to the former, who was under guardianship.⁴⁷ But other courts have refused to follow these.⁴⁸

§ 145. — In reason how.—The tendency of modern cases, although they are by no means harmonious, has been to regard all contracts made by an infant, with the exception of his appointment of an agent, in a more liberal spirit, and to treat them as voidable merely, or if void at all, as void only in those cases where they cannot by any possibility be to his advantage.⁴⁹

Why this exception of the contract made through an agent should exist is not made clear by the authorities, nor is any sufficient reason apparent,⁵⁰ and in some late well considered cases its soundness is de-

⁴⁴ Cantine v. Phillips, 5 Harr. (Del.) 428.

⁴⁵ Whitney v. Dutch, 14 Mass. 457, 7 Am. Dec. 229. See the notes to this case in Am. Dec.

⁴⁶ Hastings v. Dollarhide, 24 Cal. 195.

⁴⁷ Hardy v. Waters, 38 Me. 450. So it seems that where an infant seeks to disaffirm a voidable contract and demand restoration of property parted with by him, he may make such demand through an agent or attorney. Towle v. Dresser, 73 Me. 252.

⁴⁸ See Turner v. Bondalier, 31 Mo. App. 582, where it is held that the infant's appointment of an agent to make the affidavit in replevin is void, and Hardy v. Waters and Hastings v. Dollarhide, supra, are denied. See also Petrie v. Williams, 68 Hun (N. Y.), 589.

⁴⁹ In 1 Am. Lead. Cases, cited above, the learned editors say: "The numerous decisions which have been had in this country justify the settlement of the following definite rule as one that is subject to no exceptions. The only contract binding on an infant is the implied contract for necessities. The only act which he is under a legal disability to perform is the appointment of an attorney. All other acts and contracts, executed or executory, are voidable or confirmable by him at his election." See also Bishop on Contracts, Ed. 1887, §§ 917-935.

⁵⁰ Harner v. Dipple, 31 Ohio St. 72, 27 Am. Rep. 496; Paterson v. Lippincott, 47 N. J. L. 457, 54 Am. Rep. 178; Cummings v. Powell, 8 Tex. 80. See Bishop on Contracts, New Ed. § 930, where the learned author says: "In reason, we shall find it difficult to see why an infant, a person of imperfect capacity, cannot as validly act through another whose capacity has become perfected by age, and therefore presumably furnishing a sort of protection, as by his sole and unguarded self," and he refers to Whitney v. Dutch, and Bool v. Mix, cited, supra. See also remarks of Holmes, nied.⁵¹ Indeed no satisfactory reason is perceived why the rule should not be that, within the limits and to the extent within which he may bind himself by his contracts, he may also bind himself by the intervention of an agent appointed by him for that purpose.⁵² To such end it is believed the authorities will come although it must be conceded that the present weight of authority is against it.

§ 146. ——— Effect of rule.—The general adoption of the view that the infant may thus act by agent would not radically change the results worked out by the existing rules, except as to the possibility of ratification,⁵³ and the introduction of the well known rule that only the infant or those who represent him may question the act.⁵⁴ The obligations of the infant to the agent could still be avoided, as an infant partner may now avoid his obligations to his copartner; and the infant's obligations, to third persons, arising from the agency, could still be avoided by him,⁵⁵ very much as an infant partner may now avoid personal obligations to firm creditors.

§ 147. ——— Liability of infant for torts of agent or servant.—With respect of the liability of an infant for the torts of one alleged to be his servant or agent, much the same condition of the law is found as in the case of contracts.⁵⁶ Under any view, an infant of sufficient age would doubtless be held liable for a tort committed under his immediate direction and control, without any reference to the question of agency, on the ground that it was his own act.⁵⁷ With reference to his liability for the merely negligent act of his servant or agent, not directly caused by the infant, the latter would doubtless not be bound wherever it is held that an infant cannot appoint an agent or servant

J., in Fairbanks v. Snow, 145 Mass. 153, 1 Am. St. Rep. 446, citing Whitney v. Dutch, supra; Welch v. Welch, 103 Mass. 562; Moley v. Brine, 120 Mass. 324.

⁵¹ Coursolle v. Weyerhauser, 69 Minn. 328; Benson v. Tucker, — Mass. —, 98 N. E. 589; Johannson v. Gudmundson, 19 Manitoba, 83, 11 West. L. Rep. 176. See also Ferguson v. Houston, etc., Ry. Co., 73 Tex. 344; Simpson v. Prudential Ins. Co., 184 Mass. 348, 63 L. R. A. 741, 100 Am. St. R. 560.

⁵² Thus an infant may by agent bind himself for necessities. Fruchey v. Eagleson, 15 Ind. App. 88.

⁵³ See ante, § 140.

⁵⁴ Thus in Patterson v. Lippincott, 47 N. J. L. 457, 54 Am. Rep. 178, it was held that the other party to a contract made through an agent with an infant could not recover damages from the agent for an alleged breach of warranty of authority, where it did not appear that the infant had repudiated or intended to repudiate the contract on his part. In Continental Nat. Bank v. Strauss, 137 N. Y. 148, 553, it is said to be the presumption that the infant will not plead infancy.

⁵⁵ Vogelsang v. Null, 67 Tex. 465.

⁵⁶ See ante, § 141.

⁵⁷ Sikes v. Johnson, 16 Mass. 389. See also Burnham v. Seaverns, 101 Mass. 360, 100 Am. Dec. 123.

at all.⁵⁸ Even if it should be held that an infant's appointment of an agent or servant was not void but voidable merely, the infant would doubtless be permitted to avoid the consequences of his servant's negligence, by avoiding the employment of the servant, in any case in which the tort could not be regarded as his own act.

§ 148. Married woman as principal—Could not be at common law—Now generally may be.—An unmarried woman, whether maid or widow, was, at the common law, subject to no general contractual disabilities, and could therefore appoint and act through agents as freely as a man; and this rule, of course, still prevails. But a married woman at common law was, in general, incapable of entering into contracts and therefore could neither enter into contractual obligations to an agent nor make contracts with third persons through an agent.⁵⁹ Modern stat-

⁵⁸ In Cooley on Torts (2d Ed.) 128, it is said: "As the doctrine respondet superior rests upon the relation of master and servant which depends upon contract actual or implied, it is obvious that it can have no application to the case of an infant employer, and he therefore is not responsible for torts of negligence by those in his service." This is quoted with approval and made the basis of the decision in Burns v. Smith, 29 Ind. App. 181, 94 Am. St. Rep. 268. So in Robbins v. Mount, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 24, 4 Robt. 553, it is said of the infant, "He cannot in law become a master or be responsible as a master for the negligence or want of skill of his servant."

See also Lowery v. Cate, 108 Tenn. 54, 57 L. R. A. 673 and note, 91 Am. St. Rep. 744.

In the case of wrongs resulting from the ownership of real estate, however, a different rule applies. Thus in Cooley on Torts (2d Ed.) 122, it is said: "An infant as the owner or occupant of lands is under the same responsibility with other persons for any nuisance created or continued thereon to the prejudice or annoyance of his neighbors, and for such negligent use or management of the same, by himself or his servants, as would render any other owner or occupant liable to an adjoining proprietor." This is quoted and relied upon in McCabe v. O'Connor, 4 N. Y. App. Div. 354.

So in a case involving the liability of an infant landowner for trespasses committed by his agent in the course of the management of the land, the trial court charged the jury that the infant was not liable, but the supreme court said: "If the instruction goes beyond the liability—growing out of and inseparable from the relation of principal and agent, formed by contract positive or implied, and protects the infant of sufficient intelligence and judgment from accountability for torts involved and done in the necessary prosecution of the business of the agency and the attainment of its ends, we are not prepared to concur in its correctness in law. We do not see why the rule in such case, qui facit per alium facit per se, does not apply." Smith v. Kron, 96 N. C. 392.

⁵⁹ Weisbrod v. Chicago, etc., Ry Co., 18 Wis. 35, 86 Am. Dec. 743; Dorrance v. Scott, 3 Whart. (Penn.) 313, 31 Am. Dec. 509; Caldwell v. Waters, 18 Penn. St. 79, 55 Am. Dec. 592; Appeal of Freeman, 68 Conn. 533, 37 L. R. A. 452, 57 Am. St. R. 112; State v. Clay, 100 Mo. 571; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545; Lewis v. Lee, 3 B. & C. 291; Fairthorne v. Blaquiere, 6 M. & S. 73.

utes, however, have quite generally removed her disability, at least so far as her separate property is concerned, and she may now undoubtedly appoint an agent to represent her in dealing with those matters concerning which she is thus made competent to act in person.⁶⁰ In this respect, her competency is usually made coextensive with the right of a feme sole. Her capacity to contract, however, is purely statutory and she cannot confer upon her agent any greater powers than she might herself exercise in the premises. Her agent, therefore, can bind her only while acting within the limits fixed to her capacity.⁶¹

⁶⁰ Weisbrod v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., supra; McLaren v. Hall, 26 Iowa, 297; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 277; Woodworth v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 8; Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93; Rowell v. Klein, 44 Ind. 290; Munger v. Baldrige, 41 Kan. 236, 13 Am. St. R. 273; First Com'l Bank v. Newton, 117 Mich. 433; Crosby v. Washburn, 66 N. J. L. 494; Lathrop-Harten Lumber Co. v. Bessemer Sav. Bank, 96 Ala. 350; Bertchey v. Bank of Sheboygan, 89 Wis. 473; Morris v. Linton, 61 Neb. 537; Linton v. National L. Ins. Co., 104 Fed. 584; Stout v. Perry, 152 N. C. 312, 136 Am. St. R. 826. See cases cited in § 161, et seq., post.

⁶¹ Kenton Insurance Co. v. McClellan, 43 Mich. 564; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 27 Am. Rep. 38; Frazee v. Frazee, 79 Md. 27; Bowles v. Trapp, 139 Ind. 55; Strode v. Miller, 7 Idaho, 16; McCollum v. Boughton, 132 Mo. 601, 35 L. R. A. 480; Freeman's Appeal, 68 Conn. 533, 57 Am. St. R. 112, 37 L. R. A. 452; McFarland v. Heim, 127 Mo. 327, 48 Am. St. R. 629; Spurlock v. Dornan, 182 Mo. 242; Troy Fertilizer Co. v. Zachry, 114 Ala. 177.

By what law married woman's capacity governed—Conflict of laws.—In Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374, 28 Am. Rep. 241, a married woman did not have capacity to make a contract of guarantee in Massachusetts. It was held she could appoint an agent to make such a contract in Maine, where such disability did not exist.

The same was held in First Nat. Bank v. Mitchell, 34 C. C. A. 542, 92 Fed. 565. But, on the same state of facts, the state court came to the contrary conclusion. Freeman's Appeal, 68 Conn. 533, 37 L. R. A. 452, 57 Am. St. R. 112.

In Baum v. Birchall, 150 Pa. 164, 30 Am. St. R. 797, a bond, signed by a Pennsylvania woman in Pennsylvania, was delivered by her agent in Delaware where she would have had capacity to make it. The bond was held valid although no such contract could be made at her domicile.

So in Conn. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Westervelt, 52 Conn. 586, the assignment of an insurance policy was held valid, when filled out by an agent in a state where capacity existed.

In Loftus v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank, 133 Pa. 97, 7 L. R. A. 313, a married woman in New York appointed an agent to sell municipal bonds in Pennsylvania. Held, valid since such power was expressly given by a statute of the latter state.

In Thompson v. Taylor, 66 N. J. L. 253, 54 L. R. A. 585, 88 Am. St. R. 485, a married woman could not sign an accommodation note in New Jersey but could in New York. The note was signed in New Jersey, but as its inception dated from its negotiation by her agent in New York, the latter law was held to govern. To the same effect, see Voigt v. Brown, 42 Hun (N. Y.), 394. But

Where the married woman may appoint an agent, she may appoint her husband as the agent, as will be more fully seen hereafter.⁶²

§ 149. — How agent appointed by—General effect.—The appointment of an agent by a married woman may be made in the same manner as by any other principal, and when appointed the same legal consequences and effects result from the relation which would flow from the appointment by any other principal of like capacity.⁶³

As was said in a leading case,⁶⁴ in New York: "With the removal of common law disabilities from married women corresponding liabilities have necessarily been imposed upon them. They take the civil rights and privileges conferred, subject to all the incidental and correlative burdens and obligations, and their rights and obligations are to be determined by the same rules of law and evidence by which the rights and obligations of the other sex are determined under like circumstances. To the extent, and in the matters of business in which they are by law permitted to engage, they owe the same duty to those with whom they deal, and to the public, and may be bound in the same manner as if they were unmarried. Their common law incapacity cannot serve as a shield to protect them from the consequences of their acts, when they have statutory capacity to act. A married woman is sui juris to the extent of the enlarged capacity to act conferred by statute, and may be estopped by her acts and declarations and is subject to all the presumptions which the law indulges against others with full capacity to act for themselves. * * * She has all the legal capacity to do every act incident to the business or trade in which she may engage which a feme sole would have, that is, full legal capacity to transact the business, including, as incidents to it, the capacity to contra, Union Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 169 N. Y. 538, 57 L. R. A. 513, 88 Am. St. R. 614.

In Union Nat. Bank v. Hartwell, 84 Ala. 379, the agent only had authority to act in the state where the principal did not have capacity to contract. Held, that the agent could not contract.

In Basilea v. Spagnuolo, 80 N. J. L. 88, the note was dated and made payable in New Jersey where the principal had no capacity to contract. Held, that there would be a presumption of authority to negotiate only in that state and negotiation in New York would not be binding. But contra, see Voigt v. Brown, supra.

In Johnston v. Gawtry, 11 Mo. App. 322, the agent's act created a charge on land. Capacity of principal in such cases is determined by the law of the state where the land is located. In like manner, the validity of a power of attorney to sell land is determined by the law of the state where the land is situated. Morris v. Linton, 61 Neb. 537; Bisel v. Terry, 69 Ill. 184.

⁶² See post, § 169.

⁶³ See cases cited post, §§ 169, 170.

⁶⁴ Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93.

contract debts and incur obligations in any form, and by any means, by which others acting sui juris can assume responsibility. * * * She is bound by the appearances which she has given to the transaction, and upon the faith of which others have acted, up to the limits of her legal capacity to act."

§ 150. ——— Liability of married woman for torts of agents or servants.—While the common law rules prevailed, a married woman, as has been seen, could not enter into contracts in person or by agent and could therefore incur no contractual liability by contract made by another as her agent. And so with respect of her torts; while she might be liable for the acts of another so committed under her immediate direction as to be in law her own acts, if she would have been liable if they had been committed by her in person⁶⁵ she could not be liable merely by reason of her previous or subsequent assent.⁶⁶

Where her common law disabilities still prevail or in cases to which the modern statutes do not extend, she is not liable for the torts of one alleged to be her servant.⁶⁷ But where she acts in the larger fields of business created by the modern statutes, and employs servants and agents, she is responsible for their torts in the same way as any other master or principal.⁶⁸

§ 151. Aliens—Alien enemies.—The mere fact that one is an alien does not in general disqualify him to be either principal or agent. An alien, unless forbidden, may do business, make contracts, acquire property—though he is often forbidden to hold land—and the like, and he may usually do this through an agent like any other person. An alien enemy, however, cannot, it is said, appoint an agent, or act by agent across the line of hostilities, certainly not for commercial purposes;⁶⁹ though, as will be seen, if he already has one before the breaking out of hostilities, the agency is not necessarily terminated as to all purposes.⁷⁰

⁶⁵ See Sikes v. Johnson, 16 Mass. 389. See also the interesting note appended to this case by the reporter.

⁶⁶ See Vanneman v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 39; Ferguson v. Brooks, 67 Me. 251.

⁶⁷ Ferguson v. Neilson, 17 R. I. 81, 33 Am. St. 855, 9 L. R. A. 155, the disabilities of married women not having been removed in Rhode Island.

⁶⁸ Shane v. Lyons, 172 Mass. 199,

70 Am. St. 261; Ferguson v. Brooks, 67 Me. 251; Flesh v. Lindsay, 115 Mo. 1, 37 Am. St. 374.

⁶⁹ See United States v. Grossmayer, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 72, 19 L. Ed. 627; Hubbard v. Matthews, 54 N. Y. 43, 13 Am. Rep. 562; Keershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561.

⁷⁰ See post, Chapter VIII, Termination of Relation.

II.

WHO MAY BE AGENTS.

§ 152. In general.—Having thus seen who is competent to be the principal in the relation, attention will now be given to the question who is competent to be the agent. Here several aspects may present themselves: 1. Who in general is competent to be agent; 2. Incompetency from some peculiar relation in which the parties already stand either to one another or to the subject matter of the agency; and 3. Incompetency from lack of professional or other similar standing.

1. Competency in General.

§ 153. What questions arise.—The question of the competency of the agent may present itself in determining the rights and liabilities of three groups of persons: (a) As between the principal and third persons; (b) As between the principal and the agent; and (c) As between the agent and third persons. Of these three, the first is the most important aspect. The primary purpose in the creation of agency is to bring the principal and third persons into relations with each other, and not at all to create obligations between the agent and the third person or necessarily between the agent and the principal. If the principal and the agent are both sui juris, then the rights of the third person against the principal as well as the rights of the principal against the agent, of the agent against the principal and of the third person against the agent, if such rights exist, may all be valid and enforceable; but where the agent is not sui juris some or all of these rights may be imperfect or unenforceable.

§ 154. Less competency in agent may suffice than is required of principal.—From the standpoint of the rights and liabilities arising between the principal and the third person with whom the agent deals, it is obvious that a less degree of competency may suffice in the agent than in the principal. The agent acts only in a representative capacity and exercises only a derivative authority. The act to be performed is to be done by the principal's direction and on the principal's account. The material question, therefore, is whether the principal had the capacity to do the act and the right to cause it to be done by another. The agent is not expected to bind himself, or to act upon any authority or capacity of his own. He is but the instrument through which the principal's power is to be exercised, the channel through which the principal's capacity is to flow. If the principal's power is adequate, if his capacity is sufficient, it is not at all essential that the agent also shall have the capacity which would be required if he were himself the principal. It is from this standpoint that it is often said that any person may be an agent,⁷¹ and that it has been declared that monks, infants, feme coverts, persons attainted, outlawed or excommunicated, slaves or villeins, and aliens are competent to act as agents.⁷²

§ 155. Infant as agent.—As has been already seen, an infant is generally held not to be competent to be a principal. He may, however, be an agent or a servant in such sense that his acts as such, within the scope of the authority conferred upon him, will bind his principal in formal transactions as well as informal ones to the same degree and in the same manner as though the agent were an adult.⁷³ The infancy of the agent will also ordinarily be immaterial as affecting the liability to the principal of the third persons who have had dealings with the principal through an infant agent.

It is evident, however, that the relation between a principal and his infant agent is not a perfect one, for though the infant may bind his principal by his acts, and though the principal is bound by his contracts with the infant, the infant himself may escape the liabilities to the principal for the express or implied contractual obligations which an adult agent would assume under like circumstances.⁷⁴ Neither does such a relation afford to third persons who may deal with the infant agent, that protection which would be insured to them if the agent were sui juris; for it would not be contended, for example, that, in the absence ⁷¹ Cal. Code, § 2296.

⁷² Ewell's Evans on Agency, 17; Wharton, Agency, § 14.

⁷³ Talbot v. Bowen, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 436, 10 Am. Dec. 747; Ewell's Evans on Agency, 17.

"The law is perfectly settled that an infant may absolutely and irrevocably execute a power, either by absolute deed, or otherwise, as fully and effectually as an adult person." Sheldon v. Newton, 3 Ohio St. 494.

"An infant can exercise a power even though it be coupled with an interest, where an intention appears that it should be exercisable during minority." Per Jessel, M. R., In re Cardross, 7 Ch. Div. 728. An infant may exercise a power of appointment over personalty conferred by a marriage settlement. In re D'Angibau, 15 Ch. Div. 228.

⁷⁴ See Derocher v. Continental Mills, 58 Me. 217, 4 Am. Rep. 286; Gaffney v. Hayden, 110 Mass. 137, 14 Am. Rep. 580; Widrig v. Taggart, 51 Mich. 103; Whitmarsh v. Hall, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 375; Vent v. Osgood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 572; Lufkin v. Mayall, 25 N. H. 82; Robinson v. Weeks, 56 Me. 102.

of fraud, the infant would be bound by an implied warranty of authority, or that, failing to bind his principal, he bound himself.

§ 156. Child as agent of parent.—An infant may be the agent or servant either of his parent or of strangers, but in either case it must be by virtue of some actual authorization, express or implied. Even when he is to act for his parent, it must be by reason of the parent's authorization, either express or implied, for, except possibly in some cases respecting necessities,⁷⁵ a child has no implied authority, merely because he is the child,⁷⁶ to bind his parent as his agent, as, for example, in buying or selling goods, making contracts, or loaning the parent's property;⁷⁷ nor has he any power, merely because he is the ⁷⁵ As to this question, which is not within the scope of this work, see Porter v. Powell, 79 Iowa, 151, 18 Am. St. R. 353, 7 L. R. A. 176; Fowlkes v. Baker, 29 Tex. 137, 94 Am. Dec. 270; Finn v. Adams, 138 Mich. 258, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1186; Alvey v. Hartwig, 106 Md. 254, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 250.

⁷⁶ No authority results merely from the relationship. Ritch v. Smith, 82 N. Y. 627, 60 How. Prac. 157; Walsh v. Curley, 16 N. Y. Supp. 871; McMahon v. Smith, 136 App. Div. 839; Cousins v. Boyer, 114 App. Div. 787; Hovey v. Brown, 59 N. H. 114; Nuckolls v. St. Clair, 1 Colo. App. 427, 29 Pac. 284; Freeman v. Robinson, 38 N. J. L. 383, 20 Am. Rep. 399; Hickox v. Bacon, 17 S. Dak. 563; Hoag v. Hay, 103 Iowa, 291; Fisher v. Lutz, 146 Wis. 664; Habegger v. King, 149 Wis. 1, 135 N. W. 166, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 881.

⁷⁷ "A son has no authority, as such, to lend his father's property, and there is no presumption that such authority has been given to a son. It may be shown that authority to lend tools and the like has been given to a son expressly, or such an authority may be inferred from the conduct of the father tending to show that he reposed such confidence and intrusted such discretion to the son, as by showing that on other occasions the son had lent the father's property of a similar kind, and the father, upon the facts coming to his knowledge, approved what he had done, but without such proof the son stands in the same position as a stranger." Johnson v. Stone, 40 N. H. 197, 77 Am. Dec. 706.

Minor son living at home is not presumed to be the father's agent in hiring a tutor during vacations. Peacock v. Linton, 22 R. I. 328, 53 L. R. A. 192.

Where a minor son has paid out his father's money for an unauthorized purpose, e. g., for pipes and tobacco, the father on tendering back the articles may recover the money. A tender and demand made by the plaintiff's wife is sufficient. Sequin v. Peterson, 45 Vt. 255, 12 Am. Rep. 195.

Money entrusted to a minor son for a specific purpose and applied by him without the father's consent in compounding a crime committed by the son may be recovered by the father. Burnham v. Holt, 14 N. H. 367.

The right of a child to use property devoted to the purposes of the family, in the usual and ordinary way, may be implied, and where the child invites another to participate in that use, as for example to drive the father's horses in company with the child upon an occasion when the child might properly use them, the person so invited cannot be treated by the father as a wrong-doer. Bennett v. Gillette, 3 Minn. 423, 74 Am. Dec. 774.

child, and when he is not acting as the parent's servant, to subject the parent not himself at fault to liability for the child's torts.⁷⁸

The parent may make the child his agent or servant, and this, as in the case of other persons, may be done expressly, or be inferred from the conduct of the parent—his acts or omissions, his acquiescence, his approval.⁷⁹

The lack of actual authorization may also be supplied as in other cases by the subsequent ratification, either express or implied, of the parent,⁸⁰ and under the same qualifications and conditions.⁸¹

Where the parent's horse is ridden by the son with the parent's authority "it would seem to be an inference of law, or an incident of such authority or loan, that the son might consent to anything respecting the horse, which in common prudence, would be necessary to his existence or preservation." White v. Edgman, 1 Over. (Tenn.) 19.

⁷⁸ Tift v. Tift, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 175; Smith v. Davenport, 45 Kan. 423, 11 L. R. A. 429, 23 Am. St. R. 737; Baker v. Morris, 33 Kan. 580; Hagerty v. Powers, 66 Cal. 368, 56 Am. Rep. 101; Wilson v. Garrard, 59 Ill. 51; Maddox v. Brown, 71 Me. 432, 36 Am. Rep. 336; Brohl v. Lingeman, 41 Mich. 711; Needles v. Burk, 81 Mo. 569, 51 Am. Rep. 251; Paul v. Hummel, 43 Mo. 119, 97 Am. Dec. 381; Teagarden v. McLaughlin, 86 Ind. 476, 44 Am. Rep. 332; Winkler v. Fisher, 95 Wis. 355; Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495, 58 Am. Rep. 875; Hoverson v. Noker, 60 Wis. 511, 50 Am. Rep. 381.

⁷⁹ Many cases in which agency for the parent is implied from conduct, are cited, in the following chapter, upon Appointment and Authorization of Agents, post, § 274, et seq.

For a case of rather direct appointment, e. g., where a father told a store keeper to let his daughter have whatever she wanted out of the store, see Harper v. Lemon, 38 Ga. 227.

Many cases involving the question of the liability of a parent for the negligence of his son as his servant, are found in the chapter upon the Liability of the Principal to Third Persons.

For automobile cases, see Stowe v. Morris, 147 Ky. 386, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 224 (Daily v. Maxwell, 152 Mo. App. 415, and Lashbrook v. Patten, 1 Duv. 316, were relied upon); Doran v. Thomsen, 76 N. J. L. 754, 131 Am. St. R. 677, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 335; Moon v. Matthews, 227 Pa. 488, 136 Am. St. Rep. 902, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 856; Smith v. Jordan, 211 Mass. 269.

For a gun case, Brittingham v. Stadiem, 151 N. C. 299.

⁸⁰ Evidence that a minor son had on several occasions signed for the father with his consent tends to show that he was authorized to sign upon a subsequent similar occasion. Watkins v. Vince, 2 Stark. 368. See also Weaver v. Ogletree, 39 Ga. 586. Authority to sign could not be inferred from the fact that the son had on several occasions signed, if it did not appear that the father knew it, nor can authority properly be deduced from acquiescence in a single instance. Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 2 Allen (Mass.), 269.

Where a son makes an exchange of a horse belonging to his father and the father apparently acquiesces for a considerable period of time, he cannot afterwards repudiate the act. Hall v. Harper, 17 Ill. 82. So where the son sold a half interest in his father's mowing and reaping machine and the father acquiesced for two years. Swartwout v. Evans, 37 Ill. 442; Condon v. Hughes, 92 Mich. 367, is to the same effect. See also Thayer v. White, 53 Mass. (12 Metc.) 343; Booker v. Tally, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 308.

⁸¹ Knowledge necessary. White v. Mann, 110 Ind. 74. Act must have

§ 157. Parent as agent of child.—A parent as such, whether father or mother, is not per se agent of the child, to bind him or his estate whether the child be infant or adult.⁸² While the child is an infant, the parent as such has no greater authority than as a natural guardian. If the child be an adult he may appoint his parent as agent as in the case of any other person.⁸³ If the child be an infant he could appoint his parent as agent if he was competent to appoint an agent for any purpose.⁸⁴

§ 158. Slaves as agents.—During the time of slavery it was held that a slave could act as agent.⁸⁵ Said the court in one case: ⁸⁶ "It is not questioned that a master may constitute his slave his agent, and I cannot conceive of any distinction between the circumstances which constitute a slave and a freeman an agent,—they are both the creatures of the principal and act upon his authority. There is no condition, however degraded, which deprives one of the right to act as a private agent; the master is liable even for the act of his dog done in pursuance of his command." While this statement could easily be shown to contain several errors, yet so far as it means merely that a master is liable for the acts of his slave within the scope of the authority conferred upon him, it is doubtless unexceptionable.

§ 159. Women.—The contractual disabilities under which women were placed at common law were practically all not disabilities of sex but disabilities by marriage. The unmarried woman, whether maid or widow, was free to have an agent and certainly free to be one.

§ 160. Married women—As agents for third persons.—Notwithstanding her incapacity to appoint an agent, a married woman might, at common law, be the agent of third persons,⁸⁷ even in their dealings with her husband.⁸⁸ Her capacity in this respect, however, like that of other persons not competent to contract generally, was necessarily a limited one, as the married woman was incapable of assuming the been done as agent. Fisher v. Lutz, 146 Wis. 664.

⁸² Parent not ipso facto agent of minor child. Keeler v. Fassett, 21 Vt. 539, 52 Am. Dec. 71; Linton v. Walker, 8 Fla. 144, 71 Am. Dec. 105; Pittsburg, etc., Ry. Co. v. Haley, 170 Ill. 610; Houston, etc., Ry. Co. v. Bradley, 45 Tex. 171; Clark v. Smith, 13 S. Car. 585.

⁸³ See Reeves v. Kelly, 30 Mich. 133; Jordan v. Greig, 33 Colo. 360.

⁸⁴ See Patterson v. Lippincott, 47 N. J. L. 457, 54 Am. Rep. 178.

⁸⁵ Governor v. Daily, 14 Ala. 469; Powell v. State, 27 Ala. 51; Lyon v. Kent, 45 Ala. 656; Chastain v. Bowman, 1 Hill (S. C.), 270.

⁸⁶ Chastain v. Bowman, supra.

⁸⁷ Hopkins v. Mollinieux, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 465; Singleton v. Mann, 3 Mo. 464; Butler v. Price, 110 Mass. 97; McKee v. Kent, 24 Miss. 131; Whitworth v. Hart, 22 Ala. 343; Goodwin v. Kelly, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 194; Gray v. Otis, 11 Vt. 628; Sawyer v. Cutting, 23 Vt. 486; White v. Oeland, 12 Rich. (S. C.) 308.

⁸⁸ Story on Agency, § 7.

reciprocal liabilities and obligations which the perfect relation imposes upon the agent,⁸⁹ and as her duties to her husband and her family rendered her assumption of many undertakings impossible.

The effect of the modern statutes has been to enlarge this limited capacity according as they have enlarged her capacity to deal as a feme sole, and where the removal of her disabilities is complete, or where with the consent of her husband or of the law, she is competent to carry on business as a feme sole, her capacity to bind herself to the same extent by all of the obligations of an agent would seem to be a necessary consequence.⁹⁰

§ 161. Wife as agent for her husband. 1. In domestic affairs.—Both at the common law and under the modern statutes, the wife may be the agent of her husband. This agency is often said to be of two kinds: 1. That which the law creates as the result of the marriage relation, by virtue of which the wife is authorized to pledge her husband's credit for the purpose of obtaining those necessities which the husband himself has neglected or refused to furnish; and,

2. That which arises from the authority of the husband, expressly or impliedly conferred as in other cases.

The wife has, by virtue of the marriage relation alone, no authority to bind her husband by contracts of a general nature, and her authority of the kind first mentioned is limited in its nature and extent by the legal requirements fixed for its creation, of the existence of which those persons who assume to deal with her as such agent must take notice at their peril.⁹¹ The full consideration of this question—the ⁸⁹ See Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184; Carleton v. Haywood, 49 N. H. 314.

⁹⁰ See cases cited in note 2 to § 169, post. Many interesting questions arise in connection with this subject, which are not yet determined, as for example: How far is a married woman acting as agent for her husband or for a third person, bound by an implied or express warranty of her authority? What if she exceeds her authority? What if she conceals her principal? What, if intending to bind her principal, she so executes a written contract, as, in form, to bind herself? How far may she assume responsibility as an agent to third persons without her husband's consent? Upon this point, see Pullman v. State, 78 Ala. 31.

⁹¹ Clark v. Cox, 32 Mich. 204; Eames v. Sweetser, 101 Mass. 78; Raynes v. Bennett, 114 Mass. 424; Morrison v. Holt, 42 N. H. 478, 80 Am. Dec. 120; Benjamin v. Benjamin, 15 Conn. 347, 39 Am. Dec. 384; Jones v. Gutman, 88 Md. 355; Bonney v. Perham, 102 Ill. App. 634; Wanamaker v. Weaver, 176 N. Y. 75, 98 Am. St. R. 621, 65 L. R. A. 529; Constable v. Rosener, 82 N. Y. App. Div. 155, aff'd 178 N. Y. 587; Rea v. Durkee, 25 Ill. 503; Henderson v. Stringer, 2 Dana 291; Vusler v. Cox, 53 N. J. L. 516; Debenham v. Mellon, 6 App. Cas. 24; Manby v. Scott, 1 Mod. 124; Jolly v. Rees, 15 C. B. n. s. 628.

authority strictly speaking not being referable to the law of agency at all—belongs properly to a treatise upon the marriage relation.⁹²

Closely allied to the first kind and sometimes confused with it, though really belonging to the second, because really depending upon the doctrines of agency, is the agency of the wife resulting from the manner in which she and her husband live, and the situation in which he has placed her. Many varieties of situation, of course, present themselves, and it seems impossible to reconcile all of the cases.

§ 162. — Wife as domestic manager.—When a man maintains a domestic establishment and places his wife in charge of it, she takes by implication, as domestic manager, the power to make those contracts and purchases respecting the conduct and maintenance of the household affairs which are naturally and ordinarily incident to the wife's management of such an establishment. Supplies for the house, domestic service, medical attendance, articles for the use of the wife and children, and the like, suitable to the style in which the husband lives, and of the sort and amount which are ordinarily ordered by the wife under such circumstances, would fall within this rule.⁹³ This rule, it is to be observed, does not necessarily depend upon marriage, for any other woman placed in the same situation might have substan-⁹² See Stewart on Husband and Wife, §§ 89-98; Bishop on Married Women, Chap. 30; Schouler on Husband and Wife. See also Hatch v. Leonard, 165 N. Y. 435.

⁹³ See, for example, the opinions of Lord Selborne and Lord Blackburn in Debenham v. Mellon, 6 App. Cas. 24, 2 Eng. Rul. Cas. 441, though the actual case there was not of this sort.

In Haberman v. Gasser, 104 Wis. 98, upon the ground that the wife, a domestic manager, was her husband's agent to purchase supplies, she was allowed to rescind a contract for meat which proved bad and recover the consideration and still to have a tort action for injuries to herself from the bad meat.

In Baker v. Witten, 1 Okla. 160, an authority referable to the second class of cases is confused with the first.

In Cory v. Cook, 24 R. I. 421, in a case in which the defendant's wife had supplied board the converse of the rule was applied and the court held that the claim for the board money belonged to her husband's estate.

This authority covers of course only matters such as fairly belong to the domestic management of the kind of establishment maintained by the husband and does not cover other things: the receiving the husband's telegram, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Moseley, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 562, or the purchase of an expensive guitar and music, Phillipson v. Hayter, 19 Week. Rep. 130, 40 L. J. C. P. (N. S.) 14, L. R. 6 C. P. 38, 23 L. T. (N. S.) 556; Reid v. Teakle, 13 C. B. 627, 22 L. J. C. P. (N. S.) 161, 17 Jurist, 841, or of unnecessary jewelry, Montague v. Benedict, 3 B. & C. 631, 5 Dowl. & R. 532, 3 L. J. K. B. 94, 27 Rev. Rep. 444. See also Montague v. Espinasse, 1 Carr. & P. 356; Phillips v. Sanchez, 35 Fla. 187.

See also M'George v. Egan, 7 Scott, 112, 5 Bing. N. C. 196, 3 Jurist, 266, in which the wife's position as domestic manager was allowed to cover a contract for school for a child that lived in the family.

tially the same authority.⁹⁴ Neither is the rule affected by the modern statutes removing the contractual disabilities of married women.⁹⁵

Like any other authority so created, this would not be affected by secret limitations sought to be placed upon it;⁹⁶ and it would continue, for the protection of third persons who had been led to rely upon it, until they were notified of its discontinuance.⁹⁷

That the wife had thus been made domestic manager could be proved either by direct statements or admissions of the husband, or by proof of conduct reasonably warranting that conclusion.

§ 163. — Some cases seem to hold that from marriage and cohabitation a presumption will arise that the wife is domestic manager which will suffice until the contrary is shown;⁹⁸ but that this presumption may be rebutted.⁹⁹ In many of these cases the facts un-

⁹⁴ See per Pollock, C. B., in Reneaux v. Teakle, 8 Ex. at p. 682; per Lord Selborne, in Debenham v. Mellon, 6 App. Cas. at p. 33.

⁹⁵ Wilson v. Herbert, 41 N. J. L. 454, 32 Am. Rep. 243.

⁹⁶ See per Lord Selborne in Debenham v. Mellon, 6 App. Cas. 24, 2 Eng. Rul. Cas. 441.

⁹⁷ It may thus continue as to such persons after the separation of the parties, or the making of other arrangements. Sibley v. Gilmer, 124 N. C. 631; Cowell v. Phillips, 17 R. I. 188, 11 L. R. A. 182; Hartjen v. Ruebsamen, 19 N. Y. Misc. 149; Bonwit, Teller & Co. v. Lovett, 102 N. Y. Supp. 800; Watts v. Moffet, 12 Ind. App. 399; Hudson v. Sholem & Sons, 65 Ill. App. 61.

This kind of authority can, of course, be cut off by notice. Keller v. Phillips, 39 N. Y. 351. See also Harshaw v. Merryman, 18 Mo. 106.

⁹⁸ Thus in New Jersey it is said, "where husband and wife are living together, the wife has implied authority to pledge her husband's credit for such things as fall within the domestic department ordinarily confided to her management, and for articles furnished to her for her personal use suitable to the style in which the husband chooses to live. Under such circumstances the presumption is in favor of the wife's authority to contract on behalf of her husband. 1 Ev. Pr. & A. 166; Wilson v. Herbert, 41 N. J. L. 454, 32 Am. Rep. 243; Jolly v. Rees, 15 C. B. N. S. 628; Notes to Manby v. Scott, 3 Smith's Lead. Cas." Vusler v. Cox, 53 N. J. L. 516. To the same effect see: Bergh v. Warner, 47 Minn. 250, 50 N. W. 77, 28 Am. St. R. 362; Wagner v. Nagel, 33 Minn. 348; Flynn v. Messenger, 23 Minn. 208, 41 Am. Rep. 279; Tyler v. Messenger Co., 17 App. D. C. 85; Furlong v. Hysom, 35 Me. 332; Bradt v. Shull, 46 App. Div. 347; Tebbets v. Hapgood, 34 N. H. 420; Wiler v. Fiegel, 10 W. N. C. 240 (Pa.).

⁹⁹ From marriage and cohabitation there is a presumption that the wife has authority for contracts for supplies for herself and the family, but that presumption apparently may be rebutted by the husband by showing that he had supplied the house or that he had given her money and requested her not to deal on credit. Baker v. Carter, 83 Me. 132, 23 Am. St. R. 764; Wanamaker v. Weaver, 176 N. Y. 75, 65 L. R. A. 529, 98 Am. St. R. 621; Jones v. Gutman, 88 Md. 355; Compton v. Bates, 10 Ill. 78; Morgan v. Chetwynd, 4 Post. & F. 451; Lane v. Ironmonger, 13 M. & W. 368, 14 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 35; Jolly v. Rees, 15 C. B. (N. S.) 628, 33 L. J. C. P. (N. S.) 177, 10 Jurist (N. S.), 319, 10 L. T. (N. S.) 298, 12 Week. Rep. 473.

doubtedly were such as to justify a finding that the wife was actually the domestic manager with the husband's express or implied consent (though the cases are not put upon that ground), and without that element, or, at least, the fact of a domestic establishment, it would be difficult to reconcile them with many others which hold that from marriage and cohabitation alone no such agency can be implied.

§ 164. — Authority of this sort, arising from the acts of the parties and not by act of law, would be revocable like any other. And it might be revoked by acts as well as by words, as in the case of any other authority. The breaking up of the domestic establishment, the separation of the parties, and the like, suggest situations of this sort. The same requirements as to notice of termination would also here exist.

§ 165. — Authority when no domestic establishment maintained.—Even though the wife were not in fact put in charge of the domestic establishment—perhaps because there was none maintained—and had therefore no authority upon that ground, it may still be true that authority to act as agent for her husband in domestic affairs can be deduced from a course of dealing with the actual consent or the acquiescence of the husband.¹ Such a course of dealing might be sufficient either to show an actual authority or to raise an estoppel in favor of those who had relied upon it.

Where the wife has not been made domestic manager, and there is no evidence of authority deducible from a course of dealing, acquiescence, and the like, the authority of the wife as the husband's agent arising merely from marriage and cohabitation, is very limited, and is dependent upon the fact that he has failed to supply her with those things which are necessary and suitable to her position. If he had, in fact, made a suitable provision for her, he could not be bound.² These questions, however, are not considered in this work.

¹ Thus see Jones v. Gutman, 88 Md. 355; Hartjen v. Ruebsamen, 19 N. Y. Misc. 149; Bonwit, Teller & Co. v. Lovett, 102 N. Y. Supp. 800; Anthony v. Phillips, 17 R. I. 188, 11 L. R. A. 182. See also Proctor v. Woodruff, 119 N. Y. Supp. 232; Johnson v. Briscoe, 104 Mo. App. 493.

² Thus where the husband and wife were not keeping a house of their own, but were serving, he as manager and she as manageress of a hotel where they were supplied with food and lodging, and the husband had made the wife a sufficient allowance for clothing and forbidden her to buy upon his credit, it was held that the husband was not liable for clothing purchased by her. Debenham v. Mellon, 6 App. Cas. 24, 2 Eng. Rul. Cas. 441. See also Dolan v. Brooks, 168 Mass. 350; Wanamaker v. Weaver, 176 N. Y. 75, 98 Am. St. R. 621, 65 L. R. A. 529; Rosenfeld v. Peck, 149 N. Y. App. Div. 663; Crittenden v. Schermerhorn, 39 Mich. 661, 33 Am. Rep. 440; Alley v. Winn, 134 Mass. 77.

§ 166. ——— Wife may bind herself though domestic manager.— Where the wife has authority to bind her husband, she may, nevertheless, under modern statutes, bind herself, if she sees fit to do so; but the same rule would be applicable here as elsewhere that a known agent acting as such is presumed to intend to bind his principal rather than himself, and this presumption must be overcome before she can be charged.³

§ 167. Wife as husband's agent. 2. In non-domestic affairs.— Agencies of the second class, that is, those not relating to purely domestic affairs rest upon the same considerations which control the creation and existence of the relation between other persons. The wife may be either the general or the special agent of her husband by virtue of his authorization, and this authorization may, as in other cases, be express or implied; and may be conferred by specialty or by parol; or by precedent act or subsequent ratification.⁴ Her authority in this

³ Powers v. Russell, 26 Mich. 179; Wilson v. Herbert, 41 N. J. L. 454, 32 Am. Rep. 243; Feiner v. Boynton, 73 N. J. L. 136; Moore v. Copeley, 165 Pa. 294, 44 Am. St. R. 664.

⁴ Cox v. Hoffman, 4 Dev. & Batt. (N. C.) 180; Sibley v. Gilmer, 124 N. C. 631; Burk v. Howard, 13 Mo. 241; Chunot v. Larson, 43 Wis. 536, 28 Am. Rep. 567; McKinley v. McGregor, 3 Whart. (Penn.) 369; Camerlin v. Palmer Co., 10 Allen (Mass.), 539; Pickering v. Pickering, 6 N. H. 120; Abbott v. McKinley, 2 Miles (Penn.), 220; Gray v. Otis, 11 Vt. 628; Miller v. Delamater, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 433; Mickelberry v. Harvey, 58 Ind. 523; Heny v. Sargent, 54 Cal. 396; Pullan v. State, 78 Ala. 31; Ladd v. Newell, 34 Minn. 107; Lang v. Waters, 47 Ala. 624; Felker v. Emerson, 16 Vt. 653; 42 Am. Dec. 532; Cantrell v. Colwell, 3 Head (Tenn.), 471; Edgerton v. Thomas, 9 N. Y. 40; Weber v. Collins, 139 Mo. 501; Hartjen v. Ruebsamen, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 149; Bonwit, Teller v. Lovett, 102 N. Y. Suppl. 800. See also the following cases which treated a husband's agency for his wife upon the same principle: Harper v. Dail, 92 N. C. 394; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 277; Buckley v. Wells, 33 N. Y. 518; Singleton v. Mann, 3 Mo. 465; Weisbrod v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 18 Wis. 35, 86 Am. Dec. 743;

Sims v. Smith, 99 Ind. 469, 50 Am. Rep. 99; Penn v. Whiteheads, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 74; Miller v. Watt, 70 Ga. 385; Vail v. Meyer, 71 Ind. 159; Louisville Coffin Co. v. Stokes, 78 Ala. 372. See also Hardenbrook v. Harrison, 11 Colo. 9; Conrad v. Abbott, 132 Mass. 330.

Where written authority would be requisite in other cases, it is requisite when the wife is the agent. Edwards v. Tyler, 141 Ill. 454; but not otherwise. Reeves v. McNeill, 127 Ala. 175.

Wife's acts during husband's absence.—The agency of the wife that may be implied from the domestic arrangements, may be enlarged by the fact, that the husband during his absence has left the wife in charge of his affairs. See the following cases:

In Buford v. Speed, 74 Ky. 338, the wife was in charge while her husband was absent serving in the confederate army. For the purpose of protecting his property from confiscation the wife employed and consulted with lawyers. After his return he expressed approbation of her management during his absence but the court in holding him for the attorneys' fees relies only upon the authority implied from the necessity of the circumstances.

case, however, when implied, is to be implied from acts and conduct, and not from her position as wife alone; and when based upon subsequent ratification, is to be established by other evidence than that alone

In Church v. Landers, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 79, it was held that in the protracted absence of her husband a wife may hire out one of his horses, even although he may have given her general instructions not to do so. But held not so, where his absence was only for a day or two. Savage v. Davis, 18 Wis. 608.

In Evans v. Crawford County, etc., Insurance Company, 130 Wis. 189, 118 Am. St. R. 1009, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485, during the husband's absence the house burned and the wife made the proof of loss, and the court, speaking of an agency in the wife by necessity because of the husband's absence, allowed a suit upon the policy which required proof of loss by the insured.

In Felker v. Emerson, 16 Vt. 653, 42 Am. Dec. 532, the husband was absent for several months and the wife was in charge. During that time a creditor attached cattle and hay. The wife requested that the hay be fed to the cattle, and this request was held to bind the husband.

In Meador v. Page, 39 Vt. 306, the husband was working in one state and left his wife in charge of affairs in another, where the home and the family were. He sent her money and she managed things herself. On a visit home he ordered two tombstones and promised to pay by money which should be sent to the wife. When the money came she used some of it however to buy flour, because she believed that price was rising, and borrowed enough more of the defendant to pay for the tombstones. The husband was held liable on the loan.

But in Benjamin v. Benjamin, 15 Conn. 347, 39 Am. Dec. 384, while the husband was away and the wife in charge a creditor of the husband levied on land. The wife agreed that the creditor might cut grass growing on the land and take the hay in payment of the debt, and it was held that she had no implied power to make such agreement.

In Cantrell v. Colwell, 3 Head (Tenn.), 471, a wife, during her husband's absence, was in charge of their farm and upon seeing plaintiff's horse in one of the fields asked a man to get it out. The man unnecessarily threw a stone and broke the horse's leg. Upon the ground that because of the husband's absence the wife had by necessity an authority to appoint an agent to care for things and authority to attend to the business of the farm, the husband was held liable.

In Casteel v. Casteel, 8 Blackford (Ind.) 240, 44 Am. Dec. 763, a husband had abandoned his wife and family and had left them upon a small farm. The wife hired the plaintiff to work the farm and the husband was held liable upon the contract as principal. The upper court says that from these circumstances "the jury has the right to consider her as authorized by her husband to procure its (the farm's) cultivation by labor."

In Fisher v. Conway, 21 Kan. 18, 30 Am. Rep. 419, the plaintiff had gone away for a while and left his wife upon the farm. During his absence, the defendants came upon the land and threshed and carried off grain. Kansas had a statute not allowing a wife to testify for or against her husband "except concerning transactions where one acted as agent for the other." Although there was no evidence of any express arrangement between the plaintiff and his wife, the court allowed her to testify as to the incidents of the alleged trespass on the ground that, during the husband's absence, the wife was by implication his agent to defend his possession. See also Butts v. Newton, 29 Wis. 632; Moore v. Simpson, 5 Little (Ky.), 49.

which is incident to the relation of the parties.⁵ But when the agency is found to exist, the wife may bind her husband-principal to the same extent and in the same manner as any other agent might bind him under the same circumstances.

How far the relation of agent of her husband may impose upon the wife duties and obligations to third persons with whom she deals, is a question suggested in a preceding section. How far the same relation may impose upon the wife contractual obligations to her husband, is a question which belongs rather to a treatise upon their mutual rights and duties than to this.

The mere absence of the husband, however, would not usually justify a sale by the wife of his property. Krebs v. O'Grady, 23 Ala. 726, 53 Am. Dec. 312. Nor the return by her of goods ordered by him and shipped to him. Richelieu Wine Co. v. Ragland, 43 Ill. App. 257.

Husband's ratification, acquiescence, etc.—Where a wife without previous authority makes a contract even in her own name, or does something else really on her husband's behalf, the husband may ratify simply by bringing suit relying upon that act. See Grant et al. v. White, 42 Mo. 285; Evans v. Crawford Co., etc., Insurance Co., 130 Wis. 189, 18 Am. St. R. 1009, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485. See also Wright v. Couch, 113 S. W. 321 (Tex. Civ. App.), in which the ratification was accomplished by retaining in the house the piano which the wife had bought on credit.

In Stotts v. Bates, 73 Ill. App. 640, the husband was held bound upon an agreement that board should be paid for her maintenance in her daughter's home, made orally by the wife in his presence and without his objection.

In Cook v. Newby, 213 Mo. 471, a wife had written a letter making an offer on behalf of her husband to the defendant; the defendant offered in evidence the letter with evidence that it was written with the husband's knowledge and at his request. It was held error to exclude the letter.

In Shuman v. Steinel, 129 Wis. 422, 116 Am. St. R. 961, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.)

1048, 9 Ann. Cas. 1064, it was held that when a wife had without previous authority signed in her own name a contract for the purchase of books, the husband was not bound thereby, even although he had subsequently said that he would pay if he had ordered. The court thought that this was no ratification because she had not purported to act as agent.

⁵ Pickler v. Pickler, 180 Ill. 168; McNemar v. Cohen, 115 Ill. App. 31; Nat. Fire Ins. Co. v. Wagley (Tex. Civ. App.), 68 S. W. 819; McBride v. Adams, 84 N. Y. Supp. 1060; Heyert v. Reubman, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 797; Ross v. Dunn, 130 Mich. 443; Martin v. Oakes, 42 N. Y. Misc. 201; Essington v. Neill, 21 Ill. 139 (dictum); Thompson v. Brown, 121 Ga. 814; Colby v. Thompson, 16 Colo. App. 271; Syring v. Zelenski, 77 N. J. L. 406; Ness v. Singer Co., 68 Minn. 237. See also Howe v. Finnegan, 61 N. Y. App. Div. 610.

In Brown v. Woodward, 75 Conn. 254, in which the question of fact was whether the wife had been the defendant's agent to borrow money, the court held that the relationship of husband and wife was not enough of itself to constitute the wife agent, but that it was evidence which they might consider on the question of agency. The court said, "The acts of his wife would more readily be supposed to have been with his knowledge and authority than would those of a stranger."

§ 168. — Wife as husband's sub-agent.—Where the husband is agent for a third person, the wife as such is in no sense the sub-agent of the principal, or the agent of her husband in the performance of his duties to the principal, so as to bind either one for her acts. The husband might make her his sub-agent on his own responsibility, or he could make her such with the principal's express or implied consent, but she would not stand in either relation simply because she was the agent's wife.⁶

§ 169. Husband as agent for his wife.—It has been seen that within the limits of her power under modern statutes to enter into contracts, acquire, manage and dispose of property and carry on business a married woman may act by agent,⁷ and it is well settled that her husband may be the agent. A husband has, however, by virtue of his relation alone, no implied power to act as the agent of his wife in the transaction of her business.⁸ Whatever authority he exercises in

⁶ While an attorney was absent from home, a letter came to him, containing a draft for collection. His wife opened the letter and received the money upon the draft, but the money never reached the principal. Held, not payment. Day v. Boyd, 53 Tenn. (6 Heisk.) 458.

⁷ Ante, § 148.

⁸ Hoffman v. McFadden, 56 Ark. 217, 35 Am. St. R. 101; Wagoner v. Silva, 139 Cal. 559; Steele v. Gold Fissure Co., 42 Colo. 529, 126 Am. St. R. 177; Dussoulas v. Thomas, 6 Pennewell (Del.), 1; Jordan v. Delaware Tel. & Tel. Co., — Del. —, 75 Atl. 1014; Foertsch v. Germuller, 9 D. C. App. 351; Rheam v. Martin, 26 D. C. App. 181; Byne v. Corker, 100 Ga. 445; Vizard v. Moody, 119 Ga. 918; Devine v. McMillan, 61 Ill. App. 571; Pratt v. Davis, 118 Ill. App. 161. (While the wife still has lucid intervals of complete sanity and when no emergency exists, the husband is not authorized, merely as husband, to consent to a serious operation upon her.) McLaren v. Hall, 26 Iowa, 297; Price v. Seydel, 46 Iowa, 696; Spratt v. Hugard, 5 Ky. L. R. 422; Hayes v. Walker, 25 Ky. L. R. 1045, 76 S. W. 1099; Aiken v. Robinson, 52 La. 925; Succession of Sangpiel, 114 La. 767; Steward v. Church, 108 Me. 83; Taylor v. Weislager, 90 Md. 414;

Wait v. Baldwin, 60 Mich. 622, 1 Am. St. R. 551; Just v. State Bank, 132 Mich. 600; Detroit Lumber Co. v. Cleff, 164 Mich. 276; Anderson v. Gregg, 44 Miss. 170; Crawford v. Redus, 54 Miss. 700; Henry v. Sneed, 99 Mo. 407, 17 Am. St. R. 580; McCullum v. Boughton, 132 Mo. 601, 35 L. R. A. 480; Cox v. Railroad, 111 Mo. App. 394; State v. Dickmann, 146 Mo. App. 396; Norfolk Nat'l Bank v. Nenow, 50 Neb. 429; Cate v. Rollins, 69 N. H. 426; Aarons v. Klein, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 639; Kurtz v. Potter, 44 (N. Y.) App. Div. 262, aff'd 167 N. Y. 586; Garber v. Spirak, 114 N. Y. Suppl. 762; Ricks v. Wilson, 154 N. C. 282; Stichtenoth v. Rife, 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 546, 3 O. C. D. 575; Cushman v. Masterson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 64 S. W. 1031; Laufer v. Powell, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 604; Stroter v. Brackenridge, 102 Tex. 386; Red River Nat'l Bank v. Bray, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 132 S. W. 968; Reed v. Newcomb, 64 Vt. 49; Drake v. Drake, 142 Wis. 602.

Statutory Agency of Husband. In a few states, the husband has been at times made the statutory manager of his wife's separate estate. See for example, Sencerbox v. First Nat. Bank, 14 Idaho, 95; Gross v. Pigg, 73 Miss. 286.

that capacity must be derived as in the case of any other agent from her prior appointment either express or implied, or be confirmed by her subsequent ratification. He may, however, be authorized in the same manner and be invested with the same power and authority as any other agent, and when duly authorized his acts bind her, within the limits of her capacity, and of his authority, to the same extent as though she acted in person.⁹

⁹ Louisville Coffin Co., v. Stokes, 78 Ala. 372; Hoene v. Pollak, 118 Ala. 617, 72 Am. St. R. 189; Reeves v. McNeill, 127 Ala. 175; Hickey v. Thompson, 52 Ark. 234; Puget Sound Lumber Co. v. Krug, 89 Cal. 237; Foster v. Jones, 78 Ga. 150; Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. 22; Haight v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624; Walker v. Carrington, 74 Ill. 446; Patten v. Patten, 75 Ill. 446; Cubberly v. Scott, 98 Ill. 38; Bennett v. Stout, 98 Ill. 47; Richards v. Lumber Co., 169 Ill. 238; Amer. Express Co. v. Lankford, 2 Ind. Ter. 18; Rowell v. Klein, 44 Ind. 290, 15 Am. Rep. 235; Lichtenberger v. Graham, 50 Ind. 288; Griffin v. Ransdell, 71 Ind. 440; Pattison v. Babcock, 130 Ind. 474; Taylor v. Angel, 162 Ind. 670; Colt v. Lawrenceburg, etc., Co., 44 Ind. App. 122; McLaren v. Hall, 26 Iowa, 297; Hamilton v. Hooper, 46 Iowa, 515, 26 Am. Rep. 161; Meylink v. Rhea, 123 Iowa, 310; Rathke v. Tyler, 136 Iowa, 284; Munger v. Baldrige, 41 Kan. 236, 13 Am. St. R. 273; Wilkinson v. Elliott, 43 Kan. 590, 19 Am. St. R. 158; Jones v. Read, 1 La. Ann. 200; Maxcy Mfg. Co. v. Burnham, 89 Me. 538, 56 Am. St. R. 436; Coolidge v. Smith, 129 Mass. 554; Arnold v. Spurr, 130 Mass. 347; Duggan v. Wright, 157 Mass. 228; Shane v. Lyons, 172 Mass. 199, 70 Am. St. R. 261; Rankin v. West, 25 Mich. 195; McBain v. Seligman, 58 Mich. 294; First Comm. Bank v. Newton, 117 Mich. 433; Farley v. Stroeh, 68 Mo. App. 85; Eystra v. Capelle, 61 Mo. 578; Rodgers v. Pike County Bank, 69 Mo. 590; Ragan v. Railroad Co., 111 Mo. 456; Long v. Martin, 152 Mo. 668; Knappen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491; Ross v. Baldwin, 65 Miss. 570; Reed v. Morton, 24 Neb. 760, 1 L. R. A. 736,

8 Am. St. R. 247; Harris v. Weir-Shugart Co., 51 Neb. 483; Taylor v. Wands, 55 N. J. Eq. 491, 62 Am. St. R. 818; Elliott v. Bodine, 59 N. J. L. 567; Black v. McQuaid, 75 N. J. L. (46 Vroom.), 639, (authority by implication); Third Nat'l Bank v. Guenther, 123 N. Y. 568, 20 Am. St. R. 780; Wronkow v. Oakley, 133 N. Y. 505, 28 Am. St. R. 661, 16 L. R. A. 209; Bazemore v. Mountain, 121 N. C. 59; Stout v. Perry, 152 N. C. 312, 136 Am. St. R. 826; Mitchell v. Jodon, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 304; Baxter v. Maxwell, 115 Pa. 469; Bodey v. Thakara, 143 Pa. 171, 24 Am. St. R. 526; Harrisburg Nat'l Bank v. Bradshaw, 178 Pa. 180, 34 L. R. A. 597; Quebec Bank v. Jacobs, Rep. Jud. Que., 23 C. S. 167; Brown v. Thompson, 31 S. C. 426, 17 Am. St. R. 40; Scottish Mortg. Co. v. Deas, 35 S. C. 42, 28 Am. St. R. 832; Allen v. Garrison, 92 Tex. 546; Richmond v. Voorhees, 10 Wash. 316; Whiting v. Doughton, 31 Wash. 327; Trapnell v. Conklyn, 37 W. Va. 242, 38 Am. St. R. 30; Weisbrod v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 18 Wis. 35, 86 Am. Dec. 743; Austin v. Austin, 45 Wis. 523; Lavassar v. Washburne, 50 Wis. 200; Mayers v. Kaiser, 85 Wis. 382, 39 Am. St. R. 849, 21 L. R. A. 623; Wood v. Armour, 88 Wis. 488, 43 Am. St. R. 918; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 42 L. Ed. 658.

"The authority of a husband to act for his wife in the matter of making a loan will not be presumed from the circumstance that he has acted for her in other matters, but must be proved, like any other fact, by competent legal evidence." Three Rivers Nat. Bank v. Gilchrist, 83 Mich. 253

§ 170. — The usual attributes of agency also attach. Notice to her agent is notice to her,¹⁰ representations made by him affect her,¹¹ the incidents of undisclosed agency apply to her,¹² as in other cases of agency. The duties and disabilities of an agent also apply to him. Thus he cannot, for example, use his power for his own advantage.¹³

Authority given by a married woman to her husband to sign her name as surety for his benefit does not include authority to sign her name as principal. Farmington Savings Bank v. Buzzell, 61 N. H. 612. Nor will authority to manage her plantation authorize him to bind her by negotiable paper. Folger v. Peterkin, 39 La. Ann. 815. Authority to a husband to deposit his wife's note in a bank does not include authority to collect the note or to dispose of the proceeds. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Nenow, 50 Neb. 429.

A power of attorney from a wife to her husband to release a mortgage is not evidence to show him to be a general agent. Trimble v. Thorson, 80 Iowa, 246. The mere fact that the wife owns the premises upon which her husband carries on his business, does not tend to show that he does so as her agent. Dickerson v. Rogers, 114 N. Y. 405; Willson v. Underhill, 83 Hun (N. Y.), 233; Jones v. Harrell, 110 Ga. 373.

By allowing her husband to manage and to dispose of the products of her farm and thereby making him agent to manage the farm, a wife does not by implication give him general power to sell. Saunders v. King, 119 Iowa, 291. And in general the husband agent can bind his wife only by acts within the scope of his authority. Joplin v. Freeman, 125 Mo. App. 117; Slaughter v. Elliot, 138 Mo. App. 692; Taylor v. Taylor, 54 Ore. 560.

The fact of the husband's agency for his wife can not be established by his declarations. Sanford v. Pollock, 105 N. Y. 450; Jarvis v. Schaefer, 105 N. Y. 289; Three Rivers Nat. Bank v. Gilchrist, 83 Mich. 253; Ferris v. Baker, 127 Cal. 520; Bank of Ravenna v. Dobbins, 96 Mo. App. 693; Brown v. Daugherty, 120 Fed. 526; First Nat. Bank v. Leland, 122 Ala. 289; Baer

v. Terry, 105 La. 479; Jones v. Harrell, 110 Ga. 373. But, subject to the statutes governing the competency of the husband as a witness against his wife, it may be shown by his testimony. American Express Co. v. Lankford, 2 Ind. Ter. 18; Long v. Martin, 152 Mo. 668; Christian v. Smith, 85 Mo. App. 117; Anderson v. Ames, 151 Mass. 11; Paulsen v. Hall, 39 Kan. 365; Roberts v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 90 Wis. 210.

Secret limitations upon the husband's general or apparent authority have no other effect than in other cases. Bates v. Holladay, 31 Mo. App. 162; Cowie v. Nat'l Bank, 147 Wis. 124.

Where written authority would be requisite in other cases it is requisite when the husband is agent. Shanks v. Michael, 4 Cal. App. 553.

Some statutes require that the authority given by a married woman shall be in writing. First Nat. Bank v. Leland, 122 Ala. 289.

¹⁰ Pringle v. Dunn, 37 Wis. 449, 19 Am. Rep. 772; Allen v. Garrison, 92 Tex. 546; Tilleny v. Wolverton, 50 Minn. 419; Weightman v. Washington Critic Co., 4 D. C. App. 136; Forsythe v. Brandenburg, 154 Ind. 588; Copeland v. Dixie Co. (Ala. App.), 57 So. 124; Elias Brewing Co. v. Boeger, 74 Misc. (N. Y.) 547.

¹¹ Knappen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491. See also Allen v. Garrison, supra; Quarg v. Scher, 136 Cal. 406; Deering & Co. v. Veal, 25 Ky. L. R. 1809; Kelley v. Andrews, 102 Iowa, 119; Enslin v. Allen, 160 Ala. 529; Bell v. McJones, 151 N. C. 85.

¹² Puget Sound Lumber Co. v. Krug, 89 Cal. 237; Harris v. Silverman, 154 Mo. App. 694.

¹³ Arnett v. Glenn, 52 Ark. 253, as by taking his own debt in payment of an account due her.

The third person, also, is bound in the same way and to the same extent as in any other case.¹⁴

§ 171. — Proof required.—Because of the relation existing between them and of the opportunities which it affords for coercion and evasion, it has been held that the evidence of his agency, whether it is sought to be established by the wife's prior appointment or her subsequent ratification, must be clear and satisfactory, and sufficiently strong to explain and remove the equivocal character in which the wife is placed.¹⁵ This rule, however, it is held, does not mean that a

¹⁴ Runyon v. Snell, 116 Ind. 164, 9 Am. St. Rep. 839; Magerstadt v. Schaefer, 110 Ill. App. 166, 213 Ill. 351. See also Wasem v. Raben, 45 Ind. App. 221; Hunt v. Rhodes Bros., 207 Mass. 30. See also Taylor v. Minigus, 66 Ill. App. 70.

¹⁵ Rowell v. Klein, 44 Ind. 290; McLaren v. Hall, 26 Iowa, 297; Eystra v. Capelle, 61 Mo. 578; Mead v. Spalding, 94 Mo. 43; Alexander v. Perkins, 71 Mo. App. 286; Bridges v. Russell, 30 Mo. App. 258; Francis v. Reeves, 137 N. C. 269.

In McLaren v. Hall, supra, Cole, J., says, at page 305: "the husband may act as agent for the wife. In order to bind her, however, he must be previously authorized to act as her agent, or she must subsequently with express or implied knowledge of his act, ratify it. The evidence necessary to establish a ratification by the wife of a contract made by her husband as her agent, must be of a stronger and more satisfactory character than that required to establish a ratification by the husband of the act of the wife as his agent, or than as between independent parties. And this for the reason that (in the general experience of the past, at least, if not in the philosophy of the present), the wife is under the control of, and subordinate to, the husband; and neither good law nor sound reason will require the wife to destroy the peace of her family and endanger the marriage relation by open repudiation or hostile conduct toward her husband, in order to save her property from liability for his unauthorized contracts. Of course it is necessary in every case, in order to bind her that he should, at least, claim to act as her agent; and her ratification should be shown by those unmistakable acts or declarations which evince a knowledge of the contract by which she is sought to be bound, and an intention to adopt or ratify it as her own." See also Sanford v. Pollock, 105 N. Y. 450.

It is, on the contrary, suggested in Cattell v. Ferguson, 3 Wash. 541, that "less proof would probably suffice to establish the agency of the husband in such matters [the erection of a house on the wife's land] than where the relationship of husband and wife does not exist." See also Simes v. Rockwell, 156 Mass. 372, 31 N. E. 484; Jefferds v. Alvord, 151 Mass. 94; Henderson v. State, 55 Tex. Cr. R. 640.

In Hoene v. Pollak, 118 Ala. 617, 72 Am. St. R. 189, a wife who could not read or write had always entrusted to her husband the management and control of her stock in the H. Coal Co. He had voted it in favor of transferring all the assets to a new company, and had received the new stock in her name. It was found that she knew of the transaction, and it was held, she was bound by his acts and could not have the deed set aside.

Mechanics' Liens on Wife's Property.—In Wheaton v. Trimble, 145 Mass. 345, 1 Am. St. R. 463, where the wife's real estate was managed by the husband "just as he used to when it was his" it was held that he had authority to create a mechanic's lien upon it. Her knowledge and personal direction of the work different principle as to the weight of evidence, is to be applied in these than in other civil cases. Where the attention of the jury has been properly directed to the considerations involved, the question of agency or not is to be determined by the fair preponderance of the evidence.¹⁶ showed she assented to this exercise of his authority. The same knowledge was of importance in Richards v. Spry Lumber Co., 169 Ill. 238, in which the wife was bound by an agreement to pay the sub-contractor before the general contractor, where the husband had general charge of the property and had executed the general contract as agent of the wife.

Where the husband was in charge merely for this particular operation, but the wife knew of the work and did not object, she is bound by the lien created. Jobe v. Hunter, 165 Pa. 5, 44 Am. St. R. 639.

On similar facts, even her express objection could not limit the authority, according to Maxey Mfg. Co. v. Burnham, 89 Me. 538, 56 Am. St. R. 436, on the ground that she was the responsible party even though unknown to the material man, and she could limit the actual agency only by bringing her objection to his notice.

Other cases deny that the actual agency was ever in existence against her positive objection. The lower court was reversed in Zeigler v. Galvin, 45 Hun (N. Y.), 44, because it found as fact that the husband and wife were agreed that the husband should pay for the work, and then found, as matter of law, that he was only her agent because it was her house, the work was done at her request, and for her benefit. Here knowledge and assent to the work were not conclusive of agency. On the same ground, the lower court was sustained in requiring the plaintiff to prove the wife's actual intent that the husband should act as her agent. "The wife might very naturally acquiesce in having the proposed building erected * * * and yet most strenuously object, if thereby her property was to be encumbered."

Rust-Owen Lumber Co. v. Holt, 60 Neb. 80, 83 Am. St. R. 512. Also Hoffman v. McFadden, 56 Ark. 217, 35 Am. St. R. 101.

Where the wife takes an active part in directing the work, changing the plans, or procuring the contract, she is bound by the acts of the husband. Bumgartner v. Hall, 163 Ill. 136; Bevan v. Thackara, 143 Pa. 182, 24 Am. St. R. 529; Spears v. Lawrence, 10 Wash. 368, 45 Am. St. R. 789. But her interest must be more significant than the participation that any woman might take in her husband's project. Hoffman v. McFadden, supra.

In Bevan v. Thackara, supra, the court said that to establish the agency it must be proved that the contract was reasonably necessary for the improvement of the separate estate of the wife. But a finding of agency was sustained in Maxey Mfg. Co. v. Burnham, supra, in spite of the fact that the husband afterward sold the lumber, and it did not go to benefit the estate directly.

See also Bodey v. Thackara, 143 Pa. 171, 24 Am. St. R. 526.

¹⁶ In Long v. Martin, 152 Mo. 668, the court referring to the cases above cited said: "Upon the strength of these cases it is contended that when a question of this kind is submitted to a jury under conflicting evidence they should be instructed to find in favor of the wife if a doubt remains in their minds although a fair preponderance of the evidence is against her. We do not think that is the law. We recognize the wisdom and justice of the principles announced in the cases above referred to. It would be very unjust to draw the same inferences from a married woman's behavior in reference to her husband's management of her property as we would naturally draw

But these considerations are important. If, for example, a man buys a sewing machine or piano for his wife, or makes repairs upon her house which is their dwelling, he may be doing it on his own account as her husband, or on her account as her agent. Surely, if he is to bind her as her agent, it should appear that any acts or acquiescence on her part, relied upon as showing her authority, should indicate approval of his acts as her agent and not merely acquiescence in what he does as her husband. If the act be one which he himself ought to do as husband, still clearer evidence should be required before she is charged for it as his principal.

§ 172. — Statutory provisions.—In some states, the rules of agency are changed by statute when they would apply to an agency of the husband for his wife. Some statutes forbid such agency for certain purposes.¹⁷ Another statute giving the husband the right of management of his wife's property is construed to make him her agent¹⁸ in contracts concerning that property but not generally.¹⁹ Another statute provides that where, without written recorded contract between husband and wife changing the relation, the husband carries on business with the means of the wife, such business shall be held to be on her account by her husband as agent.²⁰ Other statutes make from the conduct of parties not bearing that relation to each other. If it be a question of implied agency, a ratification, or estoppel, the jury should be so cautioned in instructions that they would know how to distinguish wifely conduct from business acts. The trial judge should magnify the office of wife over that of the mere woman of business. But after the jury has been properly cautioned and instructed along that line so that they will know how to appreciate and weigh the evidence they should render their verdict according to its fair preponderance." See also Holden v. Kutscher, 17 N. Y. Misc. 540; Arnold v. Spurr, 130 Mass. 347.

And the burden of proof is of course upon him who relies upon the agency. Sanders v. Brown, 145 Ala. 665.

¹⁷ Van Brunt v. Wallace, 88 Minn. 116; Sutton v. Brekke, 117 Minn. 519 (all contracts between husband and wife as to her real estate, void); Sanford v. Johnson, 24 Minn. 172 (to convey any interest in his wife's realty, which was held to cover giving a lease). In Sawyer v. Biggart, 114 Iowa, 489, under a statute which provided that when property was owned by husband or wife, the other could have no interest therein which could be the subject of contract between them, it was held that neither could make a contract constituting the other his attorney to convey or release the expectant or potential interest in the property of the other.

¹⁸ See Dority v. Dority, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 216, aff'd 96 Tex. 215; Sencerbox v. Bank, 14 Idaho, 95.

¹⁹ Owens v. New York, etc., Land Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 32 S. W. 1057; Parker v. Wood, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 506; Sutherin v. Chesney, 85 Kan. 122.

²⁰ This was so even to the extent of charging her by virtue of the statute with a liability as principal. Johnson v. Jones, 82 Miss. 483.

both husband and wife liable for family expenses on debts incurred by either.²¹

§ 173. Corporations as agents.—Within the scope of its corporate powers, unless there are express provisions in its charter or constating instruments to the contrary, a corporation may act as agent, either for an individual, a partnership or another corporation.²² Many of the great corporations of the country are organized for this express purpose under statutes or charters conferring and defining their powers and the methods of executing them; ²³ but even in other cases, authority so to act might be implied as auxiliary to their main purposes.

But where the power is not expressly conferred and cannot be thus implied, the corporation could not lawfully undertake to act as agent; ²⁴ though if it had in fact done so it would not be permitted, in many jurisdictions at least, to escape responsibility by alleging that its act was ultra vires.

§ 174. Partnership as agents.—The same rule applies to the case of partnerships. They may be organized expressly for that purpose, or they may, within the limits of their powers, undertake to act as agent as an incident to their general business. Where authority is thus delegated to a firm, it is an appointment of the firm as the agent, and not of the individual members as several and separate agents. Hence in the absence of anything to show a contrary intent, either partner may execute the power, and the act of one in that respect is the act of the partnership and is in strict pursuance of the power.²⁵

²¹ See Mandell Bros. v. Fogg, 182 Mass. 582, 94 Am. St. R. 667, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 426, in which the Massachusetts court refused to enforce the Illinois statute against a Massachusetts woman for goods bought in Illinois by her husband without her knowledge while they were both temporarily in Illinois.

²² Anderson v. First Nat. Bank, 5 N. Dak. 451. (This case held that a corporation might properly act as agent of its debtor in selling his security which it held as collateral. Its dictum was that a mere agency to collect would be ultra vires, but that the bank which had undertaken so to act, to its principal's injury, would be estopped to plead ultra vires.) San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego Flume Co., 108 Cal. 549, 29 L. R. A. 839; McWilliams v. Detroit

Mills Co., 31 Mich. 275; Land, etc., Co. v. Gillam, 49 S. Car. 345; Dye v. Virginia Midland Ry. Co., 20 D. C. App. 63; Green-Grieb-Sherman Co. v. Quinlen Co., 148 Ill. App. 1. See also Jemison v. Citizens' Savings Bank, 122 N. Y. 135, 19 Am. St. R. 482, 9 L. R. A. 708.

²³ Killingsworth v. Trust Co., 18 Oreg. 351, 17 Am. St. R. 737, 7 L. R. A. 638.

²⁴ Peck-Williamson, etc., Co. v. Board of Education, 6 Okla. 279. A corporation organized under a general act providing for general business corporations cannot hire attorneys and do a law business. In re Bense, 68 Misc. 70.

²⁵ Deakin v. Underwood, 37 Minn. 98, 5 Am. St. Rep. 827; Eggleston v. Boardman, 37 Mich. 14; McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. Dak. 497; Frost v.

§ 175. Alien enemies as agents.—While it seems to be generally agreed “that an agent constituted before a war may continue to represent his principal in transactions not contrary to the policy or interests of the government of the agent’s residence, though the principal be an enemy resident under the hostile government,”²⁶ it is said also to be agreed that “the agency must have been created before the war began, for there is no power to appoint an agent for any purpose, after hostilities have actually commenced.”²⁷

2. Disqualification from Adverse Interest.

§ 176. What here included.—A person may be disqualified to act as agent in a particular case not by reason of any personal disability which would disqualify him for acting as agent generally, but merely by reason of some peculiar relation which he already occupies towards the subject matter of the agency or towards one of the parties to be dealt with. There will be occasion to consider more fully the principles involved when dealing with the duties of the agent to his principal²⁸ and other subjects,²⁹ but the matter requires brief attention here, as furnishing one of the reasons why the relation of principal and agent should not be assumed at all in particular cases.

§ 177. One cannot be agent if duty and interest conflict.—A person will not be permitted to take upon himself the character of an agent, where, on account of his relation to others, or on account of his own personal interest, he would be compelled to assume incompatible and inconsistent duties and obligations. An agent owes to his principal a loyal adherence to his interest,³⁰ and it would be a fraud upon the principal and would contravene sound public policy, to permit a person, without the full knowledge and consent of his proposed principal, to enter into a relation involving such a duty, when his allegiance had already been pledged to one having adverse interests, or when his own personal interests would be antagonistic to those of his principal.³¹

Erath Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831; McCulloch Land & C. Co. v. Whitefort, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 314.

Where a firm executes a deed as agent one of the partners who signs for the firm may also acknowledge the execution. McCulloch L. & C. Co. v. Whitefort, supra.

²⁶ See United States v. Grossmayer, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 72, 19 L. Ed. 627; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 95 U. S. 425, 24 L. Ed. 453; Hubbard v. Matthews, 54 N. Y. 43, 13 Am. Rep.

562; Buford v. Speed, 74 Ky. (11 Bush.) 338; Small v. Lumpkin, 69 Va. (28 Gratt.) 832.

²⁷ In United States v. Grossmayer, supra.

²⁸ See post, Book IV, Chap. II.

²⁹ See post, Book IV, Chap. II, Chap. VII.

³⁰ See post, Book IV, Chap. II.

³¹ See Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133, 18 Am. Rep. 459; Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158, 20 Am. Rep. 66; Scribner v. Collar, 40 Mich. 375, 29 Am. Rep.

With such full knowledge and consent, however, he may usually be agent.

§ 178. One cannot be agent of both parties—When.—A person may act as agent of two or more principals in the same transaction, if his duties to each are not such as to require him to do incompatible things;³² or if he is employed in a capacity which does not imply trust and confidence, as where he is a mere middleman who brings parties together and then leaves them to bargain for themselves.³³ But wherever from the nature of his employment, each of two principals with opposing interests is entitled to the benefits of the agent's judgment, discretion or personal influence, he will not be permitted to act as agent of both parties, except with their full knowledge and consent.³⁴ If, however, 541; Lynch v. Fallon, 11 R. I. 311, 23 Am. Rep. 458; Bell v. McConnell, 37 Ohio St. 396, 41 Am. Rep. 528; Sessions v. Payne, 113 Ga. 955; Morey v. Laird, 108 Iowa, 670; Marsh v. Buchan, 46 N. J. Eq. 595; Hammond v. Bookwalter, 12 Ind. App. 177; Campbell v. Baxter, 41 Neb. 729; Shepard v. Hill, 6 Wash. 605; Colbert v. Shepherd, 89 Va. 401; Hafner v. Herron, 165 Ill. 242; Armstrong v. O'Brien, 83 Tex. 635; Friesenhahn v. Bushnell, 47 Minn. 443; Hobson v. Peake, 44 La. Ann. 383; Euneau v. Rieger, 105 Mo. 659; and see, generally, the cases cited in following sections.

³² Nolte v. Hulbert, 37 Ohio St. 445; Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362; Scott v. Mann, 36 Tex. 157; Cottom v. Halliday, 59 Ill. 176; Sheperd v. Lanfear, 5 La. 336, 25 Am. Dec. 181; Northrup v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 420, 33 Am. Rep. 815; Adams Mining Co. v. Senter, 26 Mich. 73; Union Planters' Bank v. Edgell (Miss.), 33 So. 409.

³³ See Post, Brokers; Pollatscheck v. Goodwin, 17 N. Y. Misc. 587; Casey v. Donovan, 65 Mo. App. 521.

³⁴ Hinckley v. Arey, supra; Copeland v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 197; New York Ins. Co. v. National Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 85; Meyer v. Hanchett, 39 Wis. 419, s. c. 43 Wis. 246; Greenwood v. Spring, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 375; Sumner v. Charlotte, etc. R. R. Co., 78 N. C. 289; Shirland v. Monitor Iron Works, 41

Wis. 162; Bray v. Morse, 41 Wis. 343; Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133, 18 Am. Rep. 459; Bell v. McConnell, 37 Ohio St. 396, 41 Am. Rep. 528; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Farnsworth v. Brunquest, 36 Wis. 202; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494, 79 Am. Dec. 756; Walker v. Osgood, 98 Mass. 348, 93 Am. Dec. 168; Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158, 20 Am. Rep. 66; Lynch v. Fallon, 11 R. I. 311, 23 Am. Rep. 458; Pugsley v. Murray, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 245; Everhart v. Searle, 71 Penn. St. 256; Scribner v. Collar, 40 Mich. 375, 29 Am. Rep. 241; Sessions v. Payne, 113 Ga. 955; Clendenning v. Hawk, 10 N. Dak. 90; Alta Investment Co. v. Worden, 25 Colo. 215; Tinsley v. Penningman, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 591; British Am. Assur. Co. v. Cooper, 6 Colo. App. 25; Greenwood Ice & Coal Co. v. Georgia Home Ins. Co., 72 Miss. 46; Armstrong v. O'Brien, 83 Tex. 635; Morey v. Laird, 108 Iowa, 670; Hammond v. Bookwalter, 12 Ind. App. 177; Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald Const. Co., 44 Neb. 463, 160 U. S. 556; Campbell v. Baxter, 41 Neb. 729; Shepard v. Hill, 6 Wash. 605; Leathers v. Canfield, 117 Mich. 277, 45 L. R. A. 33; Hafner v. Herron, 165 Ill. 242; Marsh v. Buchan, 46 N. J. Eq. 595; Black v. Miller, 71 Ill. App. 342; Van Vlissingen v. Blum, 92 Ill. App. 145; Hampton v. Lackens, 72 Ill. App. 442; Perkins v. Quarry Co., 11 N. Y. Misc. 328; Chapman v. Currie, 51 Mo. App.

having full knowledge of his relations to each, they see fit mutually to confide in him, there can be no legal objection to such an employment,³⁵ nor will either of the principals be permitted afterwards to escape responsibility because of such double employment.³⁶

§ 179. One cannot be party and agent for opposite party.—For the same reason, one cannot, without the full knowledge and consent of the opposite party, be both a party and the agent for the opposite party in the same transaction. Thus, as will be more fully explained hereafter,³⁷ except with the full knowledge and consent of his principal, an agent appointed to buy or lease lands or goods for his principal cannot buy or lease of himself; and an agent to sell or lease lands or goods for his principal cannot sell or lease to himself,³⁸ and the like; nor can an agent authorized to receive payment for his principal bind the latter by the receipt of money due from himself.³⁹

As will also be more fully stated later, what he cannot do directly, he will not be permitted to do indirectly; it is not material that he had no fraudulent intent, or that the principal sustained no actual injury.⁴⁰

§ 180. Other party as agent to sign memorandum under Statute of Frauds.—While there does not appear to be any reason why, in the ordinary case of a written contract or memorandum, one party may not, in the presence and by the direction of the other at least, sign the latter's name to the contract or memorandum made between them,⁴¹

³⁵ Adams Mining Co. v. Senter, 26 Mich. 73; Colwell v. Keystone Iron Co., 36 Mich. 53; Fitzsimmons v. Southern Express Co., 40 Ga. 330, 2 Am. Rep. 577; Rowe v. Stevens, 53 N. Y. 621; Joslin v. Cowee, 56 N. Y. 626; Whiting v. Saunders, 22 N. Y. Misc. 539; Rolling Stock Co. v. Railroad, 34 Ohio St. 450; Leekins v. Nordyke, 66 Iowa, 471; Alexander v. Northwestern University, 57 Ind. 466; Rosenthal v. Drake, 82 Mo. App. 358, ³⁶ Fitzsimmons v. Southern Express Co., supra; DeSteiger v. Hollington, 17 Mo. App. 387; Robinson v. Jarvis, 25 Mo. App. 421, and cases in preceding notes.

³⁷ See post, Book IV, Chap. II.

³⁸ Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving Co., 11 Mich. 139, 83 Am. Dec. 731; Van Epps v. Van Epps, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 237; Dutton v. Willner, 52 N. Y. 319; Conkey v. Bond, 36 N. Y. 430; Keighler v. Savage Mfg. Co., 12 Md. 383, 71 Am. Dec. 600; Ruckman v. and cases in preceding note.

Bergholz, 37 N. J. L. 437; Bain v. Brown, 56 N. Y. 285; Kerfoot v. Hyman, 52 Ill. 512; Parker v. Vose, 45 Me. 54; White v. War, 26 Ark. 445; Stewart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; Marsh v. Whitmore, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 178, 22 L. Ed. 482; Euneau v. Rieger, 105 Mo. 659; Tilleney v. Wolverton, 46 Minn. 256; Clendenning v. Hawk, 10 N. Dak. 90; Rorebeck v. Van Eaton, 90 Iowa, 82; Colbert v. Shepherd, 89 Va. 401; Finch v. Conrade, 154 Pa. 326; Webb v. Marks, 10 Colo. App. 429; Hodgson v. Raphael, 105 Ga. 480; Burke v. Bours, 92 Cal. 108; Russell v. Bradley, 47 Kan. 438; Friesenhahn v. Bushnell, 47 Minn. 443; Hobson v. Peake, 44 La. Ann. 383; Disbrow v. Secor, 58 Conn. 35; Van Dusen v. Bigelow, 13 N. D. 277.

³⁹ See post, Book IV, Chap. II, Agent's duty of Loyalty.

⁴⁰ See post, Book IV, Chap. II, Agent's duty of Loyalty.

⁴¹ In Bird v. Boulter, 4 B. & Ad. 443, the solicitor general, Sir John Camp-it is held that, in the case of the note or memorandum required by the statutes of frauds, the other party cannot be the agent referred to in the statute.⁴² The theory is that it would defeat the whole purpose of the statute if the other party, who could not under the statute directly establish the contract by oral testimony, may do so indirectly by establishing by such testimony that he was made the agent of the other to sign the note or memorandum.

3. Incompetence from Lack of Professional or Other Similar Standing.

§ 181. Lack of professional standing may disqualify.—Incapacity to act as agent in a given situation may also arise from the lack of some required professional training, standing or position. Thus though one may have the right to prosecute or defend his cause in court, "either in person or by an attorney or agent of his choice," it is held that, if he chooses to appear by agent, that agent must be an attorney at law.⁴³

Similar questions would arise if the authority could only be exercised upon the floor of a particular stock exchange, and no one but members of the exchange could act there. So if none but a licensed broker or auctioneer was competent to act, the lack of the necessary license would work a disability.

bell, argued that "at common law, there is nothing to prevent one contracting party from being the agent of the other; an obligor, for instance, from giving an obligee a power of attorney to execute a bond for him; a lessee from executing a lease as attorney of the lessor; a party from accepting a bill by procuration, payable to his own order;—assuming the authority in each case to be complete, which would be matter of evidence."

In Clough v. Clough, 73 Me. 487, 40 Am. Rep. 386, it is said by the court arguendo. "An agent cannot contract with himself. He cannot as agent for the grantor execute a deed to himself. But he can prepare a deed running to himself, even to the signing and sealing, and if the grantor then adopts the deed by personally acknowledging and delivering it, it will be a legal and valid instrument."

⁴² Wright v. Dannah, 2 Camp. 203; Bird v. Boulter, supra; Sharman v. Brandt, L. R. 6 Q. B. 720.

⁴³ Cobb v. Judge, 43 Mich. 290; Harkins v. Murphy, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 568. See also Kelly v. Herb, 147 Pa. 563, where a statutory requirement that a pleading be signed by the party or his attorney was held to mean his attorney at law and not his attorney in fact.

.III.

JOINT PRINCIPALS.

§ 182. One person as agent for several.—What has thus far been said has contemplated the case wherein one person only—natural or artificial—was to be the principal, but other cases may arise wherein a number of persons are interested as principal or principals. Such cases may present a variety of aspects. Thus it may happen that each of a number of persons in no wise related and having neither community nor conflict of interest may chance to appoint the same person as his agent, as where a number of owners of goods consign them for sale to the same factor, or a large number of clients employ the same attorney or broker. Such cases present usually no peculiar aspects. On the other hand, a number of persons having related or similar or identical interests in the same subject matter may be involved, and the questions will be, for example, whether they can appoint or have appointed one person to represent them as their agent; whether all must unite in appointing or whether one can appoint for all; whether all must expressly assent to the appointment; and how, if such an agent be appointed, he shall execute his authority.

With respect of the question of capacity there can ordinarily be little difficulty, the general rule that whatever one may lawfully do in person he can lawfully do by agent applying as well to a number of persons as to one. How the agent is to be appointed, whether one has implied power to appoint for all, and how the authority when conferred shall be executed, are questions of more difficulty.

1. Appointment by Several Principals.

§ 183. Usually all must unite in appointing.—Where several persons having common interests desire to be represented by an agent, it is, in general, true that one of such persons has no implied power to appoint an agent for all and that all must unite in making the appointment. Each may appoint for himself or all unitedly may appoint for all, but one has no implied power to appoint for another or for all. The fact that the parties have common or similar interests or that they may be already associated or related makes ordinarily no difference in the application of the rule. The case of the partnership, immediately to be considered, is the most conspicuous if not the only exception.

§ 184. ——— Must contemplate a joint power.—In order, moreover, to the creation of a really joint power it is essential that the parties shall contemplate an execution which shall bind them all jointly: the mere fact that several individually appoint the same agent is not enough; for in such a case, in the absence of anything indicating a contrary intention, the authority conferred by each will be deemed to be limited to the separate individual business of each principal.⁴⁴

§ 185. Partners.—It is one of the fundamental principles in the law of partnership, that, within the scope of the partnership business, each partner is the agent of all the other partners for the transaction of the partnership affairs, and his acts are the acts of all. The nature of the partnership business may be such as to make the employment of agents and servants necessary or proper, and the employment of them may be the usual and contemplated method of prosecuting the firm's business, and fall within this implied agency of each partner. His appointment of an agent, therefore, within these limits, is an appointment by all, and the acts of the agent are the acts of all.⁴⁵

§ 186. Joint tenants and tenants in common.—In the case of co-tenants, on the other hand, there is no implied authority in each to act for all so as to bind them personally,⁴⁶ and the act of one, or the appointment of an agent by one will, therefore, bind that one only.⁴⁷ All may, of course, join in the appointment or subsequently assent to it, and thus make the agent the agent of them all.⁴⁸

⁴⁴ Harris v. Johnston, 54 Minn. 177, 40 Am. St. Rep. 312.

As to a duty to account to each of several principals severally, see Graham v. Cummings, 208 Pa. 516, enforcing such a duty.

As to apportioning liability, see Schiek v. Warren Mtg. Co., 86 Kan. 812.

⁴⁵ Carley v. Jenkins, 46 Vt. 721; Coons v. Renick, 11 Tex. 134, 60 Am. Dec. 230; Banner Tobacco Co. v. Jenison, 48 Mich. 459; Harvey v. McAdams, 32 Mich. 472; Wheatley v. Tutt, 4 Kan. 240; Charles v. Eshleman, 5 Colo. 107; Clark v. Slate Valley R. Co., 136 Pa. 403, 10 L. R. A. 238; Beckham v. Drake, 9 M. & W. 79. See ante, § 132.

The agent of a partnership is not the agent of the partners individually, but of the partnership as a whole. Johnston v. Brown, 18 La. Ann. 330; Deakin v. Underwood, 37 Minn. 98, 5 Am. St. R. 827.

⁴⁶ Tuttle v. Campbell, 74 Mich. 652, 16 Am. St. R. 652; James v. Darby, 100 Fed. 224; City of St. Louis v. Laclede Gas L. Co., 96 Mo. 197, 9 Am. St. R. 334; Omaha Refining Co. v. Tabor, 13 Colo. 41, 16 Am. St. R. 185, 5 L. R. A. 236; Merritt v. Kewanee, 175 Ill. 537; Baker v. Willard, 171 Mass. 220, 68 Am. St. R. 445, 40 L. R. A. 754; Morrison v. Clark, 89 Me. 103, 56 Am. St. R. 395; Lipscomb v. Watrous, 3 D. C. App. 1; Charleston, etc., R. Co. v. Leech, 33 S. Car. 175, 26 Am. St. R. 667; Union Hosiery Co. v. Hodgson, 72 N. H. 427; Metzger v. Huntington, 139 Ind. 501; Blackledge v. Davis, 129 Iowa, 592; Walker v. Marion, 143 Mich. 27; Lee v. Livingston, 143 Mich. 203; Anderson v. Northrop, 44 Fla. 472. Same of tenants by entireties. Murphy v. Lewis, 76 N. J. L. 141. But see Williamson v. Moore, 10 Idaho, 749.

⁴⁷ Perminter v. Kelly, 18 Ala. 716, 54 Am. Dec. 177; Keay v. Fenwick, 1 C. P. Div. 745; Corlies v. Cumming, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 181; Noe v. Christie, 51 N. Y. 270.

⁴⁸ Keay v. Fenwick, supra; Lyons

§ 187. Associations, clubs, societies and committees.—The case of the voluntary unincorporated association, club, society or committee presents similar questions. May one or more members, less than the entire number, bind all or appoint agents whose acts shall be deemed to be the acts of all? Are the members jointly liable as principals upon contracts purporting to be made in their behalf in carrying out the enterprises which they undertake? Two classes of cases arise in connection with such contracts. One of these is where it is sought to charge the entire membership as principals in dealings had with a smaller number alleged to have been the agents of all. The other is where it is attempted to hold this smaller number—the alleged agents in the former class—directly responsible as principals usually upon the ground that they had assumed to act for a principal having no legal existence. It is with the former class only that it is here proposed to deal, the latter being reserved for subsequent consideration.⁴⁹

In the first place it may be observed that it is now quite generally settled that such organizations, not being organized to carry on business for pecuniary profit, are not partnerships⁵⁰ and that the members are not liable as partners,⁵¹ but that their liability is to be determined upon the rules of principal and agent.⁵² The principle which applies here is the familiar one that no person can be charged upon a contract alleged to have been made upon his responsibility, unless it can be shown that to the making of that contract upon his responsibility, he has given his express or implied assent.⁵³ Without such as-

v. Pyatt, 51 N. J. Eq. 60. All may acquiesce in the act of one as their agent so as to make his act their act. Clute v. Clute, 197 N. Y. 439. 134 Am. St. R. 891, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 146; Ellis v. Snyder, 83 Kan. 638, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 253.

But the joint owner who is authorized agent must act within the scope of the authority conferred. Gillham v. Walker, 135 Ala. 459.

⁴⁹ For cases of the other class, see post. Book IV, Chap. III.

⁵⁰ McCabe v. Goodfellow, 133 N. Y. 89, 17 L. R. A. 204; Ostrom v. Greene, 161 N. Y. 353; Ash v. Guie, 97 Penn. St. 493, 39 Am. Rep. 818; Burt v. Lathrop, 52 Mich. 106; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; Caldicott v. Griffiths, 8 Exch. 898; Todd v. Emly, 7 M. & W. 427, s. c. 8 M. & W. 505; Wise v. Perpetual Trustee Co., [1903] App. Cas. 139; Lafond v. Deems, 81

N. Y. 514; Waller v. Thomas, 4 Daly, 551, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 337; Ferris v. Thaw, 5 Mo. App. 279; Richmond v. Judy, 6 Mo. App. 465; Edgerly v. Gardner, 9 Neb. 130; Austin v. Thompson, 45 N. H. 113; Woodward v. Cowing, 41 Me. 9, 66 Am. Dec. 211; Ehrmantraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333; Teed v. Parsons, 202 Ill. 455.

⁵¹ Lewis v. Tilton, 64 Iowa, 220, 52 Am. Rep. 436, and cases cited in foregoing note.

⁵² Fleming v. Hector, supra; Todd v. Emly, supra, and cases cited in following note.

⁵³ Devoss v. Gray, 22 Ohio St. 169; Newell v. Borden, 128 Mass. 31; Volger v. Ray, 131 Mass. 439; Ash v. Guie, supra; Ray v. Powers, 134 Mass. 22; Ridgely v. Dobson, 3 Watts & S. (Penn.) 118; Lewis v. Tilton, supra; Heath v. Goslin, 80 Mo. 310, 50 Am. Rep. 505; Burt v. Lathrop, 52 sent, therefore, no power arises merely from the existence of the association which will justify one or some of the members in pledging the credit of the others.⁵⁴

§ 188. — How assent may be given.—This assent may be expressed in a variety of ways, and at one of several times. It may have been given in advance by consenting to be bound by all contracts of a certain kind that may be made in the future; it may be given contemporaneously with the making of the contract; and it may also be inferred from a subsequent ratification.

Thus where it is a part of the scheme or purpose of the organization as provided by its articles of association, charter, constitution or by-laws, that certain contracts or obligations in behalf and upon the credit of the organization, may be entered into, either upon the vote of a majority or at the discretion of a committee or officer, or upon any other lawful contingency or event, every person who becomes a member, by so doing impliedly consents, in advance, to be bound by any contract or obligation of the kind contemplated, entered into under the circumstances prescribed.⁵⁵

Where, however, there is no such undertaking to abide by the action of the majority,⁵⁶ or to be bound by contracts entered into by the committee or officers, those only who authorize the making of the contract will be bound. Hence if there be a division of opinion and the con-

Mich. 106; Rice v. Peninsular Club, 52 Mich. 87; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; Sproat v. Porter, 9 Mass. 300; Males v. Murray, 23 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 396.

⁵⁴ McCabe v. Goodfellow, supra; Fleming v. Hector, supra; Todd v. Emly, supra; Caldicott v. Griffiths, supra; Ash v. Guie, supra; Devoss v. Gray, supra; In re St. James' Club, 2 De G., M. & G. 383; Wood v. Finch, 2 F. & F. 447; Bailey v. Macaulay, 19 L. J. Q. B. 73; Wise v. Perpetual Trustee Co., [1903] App. Cas. 139; Murray v. Walker, 83 Iowa, 202; First Nat. Bank v. Rector, 59 Neb. 77; Willis v. Greiner (Tex. Civ. App.), 26 S. W. 858; Sheehy v. Blake, 72 Wis. 411, s. c. 77 Wis. 394, 9 L. R. A. 564, and other cases cited in preceding notes.

⁵⁵ Todd v. Emly, 7 M. & W. 427; Cockerell v. Aucompte, 2 Com. B. (N. S.) 440; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; Devoss v. Gray, supra.

Thus the members of a co-operative association which carries on a store are liable for goods purchased by the manager chosen by the members. Davison v. Holden, 55 Conn. 103, 3 Am. St. R. 40. So also Bennett v. Lathrop, 71 Conn. 613, 71 Am. St. R. 222.

⁵⁶ Where a voluntary association is formed under rules, or a constitution and by-laws and funds are contributed for the purposes prescribed by such constitution, etc., the funds cannot be appropriated to any different purpose by a majority unless that power is given by the constitution, or unless such majority has power by the terms of the constitution, etc., to alter or amend it. Kalbitzer v. Goodhue, 52 W. Va. 435.

However much a majority may control acts within the prescribed purpose, they have no power to extend or alter the agreed purpose. See Brown v. Stoerkel, 74 Mich. 269, 3 tract is authorized by a majority only, the majority only can be held responsible.⁵⁷

But though a member at the time dissents, yet if he subsequently concurs or acquiesces in the making of the contract, he will be bound in the same manner as though his assent had been previously given.⁵⁸

§ 189. — Liability may be limited to funds.—It is entirely possible that both as to other members and third persons, the liability of the members of such an association may, either expressly or by implication, be limited to the fund contributed or agreed to be contributed for its purposes, unless there is something to indicate that they have assented to a wider liability. In the case of the ordinary club, for example, having fixed initiation fees and regular dues, it must be assumed in the ordinary case that the liability of a member is to be limited to the amount so agreed to be contributed, and mere membership or acquiescence in the ordinary affairs of the club cannot be deemed evidence of an assent to be bound beyond this limit. His liability, moreover, for what had been done during his membership would ordinarily cease with the termination of his membership and the payment of his dues for that period. In order to charge him with a personal liability beyond this, something evidencing an assent to be bound in that manner would be required.⁵⁹

It is also entirely possible in other cases than those of clubs that credit was given to funds to be raised, and that no personal liability was to rest upon any member of the association, committee or group.

L. R. A. 430; Mason v. Finch, 28 Mich. 282; Abels v. McKeen, 18 N. J. Eq. 462.

But where no such rules or constitution have been adopted, it is held that the general rules of parliamentary law apply, and that a majority duly acting, may control. Ostrom v. Greene, 161 N. Y. 353.

⁵⁷ Todd v. Emly, supra.

⁵⁸ Heath v. Goslin, supra; Elchbaum v. Irons, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 67, 40 Am. Dec. 540.

⁵⁹ Wise v. Perpetual Trustee Co., [1903] App. Cas. 139; Flemyng v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; In re St. James Club, 2 D. M. & G. 383.

In Wise v. Perpetual Trustee Co., supra, it is said: "Clubs are associations of a peculiar nature. They are societies the members of which are perpetually changing. They are not partnerships; they are not associations for gain; and the feature which distinguishes them from other societies is that no member as such becomes liable to pay to the funds of the society or to any one else any money beyond the subscriptions required by the rules of the club to be paid so long as he remains a member. It is upon this fundamental condition, not usually expressed but understood by every one, that clubs are formed; and this distinguishing feature has been often judicially recognized."

In this case it was held that a member was not liable to contribute for the indemnity of those who had incurred a personal liability in renting the clubhouse, he having already paid all that was due by the terms of membership.

Materials are not infrequently furnished and services rendered upon this basis, and where this was the understanding, individuals can not be held liable unless there be some other evidence than membership reasonably warranting the conclusion that a personal liability was contemplated.⁶⁰

§ 190. — Illustrations.—In a leading case upon this subject, it was sought to hold certain members of an unincorporated club liable for work done and goods supplied to the club upon the order of a standing committee appointed by the club. It appeared that the club, which was one organized for the purpose of furnishing refreshments and entertainment to its members, had adopted certain rules by which each member was to pay admission and annual fees, and was also to pay daily for his accommodations at the club. A committee was appointed to manage the affairs of the club, but it appeared that the rules of the club gave the committee no authority to pledge the personal credit of the members. The plaintiffs attempted to hold the defendants personally responsible by virtue of their membership only, and offered no evidence that they had ever expressly or impliedly assented to the making of the particular contract sued upon. But the court held that in the absence of such evidence, the defendants were not liable and that mere membership in the club was not sufficient.⁶¹ So, where an action was brought to charge certain members of an unincorporated religious society for services performed in building a church edifice, it was held that even if it were to be assumed that the defend-

⁶⁰ Thus in Riffe v. Proctor, 99 Mo. App. 601, it was held that the minister of an unincorporated church society could not recover his salary of the members personally, it being the well understood scheme at the time of his employment that the salary of the minister was to be raised by voluntary subscriptions.

So also where a newspaper published as the organ of a political party was to be maintained by funds contributed, workmen who furnished service knowing the situation have no personal claim against those who were managing the enterprise. Hosman v. Kinneally, 43 Misc. 76, s. c. 45 Misc. 411; Lightbourn v. Walsh, 97 App. Div. 187.

In Clark v. O'Rourke, 111 Mich. 108, 66 Am. St. R. 389, it was recognized that such an arrangement might be made but it was held that there was not sufficient evidence that it had been made to justify submitting it to the jury. See also Weatherford, etc., R. Co. v. Granger, 86 Tex. 350.

⁶¹ Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; and this case was followed in the similar case of Todd v. Emly, 7 M. & W. 427, s. c. 8 Id. 505.

In Fleming v. Hector, Alderson, B., said: "This question turns simply on the authority which the parties who made the contract had to pledge the credit of the defendants to the plaintiffs. Taking it that the committee have made the contract, and that they are by the rules of the society authorized to manage the affairs of the club, it may follow from that that the defendants have given authority to the committee to discharge the contract out of the funds ants were members because it was alleged that they were deacons of the church, still their liability as principals would not follow, because a member of an unincorporated religious society cannot be held personally responsible for the debts of the society unless it be shown that in some way he had sanctioned or acquiesced in their creation.⁶²

So at a meeting of a voluntary unincorporated association organized for the purpose of encouraging the breeding and exhibition of fowls, a premium list for an exhibition to be given was adopted. An action in equity was afterwards brought to compel the defendants, as members, to contribute their proportion of the expenses incurred in holding the exhibition and paying the premiums. But the court held that mere membership would not bind a member for any further payment than the initiation fee and annual assessment, and that only such members as participated in the vote to hold the exhibition and award the premiums or as assented to be bound by such vote, would be bound thereby. It therefore became a question of fact whether any or all of the defendants so participated or assented. In determining the question of such participation or assent, the testimony of those present was admissible and the formal record of the meeting was not the only means of proof, unless made so by some rule or regulation of the association.⁶³

§ 191. — Assent inferred from conduct.—This assent need not always be declared in express terms. It may be, and often is, in

in their hands; but it is contended on the part of the committee that they had a right to pledge the personal credit of the members, and therefore to make these defendants liable. I think they have not. When I come to look at the rules of the club, which are to be the guide by which we are to act, and which constitute the only authority the committee had, I do not find anything to lead me to the conclusion that the authority of the committee extended to the right of pledging the personal liability of any of the members of it; on the contrary, I find the members of the club carefully provided a fund, which was to be collected before they became members of the club, and having collected that fund and provided it, the committee are to manage it. Then what is it the committee are to manage? Why, the fund so provided, and to manage the club upon those terms. If that be so, the committee are not authorized to pledge the credit of individual members; and if they do deal on credit, it is their own affair, done on the faith of the money in their hands, which would enable them to pay their accounts." So also In re St. James' Club, 2 De G., M. & G. 383. See also Caldicott v. Griffiths, 8 Exch. 898; Wood v. Finch, 2 F. & F. 447; Bailey v. Macaulay, 19 L. J. Q. B. 73; Wise v. Perpetual Trustee Co., [1903] App. Cas. 139, 72 L. J. P. C. 31.

⁶² Devoss v. Gray, 22 Ohio St. 159.

⁶³ Ray v. Powers, 134 Mass. 22.

Where there was evidence that a college class, at a class meeting, voted to publish a classbook, the members who either voted or assented to the vote may be held personally liable for the expense, to one who printed it, under a contract with that member of the class who was elected "business manager of the publication." Willcox v. Arnold, 162 Mass. 577.

this, as in other cases, inferred from the conduct of the parties. Thus a school-board had for years employed and paid the plaintiff as a teacher. The president of the board employed her for another year and she performed the service, but not being paid in full, she brought suit against the board for the balance. Some of the defendants objected that they had never authorized the president to make the contract, but the court said: "There is ample (evidence) in the case to submit to the jury from which the knowledge and co-operation of all of the defendants may be justly inferred. They were the acting board intrusted with the management of the school. They had for years been employing and paying this woman. They knew that she was continuing to teach and being paid out of the funds. They had not withdrawn from their self-imposed office as a managing board."⁶⁴

So certain members of a committee were held personally liable for a public dinner ordered by the committee, upon the ground that, though they opposed the resolution while it was under consideration, they had at last submitted to the majority and made the resolution their own.⁶⁵

And, generally, if, with knowledge of the facts, the members acquiesce, or fail reasonably to dissent, and, a fortiori, if, with such knowledge, they take the benefits of the act, they may fairly be deemed to have ratified and approved it.⁶⁶

§ 192. — The rules stated.—It is believed that the following rules embrace the authorities upon this subject:

1. That mere membership in such an association, society, club or committee does not make the member personally liable upon contracts purporting to be made on its behalf, unless there is something in the charter, by-laws or articles of association authorizing the pledging of the credit of the association, to which he is presumed to have assented

⁶⁴ Heath v. Goslin, 80 Mo. 310, 50 Am. Rep. 505.

⁶⁵ Eichbaum v. Irons, 6 Watts & S. (Penn.) 67, 40 Am. Dec. 540. In this case, Chief Justice Gibson said: "Every member present assents beforehand to whatever the majority may do, and becomes a party to acts done, it may be, directly against his will. If he would escape responsibility for them, he ought to protest and throw up his membership on the spot, and there was no evidence that any of the defendants did so. On the contrary they all remained till the meeting was dissolved and the order given." It is evident, however, that the chief justice did not mean to be understood as holding that liability attached to the mere fact of membership or that the defendants could be bound without their assent, but that the assent of the defendants was to be inferred from their conduct. In another part of the opinion he says: "Did the defendants then concur in the order given for the dinner in question? If they did not, the plaintiff cannot recover."

⁶⁶ As where the making of the contract was reported at a meeting of the members and no dissent was expressed. Stikeman v. Flack, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 277. And where a lodge moved into and occupied for many years and paid the rent of premises by becoming a member, and then only in those cases where the contract is within the limits there prescribed.

2. That except in the case last mentioned, the member can only be made liable upon proof of his express or implied assent to the contract; but this may be shown either by his previous consent or his subsequent adoption or by his acquiescence in an established course of dealing.

§ 193. Inchoate corporations.—A corporation is not responsible for acts performed or contracts entered into before its organization by its promoters or other persons assuming to bind it in advance.⁶⁷ Having as yet no corporate existence it is, of course, incapable of entering into contracts, or appointing officers or agents. When its organization is effected, however, it may expressly or impliedly become a party to a previous contract by novation; it may make a present contract by now accepting an outstanding offer made before the corporation was organized; or it may, it is said, by what is loosely termed adoption adopt and assume the responsibility of such acts or contracts, if within its corporate powers, and thus make them the valid obligations of the corporation. Such an assumption it is said may, as in other cases, be implied where the corporation, with knowledge of the facts, appropriates to itself the benefits and advantages derived from the act or contract of the promoters, for "it cannot take the benefit of the contract, without performing that part of it which the projectors undertook that it should perform."⁶⁸ This, however, is a matter to be more fully discussed in a later section.⁶⁹ rented by the officers. Ehrmanntraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333. See also Sheehy v. Blake, 72 Wis. 411, 77 Wis. 394, 9 L. R. A. 564, where the court held that members of an unincorporated religious society were personally bound by acquiescence for the salary of their minister.

⁶⁷ Morawetz on Corporations, § 547; McArthur v. Times Printing Co., 48 Minn. 319, 31 Am. St. R. 653; Pratt v. Oshkosh Match Co., 89 Wis. 406; Paxton Cattle Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 21 Neb. 621, 59 Am. Rep. 852; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Christy, 79 Penn. St. 54, 21 Am. Rep. 39; Rockford, etc., R. R. Co. v. Sage, 65 Ill. 328, 16 Am. Rep. 587; New York, etc., R. R. Co. v. Ketchum, 27 Conn. 170; Weatherford, etc., R. Co. v. Granger, 86 Tex. 350, 40 Am. St. R. 837; St. Johns Mfg. Co. v. Munger, 106 Mich. 90, 58 Am.

St. R. 468, 29 L. R. A. 63; Buffington v. Bardon, 80 Wis. 635; Pitts v. Steele Merc. Co., 75 Mo. App. 221; Hill v. Gould, 129 Mo. 106; Bash v. Culver Min. Co., 7 Wash. 122; Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Hart, 31 Md. 60; Western Screw Co. v. Cousley, 72 Ill. 531.

⁶⁸ Bell's Gap R. R. Co. v. Christy, supra; Rockford, etc., R. R. Co. v. Sage, supra; Western Screw Co. v. Cousley, supra; Pratt v. Oshkosh Match Co., supra; McArthur v. Times Printing Co., supra; Buffington v. Bardon, supra; Stanton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 272, 21 Am. St. R. 110; Oakes v. Cattaraugus Water Co., 143 N. Y. 430, 26 L. R. A. 544, and note; Bridgeport Electric Co. v. Meader, 72 Fed. 115; Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 105 Ky. 816, 88 Am. St. R. 341. See 16 Am. L. Rev. 357 and 671.

⁶⁹ See post, §§ 380-383.

2. Execution in Behalf of Joint Principals.

§ 194. Authority usually to be executed in behalf of all jointly.—Where two or more persons thus unite in the appointment of an agent, the authority so conferred upon him is usually to be exercised only in behalf and in the name of all jointly and with reference to property or other subjects which they own jointly or in which they have a joint interest.⁷⁰ A power of attorney to convey lands,—an instrument subject always to strict interpretation—given by two or more joint owners is, therefore, usually to be deemed limited in its operation to lands in which the donors of the power have a joint interest and does not authorize the conveyance of the separate property of one of them only.⁷¹

But this rule is not inflexible and the circumstances may indicate a contrary purpose. The nature of the interests of the grantors or their relations to each other may make a different conclusion permissible. Thus if the parties have distinct or severable interests a power to convey, not limited by its terms, may be deemed sufficient to authorize a conveyance either jointly with the interests of others or separately.⁷²

IV.

JOINT AGENTS.

§ 195. Authority to several agents.—Much of that which was said respecting joint principals is, mutatis mutandis, applicable here. One person may appoint a great many agents not only as of course where their duties relate to different subjects, but also frequently where, though severally appointed and authorized, their powers and duties may relate to the same subject. Thus, for example, as will be seen, a person having property to sell may ordinarily authorize a number of brokers to endeavor to find a purchaser,⁷³ and may appoint them at different times, for different periods and upon different terms. These, however, are not the cases here to be referred to. Instead of thus con-

⁷⁰ Authority given by several separately to the same agent must, in the absence of anything showing a contrary intention, be construed as relating to the separate individual business of his respective principal and as not justifying the making of a joint obligation. Harris v. Johnston, 54 Minn. 177, 40 Am. St. R. 312.

⁷¹ Gilbert v. How, 45 Minn. 121, 22 Am. St. R. 724; Dodge v. Hopkins, 14 Wis. 630. Where two of four joint owners give joint power to the other two, they must unite in the execution. Separate sales will convey their own interests only. Smith v. Glover, 50 Minn. 58.

⁷² Holladay v. Daily, 86 U. S. (19 Wall.) 606, 22 L. Ed. 187.

⁷³ Tinges v. Moale, 25 Md. 480, 90 Am. Dec. 73; Ahern v. Baker, 34 Minn. 98; Minto v. Moore, 1 Ala. App. 556.

ferring a several authority upon a number, the principal may confer the authority as a unit upon two or more agents jointly, and the nature of the powers and duties in such a case and the method of executing such an authority require special consideration.

§ 196. Legal effect of appointing joint agents.—Where the principal thus confers authority upon two or more agents jointly, the ordinary effect is to put those agents in the same attitude in which a single agent would be placed. As said in one case,⁷⁴ "If a principal employs several agents to transact jointly a particular piece of business, he is equally responsible for the conduct of each and all of them while acting within the limit and scope of their power, as completely so as he would be for the conduct of a single agent upon whom the whole authority had been conferred. He cannot shift or avoid this responsibility by the multiplication of his agents. It is also clear that the corresponding responsibility of each of the several joint agents to the principal for the faithful discharge of their duties, is as complete and perfect as in the case of a single agency; and any prejudice to the principal arising from fraud, misconduct or negligence of either of them would afford ground for redress from the party guilty of the wrong."

§ 197. ——— Notice to one—Liability of one for acts of others.—Upon the ground that the duty of communicating to the principal knowledge coming to the agent rests alike upon each member of such a joint agency, it is held that notice to one of them is to be deemed notice to the principal;⁷⁵ and this is doubtless true wherever his relation to the subject matter is such as to impose a duty upon him of an individual character.

So, from the standpoint of their liability to the principal, it is said in a recent case,⁷⁶ "It is familiar law that where two or more persons undertake to execute a private agency together, they are jointly liable each for the acts of the other; nor is it any defence that one of them wholly transacted the business with the knowledge of the principal. Each is liable for the whole, if they jointly undertake the agency, notwithstanding an agreement between themselves to the contrary, or that one shall have the profits." But this would not be true of mere fellow-agents or co-agents who had not jointly undertaken to perform the service.⁷⁷

§ 198. Private joint agency must usually be executed by all.—The most important distinction relating to this subject, however, is that ⁷⁴ Nelson, C. J., in Bank of U. S. v. Davis, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 451.

⁷⁵ Bank of U. S. v. Davis, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 451.

⁷⁶ Milwaukee Harvester Co. v. Finnegan, 43 Minn. 183.

⁷⁷ Sergeant v. Emlen, 141 Pa. 580.

respecting the method of execution dependent upon whether the agency is public or private in its character. Where authority is conferred upon two or more agents to represent their principal in the transaction of business of a private nature, it may well be presumed ordinarily that it was so conferred upon them all from considerations of a personal nature and in order to derive the benefit of their combined experience, discretion or ability.⁷⁸

It is, therefore, the general rule that such an agency will be presumed to be joint, and it can be performed by the agents only jointly unless an intent appears that it may be otherwise executed.⁷⁹ If, how-⁷⁸ Commonwealth v. Commissioners, 9 Watts (Penn.), 470.

⁷⁹ Robbins v. Horgan, 192 Mass. 443; Cedar Rapids, etc., R. R. Co. v. Stewart, 25 Iowa, 115; Kupfer v. Augusta, 12 Mass. 185; Caldwell v. Harrison, 11 Ala. 755; Loeb v. Drakeford, 75 Ala. 464; Soens v. Racine, 10 Wis. 271; White v. Davidson, 8 Md. 169, 63 Am. Dec. 699; Rogers v. Cruger, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 557; Damon v. Granby, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 345; Sutton v. Cole, 3 Id. 232; Woolsey v. Tompkins, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 324; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 57 Ill. 180; Scott v. Detroit, etc., Society, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 119; Low v. Perkins, 10 Vt. 532, 33 Am. Dec. 217; Towne v. Jaquith, 6 Mass. 46; Heard v. March, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 580; Hawley v. Keeler, 53 N. Y. 114; Johnston v. Bingham, 9 W. & S. (Penn.) 56; Smith v. Glover, 50 Minn. 58; Rundle v. Cutting, 18 Colo. 337.

So in the case of arbitrators: Moore v. Ewing, Coxe (N. J.), 144, 1 Am. Dec. 195; Blin v. Hay, 2 Tyler (Vt.), 304, 4 Am. Dec. 738; Green v. Miller, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 39, 5 Am. Dec. 184; Patterson v. Leavitt, 4 Conn. 50, 10 Am. Dec. 98; Wilder v. Ranney, 95 N. Y. 7; Brennan v. Willson, 71 N. Y. 502; Penn v. Evans, 28 La. Ann. 576.

One of several joint agents cannot delegate to the others his authority to act. Loeb v. Drakeford, supra; White v. Davidson, supra.

"It is well settled," says Andrews, J., in Hawley v. Keeler, supra, "as a general doctrine in the law of agency, that when an authority to act in a matter of a private nature is conferred by the principal upon more than one person, all must act in the execution of the power. This is the construction which the law puts upon the power, following the supposed intention of the parties, and there must, ordinarily be a joint execution of the agency. The authority may be conferred in such terms as to authorize a several execution, or an execution by a majority or other number; and in the absence of express words it may have been exercised under such circumstances as will justify the inference that the principal intended that less than the whole number might act; in which case he would be bound to those who had acted upon such inference. The general rule that a joint execution must be had of an authority given to several, has been made to yield for the benefit of trade and to meet supposed necessities, in contracts made by one of several joint owners of ships, and in case of sales made by one of two factors, of goods consigned to them for sale."

Not all collective appointments joint. "And" may mean "or."—It seems quite clear that the mere fact that a number of agents are authorized conjunctively does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the authority is joint. The context or the circumstances may show that and merely means or. If I say or write that A and B and C and D, etc., are all my agents authorized to do acts ever, it is shown, by the instrument conferring the power or otherwise, that it was originally the intention that a part might execute it, or if the principal has subsequently waived the necessity or has so conducted himself as to lead reasonably to the inference that a joint execution would not be insisted upon, and that less than all may validly exercise the power, such an execution will be sufficient.⁸⁰ Where the agency is joint or several, it must, it is said, be executed by all or one, and not by an intermediate number, but this rule gives way when an intention that it may be so exercised clearly appears.⁸¹ Where, how-of a certain sort, this may mean—and perhaps usually would mean—no more than that any one of them is agent to do any act of the class. Suppose that a large dealer by one act or instrument appoints a considerable number of agents, who are however expected to act in different places or in different fields; the mere fact that they are united in appointment does not necessarily make them joint within the rule. For illustration: A surety company by power of attorney appoints "R. S. M. and A. W. M. and E. P. H." attorneys in fact for the company to sign bonds. It also declares that it is the intention of the instrument to authorize and empower "the said R. S. M. and A. W. M. or E. P. H. to sign the name of said company." A bond is issued signed in the name of the company by "A. W. M., agent." The court construes the power as an appointment severally, and not jointly, or even as requiring action by R. S. M. and also by either A. W. M., or E. P. H. United States Fidelity & Guar. Co. v. Ettenheimer, 70 Neb. 144, 113 Am. St. R. 783.

⁸⁰ Cedar Rapids, etc., R. R. Co. v. Stewart, 25 Iowa, 115, where the instrument expressly authorized execution by a majority. Hawley v. Keeler, 53 N. Y. 114, where execution by less than all was long acquiesced in. Where one of two joint agents assigned his interest to the others, and the latter for seven months acted alone to the principal's knowledge and without objection, the principal's assent was inferred. Albany Land Co. v. Rickel, 162 Ind. 222. When usage will justify, see Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 94; Willet v. Chambers, Cowp. 814.

⁸¹ Guthrie v. Armstrong, 5 B. & Ald. 628. In this case, by a power of attorney the principal authorized fifteen persons "jointly and separately for him and in his name to sign and underwrite all such policies of insurance as they or any of them should jointly and separately think proper." A policy was executed by four of these persons and a recovery had upon it. J. Williams moved to enter a non-suit. He relied upon Viner's Abridgement, title Authority B. pl. 7, and Com. Dig. Attorney C. 11. "And in Co. Litt. 181, b., it is stated, 'If a charter of feoffment be made, and a letter of attorney to four or three jointly or severally to deliver seizin, two cannot make livery because it is neither by the four or three jointly nor any of them severally.' Here the power is to fifteen jointly or severally and it is neither executed by the whole jointly nor by one of them severally. The latter words 'or any of them' only apply to the persons who are to exercise the discretion, but they have no reference to the authority itself." Abbott, C. J., said: "The law undoubtedly is as stated by Mr. Williams, but we are not disposed to extend the rule further. Whenever a case exactly similar to those cited shall occur, the court will feel itself bound by them. But in this case we ought to look at the whole instrument; and if we do so, there is no doubt what the mean-ever, the authority is conferred upon a partnership, it may be executed by one of the partners.⁸²

Where the agency is clearly joint, the death or disability of one of the agents terminates the agency unless it be coupled with an interest in the survivors.⁸³

§ 199. Public agency may be executed by a majority.—Where, however, the agency is created by law or is public in its nature, and requires the exercise of deliberation, discretion or judgment, the rule is otherwise. Here while all of the agents or officers (unless the law makes a less number a quorum) must be present to deliberate, or what is usually regarded as the same thing⁸⁴ must be duly notified and have an opportunity to be present, yet, unless the law clearly requires the joint action of all of them,⁸⁵ it is well settled that a majority of them, where the number is such as to admit of a majority,⁸⁶ if present may act and their act will be deemed to be the act of the body.⁸⁷

ing of it is. Here a power is given to fifteen persons jointly and severally to execute such policies as they or any of them shall jointly or severally think proper. The true construction of this is, as it seems to me, that the power is given to all or any of them to sign such policies, as all or any of them should think proper. The argument is that the latter words only apply to the persons who are to exercise the discretion. That would have been quite correct if those had been different from persons entrusted with the power. But they are the same: these latter words therefore control the meaning of the former and the verdict is right."

⁸² Deakin v. Underwood, 37 Minn. 98; Frost v. Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831; McCulloch Land & Cattle Co. v. Whitefort, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 314; McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. Dak. 497.

⁸³ Salisbury v. Brisbane, 61 N. Y. 617; Boone v. Clark, 3 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 389; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 57 Ill. 180.

⁸⁴ Notice and a fair opportunity to attend are usually regarded as equivalent to attendance, though not all of the cases have recognized the distinction. See Williams v. School District, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 75, 32 Am. Dec.

243; Horton v. Garrison, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 176; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87, 36 Am. Rep. 734.

⁸⁵ See First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, supra; People v. Coghill, 47 Cal. 361; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396.

⁸⁶ Where the number is such as not to admit of a majority, as where there are only two, the concurrence of both is indispensable; though it is said that if one should die or become disabled the other might act alone except in the case of officers, exercising powers of a judicial nature. Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178, 34 Am. Dec. 223.

⁸⁷ See the subject more fully considered in Mechem on Public Officers. See also McCready v. Guardians of the Poor, 9 Serg. & R. (Penn.) 94, 11 Am. Dec. 667; Scott v. Detroit, etc., Society, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 119; Jewett v. Alton, 7 N. H. 253; Caldwell v. Harrison, 11 Ala. 755; Soens v. Racine, 10 Wis. 271; Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205, 37 Am. Dec. 203; First National Bank v. Mount Tabor, 52 Vt. 87, 36 Am. Rep. 734; Kingsbury v. School District, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 99; Cooley v. O'Connor, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 391, 20 L. Ed. 446; Baltimore Turnpike, Case of, 5 Binn. (Penn.) 481; Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256; Jefferson County v. Slagle, 66

The rule which generally applies to these cases was well stated by Chief Justice Shaw, as follows: "Where a body or board of officers is constituted by law to perform a trust for the public, or to execute a power or perform a duty prescribed by law, it is not necessary that all should concur in the act done. The act of the majority is the act of the body. And where all have due notice of the time and place of meeting in the manner prescribed by law, if so prescribed; or by the rules and regulations of the body itself, if there be any; otherwise, if reasonable notice is given, and no practice or unfair means are used to prevent all from attending and participating in the proceeding, it is no objection that all the members do not attend, if there be a quorum."⁸⁸

§ 200. — Committees — Boards — Directors — Majority of quorum.—This rule permitting action by a majority is constantly applied to county, township and city boards, and to general and special committees and commissions exercising public functions.⁸⁹ It is applied also in the case of boards of directors of private corporations and to committees representing such corporations.⁹⁰

Where a majority may thus lawfully meet and constitute a quorum a majority of that majority, though actually less than a majority of the whole number, may usually determine the action.⁹¹

Penn. St. 202; Austin v. Helms, 65 N. C. 560; People v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478, 11 Am. Rep. 734; Williams v. School District, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 75, 32 Am. Dec. 243; Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. Meyer, 58 Kan. 305; McNeil v. Chamber of Commerce, 154 Mass. 277, 13 L. R. A. 559; Withnell v. Gartham, 6 T. R. 388; Grindley v. Barker, 1 B. & P. 229.

⁸⁸ In Williams v. School District, supra.

⁸⁹ See cases cited in preceding section; Damon v. Granby, 2 Pick.

(Mass.) 345; Sprague v. Bailey, 19 Pick. 436; George v. School District, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 497.

⁹⁰ See McNeil v. Boston Chamber of Commerce, 154 Mass. 277, 13 L. R. A. 559.

⁹¹ See Morawetz on Corporations, § 531; Cook on Corp. § 713a; McNeil v. Chamber of Commerce, supra; Wells v. Rubber Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 402; Sargent v. Webster, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 497, 46 Am. Dec. 743; Edgerly v. Emerson, 23 N. H. 555, 55 Am. Dec. 207.

CHAPTER V

OF THE APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORIZATION OF AGENTS BY THE PRINCIPAL AND THE EVIDENCE THEREOF

- § 201 Purpose of the chapter.
202. Questions which are not here considered.
203. — Authority created by law.
204. — Authority resulting merely from relation of parties.
205. — Authority by necessity.
206. Subject here considered is appointment and authorization of agents.
207. What considerations involved.
208. Use of persons as instrumentalities is not appointment of agents—Acts done in presence and by direction of principal.
- I. HOW AGENT MAY BE APPOINTED AND AUTHORIZED
209. Two persons involved here.
1. On the Part of the Principal
210. Only by the act of the principal.
211. The method to be pursued.
- a. Authority to Execute Instruments under Seal
212. Such authority must be conferred by instrument under seal.
213. — Authority to fill blanks in deeds and bonds.
214. — Estoppel.
215. — How when seal superfluous.
216. — How when instrument executed in presence and by direction of principal.
217. — How when principal adopts deed prepared by another.
218. — Instrument not good as deed sometimes effective as contract.
219. Appointment by corporations.
220. — To execute deed of corporate realty.
- b. Authority required by Statute to be in Writing
221. Common law rules do not require written authority.
222. Statutes often require it for selling or leasing land—English Statute of Frauds.
223. — American statutes requiring writing.
224. — Acknowledging or recording.
225. Statutes requiring written authority in other cases—Suretyship—Written instruments.
226. Employments for more than one year.
227. What writing sufficient when writing required.
- c. In other Cases Authority may be conferred by Words or Conduct 228. No formal method required.
229. By parol—To sell or lease land.
230. — To purchase land.
231. — To deliver deed.
232. — To demand and collect rent.
233. — To find purchaser for land — Employment of broker.
234. — To grant licenses respecting land—To sell standing timber.
235. — To subscribe for stock.
236. — To execute written instruments not under seal.

- 237. — To fill blanks in written instruments.
- 238. — To buy or sell goods.
- 239. — To "accept and receive" under statute of frauds.
- 240. Authority may be partly written and partly oral.
- 241. Authority need not be express—Authority by implication.
- 242. Conferring certain powers by the creation of others—Incidental powers.
- 243. — Customary powers.
- 244. — Powers established by the course of business.
- 245. — Powers resulting from estoppel.
- 246. — General rule.
- 247. Intention to create agency.
- 248. Names not controlling.
- 249. When principal's act becomes effective.

2. On the Part of the Agent

- 250. In general.
- 251. Agent must be notified of appointment.
- 252. Agent must accept appointment.
- 253. — How acceptance established.

II. EVIDENCE OF APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORIZATION

- 254. Purpose of this subdivision.
- 255. Authority must be proved—Burden of proof.
- 256. Authority under seal or in writing.
- 257. Written authority — When must be produced.
- 258. — Collateral inquiry.
- 259. — Unnecessary writing.
- 260. In other cases may be proved by parol—By any competent witness.
- 261. By informal writings—By conduct—By facts and circumstances.
- 262. By proof of agency on other occasions.
- 263. By acquiescence in or recognition of similar acts.
- 264. — Acquiescence to show expired authority apparently continues.
- 265. — Acquiescence to construe authority.
- 266. By acts so open or notorious as to justify inference of acquiescence.
- 267. By regular and public exercise of office or agency.
- 268. Presumptions based upon ordinary course of conduct—Answering letters, telephone, etc.
- 269. By proof of an express authority to which this is an incident.
- 270. By proof of a custom covering the case.
- 271. By proof of an established course of dealing.
- 272. By ratification.
- 273. Limitations upon these rules.
- 274-280. What facts sufficient—Illustrations.
- 281-284. What facts not sufficient—Illustrations.
- 285. Agent's authority cannot be established by his own statements or admissions.
- 286. — When admissible.
- 287. — To show attitude or intention of parties.
- 288. — Mere order of proof not material.
- 289. Or by his own acts only.
- 290. Or by general reputation.
- 291. Agent must be called as a witness.
- 292. — Agent's testimony—Effect.
- 293. How question of agency determined—Court or jury.
- 294. — Construction of writing for court.
- 295. — Effect of undisputed facts for court.
- 296. — In other cases for jury.
- 297. — Court should instruct jury as to their functions.
- 298. Burden of proof.
- 299. Amount of evidence required.
- 300. Whose agent is he.
- 301. — Stipulations declaring—Testimony of parties.

§ 201. Purpose of this chapter.—Having now seen who may be principal and agent, and for what purposes agency may be created, it is next in order to consider, I. The different methods by which agency may be created; and, II. By what evidence its existence may be established.

Appointment and authorization are often used as synonymous terms, but though the two acts are often coincident, they are not necessarily either identical or coincident. The appointment, in the sense of designation and agreement, may take place at one time, while the authority may be conferred, enlarged or diminished at another time.

§ 202. Questions not here considered.—Before taking up that discussion, it will be desirable to eliminate certain questions which are not within the scope fixed for this work. It is the purpose here to confine attention to what may be termed agency by appointment or authority by the direct act or omission of the parties. Therefore—

§ 203. — Authority created by law, independently of the act of the parties, in the few cases in which that may exist, is not a matter here to be considered. As has been already suggested, there are a few cases in which authority, or, more properly speaking, power, is conferred by law in certain cases. Thus an unpaid vendor of goods has a power of sale of the goods under certain circumstances.¹ A pledgee has a power of sale, expressly conferred usually in formal contracts of pledge, but not dependent upon that.² A married woman, whose husband does not supply her, has, as has been already seen, a limited power to buy necessities upon her husband's credit, which prevails notwithstanding his dissent.³ A minor child is sometimes said to have a somewhat similar power.⁴ The authority of a ship master is sometimes said to be legally conferred, though it probably rests upon a presumption of actual authority to act in an emergency. None of these cases, except the last, is a question of agency at all, or within the scope of the present work, and will not be considered further than they already have been.

§ 204. — Authority resulting from the relation of the parties.—Reference is sometimes made to authority resulting merely

¹ See 2 Mechem on Sales, § 1621 et seq.

² See Jones on Pledges (2d Ed.), § 602.

³ See ante, § 161.

Statutory Agency of Husband.—In a number of states statutes have made the husband a statutory manager of his wife's separate estate.

See Sencerbox v. First National Bank, 14 Idaho, 95; Dority v. Dority, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 216, affirmed 96 Tex. 215; Owens v. New York Land Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 32 S. W. 1057; Gross v. Pigg, 73 Miss. 286; Ross v. Baldwin, 65 Miss. 570.

⁴ See ante, § 156.

from the relation of the parties. As a general rule, there is no such authority whatever. The conspicuous if not the only exception is that of partnership. Here each partner is the agent of his copartner within the scope of the business, unless some other arrangement has been made. But, as has been seen, no authority in either spouse results merely from the marriage relation. The wife's authority to buy necessities, which is the strongest case, depends upon the condition of the husband's failure to supply her. So of parent and child. In the case of the less intimate relations, brother, uncle, cousin, co-tenant, and the like, there is no trace of authority resulting merely from the relation. All of these persons may be given authority, but it must be given as in other cases and is not inherent.

§ 205. — Authority by necessity.—As has already been pointed out, it is sometimes said that authority may arise from necessity—ex necessitate. This, however, is a most vague and unsatisfactory expression. It often refers simply to the so-called authority created by law or to liability enforced quasi ex contractu, as in the case of the married woman who may buy necessities upon her husband's credit, when he has failed to supply her, even though he dissents.⁵ It is often used also in a more accurate sense to refer to cases of unexpected necessity, or, more properly speaking, of sudden emergency. Speaking generally, necessity alone confers authority upon no one. Coupled, however, with an existing relation of some sort, and, here, with a relation of principal and agent or master and servant, necessity or emergency not infrequently plays an important part. It is important to observe, however, that here it is ordinarily an unexpected necessity or a sudden and unforeseen emergency. So far as the expected and foreseeable necessities are concerned, it will ordinarily be presumed that the principal or master takes those into account, and makes such provision for them as he desires; the unexpected ones, on the other hand, he cannot usually provide for. An unforeseen emergency may, according to the circumstances, affect situations in a variety of ways: It may increase the duty of care or it may diminish it; it may relieve the agent from the duty of strict compliance with instructions,⁶ or it may conceivably only serve to make such compliance more imperative; it may reasonably enlarge an existing authority sufficiently to meet the emergency, or it may operate to restrict it, where it cannot reasonably be expected that the principal could have intended that so wide an authority as that given should continue to be exercised in the new circumstances.⁷

⁵ It is in this sense, of course, that it is used in such expressions as that of Pollock, C. B., in Johnston v. Sumner, 3 H. & N. 261.

⁶ This subject is discussed later, Book IV, Chapter II, under Duty of Agent to Obey Instructions.

It is important also to keep in mind, that, since it is the principal's purposes and plans that are to be subserved in the ordinary case, he is the one to decide, where possible, how the emergency is to be met; and it is therefore a just and proper rule which limits the inference of authority from an emergency to the case in which the principal cannot be consulted.⁸

It will not fail to be observed also that the authority which arises from necessity or emergency, in the sense in which it is now being discussed, is an authority by implied appointment by the principal, and not merely an authority given by law regardless of his act or implied consent.⁹

§ 206. Subject here considered is appointment and authorization of agents and not the creation or existence of other relations from which some authority may result. It is in this view, that the proposed classification as to methods and evidence was suggested, and it is in this view that the discussion proceeds.

§ 207. What considerations involved.—As has been pointed out in an earlier section, the matter of the appointment of an agent ordinarily involves at least two persons—the principal and the proposed agent. While it is true that there may be exceptional cases—like those of master and slave or parent and child—where the proposed principal may be in a position to coerce the proposed agent, the ordinary situation is different, and the proposed principal must not only be ready to become such, but the proposed agent must also be willing to accept. Before an actual agency can exist, therefore, in the ordinary case the principal must not only appoint but the agent must accept.

Under ordinary circumstances, probably, where an agency is contemplated, the proposed principal takes the initiative. He selects the agent, appoints him, and sends him forth to act. On the other hand, the one who becomes agent may take the initiative, and seek the appointment.

More than this also is possible. The question of the creation of the agency may first arise, not between the principal and agent, but be-

⁷ This subject is more fully discussed in Book II, Chapter I, on The Nature and Extent of the Authority.

⁸ See preceding reference. It is also discussed in various other places.

⁹ Thus, Marshall, J., in Evans v. Crawford County Ins. Co., 130 Wis.

189, 118 Am. St. R. 1009, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485, takes pains to point out that the authority of the wife which he refers to as one ex necessitate is not one which arises from the marriage relation but from "a presumption of appointment."

tween the principal and third persons or between third persons and the proposed agent. The principal may arrange with a third person that he will or shall appoint the agent; and the third person may arrange with the proposed agent that if he becomes such, the third person will deal with him, or the proposed agent may agree with the third person that he will secure an appointment as agent.

§ 208. Use of persons as instrumentalities but not as agents—Acts done in the presence of the principal and by his direction.—Before taking up the methods of appointing agents, moreover, it may be advisable to point out that where the question is, not the appointment of an agent, but the adoption and use of an instrumentality, the ordinary rules respecting the former subject do not apply. Thus where a person, about to perform a certain act, himself determines upon all of the elements of it which essentially belong to it, he may avail himself of any mechanical or ministerial agency which may be convenient in giving physical form or manifestation to the act. Human instrumentalities may be employed for this purpose as well as inanimate ones.¹⁰ If I

¹⁰ This principle was applied, for example, in the following cases involving the signing or execution of the instrument named in the parenthesis. Lewis v. Watson, 98 Ala. 479, 39 Am. St. Rep. 82, 22 L. R. A. 297 (sheriff's deed); Clark v. Latham, 25 Ark. 16 (writ of attachment); Jansen v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 563, 83 Am. Dec. 84 (mortgage); Pierce v. Dekle, 61 Fla. 390, 25 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1355 (subscription list); Ellis v. Francis, 9 Ga. 325 (constable's return of nulla bona on fl. fa.); Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402, 68 Am. Dec. 506 (marriage contract); Flemister v. State, 48 Ga. 170 (due bill); Cunningham v. Lamar, 51 Ga. 574 (garnishment bond); Brown v. Colquitt, 73 Ga. 59, 54 Am. Rep. 867 (criminal recognizance); Wyatt v. Walton Guano Co., 114 Ga. 375 (promissory note); Hawes v. Glover, 126 Ga. 305 (mortgage); Handyside v. Cameron, 21 Ill. 588, 74 Am. Dec. 119 (promissory note); Henderson v. Barbee, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 26 (note); Croy v. Busenbark, 72 Ind. 48 (recognizance); Nye v. Lowry, 82 Ind. 316 (deed); Kennedy v. Graham, 9 Ind. App. 624 (note); Crumrine v. Crumrine, 14 Ind. App. 641, 43 N. E.

322 (note); State v. Holmes, 56 Iowa, 588, 41 Am. Rep. 121 (order adjourning court); Currier v. Clark, 145 Iowa, 613 (mortgage); Irvin v. Thompson, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 295 (power of attorney); Meyer v. King, 29 La. Ann. 567 (contract); Frost v. Deering, 21 Me. 156 (release of dower); Bird v. Decker, 64 Me. 550 (mortgage deed); Lovejoy v. Richardson, 68 Me. 386 (deed); Gardner v. Gardner, 5 Cush. (59 Mass.) 483, 52 Am. Dec. 740 (deed); Finnegan v. Lucy, 157 Mass. 439 (statutory notice by wife to refuse sale of liquor to husband); Williams v. Woods, 16 Md. 220 (memorandum of contract, signed for vendor by clerk of his broker); Just v. Wise Township, 42 Mich. 573 (commissioners' order on treasurer); Johnson v. Van Velsor, 43 Mich. 208 (deed); Eggleston v. Wagner, 46 Mich. 610 (contract); Hotchkiss v. Cutting, 14 Minn. 537 (summons); Watkins v. McDonald (Miss.), 41 So. 376 (appointment of substituted trustees); State v. Carlisle, 57 Mo. 102 (deposition); Porter v. Paving Co., 214 Mo. 1 (ordinance); Bigler v. Baker, 40 Neb. 325, 24 L. R. A. 255 (contract); In re Creighton, 88 Neb. 107 (certification wish to sign my name to a document, I may use a pen, a typewriter, a rubber stamp, or the hand of a third person indifferently. Inasmuch as, in such a case, I furnish the consciousness, the volition—the will—and cause the act to be done under my immediate direction and control, it is my act whether I employ an inanimate tool to make the visible mark or an animate one. Such a tool so used is not an agent, and the rules governing the appointment of agents do not apply to its use. Hence, the rule, of quite wide application, is, that acts of a merely mechanical or ministerial nature, done by one person in the presence and by the direction or assent of another and as a part of some larger act which the latter is then engaged in performing, are as valid as if done by the latter in person. This rule applies, as will be seen, even though the act is one—like the signing of a written instrument or even an instrument under seal—which if really done by the agent himself of record); Lord v. Lord, 58 N. H. 7, 42 Am. Rep. 565 (attestation of will); Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 30 N. J. Eq. 193, aff'd 32 N. J. Eq. 809 (power of attorney); Thomas v. Spencer (N. J.), 42 Atl. 275 (pledge of mortgage); Mackay v. Bloodgood, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 285 (partnership name to arbitration bond); People v. Smith, 20 Johns. 63 (filling in blanks on summons); Mallon v. Story, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 331 (contract); Harris v. Story, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 363 (contract); Fichthorn v. Boyer, 5 Watts, 159, 30 Am. Dec. 300 (firm name to arbitration bond); Fitzpatrick v. Engard, 175 Pa. 393 (contract); Haven v. Hobbs, 1 Vt. 238, 18 Am. Dec. 678 (note); Jesse v. Parker, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 57, 52 Am. Dec. 102 (will and attestation); Will of Jenkins, 43 Wis. 610 (will); Mariner v. Wiens, 137 Wis. 637 (contract under seal); Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 T. R. 313 (seal on bill of sale); King v. Longnor, 1 Nev. & M. 576, s. c. 4 Barn. & Adol. 647 (indenture of apprenticeship); Hudson v. Revett, 5 Bing. 368 (blanks filled in, in deed for creditors).

Who may make the signature.—Ordinarily any person may be used to make the signature; but, in making the memorandum under the statute of frauds, it has been held that the agent must be some third person, and cannot be the other contracting party (Wright v. Dannah, 2 Camp. 203); and in Clough v. Clough, 73 Me. 487, 40 Am. Rep. 386, it was said that a deed, signed by the grantee for the grantor in the presence of the latter and at his request, was not well executed.

Burden of proof.—The fact that the execution was in the immediate presence of the principal must be affirmatively established by the party who relies on the rule, that it is the act of the principal, as an excuse for the absence of a written or sealed power of attorney. A mere direction to the agent is not sufficient, but the presence must be proved, not merely inferred "from any coincidence between the date of the deed and the acknowledgment of the principal that it was executed by his attorney." Videau v. Griffin, 21 Cal. 389.

What meant by "in the presence" of the principal.—This is a question which has not been very much discussed, but probably any case which would satisfy the requirements for the attestation of wills would be sufficient for this purpose.

In Mackay v. Bloodgood, 9 Johns. 285, a partner saw and approved the deed and was "about the store" at the time of its execution, upon which it would require authorization in as solemn a form as the instrument itself.

It is not easy to see why this rule should not have a wider application, and include any specific act mechanically performed by the direction of the principal, even though not done in his presence. The reasons ordinarily given would include such an act. The rule, however, has not been so extended.

With such distinctions in mind, we may proceed to consider—

I.

HOW AN AGENT MAY BE APPOINTED AND AUTHORIZED.

§ 209. Two persons involved here.—It will be obvious that the consideration of this question ordinarily involves two aspects: 1. What must be done on the part of the principal; and 2. What must be done on the part of the agent. Of these in their order.

1. On the Part of the Principal.

§ 210. Only by the act of the principal.—Except in the few cases already mentioned—which have no further relation to the subject matter of this treatise—in which the law creates or confers authority, or it may result from some relation in which the parties stand, it is the invariable rule that authority to act as agent can arise only at the will was held that the jury were justified in finding that he was present.

So where a sister directed her brother through the closed door of her room to sign her marriage contract, and he signed it in the yard at the gate post, it was held that it was not error to instruct the jury that she need not see the signing and the direction to her brother need not be given within hearing of the witnesses of the signing, in order to make it her act rather than an act by her agent. Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402.

Where five bonds had been signed and the sixth was then signed before the blanks were filled in so that the obligor could leave in a hurry, it was held that his act in "signing the bond, and directing the sheriff to fill it up in a particular way, and his leaving, under the facts shown in the record, is equivalent to his being present when the bond was filled out," so that the jury were justified in finding it to be his bond. Brown v. Colquitt, 73 Ga. 59.

In State v. Holmes, 56 Iowa, 588, 41 Am. Rep. 121, it was held that an order to adjourn court, telegraphed by the judge, was still his written order, and "by means of the wire and instruments . . . and the operator, the judge wrote the telegram which was delivered to the clerk."

Sufficiency of the signature.—These cases are complicated by statutes and rules of construction requiring that "when the written signature of a person is required by law, it shall always be the proper handwriting of such person, or, in case he is unable to write, his proper mark." For instance it was held in Chapman v. Limerick, 56 Me. 390, that a warrant calling a town meeting, signed in the presence of the constable at his direction, was invalid because in the

and by the act of the principal.¹¹ Except in those cases, the law never simply presumes that authority exists: its existence is always a fact to be proved by tracing it to some act of the person alleged to have created and conferred it.

And not only must the agent be appointed through the act of the principal, but it must also be by his personal act, except where he has expressly or by implication authorized some one else to appoint agents or servants for him.

§ 211. The method to be pursued.—While it is thus true that authority to act as agent can usually arise only at the will and by the act of the principal, that will and act may find expression in a great variety of ways. Usually, no particular method or form of expression case of public officials the personal act and handwriting of the officers must be essential. So in Ferguson v. Monroe County, 71 Miss. 524, signatures on a local option petition were ruled out unless in the actual handwriting of the voter. But in Finnegan v. Lucy, 157 Mass. 439, it was held that the statute did not apply to ordinary signatures and a notice not to sell the husband liquor, under a statute requiring the signature of the wife, was held sufficient when signed by another in her presence. There are other cases accepting this where the signature of a public official is required, as indicated in other cases cited, supra, and in Porter v. Boyd Paving Co., 214 Mo. 1, it was held after a very thorough discussion, that the signature of the mayor, as required by statute for the validity of an ordinance, might be written by another in his presence, and that the statute requiring "proper handwriting" or inability to write did not apply.

Method of expressing direction or assent.—No particular way of authorizing the signature is required, and any act or conduct signifying intent would probably be sufficient. For instance in Gardner v. Gardner, 5 Cush. (59 Mass.) 483, 52 Am. Dec. 740, the mother assented by nodding her head to her daughter's offer to sign the deed for her. So in Thomas v. Spencer (N. J.), 42 Atl. 275, where the attorney asked his client, a somewhat illiterate woman, if he should sign the pledge of a mortgage, and she nodded her head, it was held that he was authorized. In Jesse v. Parker, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 57, 52 Am. Dec. 102, the attesting witnesses denied giving any direction, merely standing by with knowledge that their names were being signed, although the agent testified that he had been verbally authorized. Upon this evidence, the verdict of the jury was upheld, finding that the will had been duly executed and attested. Statutes often require that a testator's signature be made by his "express direction." But this is much more strict than the requirement of the common law, as indicated by these words of Gibson, C. J., in Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489, 51 Am. Dec. 567, "As signing by the testator's assent would have been good at the common law, the statute was enacted, not to authorize it, but to regulate the evidence of it by requiring more than a wink or a nod, or a word not less ambiguous . . ."

¹¹ Pole v. Leask, 33 L. J. Eq. 155, 28 Beav. 562; Stringham v. St. Nicholas Ins. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 315; McGoldrick v. Willits, 52 N. Y. 612; Roberge v. Monheimer, 21 Misc. 491; Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66; Chicago, etc., Organ Co. v. Rishforth, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. & 14 Ohio Cir. D. 660.

is essential, and the range of possible forms is ordinarily as wide as the domain of human action. Thus, an agent may, in a given case, be appointed by written instrument or by word of mouth. His appointment may be implied from the conduct of the parties and that conduct may often be active or inactive, and consciously or perhaps unconsciously directed to that end. The authority need not be previously conferred, but its lack may be supplied by subsequent approval or adoption.

Notwithstanding the fact that in the ordinary case the law does not insist upon any particular form and concerns itself rather with the fact than with the method, there are two classes of cases—one arising under the rules of the common law and the other under statutes—in which the authority must be conferred in a particular way. These are:

1. Cases wherein an instrument under seal is to be executed; and,
2. Cases wherein some statute, usually the statute of frauds, expressly requires the authority to be conferred by writing. These two classes of cases will be considered first.

a. Authority to Execute Instruments Under Seal.

§ 212. Such authority must be conferred by instrument under seal.—It was the settled rule of the common law, and as such it still prevails, where not changed by statute, that authority to execute an instrument necessarily under seal could be conferred only by an act as solemn in its form as that of the act which was to be performed, and hence that it could be conferred only by an instrument which was itself under seal.¹² But while this rule is firmly established it is highly tech-

¹² Co. Litt. 48b; Combe's Case, 9 Coke, 75, 77; Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207; Berkeley v. Hardy, 5 B. & C. 355, s. c. 8 D. & R. 102; Elliott v. Stocks, 67 Ala. 336; Watson v. Sherman, 84 Ill. 263; Johnson v. Dodge, 17 Ill. 433; Peabody v. Hoard, 46 Ill. 242; Harshaw v. McKesson, 65 N. C. 688; Rowe v. Ware, 30 Ga. 278; Maus v. Worthing, 3 Seam. (Ill.) 26; Rhode v. Louthain, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 413; Reed v. Van-Ostrand, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 424, 19 Am. Dec. 529; Blood v. Goodrich, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 68, 24 Am. Dec. 121; Wells v. Evans, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 251; Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205, 37 Am. Dec. 203; Heath v. Nutter, 50 Me. 378; Hanford

v. McNair, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 54; Damon v. Granby, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 345; Ban-orgee v. Hovey, 5 Mass. 11, 4 Am. Dec. 17; Cooper v. Rankin, 5 Binn. (Penn.) 613; Gordon v. Bulkeley, 14 Serg. & R. (Penn.) 331; Stetson v. Patten, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 358, 11 Am. Dec. 111; Drumright v. Philpot, 16 Ga. 424, 60 Am. Dec. 738; Graham v. Holt, 3 Iredell's (N. Car.) Law, 300, 40 Am. Dec. 408; Humphreys v. Finch, 97 N. C. 303, 2 Am. St. R. 293; Overman v. Atkinson, 102 Ga. 750; Lobdell v. Mason, 71 Miss. 937; Paine v. Tucker, 21 Me. 138, 38 Am. Dec. 255; Williams v. Crutcher, 5 How. (Miss.) 71, 35 Am. Dec. 422; Wheeler v. Nevins, 34 Me. 54; Baker v. Freeman, 35 Me. 485; nical in its nature and confessedly stands upon very narrow ground. The whole theory of the solemnity of a seal is totally unsuited to the business methods of the present day and the constant tendency of courts and legislatures is to ignore the distinctions formerly founded upon its use.¹³

The rule, moreover, only applies to instruments which are deeds in fact; and does not apply to an instrument not a deed but by legislation given the effect of a deed.¹⁴

§ 213. — Authority to fill blanks in deeds and bonds.—Following the rule laid down in the preceding section, and as a necessary consequence of it, it is held in many cases that authority to fill blanks

Shuetze v. Bailey, 40 Mo. 69; Smith v. Perry, 5 Dutcher (N. J.), 74; Gage v. Gage, 30 N. H. 420; Spurr v. Trimble, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 278; McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368; Adams v. Power, 52 Miss. 828; McNaughten v. Partridge, 11 Ohio, 223; Smith v. Dickinson, 6 Hump. (Tenn.) 261; Mitchell v. Sproul, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 264; McMurtry v. Frank, 4 T. B. Monr. (Ky.) 39; Long v. Hartwell, 5 Vroom (N. J.), 116; Piatt v. McCullough, 1 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 69.

Other formalities.—In some states, by statute, a power of attorney to execute a conveyance of land must have the same formalities, such as acknowledgment, witnesses, etc., which would be required in the conveyance. Thus Butterfield v. Beall, 3 Ind. 203; Oatman v. Fowler, 43 Vt. 462. But in other states this is only necessary to entitle the power of attorney to record. See Montgomery v. Dorion, 6 N. H. 254; Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448. Some cases state the former to be the general rule. Heath v. Nutter, supra; Gage v. Gage, supra; Clark v. Graham, 19 U. S. (6 Wheat.) 577, 5 L. Ed. 334.

Recording.—Statutes in some states also require the power of attorney to be recorded (Oatman v. Fowler, 43 Vt. 462), often "with the deed" (Rosenthal v. Ruffin, 60 Md. 324), but, unless required by statute, it is not essential to validity. Valentine v. Piper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 85, 33 Am. Dec. 715; Delano v. Jacoby, 96 Cal.

275; Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448.

Oral admission of sealed authority.—The requirement of an authority under seal cannot be satisfied by an oral admission or acknowledgment by the principal that there was such an authority existing. Paine v. Tucker, 21 Me. 138, 38 Am. Dec. 255.

Presumption of valid power in case of ancient deeds.—In the case of ancient deeds, purporting to have been executed by an attorney in fact, a valid power will often be presumed to have existed. Reuter v. Stuckart, 181 Ill. 529; Doe v. Phelps, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 169; Doe v. Campbell, 10 Johns. 475; Robinson v. Craig, 1 Hill (S. C.), 389.

¹³ "In modern times," says Champ- lin, J., in Barton v. Gray, 57 Mich. p. 634, "the attaching of a seal to a signature is not regarded with that reverence which was formerly the case, and when the legislature enacted that a seal or wafer was unnecessary, but that a scroll or other device should be sufficient, the solemnity attending the execution of such contract vanished; and when the legislature further provided that no instrument should be held invalid for want of a seal, and it became under the statute mere prima facie evidence of consideration, the affixing of seals, except to instruments required by law to be under seal, became of no practical importance."

¹⁴ In re Whitley Partners, 32 Ch. Div. 337.

in deeds and bonds, essential to be filled, can be conferred only by an instrument under seal.¹⁵ This rule, however, like the other, has met with much disapproval in modern times, and though, if the English cases be included, it may perhaps still be said to be the general rule, there has been manifested in the more recent American cases a strong disposition to disregard it as based upon what has now become a meaningless technicality.¹⁶ To the extent that statutory enactments have dispensed with the necessity of a seal or have robbed it of its former significance, the rule itself must be regarded as without foundation.

§ 214. ——— Estoppel.—Even though the rule might otherwise prevail, the principal may by his conduct estop himself from relying upon it. Thus where a grantor signs and seals a deed or bond, leaving unfilled blanks, and gives it to an agent with parol authority to fill the blanks and deliver it, and the agent fills the blanks as authorized and delivers it to an innocent grantee for value and without notice that the agent thus acted without adequate authority, it is held that the ¹⁵ United States v. Nelson, 2 Brock. 64; Williams v. Crutcher, 5 How. (Miss.) 71, 35 Am. Dec. 422; Davenport v. Sleight, 2 Dev. & Bat. (N. C.) L. 381, 31 Am. Dec. 420; Humphreys v. Finch, 97 N. C. 303, 2 Am. St. R. 293; Blacknall v. Parish, 6 Jones (N. C.), Eq. 70; State v. Boring, 15 Ohio, 507; Lund v. Thackery, 18 S. Dak. 113; Ingram v. Little, 14 Ga. 173, 58 Am. Dec. 549; Burns v. Lynde, 6 Allen (Mass.), 305; Preston v. Hull, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 600, 14 Am. Rep. 153; Wunderlin v. Cadogan, 50 Cal. 613; Adamson v. Hartman, 40 Ark. 58; Upton v. Archer, 41 Cal. 85, 10 Am. Rep. 266; Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 6 M. & W. 200.

¹⁶ Thus it is held "that parol authority is sufficient to authorize the filling of a blank in a sealed instrument and that such authority may be given in any way by which it might be given in case of an unsealed instrument." State v. Young, 23 Minn. 551; Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 17 L. Ed. 780; Cribben v. Deal, 21 Oreg. 211, 28 Am. St. R. 746; Palacios v. Brasher, 18 Colo. 593, 36 Am. St. R. 205; Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 783; Swartz v. Ballou, 47 Iowa, 188, 29 Am. Rep. 470; Field v. Stagg, 52 Mo. 534, 14 Am. Rep. 435; Van Etta v. Evenson, 28 Wis. 33, 9 Am. Rep. 486; Schintz v. McManamy, 33 Wis. 299; Thummel v. Holden, 149 Mo. 677; Forster v. Moore, 79 Hun, 472, aff'd 156 N. Y. 666; Otis v. Browning, 59 Mo. App. 326. See also South Berwick v. Huntress, 53 Me. 89, 87 Am. Dec. 535; Wiley v. Moor, 17 S. & R. (Penn.) 438, 17 Am. Dec. 696; Commercial Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348, 34 Am. Dec. 317; Wooley v. Constant, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 54, 4 Am. Dec. 246; Ex parte Decker, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 60; Ex parte Kerwin, 8 Id. 118; Humphreys v. Guillow, 13 N. H. 385, 38 Am. Dec. 499; Gibbs v. Frost, 4 Ala. 720; Richmond Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 412; Boardman v. Gore, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 517, 18 Am. Dec. 73; Camden Bank v. Hall, 14 N. J. L. 583.

In Einstein v. Holladay-Klotz Land & Lumber Co., 132 Mo. App. 82, it was held that the deed could lawfully be delivered in blank to the grantee with authority to him to fill in either his own name or that of any other person he might select, relying upon Thummel v. Holden, 149 Mo. 677, supra. This doctrine is criticised in 8 Columbia L. Review, 662.

grantor will be estopped from asserting, as against such grantee, that the agent's authority was insufficient.¹⁷

And even though the agent fills the blank in a manner not authorized, there may nevertheless be cases in which the principal should be held bound to any person entitled to rely upon it and who in good faith has relied upon it in ignorance of the facts and under such circumstances that he will now be prejudiced if the instrument be held invalid. Thus where the sureties upon a probate bond signed and delivered it in blank to the principal in the bond, with the understanding that it was to be filled out with a certain sum, but he filled it with a larger sum (apparently required by the probate judge) and filed it in the probate office, it was held that persons entitled to rely upon it as an authorized bond could recover upon it.¹⁸ The court, by Holmes, J., said, "We are of opinion that, when a bond such as this is intrusted to the principal for his use, to fill it up and deliver it, the possibility of his being required by the probate judge to insert a penal sum larger than the surety directed, and of his doing so, is so obvious and so near, that the surety must be held to take the risk of his principal's conduct, and is bound by the instrument as delivered, although delivered in disobedience of orders, if, as here, the obligee has no notice, from the face of the bond or otherwise, of the breach of orders."

The same rule has been applied in the case of official bonds, fair upon their face, but claimed to have been filled and delivered in a manner not authorized.

§ 215. — How when seal superfluous.—But the common law rule is generally held to apply only to instruments necessarily under seal, and hence if a seal was not essential to the validity of the instrument executed by the agent, its presence will ordinarily be treated as a mere redundancy, and if the agent's authority to execute it, or to fill blanks in it, if it were without seal, was ample, the seal will be disregarded, and the instrument will stand as a simple contract.¹⁹

¹⁷ McCleerey v. Wakefield, 76 Iowa, 529, 2 L. R. A. 529; Ragsdale v. Robinson, 48 Tex. 379; Palacios v. Brasher, 18 Colo. 593, 36 Am. St. R. 305; Swartz v. Ballou, 47 Iowa, 188, 29 Am. Rep. 470; Phelps v. Sullivan, 140 Mass. 36, 54 Am. Rep. 442; Field v. Stagg, 52 Mo. 534, 14 Am. Rep. 435; Van Etta v. Evenson, 28 Wis. 33, 9 Am. Rep. 486; Ormsby v. Johnson, 24 S. Dak. 494.

¹⁸ White v. Duggan, 140 Mass. 18, 54 Am. Rep. 437. In the case of official bonds see, for example, City of Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593, 35 Am. Rep. 182; Taylor County v. King, 73 Iowa, 153, 5 Am. St. R. 666; Rose v. Douglass Township, 52 Kan. 451, 39 Am. St. R. 354; McCormick v. Bay City, 23 Mich. 457; State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 212, 21 Am. Rep. 440; Belden v. Hurlbut, 94 Wis. 562, 37 L. R. A. 853. See also Humphreys v. Finch, 97 N. C. 303, 2 Am. St. R. 293.

¹⁹ Wagoner v. Watts, 44 N. J. L. 126; Long v. Hartwell, 34 N. J. L. 116; Mor-

A few cases, however, decline to make this distinction.²⁰

It would, moreover, seem not to be tenable in any case in which, though the instrument might be valid without a seal, in some other circumstances, it is now counted or relied upon in such a manner as to demand a deed to uphold it.²¹

§ 216. — How when instrument executed in presence of principal and by his direction.—So, even though the instrument to be executed is necessarily under seal, yet, in accordance with a principle already referred to, if the instrument be executed in the presence of the principal and by his direction or assent it is sufficient.²²

The reason given for this rule is that "if the grantor's name is written by the hand of another, in his presence and by his direction, it is his act, and the signature, in point of principle, is as actually his as though he had performed the physical act of making it."²³

This rule quite generally prevails, and it extends to the filling of blanks in deeds and other instruments when done under like circumrow v. Higgins, 29 Ala. 448; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609, 82 Am. Dec. 765; Worrall v. Munn, 5 N. Y. 229, 55 Am. Dec. 330; Wood v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 8 N. Y. 160; Wood v. Wise, 153 N. Y. App. Div. 223; Dickerman v. Ashton, 21 Minn. 538; Thomas v. Joslin, 30 Minn. 388; Adams v. Power, 52 Miss. 828; Nichols v. Haines, 98 Fed. 692; Marshall v. Rugg, 6 Wyo. 270, 33 L. R. A. 679; McIntosh v. Hodges, 110 Mich. 319; Bless v. Jenkins, 129 Mo. 647, Purcell v. Potter, Anthon (N. Y.) N. P. 310; Tapley v. Butterfield, 42 Mass. 515, 35 Am. Dec. 374; Piercy v. Hedrick, 2 W. Va. 458, 98 Am. Dec. 774.

The same rule would apply to the filling of immaterial blanks in a sealed instrument. Vose v. Dolan, 108 Mass. 155, 11 Am. Rep. 331.

Where one had good oral authority to sell a chattel the fact that he made an unauthorized bill of sale under seal did not affect the passage of the title. Osborne v. Horner, 33 N. C. 359.

²⁰ Rowe v. Ware, 30 Ga. 278; Overman v. Atkison, 102 Ga. 750; Hayes v. Atlanta, 1 Ga. App. 25; Dalton Buggy Co. v. Wood, 7 Ga. App. 477; Wheeler v. Nevins, 34 Me. 54; Baker

v. Freeman, 35 Me. 485; Cummins v. Cassily, 44 Ky. (5 B. Mon.) 74.

²¹ See Baker v. Freeman, supra, an action of covenant.

²² Gardner v. Gardner, 5 Cush. 483, 52 Am. Dec. 741; Currier v. Clark, 145 Iowa, 613; Johnson v. Van Velsor, 43 Mich. 208; Harshaw v. McKesson, 65 N. C. 688; Croy v. Busenbark, 72 Ind. 48; Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 T. R. 313; King v. Longnor, 1 Nev. & M. 576; s. c. 4 Barn. & Adol. 647; Wood v. Goodridge, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 117, 52 Am. Dec. 771; Jansen v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 565; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Brown, 30 N. J. Eq. 193; Mackay v. Bloodgood, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368.

Where an attorney, who has prepared a paper for execution by an illiterate woman, asks her if he shall sign it for her and she nods her head, it is sufficient authority. Thomas v. Spencer (N. J.), 42 Atl. 275.

The doctrine of the text seems to be denied where the signature purported to have been made by an agent. Semple v. Morrison, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 298—where the alleged principal was an infant.

²³ Ante, § 208; Mutual Benefit L. Ins. Co. v. Brown, 30 N. J. Eq. 193.

stances.²⁴ In Kentucky, however, it is denied effect under the statute of that state governing the execution of contracts of suretyship²⁵ though often in language applicable to any case. It will be obvious that these are not cases of agency, in the ordinary sense, at all.

§ 217. — How when principal adopts deed prepared by another.—Upon somewhat similar grounds, it has been held that one may adopt and make his own a deed signed in his name by another without any previous authority. Thus where a deed of land was signed with the name of the grantor (in this case it was signed by the grantee in the presence and by the direction of the grantor) and was then personally acknowledged and delivered by the grantor, it was held that the deed was valid as the deed of the latter. Said the court: "If one acknowledges and delivers a deed which has his name and seal affixed to it, the deed is valid, no matter by whom the name and seal were affixed, no matter whether with or without the grantor's consent. The acknowledgment and delivery are acts of recognition and adoption so distinct and emphatic that they will preclude the grantor from afterward denying that the signing and sealing were also his acts. They are his by adoption. * * * By taking the instrument in this incomplete condition and completing it, the grantor makes it his deed in all its particulars. He adopts the signature and the seal the same as he does the habendum and the covenants which are inserted by the printer of the blank. The deed is not sustained on the ground of ratification but adoption. Ratification applies to agency. No question of agency arises in this class of cases. The validity of the deed cannot rest upon the ground of agency or ratification. If such were the case the authority or ratification would have to be by instrument under seal; for authority or ratification must be of as high a character as the act to be performed or ratified. * * * No matter by whom the signing and sealing were performed, nor whether with or without the grantor's consent. By completing the instrument he adopts what had previously been done to it, and makes it his in all particulars."²⁶

²⁴ Hudson v. Revett, 5 Bing. 368; McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368; Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 T. R. 313; Mackay v. Bloodgood, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; People v. Smith, 20 Johns. 62; Brown v. Colquitt, 73 Ga. 59, 54 Am. R. 867.

²⁵ Billington v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 400; Dickson v. Luman, 93 Ky. 614; Wilson v. Linville, 96 Ky. 50; Ragan v. Chenault, 78 Ky. 545.

²⁶ Clough v. Clough, 73 Me. 487, 40 Am. Rep. 386. Upon substantially the same grounds proceeds the case of Rhode v. Louthain, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 413, in which a bond which had been executed in the defendant's name by agent without sealed authority was shown to the principal signed and sealed and he said that it was all right. By so saying he was held to have adopted the signature and the

§ 218. — Instrument not good as deed may sometimes be effective as contract.—So there may be cases in which, although the instrument may not be valid as a deed, because of the lack of proper authority in the agent to execute it, it may nevertheless be operative as a written contract if as such it would be within the agent's authority. Thus where the principal sent out an agent to sell land, giving him a deed having the name of the grantee and the amount of the consideration in blank, and the agent sold the land and filled in the blanks and delivered the deed, it was held that the instrument, although invalid as a deed, because the agent's authority was merely parol, yet constituted a good contract for the conveyance of the land, which would be specifically enforced in equity. The court said: "We think that there can be no doubt that the instrument which for reasons above stated could not operate as a deed, may be regarded as a contract put in writing. It is in truth a written contract more than ordinarily complete, both in form and substance, and the only question admitting of any sort of doubt is, whether it has been signed by the defendant or by any legally authorized agent. We are of opinion that it cannot be considered as a contract with the plaintiff signed by the defendant himself, independently of any act of his agent, because, when the defendant put his name and seal to it, no such contract had been made. But we think, that in legal effect, it was signed for him, and in his name by his properly constituted agent. The failure of the agent to make the instrument operate as the deed of his principal did not prevent him from causing it to operate as the simple contract of his principal."²⁷

§ 219. Appointment by corporations.—It was the doctrine of the common law that a corporation could contract only by deed under its corporate seal, and that its appointment of an agent could be made only in the same manner. This doctrine, however, is now quite uni-seal and the bond as his own. So in Hudson v. Revett, 5 Bing. (Eng.) 368, where a deed was completed after signature, Holroyd, J., was sustained, having told the jury, "if in such a case there was that which amounted to a redelivery, and showed that the party meant the deed should be acted on, . . . the deed would be his in its altered state." See to the same effect: Nye v. Lowry, 82 Ind. 316; Currier v. Clark, 145 Iowa, 613; Reed v. Cedar Rapids, 138 Iowa, 365; Nickerson v. Buck, 12 Cush. (66 Mass.) 332; Just v. Township of Wise, 42 Mich. 573.

As to the effect of the adoption of an unsigned deed see American Sav. Bank v. Helgesen, 67 Wash. 572 (overruling same case, 64 Wash. 54). Held, not good.

²⁷ Blacknall v. Parish, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 70, 78 Am. Dec. 239; Godsey v. Standifer, 31 Ky. L. R. 44, 101 S. W. 921; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609, 82 Am. Dec. 765; Heinlein v. Martin, 53 Cal. 321; Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392; Joseph v. Fisher, 122 Ind. 399; Dickerman v. Ashton, 21 Minn. 538; Lobdell v. Mason, 71 Miss. 937 (a lease).

versally abandoned, both in England and in this country, and, in the absence of contrary provisions in its constating instruments or in the laws of the state, a corporation may confer authority upon an agent for the performance of any act within the scope of its corporate powers by unsealed writing or by parol; and such authority may also be implied, as in other cases, from the acquiescence of the corporation or from its adoption or recognition of the act, or the corporation may be estopped to deny its existence.²⁸

§ 220. ——— To execute deed of corporate realty.—And it is not necessary that the authority of the agent even to execute a deed of the corporate real estate should be under seal. The authority to convey may be conferred by a vote of the trustees or other managing officers,²⁹ and authority to convey carries with it authority to execute suitable ²⁸ Burrill v. Bank, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 163, 35 Am. Dec. 395; Nobleboro v. Clark, 68 Me. 87, 28 Am. Rep. 22; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. South, etc., R. Co., 84 Ala. 570, 5 Am. St. Rep. 401; Williams v. Fresno Canal Co., 96 Cal. 14, 31 Am. St. Rep. 172; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego Flume Co., 108 Cal. 549, 29 L. R. A. 839; Fitch v. Mill Co., 80 Me. 34; Scofield v. Parlin & Orendorff Co., 61 Fed. Rep. 804; Detroit v. Jackson, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 106; Johns v. People, 25 Mich. 499; Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 26; Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 64, 6 L. Ed. 552; Yarborough v. Bank of England, 16 East, 6; Ross v. City of Madison, 1 Ind. 281, 48 Am. Dec. 361; Rockford, etc., R. R. Co. v. Wilcox, 66 Ill. 417; Kiley v. Forsee, 57 Mo. 390; Smiley v. Mayor, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 604; Gowen Marble Co. v. Tarrant, 73 Ill. 608; Maine Stage Co. v. Longley, 14 Me. 444; Peterson v. Mayor, 17 N. Y. 449. See also Sariol v. McDonald Co., 127 App. Div. 648; Kelly Co. v. Barber Co., 136 App. Div. 22; Warren v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Me. 439, 33 Am. Dec. 674; Southgate v. Atlantic & Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Mo. 89; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Vandiver, 42 Pa. St. 365, 82 Am. Dec. 520; Columbia, etc., Co. v. Vancouver, etc., Co., 32 Ore. 532; Hamm v. Drew, 83 Tex. 77; Shea Realty Corp. v. Page, 111 Va. 490; Culver v. Pocono Spring, etc., Co., 206 Pa. 481; St. Claire v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583, 95 Am. St. R. 964.

No formal record is indispensable. Robinson Reduction Co. v. Johnson, 10 Colo. App. 135; Jones v. Stoddart, 8 Idaho, 210; President Min. Co. v. Coquard, 40 Mo. App. 40; Washington Times Co. v. Wilder, 12 D. C. App. 62; Brown v. British Amer. Mtg. Co., 86 Miss. 388. See also Turner v. Kingston Lumber & Mfg. Co., 106 Tenn. 1; Smith v. Bank of New England, 72 N. H. 4.

²⁹ Burrill v. Nahant Bank, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 163, 35 Am. Dec. 395; per Hosmer, Ch. J., in Savings Bank v. Davis, 8 Conn. 191; Nobleboro v. Clark, 68 Me. 87, 28 Am. Rep. 22; Marr v. Given, 23 Me. 55; Fitch v. Steam Mill Co., 80 Me. 34; Cook v. Kuhn, 1 Neb. 472. Although it is often said that there must be formal meetings and votes (Standifer v. Swann, 78 Ala. 88, e. g.), there is much authority for the proposition that the informal consent of all those authorized to act in the matter will suffice. Jordan v. Collins, 107 Ala. 572; National State Bank v. Sandford Co., 157 Ind. 10; Morissette v. Howard, 62 Kan. 463; Sherman v. Fitch, 98 Mass. 59; Horton v. Long, 2 Wash. 435, 26 Am. St. R. 867, etc. But this is a question in the law of Corporations and not of Agency.

and proper instruments for that purpose, and to affix the corporate seal to an instrument requiring it.³⁰ The same rule extends to municipal and quasi municipal corporations.³¹

b. Authority Required by Statute to be in Writing.

§ 221. Common law rules do not require written authority.—Except in the cases already considered wherein the common law required authority to be conferred by an instrument under seal which must of course also be in writing, there is no general rule of the common law making authority in writing essential. There are, of course, very many cases in which it is highly desirable as matter of evidence, to prevent mistake, to secure accuracy, or to enforce limitations, that the authority shall be conferred by instrument in writing, and in most important cases writing is resorted to; but as a matter of law it is not essential.

§ 222. Statutes often require it, especially for selling or leasing land—English Statute of Frauds.—The danger resulting from relying upon word of mouth in certain cases relating to estates in land early led to the enactment of statutes requiring authority for a few purposes to be conferred by writing. Thus section one of the English statute of frauds, of 29 Charles II, declares that "All leases, estates, interests of freehold * * * made or created by livery and seisin only, or by parol, and not put in writing and signed by the parties so making or creating the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, shall have the force and effect of leases or estates at will only," etc. So in section three it is provided that "No leases, estates or interests either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain interest, not being copyhold or customary interest, of, in, to or out of any messuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall * * * be assigned, granted or surrendered unless it be by deed or ³⁰ Burrill v. Nahant Bank, supra; Valentine v. Piper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 85, 33 Am. Dec. 715; People v. Borning, 8 Cal. 407; Hemstreet v. Burdick, 90 Ill. 444.

³¹ Thus it appeared by the records of the meeting that the inhabitants of a town at a legal town meeting chose H "agent to settle with the railroad company and sell the balance of the town landing if he thinks it will be for the interest of the town to do so, and to settle all other matters with the railroad company;" and it was held that by this vote, H had authority to sell the town landing and to execute a proper deed of conveyance thereof in behalf of the town. Nobleboro v. Clark, 68 Me. 87, 28 Am. Rep. 22. See also Ross v. City of Madison, 1 Ind. 281, 48 Am. Dec. 361.

note in writing, signed by the party so assigning, granting or surrendering the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, or by act and operation of law." In the fourth and seventeenth sections, however, the legislature contented itself with requiring simply that the agent be "lawfully authorized" without adding "by writing."

§ 223. — American statutes—Authority respecting lands.—The English statute either in form or substance has been reproduced in many of the American states. Thus the statute in Michigan declares that "No estate or interest in lands, other than leases for a term not exceeding one year, nor any trust or power over or concerning lands, or in any manner relating thereto, shall hereafter be created, granted, assigned, surrendered or declared, unless by act or operation of law, or by deed or conveyance in writing, subscribed by the party creating, granting, assigning, surrendering or declaring the same, or by some person thereunto by him lawfully authorized by writing." And "Every contract for the leasing for a longer period than one year, or for the sale of any lands, or any interest in lands, shall be void, unless the contract, or some note or memorandum thereof, be in writing, and signed by the party by whom the lease or sale is to be made, or by some person thereunto by him lawfully authorized by writing." Statutes substantially similar though with more or less variation as to the period of the lease, are found in Alabama, California, Colorado, Illinois, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, and other states. In Missouri the statute is a close copy of the original.

Not all of the states, however, have such statutes. Thus, Wisconsin, for example, while it has a statute identical with the first section quoted above from Michigan, omits the words "by writing" at the close of the second one. Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Texas and West Virginia do the same. The Kansas statute omits the second clause and the exception as to leases in the first. Mississippi requires only that the memorandum of the contract be signed by the party to be charged or by an agent lawfully authorized and does not have the further requirement that the agent's authority be in writing.

New Jersey requires that any interest in lands, and any leases be made in writing and, if through an agent, by an agent authorized in writing, but of the contract for the sale of lands says only that it must be in writing signed by the party to be charged or by an agent lawfully authorized. Substantially the same is the statute in Arkansas.

There are various distinctions in other states which it is not praclicable to reproduce here. The statute in each case must be consulted, whenever the general question arises.³²

§ 224. — Acknowledging or recording power.—Unless the statute requires it, it is not essential (though highly desirable and proper as a matter of evidence) that the written authority shall be either acknowledged or recorded,³³ but in several states acknowledgment and record are required by statute.³⁴

§ 225. Statutes requiring written authority in other cases—Suretyship—Written instruments.—The policy of the law may extend the requirement of written authority to other cases. Thus, in Kentucky it is enacted that “No person shall be bound as the surety of another by the act of an agent unless the authority of the agent is in writing, signed by the principal.”³⁵

So in California,³⁶ North³⁷ and South Dakota³⁸ and Montana,³⁹ authority to execute instruments required to be in writing, e. g., a promissory note, can be conferred only by authority in writing. In Georgia the authority of an attorney in fact to make an appeal must be in writing and filed in court.⁴⁰

³² Where the statute thus requires written authority, authority granted for some other purpose cannot be enlarged or extended by parol so as to include one of the purposes named in the statute. Minnesota Stoneware Co. v. McCrossen, 110 Wis. 316, 84 Am. St. R. 927; Shea v. Seelig, 89 Mo. App. 146.

A contract with an agent to find a purchaser of land is not a contract for the creation of an estate or interest in land, or of a trust or power over or concerning land within the meaning of such a statute. See post, § 233.

Even although the authority be not in writing, there may be such acts of part performance, and the like, as to make the contract specifically enforceable as though made by the principal without writing. Rovelsky v. Scheuer, 114 Ala. 419.

³³ Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448; Valentine v. Piper, 39 Mass. 85, 23 Am. Dec. 715; Rownd v. Davidson, 113 La. 1047.

³⁴ See Bourne v. Campbell, 21 R. I.

490, and Godsey v. Standifer, 31 Ky. L. R. 44.

³⁵ See Kentucky Statutes, 1899, § 482; Simpson v. Commonwealth, 89 Ky. 412; Bramel v. Byron (Ky.), 43 S. W. 695, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1440. It is not enough under this statute that the act be done in the presence and by the direction of the principal. Billington v. Com., 79 Ky. 400; Com. v. Belt, 21 Ky. L. R. 339, 51 S. W. 431; Dickson v. Luman, 93 Ky. 614; Wilson v. Linville, 96 Ky. 50; Ragan v. Chenault, 78 Ky. 545. See also Wallace v. McCollough, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 426.

³⁶ Civil Code, § 2309; Seymour v. Oelrichs, 156 Cal. 782, 134 Am. St. Rep. 154.

³⁷ Civil Code, § 4314.

³⁸ Civil Code, § 1667. See Ballou v. Carter, — S. Dak. —, 137 N. W. 603; Lund v. Thackeray, 18 S. Dak. 113, and Dal v. Fischer, 20 S. Dak. 426.

³⁹ Civil Code, § 3085; Case v. Kramer, 34 Montana, 142.

⁴⁰ Civil Code, § 4457.

§ 226. Employments for more than one year.—Under the fourth section of the statute of frauds, and the subdivision thereof relating to “any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof,” a contract of employment which is not to be performed within one year, and with it any authority to act as agent by virtue of it, may fail unless there be some note or memorandum thereof in writing, and signed by the party to be charged thereby.⁴¹

§ 227. What writing sufficient when writing required.—Even in those cases in which the authority is, by the statute, required to be conferred by writing, it need not, except when the instrument to be executed is under seal, be by a formal or a sealed writing.⁴² It may

⁴¹ Eikelman v. Perdew, 140 Cal. 687; Dietrich v. Hoefelmeir, 128 Mich. 145. See also Buckley v. Buckley, 9 Nev. 373.

But a contract for an entirely indefinite time of service or for a certain service which may well be completed within one year is not within the statute. Neal v. Parker, 98 Md. 254; Vocke v. Peters, 58 Ill. App. 338. The same is true of a contract for a season, which may or may not close within one year from the time that the contract is made. Bank v. Finnell, 133 Cal. 475; DeLand v. Hall, 134 Mich. 381. The fact that death within one year may complete a contract to give support for life, or to refrain from a certain business for life, has been held in some jurisdictions, to make such a contract not within this section of the statute. Doyle v. Dixon, 97 Mass. 208, 93 Am. Dec. 80; Peters v. Westborough, 36 Mass. (19 Pick.) 364, 31 Am. Dec. 142; Lyon v. King, 52 Mass. (11 Metc.) 411, 45 Am. Dec. 219; Hill v. Jamieson, 16 Ind. 125, 79 Am. Dec. 414.

The same rule has been applied to cases of a contract for services for a time which would extend beyond one year from the time of making the contract. Smith v. Conlin, 26 N. Y. Supreme Ct. (19 Hun) 234; Blake v. Voight, 134 N. Y. 69, 30 Am. St. R. 622. In this case the plaintiff had in November entered into an agreement with the defendant to serve as the defendant's agent for one year from the first of December, but with an option to either one to terminate the contract six months after December the first. The defendant pleaded the Statute of Frauds. The contract was held not to be within the prohibition of the statute. See contra, however, Biest v. Versteeg Shoe Co., 97 Mo. App. 137. In this case the plaintiff had on February 5, 1900, made a written contract with the defendant to serve as travelling sales agent for the defendant for one year to begin with April 1, 1900. By the terms of the contract Biest was given an option to terminate it on October 1, 1900, by giving notice by August 1, 1900. The defendant relies upon the fact that the contract was on its face incomplete and did not show what was to be the plaintiff's territory and upon the Statute of Frauds. The court allowed the Statute of Frauds to defeat the plaintiff's recovery for breach of this contract.

This case was approved in the late case of Wagniere v. Dunnell, 29 R. I. 580, 17 Ann. Cas. 205, where other cases are cited. The late English case of Hanau v. Ehrlich, [1912] App. Cas. 39, Ann. Cas. 1912, B, 730, also adopts the same view.

⁴² Baird v. Loescher, 9 Cal. App. 65. But a written memorandum referring to an oral agreement and not incorporating its terms is not sufficient compliance with a statute which requires that a contract be in writing. Zimmerman v. Zehendner, 164 Ind.

be conferred by letter,⁴³ or by telegram,⁴⁴ or by any other informal document.

c. In other Cases Authority may be Conferred by Words or Conduct.

§ 228. No formal method required.—Except in the cases already considered of instruments under seal and statutes expressly requiring written authority, no formal or particular method is necessary to confer authority for the doing of any act lawful to be done by agent.⁴⁵ While written instruments or express words or formal procedure may at times be desirable, they are not necessary, and parol authority will suffice.

§ 229. By parol—To sell or lease lands.—Thus, except in those states⁴⁶ in which the statutes expressly require the authority to be in 466, 3 Ann. Cas. 655. See Keith v. Smith, 46 Wash. 131, 13 Ann. Cas. 975; Phillips v. Jones, 39 Ind. App. 626.

New Jersey has held under its statute requiring that the broker must have written authority, if he is to recover commissions, that a writing acknowledging the broker's authority, after he has in fact performed, is without consideration, and will not give broker action for commission for services. See Alpern v. Klein, 76 N. J. L. 53.

⁴³ Thus where the owner of land in Kansas City wrote from Chicago, where he resided, to his agent in Kansas City, "I leave the sale of the lots pretty much with you; if the party, or any one is willing to pay sixty dollars a foot, one-third cash, and the balance in one and two years, interest seven per cent. per annum, and pay commission of sale, I think I am willing to have you make out a deed, and I will perfect it, hold till then"—it was held that this authorized the agent to make a contract binding upon the owner for a present sale of the lots. Smith v. Allen, 86 Mo. 178, citing Stewart v. Wood, 63 Mo. 256; Lyon v. Pollock, 99 U. S. 668, 25 L. Ed. 265; Johnson v. Dodge, 17 Ill. 441; Lawrence v. Taylor, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 107; Hawkins v. Chace, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 502. In Lyon v. Pollock, cited by the court, A wrote to C at San Antonio, Texas, "I wish you to manage my property as you would your own. If a good opportunity offers to sell everything I have, I would be glad to sell. It may be parties will come into San Antonio who will be glad to purchase my gas stock and real estate." It was held that C was thereby authorized to contract for the sale of the real estate but not to convey it. See also Brown v. Eaton, 21 Minn. 409; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 89; Vermont Marble Co. v. Mead, — Vt. —, 80 Atl. 852; Isphording v. Wolf, 36 Ind. App. 250; Paris v. Johnson, 155 Ala. 403; Holliday v. McWilliams, 76 Neb. 324; Bradley & Co. v. Bower, 5 Neb. (Unoff.) 542; Stadleman v. Fitzgerald, 14 Neb. 290.

Where the statute requires that an agent to sell land or to find a purchaser for land shall be authorized by writing, a letter informally giving that authority will suffice. Longstreth v. Korb, 64 N. J. L. 112; Getzelsohn v. Donnelly, 50 N. Y. Misc. 164; Holbrook-Blackwelder Co. v. Hartman, 128 Mo. App. 228; Baird v. Loescher, 9 Cal. App. 65.

⁴⁴ Godwin v. Francis, L. R. 5 C. P. 295; Butman v. Butman, 213 Ill. 104.

⁴⁵ Story on Agency, § 47; Ewell's Evans' Agency, 24.

⁴⁶ As in Alabama, California, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, writing, an agent may be authorized by parol to make a valid contract for the sale⁴⁷ or the leasing⁴⁸ of his principal's lands. Where the statute excepts leases for not more than a certain period, leases within that period may be executed without authority in writing.⁴⁹ But it has been said that parol authority to thus charge a principal's realty ought to be express and clearly established.⁵⁰

§ 230. ——— To purchase land.—And so, in the ordinary case, authority merely to purchase land need not be conferred by writing in order to make it enforceable against the vendor, unless some statute expressly requires it.⁵¹ Where, however, the question is whether an

Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

⁴⁷ Heard v. Pilley, 4 Ch. App. Cases, 548; Morrow v. Higgins, 29 Ala. 448; Rutenburg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Jacobson v. Hendricks, 83 Conn. 120 (dictum); Brandon v. Pritchett, 126 Ga. 286, 7 Ann. Cas. 1093; Johnson v. Dodge, 17 Ill. 433; Taylor v. Merrill, 55 Ill. 52; Watson v. Sherman, 84 Ill. 263; Rottman v. Wasson, 3 Kan. 552; Talbot v. Bowen, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 436, 10 Am. Dec. 747; Whitworth v. Pool, 29 Ky. L. R. 1104, 96 S. W. 880; Lawson v. Williams (Ky.), 115 S. W. 730; Hawkins v. Chace, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 502; Ulen v. Kittredge, 7 Mass. 233; Brown v. Eaton, 21 Minn. 409; Dickerman v. Ashton, 21 Minn. 538; Curtis v. Blair, 26 Miss. 309, 59 Am. Dec. 257; Riley v. Minor, 29 Mo. 439; Cobban v. Hecklen, 27 Mont. 245; Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448; Lawrence v. Taylor, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 107; McWhorter v. McMahon, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 386; Champlin v. Parish, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 405; Worrall v. Munn, 5 N. Y. 229, 55 Am. Dec. 330; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 89; Moody v. Smith, 70 N. Y. 598; Combes v. Adams, 150 N. C. 64; Huffman v. Cartwright, 44 Tex. 296; Donnell v. Currie, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 88; Mustard v. Big Creek Devel. Co., 69 W. Va. 713; Dodge v. Hopkins, 14 Wis. 630; Smith v. Armstrong, 24 Wis. 446; Tufts v. Brace, 103 Wis. 341; Brown v. Gris- wold, 109 Wis. 275; Kreutzer v. Lynch, 122 Wis. 474 (to give an option). See also Robinson v. Hathaway, 2 Ohio Dec. (Repr.) 581, and Koehler v. Hunt, 8 Ohio Dec. (Repr.) 404.

⁴⁸ Lake v. Campbell, 18 Ill. 106; McComb v. Wright, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 659.

⁴⁹ See McIntosh v. Hodges, 110 Mich. 319; Williams v. Mershon, 57 N. J. L. 242; Griffin v. Baust, 26 N. Y. App. Div. 553; Bourne v. Campbell, 21 R. I. 490; Marshall v. Rugg, 6 Wyo. 270, 33 L. R. A. 679.

⁵⁰ Union Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Masten, 3 Fed. 881; Bosseau v. O'Brien, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir. C.) 395; Malone v. McCullough, 15 Colo. 460; O'Reilly v. Keim, 54 N. J. Eq. 418; Degginger v. Martin, 48 Wash. 1; Lauer v. Bandow, 43 Wis. 556, 28 Am. Rep. 571; Challoner v. Bouck, 56 Wis. 652; Gilmour v. Simon, 15 Manitoba, 205.

⁵¹ It is enough usually that the statute is satisfied as to the party to be charged. Harper v. Goldschmidt, 156 Cal. 245, 134 Am. St. R. 124, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 689; Ullsperger v. Meyer, 217 Ill. 262, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 221, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1032; Wiley v. Hellen, 83 Kan. 544; Davis v. Martin, 146 N. C. 281; Flegel v. Dowling, 54 Ore. 40, 135 Am. St. R. 812, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1159; Kean v. Landrum, 72 S. C. 556; Wharton v. Tolbert, 84 S. C. 197; LeVine v. Whitehouse, 37 Utah, 260, 24 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 407; Armstrong v. Maryland Coal Co., 67 W. Va. 589; Pain v.

agent, so authorized, who has bought the land but refuses to recognize his principal's rights therein, can be charged as a trustee or otherwise, other considerations which involve the statute may arise.⁵²

§ 231. — To deliver deed.—So, notwithstanding the conflict concerning the execution or completion of deeds, it seems to be agreed that authority to deliver a deed may be conferred by parol.⁵³

§ 232. — To demand and collect rents.—So further, parol authority is sufficient to authorize a person to act as agent for a lessor in the collection of rent or in demanding its payment.⁵⁴

§ 233. — To find purchaser for land—Employment of broker. Even where, under the statute, authority to make a contract for the actual sale of land is required to be by writing, the ordinary employment of a real estate broker or other person "to sell," i. e. to find a purchaser for lands is not by such statutes required to be by writing.⁵⁵ Such employments, as will be seen,⁵⁶ are not usually deemed to authorize the execution of a binding contract of sale.

Flynn, 10 Viet. L. R. 131; Lundy v. Gardner, 2 Ont. W. R. 1104.

⁵² This question is considered under the head of Loyalty in Book IV, Chapter II.

⁵³ See White v. Duggan, 140 Mass. 18, 54 Am. Rep. 437; Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 783.

⁵⁴ Sheets v. Selden, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 177, 17 L. Ed. 822; Ledwith v. Merritt, 74 App. Div. 64, affirmed without opinion 174 N. Y. 512.

⁵⁵ Waterman v. Stephens, 71 Mich. 104; Hannan v. Prentiss, 124 Mich. 417; Abbott v. Hunt, 129 N. C. 403; Carsten v. McReavy, 1 Wash. 359; Monfort v. McDonough, 20 Wash. 710; Gerhart v. Peck, 42 Mo. App. 644; Forsythe v. Albright, 149 Mo. App. 515; Rice v. Ruhlman, 68 Mo. App. 503; Johnson v. Haywood, 74 Neb. 157, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 112; Griffith v. Woolworth, 28 Neb. 715; Forrester v. Evatt, 90 Ark. 301; Fox v. Starr, 106 Ill. App. 273; Hancock v. Dodge, 85 Miss. 228; Kepner v. Ford, 16 N. Dak. 50; Willson v. Clark, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 92; Friedman v. Suttle, 10 Ariz. 57, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 933 (in which Czarnowski v. Holland, 5 Ariz. 119, which had held the authority of an agent to purchase or sell real estate for compensation must be in writing, was overruled). Watson v. Brightwell, 60 Ga. 212; Monroe v. Snow, 131 Ill. 126; Fischer v. Bell, 91 Ind. 243; Fiero v. Fiero, 52 Barb. 288; McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. D. 497. See also White v. Curry, 39 U. C. Q. B. 569; Flegel v. Dowling, 54 Ore. 40, 135 Am. St. R. 812, 19 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1159.

The same doctrine has been said to apply, where the thing to be sold is a lease of lands. Campbell v. Galloway, 148 Ind. 440.

Where the services have been fully performed and accepted by the principal, the principal cannot defeat the agent's right to commission by showing that the agent was without written authority. Huff v. Hardwick, 19 Colo. App. 416; Trowbridge v. Wetherbee, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 361; Snyder v. Wolford, 33 Minn. 175, 53 Am. Rep. 22; Lesley v. Rosson, 39 Miss. 368, 77 Am. Dec. 679; Carr v. Leavitt, 54 Mich. 540; Benjamin v. Zell, 100 Pac. 33; Bradford v. Laffey, 11 Hawaii, 463.

⁵⁶ See Malone v. McCullough, 15 Colo. 460. Compare Rosenbaum v. Belson, [1900] 2 Ch. 267; Chick v. Bridges, 56 Ore. 1; Purkey v. Harding, 23 S. D. 632; Ross v. Craven, 84 Neb. 520; Lawson v. King, 56 Wash. 15.

In a few states, however, as in California, Indiana, Nebraska and New Jersey special statutes or special provisions of general statutes require either that the authority of the broker shall be by writing or that a written contract shall exist between the principal and the broker.⁵⁷

§ 234. — To grant licenses respecting lands—Selling standing timber.—Where the rights or the privileges which the agent is authorized to grant or transfer do not amount to an estate or interest in the land, the authority need not ordinarily be conferred by writing. So in a state where the sale of standing timber was the sale of an in-

⁵⁷ California, Civ. Code 1906, § 1624, 6, declares that an agreement employing or authorizing an agent to purchase or sell real estate shall be invalid unless it be in writing signed by the party to be charged or his agent thereunto lawfully authorized by writing. See Toomy v. Dunphy, 86 Cal. 639; Platt v. Butcher, 112 Cal. 634; Jamison v. Hyde, 141 Cal. 109, citing other California cases. Kennedy v. Merickel, 8 Cal. App. 378.

New York Penal Code, § 640d, and Missouri Laws of 1903, p. 161, or Rev. Stat. 1909, § 4634, made it a misdemeanor for any person to sell or offer to sell any land without the written authority of the owner. But in Fisher Co. v. Woods, 187 N. Y. 90, and in Woolley v. Mears, 226 Mo. 41, 136 Am. St. R. 637, these statutes were declared unconstitutional upon the ground that they went beyond reasonable regulation of a business.

Indiana, Session Laws 1901, p. 504, Burns' 1901 Compiled Stat. § 6629a, provides that no contract employing a person to find a purchaser for real estate shall be valid unless the same shall be in writing, signed by the owner of the real estate or his legally appointed and duly qualified representative. See Zimmerman v. Zehendner, 164 Ind. 466; Phillips v. Jones, 39 Ind. App. 626.

New Jersey, Statute of Frauds § 10, provides that no agent selling or exchanging land shall be entitled to commission unless the authority is in writing. See Somers v. Wescoat, 66 N. J. L. 551.

Nebraska, Act of 1897, ch. 57, compiled Statutes 1909, § 482, provides that every contract between the owner of land and any broker or agent employed to sell the land shall be void unless the contract is in writing and subscribed by both the broker and the owner, describe the land to be sold and state the compensation to be allowed by the owner for the sale. See Covey v. Henry, 71 Neb. 118.

Oregon. See Chick v. Bridges, 56 Ore. 1, Ann. Cas. 1912, B, 1293.

Washington provides that an agreement authorizing or employing an agent to sell or purchase land shall be void unless there be a note or memorandum in writing signed by the party to be charged or his agent lawfully authorized. Remington & Ballinger's General Statutes 1910, § 5289, and see McCrea v. Ogden, 50 Wash. 495, s. c. 54 Wash. 521.

While the Washington and the California statutes are substantially alike, the California court, Toomy v. Dunphy, supra, has held that what is necessary is written employment or authorization of the agent and that the writing need not state the fact that the employment is for compensation, while the Washington court has held (Foote v. Robbins, 50 Wash. 277) that the written memorandum must specify the compensation and its amount. Indiana has interpreted her statute in the same way that Washington has hers. See cases supra.

terest in lands, and required to be in writing, with written authority in any agent who should make such a contract, an agent authorized by parol to make a contract for sale of standing timber was held to have adequate authority to give a license to cut timber, and his attempted parol contract of sale was held good as a parol license.⁵⁸ So in a state where the sale of standing timber is not regarded as the sale of an interest in land, the authority of an agent to make such a sale may be by parol or inferred from the circumstances.⁵⁹

§ 235. — To subscribe for stock.—In the absence of a statute prescribing some other method, authority to an agent to subscribe for corporate stock may be given by parol.⁶⁰

§ 236. — To execute written instruments not under seal.—And so, except in those cases in which the authority is by some statute required to be in writing,⁶¹ and except where the instrument to be executed is necessarily under seal, authority may be conferred by parol to execute bills, notes and all other contracts in writing.⁶²

Under this rule authority may be conferred without writing to ex-

⁵⁸ Antrim Iron Co. v. Anderson, 140 Mich. 702, 112 Am. St. R. 434.

⁵⁹ Columbia Land & Min. Co. v. Tinsley, 22 Ky. L. R. 1082, 60 S. W. 10.

⁶⁰ In re Whitley Partners, Limited, 32 Chan. Div. 337; Ingersoll, etc., Co. v. McCarthy, 16 U. C. Q. B. 162; and an unauthorized subscription may be ratified and made binding by conduct. Musgrave v. Morrison, 54 Md. 161; Miss. & Tenn. Ry. Co. v. Harris, 36 Miss. 17; Higgins v. State, 7 Ind. 549; McHose & Co. v. Wheeler & Co., 45 Pa. St. 32; McCully v. Railroad Co., 32 Pa. St. 25; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, 23 L. Ed. 220; McClelland v. Whiteley, 11 Biss. 444.

⁶¹ In California authority to execute an instrument required to be in writing can be conferred only by writing. Civil Code § 2309; Alta Silver Min. Co. v. Alta Placer Co., 78 Cal. 629. So in North Dakota, § 4314, South Dakota § 1667, and Montana § 3085.

⁶² There seems to be an impression, easily acquired, but with difficulty removed, that, because authority for the execution of instruments under seal must be conferred by an instrument under seal, authority for the execution of instruments in writing must be conferred by writing. This, however, unless made so by statute, is not true. Except in the cases already referred to, authority for the execution of written instruments may be conferred without writing. Authority for the execution of negotiable instruments is no exception, though such an authority is not easily implied. See Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. 27, 6 Am. Dec. 150; Emerson v. Providence Hat Mfg. Co., 12 Mass. 237, 7 Am. Dec. 60; New England Marine Ins. Co. v. DeWolf, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Shaw v. Hudd, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 9; Small v. Owings, 1 Md. Ch. 363; Welch v. Hoover, 5 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 444; Webb v. Browning, 14 Mo. 354; Wagoner v. Watts, 44 N. J. L. 126; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490; Worrall v. Munn, 5 N. Y. 229, 55 Am. Dec. 330; Fountain v. Bookstaver, 141 Ill. 461; Connor v. Hodges, 7 Ga. App. 153; Fordyce v. Seaver, 74 Ark. 395.

ecute affidavits,⁶³ notices, petitions,⁶⁴ assignments,⁶⁵ bills of sale and mortgages of chattels,⁶⁶ the memorandum required by the fourth or the seventeenth section of the statute of frauds,⁶⁷ and the like.⁶⁸

§ 237. — To fill blanks in written instruments.—In furtherance of the same rule, also, the kind of authority which will justify the making of the entire instrument may also suffice for completing, filling blanks in, or otherwise giving final form and effect to instruments in writing (but not under seal) that is to say, a merely oral authority may suffice.

One out of many instances of this sort, is the common case of the transfer of certificates of stock. These are usually signed in blank (sometimes, but unnecessarily, under seal) and are delivered to the transferee with an express or implied authority in him or any subsequent lawful holder to fill in the blanks and cause a transfer to be made upon the books of the corporation.⁶⁹

§ 238. — To buy and sell goods.—Authority to buy or to sell goods may be conferred without writing.⁷⁰ The seventeenth section of the Statute of Frauds did not, nor do the modern statutes as a rule, require that the agent referred to therein should be "lawfully authorized by writing" as was required in some other sections.

§ 239. — To "accept and receive" under Statute of Frauds.—Authority to an agent to accept and receive the goods or some portion ⁶³ Cook v. Buchanan, 86 Ga. 760.

⁶⁴ Tibbetts v. West, etc., Street Ry. Co., 153 Ill. 147.

⁶⁵ Of mortgage: Moreland v. Houghton, 94 Mich. 548; of a cause of action: Dingley v. McDonald, 124 Cal. 90.

⁶⁶ Cohen v. Oliver, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 35; McKee v. Coffin, 66 Tex. 304; Gouldy v. Metcalf, 75 Tex. 455, 16 Am. St. R. 912; Hirsh & Co. v. Beverly, 125 Ga. 657.

⁶⁷ Moore v. Taylor, 81 Md. 644; O'Reilly v. Keim, 54 N. J. Eq. 418; Roehl v. Haumesser, 114 Ind. 311; Kennedy v. Ehlen, 31 W. Va. 540.

⁶⁸ A proposition to allow redemption from a mortgage sale need not be authorized by writing. Morrow v. Jones, 41 Neb. 867. The signing of the roll of members and the bidding in of a loan in a building and loan association may be done by an agent, without authority in writing. Kirklin v. Atlas Sav. & L. Ass'n, 107 Ga. 313. An agent may waive a mechanic's lien by the verbal authority of his principal. Hughes v. Lansing, 34 Ore. 118, 75 Am. St. R. 574. Or make a parol release of an equity to have a mortgage corrected so as to cover more land. Packard v. Delfel, 9 Wash. 562.

⁶⁹ See McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325, 7 Am. Rep. 341; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 616; Bridgeport Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 231; Walker v. Detroit Transit Ry., 47 Mich. 338; Andrews v. Worcester, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 64; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. 80.

⁷⁰ See Wiger v. Carr, 131 Wis. 584, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 650, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 998.

of them in order to satisfy the requirements of the seventeenth section of the Statute of Frauds may also be conferred without writing.⁷¹

So where an oral acceptance of a written offer to sell lands would be sufficient if made by the offeree in person, an acceptance by his agent authorized without writing, is held to be sufficient.⁷²

§ 240. Authority may be partly written and partly oral.—Where the authority is not required to be in writing, it may be partly written and partly oral. It may be found in several instruments or several acts or both. It may have been conferred at different times. The written part may enlarge, restrict or supersede the oral, or vice versa. The latest declaration of the principal's intention will ordinarily control; so far as it is inconsistent with the former declaration, or is evidently intended to displace it, it must govern.⁷³ Where the principal has evidently intended a written declaration, though not necessary, to be the final repository of his authorization, it will exclude evidence of prior or contemporaneous oral authority.

§ 241. Authority need not be express—Authority by implication.—The authority, moreover, need not be expressly conferred. In the great majority of the cases it is informally conferred, or is presumed from the acts and conduct of the principal.⁷⁴ A large portion of the transactions of the modern business world is carried on by simple and informal means. A word or look or gesture often suffices to give assent to great undertakings or to set in motion the complicated machinery of commerce.⁷⁵ Little, often, is said or written, but that little carries with it a train of legal consequences no less certain and definite ⁷¹ Alexander v. Oneida County, 76 Wis. 56.

⁷² Fowler v. Fowler, 204 Ill. 82; Le Vine v. Whitehouse, 37 Utah, 260, 24 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 407. See also Briggs v. Chamberlain, 47 Colo. 382, 135 Am. St. R. 223; Rathbun v. McLay, 76 Conn. 308; Kean v. Landrum, 72 S. C. 556; Ehrmanntraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333 (agent to accept a lease).

⁷³ See McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. Dak. 497.

⁷⁴ See Dull v. Dumbauld, 7 Kan. App. 376; Nutting v. Elevated Ry. Co., 21 App. Div. 72; Roberson v. Clevenger, 111 Mo. App. 622; Reynolds v. Railway Co., 114 Mo. App. 670; Phillips v. Geiser Mfg. Co., 129 Mo. App. 396; Lindquist v. Dickson, 98 Minn. 369, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 729; Gambrill v. Brown Hotel Co., 11 Colo. App. 529; Burnell v. Morrison, 46 Colo. 533; Fail v. Western Union Co., 80 S. C. 207; Leonard v. Omstead, 141 Iowa, 485; Fielder v. Camp Construction Co., 63 W. Va. 459; Brandt v. Krogh, 14 Cal. App. 39; Anglo-California Bank v. Cerf, 147 Cal. 393; Lafayette Ry. Co. v. Tucker, 124 Ala. 514.

⁷⁵ A forcible illustration of this may be seen upon any Board of Trade, where according to local usage or fixed rule, a nod or the holding up of one or more fingers, serves to give assent to the making of a sale and the specifying of the quantity. So the nod of a purchaser at an auction is sufficient to effect a purchase and to authorize the entering of his name upon the memorandum of the sale.

than if the whole were included in the spoken or written words. Hence it is that in many cases the existence of an agency is implied or presumed from the words or conduct of the parties, although the creation of an agency was not within their immediate contemplation.

§ 242. Conferring certain powers by the creation of others—Incidental powers.—It must also be kept in mind that one method of conferring powers may be by the granting of others to which the former may in some manner be deemed incidental or appurtenant. Thus the authority of the agent is not necessarily to be deemed to be confined to the doing of the main act authorized. Every delegation of power carries with it, by implication, unless the contrary is declared, the authority to do all those incidental acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such a case, which are reasonably necessary and proper to carry into effect the main power so conferred. The principal may, of course, expressly refuse to extend these incidental powers even though he thereby makes the authority impossible of execution; but this is not to be presumed, and the authority will be deemed to include them unless the contrary is brought to the knowledge of the persons with whom the agent deals.⁷⁶

§ 243. ——— Customary powers.—It is also to be assumed, unless the contrary is declared, that the principal intends that the authority shall be executed in accordance with the customs which prevail in transactions of that sort; and the main power will therefore be deemed to include the authority to do all those incidental acts which are customarily done by such an agent at that time and place, unless the contrary is made known to the persons with whom the agent deals.⁷⁷ Many illustrations of this rule will be seen hereafter, conspicuous among them, for example, being the case of the agent authorized to sell a chattel and who is thereby deemed to be authorized to give warranties of quality if such warranties are usually given upon similar sales of chattels of that sort.

§ 244. ——— Powers established by the course of business.—The authority of the agent may thus not only include incidental powers and customary powers,—embracing therein, of course, such powers as are usually incident to a certain kind of business—but it may also include powers incident to the business of the particular principal as ⁷⁶ See Watts v. Howard, 70 Minn. 122; Murphy v. Columbus Bld. Co., 155 Mo. App. 649.

⁷⁷ See Pickert v. Marston, 68 Wis. 465, 60 Am. Rep. 876; Hibbard v. Peek, 75 Wis. 619; Corbett v. Under- wood, 83 Ill. 324, 25 Am. Rep. 392; Upton v. Suffolk County Mills, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 586, 59 Am. Dec. 163; Fritz v. Chicago Ele. Co., 136 Iowa, 699; Hopkins v. Armour, 8 Ga. App. 442.

he actually conducts it—which may include powers not ordinarily incident to it. Whatever powers, therefore, the given principal may, by his course of conduct, by his general methods of dealing, by his long continued acquiescence or tacit approval, have in fact attached either to the given agent or to such an agent as he is, are to be deemed to exist when that agent proceeds to do similar acts with persons ignorant of any actual limitations put upon this authority.⁷⁸ It is not essential in this case (unlike the case of estoppel to be hereafter considered) that the person dealing with the agent shall at the time have known of and relied upon the facts creating the authority⁷⁹ any more than it ⁷⁸ Thus in Martin v. Webb, 110 U. S. 7, 28 L. Ed. 49, in speaking of the powers actually exercised by the cashier of a particular bank, it is said that the authority "may be inferred from the general manner in which, for a period sufficiently long to establish a settled course of business, he has been allowed, without interference, to conduct the affairs of the bank. It may be implied from the conduct or acquiescence of the corporation, as represented by the board of directors. When, during a series of years, or in numerous business transactions, he has been permitted, without objection, and in his official capacity, to pursue a particular course of conduct, it may be presumed, as between the bank and those who in good faith deal with it upon the basis of his authority to represent the corporation, that he has acted in conformity with instructions received from those who have the right to control its operations." See also Gale v. Chase Nat. Bank, 104 Fed. 214; Hanover Nat. Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 148 N. Y. 612, 51 Am. St. R. 721; Corn Exchange Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 149 N. Y. 174; Corn Exchange Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 163 N. Y. 332; Welch v. Manufacturing Co., 55 S. C. 568; Blowers v. Ry. Co., 74 S. C. 221.

⁷⁹ Thus in Columbia Mill Co. v. National Bank of Commerce, 52 Minn. 224, where it appeared that there had grown up and continued for years a usage on the part of one Heilpern and his predecessors as bookkeeper and cashier of the mill company to endorse with a rubber stamp and deposit or get cashed checks drawn upon defendant, although the instructions when the account was opened were that only the treasurer should so endorse, it was said: "And because one dealing with an agent may show actual authority in him,—that is, such authority as the principal in fact intended to vest in the agent, although such intention is to be shown by acts and conduct, rather than by express words—without showing that he (the person dealing with the agent) knew when he dealt with him of the acts and conduct from which the intention is to be implied, it was competent for defendant to show the course and manner of conducting business in the office of plaintiff, so far as the bookkeepers and cashier had charge of it. The officers of plaintiff testified that Heilpern had no authority to transfer the checks and receive the money, and that they never knew of the bookkeeper and cashier doing so with plaintiff's checks. But the jury were not bound to their testimony. Such a manner of conducting the business in the office might have been proved as would have justified the jury in finding that the officers must have known of the custom of the bookkeeper and cashier in regard to checks; and had that been found, and that it was acquiesced in by plaintiff, is in any other case: if it in fact exists he may avail himself of it in the same way that a person who at the time really relied, for example, upon the incompetent assertions of the agent may afterwards show that custom justified the power though he was then ignorant of the custom.⁸⁰

When the authority takes on these characteristics it becomes a case of actual rather than mere ostensible or apparent authority; and it is general as to all persons dealing with the agent rather than confined to the equities of a particular person.

§ 245. — Powers resulting from estoppel—Holding out as agent.—Moreover, even where it cannot be shown that a given power has become generally established by the course of the business, as stated in the preceding section, it may still appear that a particular person has been led by the principal's conduct to believe that the authority existed. In such cases the doctrine of estoppel is constantly applied, and the principal will not be permitted to deny that which by his words or conduct he has asserted if such denial would prejudice an innocent third person who has reasonably relied upon such words or conduct.⁸¹

The methods by which this assertion of authority may be made are infinite, but the question does not depend upon particular method but upon its tendency reasonably to lead to the inference of authority.

Estoppel is always a matter personal to the individual asserting it and he must therefore show that he was misled by the appearances relied upon.⁸² It is not enough that he might have been, or that some one else was, so misled.⁸³ It must also appear that he had reasonable the intention to vest authority might have been implied." See also Campbell v. Upton, 66 App. Div. 434, aff'd 171 N. Y. 644, when the facts were not known to the plaintiff.

⁸⁰ Mr. Ewart is of the contrary opinion. See Article in 16 Harvard Law Review, p. 186. But see 13 Green Bag, 50; 15 Harv. Law Rev. 324. See also Article by Mr. E. B. Whitney in 3 Columbia Law Review, 395.

⁸¹ See cases cited in following section.

⁸² See Lewis v. Brown, 39 Tex. Civ. App. 139; First Nat. Bank v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 56 Neb. 149; First Nat. Bank v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 59

Neb. 192; Hazeltine v. Miller, 44 Me. 177.

⁸³ The elements necessary to establish "putative or apparent agency" i. e., agency by estoppel are acts justifying belief in the agency and reliance thereon by the other consistently with ordinary care and prudence. Domasek v. Kluck, 113 Wis. 336; McDermott v. Jackson, 97 Wis. 64, 102 Wis. 419.

Plaintiff must show that he believed in it, to satisfy the definition of the California code. Goslíner v. Grangers' Bank, 124 Cal. 225.

Ostensible agency under the California code cannot be shown by facts of which the party attempting to es-cause to believe that the authority existed; mere belief without cause, or belief in the face of facts that should have put him on his guard is not enough.⁸⁴

§ 246. ——— General rule.—Gathering together all of these elements, it may be stated as a general rule that whenever a person has held out another as his agent authorized to act for him in a given capacity; or has knowingly and without dissent permitted such other to act as his agent in that capacity; or where his habits and course of dealing have been such as to reasonably warrant the presumption that such other was his agent authorized to act in that capacity;—whether it be in a single transaction or in a series of transactions—his authority to such other to so act for him in that capacity will be conclusively presumed to have been given, so far as it may be necessary to protect the rights of third persons who have relied thereon in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable prudence; and he will not be permitted to deny that such other was his agent authorized to do the act he assumed to do, provided that such act was within the real or apparent scope of the presumed authority.⁸⁵

tablish it had no knowledge. Rodgers v. Peckham, 120 Cal. 238; Harris v. San Diego, etc., Co., 87 Cal. 526.

So, generally to establish authority by estoppel. Schoenhofer Brewing Co. v. Wengler, 57 Ill. App. 184; Maxey v. Heckethorn, 44 Ill. 437; Rawson v. Curtis, 19 Ill. 456; Hefferman v. Boteler, 87 Mo. App. 316; Hackett v. Van Frank, 105 Mo. App. 384; Joy v. Vance, 104 Mich. 97.

⁸⁴ Winkelmann v. Brickert, 102 Wis. 50; Ladd v. Grand Isle, 67 Vt. 172.

⁸⁵ See Johnson v. Hurley, 115 Mo. 513; Bush Grocery Co. v. Conely, 61 Fla. 131; Haubelt v. Mill Co., 77 Mo. App. 672; Johnston v. Investment Co., 46 Neb. 480; Holt v. Schneider, 57 Neb. 523; Faulkner v. Simms, 68 Neb. 295; Standley v. Clay, etc., Co., 68 Neb. 332; Lebanon Bank v. Blanke, 2 Neb. (Unoff.) 403; Blancke Co. v. Trade Ex. Co., 5 Neb. (Unoff.) 358; Blancke Co. v. Rees Co., 70 Neb. 510; Trollinger v. Fleer, 157 N. C. 81; Midland Savings Ass'n v. Sutton, 30 Okla. 448; Pursley v. Morrison, 7 Ind. 356, 63 Am. Dec. 424; Hoee

v. Oxley, 1 Wash. (Va.) 19, 1 Am. Dec. 425; Tier v. Lampson, 35 Vt. 179, 82 Am. Dec. 634; Hubbard v. Tenbrook (1889), 124 Pa. 291, 2 L. R. A. 833; Union Stock Yard Co. v. Mallory, 157 Ill. 554, 48 Am. St. Rep. 341; Eagle Bank v. Smith, 5 Conn. 71, 13 Am. Dec. 37; Lyell v. Sanbourn, 2 Mich. 109; Thompson v. Bell, 10 Exch. 10; Commonwealth v. Holmes, 119 Mass. 195; Croy v. Busenbark, 72 Ind. 48; Meyer v. King, 29 La. Ann. 567; Thurber v. Anderson, 88 Ill. 167; Fay v. Richmond, 43 Vt. 25; Keyes & Co. v. Tea Co., 81 Vt. 420; Weaver v. Ogletree, 39 Ga. 586; Rimney v. Getterman, 63 Md. 424; Sorrell v. Brewster, 1 Mich. 373; Grover & Baker Sew. Mach. Co. v. Polhemus, 34 Mich. 247; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Pulte, 45 Mich. 113; Marx v. King, 162 Mich. 258; McBroon v. Cheboygan Co., 162 Mich. 323; Brockelbank v. Sugrue, 5 C. & P. 21; Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Penn. St. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Farmers' Bank v. Butchers' Bank, 16 N. Y. 145; Kiley v. Forsee, 57 Mo. 390; Kelsey v. National Bank, 69

§ 247. Intention to create agency.—Authority is not dependent upon proof of a conscious intention to confer it. Here as elsewhere if parties intentionally do certain acts and the legal effect of those acts is the creation of authority, the authority will exist, even though the parties did not actually contemplate that result.⁸⁶

§ 248. Names not controlling.—Here, as elsewhere, too, the question of agency or not, is not dependent upon names or labels. As has been seen in earlier sections, parties may call that agency which is not, and give some other name to that which is really agency. Where the latter is the case, the ordinary consequences of agency will ensue,⁸⁷ unless there be some contract fixing another basis of liability, or some conditions working an estoppel against setting up the facts. Where

Penn. St. 426; St. Louis, etc., Co. v. Parker, 59 Ill. 23; Vicksburg, etc., R. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 54 Miss. 200; Summerville v. Hannibal, etc., R. R. Co., 62 Mo. 391; Walsh v. Pierce, 12 Vt. 130; Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. James, 22 Wis. 194; Rice v. Groffmann, 56 Mo. 434; Columbia Bridge Co. v. Geisse, 38 N. J. L. 39; Bronson v. Chappell, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 681, 20 L. Ed. 436; Fitzgerald Co. v. Farmers' Co., 3 Ga. App. 212; Grant v. Humerick, 123 Iowa, 571; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. South, etc., R. Co., 84 Ala. 570, 5 Am. St. Rep. 401; Foss-Schneider Brewing Co. v. McLaughlin, 5 Ind. App. 415; Haner v. Furuya, 39 Wash. 122; Ruane v. Murray, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 187; Dysart v. Ry. Co., 122 Fed. 228; Brown v. Brown, 96 Ark. 456.

In Johnston v. Investment Co., supra, it was said: "Where a principal has by his voluntary act placed an agent in such a situation that a person of ordinary prudence, conversant with business usages and with the nature of the particular business, is justified in presuming that such agent has authority to perform a particular act; and therefore deals with the agent, the principal is estopped as against such third person from denying the agent's authority." Approved: General Cartage Co. v. Cox, 74 Ohio St. 284, 113 Am. St. Rep. 959; Harrison v. Legore, 109 Iowa, 618.

Tort cases.—The rule extends also to actions of tort based upon acts done in reliance upon the holding out. Hannon v. Siegel-Cooper Co., 167 N. Y. 244, 52 L. R. A. 429.

⁸⁶ "The intention of the parties, it is true, must control; but that intention is to be gathered from what was actually done or agreed by the parties, not from what they may have privately meant or supposed they meant. Agency or not is a question of law to be determined by the relations of the parties as they in fact exist under their agreements or acts. If relations exist which will constitute an agency, it will be an agency whether the parties understood it to be or not. Their private intention will not affect it." Bradstreet Co. v. Gill, 72 Tex. 115, 13 Am. St. Rep. 768, 2 L. R. A. 405.

A land owner who signs a contract for the sale of land, without reading it, when brought to him by his agent for signature, is bound by powers therein conferred upon the purchaser. Liska v. Lodge, 112 Mich. 635.

⁸⁷ See for example Petteway v. McIntyre, 131 N. C. 432, where documents called leases were said by the court to create agency as matter of law.

the former is the case, no agency will result,⁸⁸ unless there is something to preclude an inquiry into the actual situation.

§ 249. When principal's act becomes effective.—It is difficult, if not impossible, to lay down any general rule by which to determine when the principal's act of appointment or authorization becomes complete and effective. If it be done by any single and specific act, it must be complete when that act is done.⁸⁹ If it be a matter of inference from facts and circumstances, it can only be said that it is complete when the inference of appointment or authorization may and has been legally drawn. .

2. On the Part of the Agent.

§ 250. In general.—Having now seen what is necessary to be done on the principal's part to create the agency, it is next essential to see what the agent must do. Here quite a different situation is at once apparent. The common law rule that an authority, in certain cases, must be conferred by instrument under seal did not require that the agent accept the agency by an instrument under seal, or in any other particular manner. The statutes requiring written authority for various purposes contain no provision as to the manner in which the agent shall accept the agency. The field is therefore open for the application of the general principles of the law.

§ 251. Agent must be notified of appointment.—Notice to the agent of the fact of his appointment must obviously, in the ordinary case, be given,⁹⁰ in order to affect him, at least. It is, of course, entirely possible that, so far as the liability of the principal to third persons is concerned, a principal may incur obligations to other parties

⁸⁸ See Associate Alumni v. General Seminary, 26 App. Div. 144 (163 N. Y. 417) where the parties used the words "agents" and "agency" merely in the sense of an instrumentality by which a common purpose was to be furthered, and not in the ordinary legal sense.

⁸⁹ In Satterthwaite v. Goodyear, 137 N. C. 302, where authorization was based upon a document sent by mail, the court said it bound the principal from the date of the mailing.

⁹⁰ In Ruggles v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 114 N. Y. 415, 11 Am. St. R.

674, negotiations for the appointment of an insurance agent were opened on October 11, by a letter to the agent, in which his territory was outlined as it is proposed to be "if your appointment is confirmed;" on the 13th a formal appointment was mailed to the agent, which did not reach him until the 20th; on the 16th the agent made the contract of insurance in question; on the 19th the property was burned. Held, that the agent's authority, which was accepted, dated from the mailing of the letter containing the appointment.

upon the basis that he has appointed, or will appoint, a certain person as his agent, even though the latter be entirely ignorant of that fact.⁹¹

If the question arises as between the principal and the agent, and particularly if any contract is relied upon between them, notice to the agent and an opportunity to accept the appointment, is indispensable. As between third persons and the agent, notice to the agent and an opportunity to accept or reject, are necessary to make him an agent; though he may, as will be seen, incur obligations to third persons in many cases by undertaking to deal with them as an agent, though he may, in fact, have no color of authority.

§ 252. Agent must accept appointment.—And not only must the agent be notified in the ordinary case, but he must also, to actually make him an agent, accept the appointment.⁹² He may, of course, make himself liable to the principal or to third persons by affording the ordinary external evidence of acceptance, though his actual intention was otherwise.⁹³

As between third persons and the principal there may, as seen in the preceding section, be cases in which third persons might acquire rights against the principal based upon his assertion that he had ap-⁹¹ See Barr v. Lapsley, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 151, 4 L. Ed. 58, cited in a following section.

⁹² Acceptance required.—In prosecution for embezzlement, there must be proof that defendant accepted the agency. State v. Foster, 1 Pen. (Del.) 289, 2 Pen. 111.

There is no proof of agency where though it appeared that a person was named as agent in a power of attorney, he refused to accept or act under it. Beebe v. De Baun, 8 Ark. 510.

In an action by the principal against the agent, the burden of proving acceptance is upon the principal. McCoy v. Weber, 38 La. Ann. 418, relying upon R. C. C. 2990.

Where the principal is seeking to charge the agent as a trustee, he must show acceptance. Amber Petroleum Co. v. Breech (Tex. Civ. App.), 111 S. W. 668.

In an action by the agent against the principal, the agent must show that he accepted the principal's offer. McDonald v. Boeing, 43 Mich. 394, 38 Am. Rep. 199.

Making a note payable at a bank cannot make the bank the agent of the payee to receive payment unless the officers are disposed to accept the agency; hence, no agency if they refuse. Pease v. Warren, 29 Mich. 9, 18 Am. Rep. 58.

⁹³ One who leads another reasonably to suppose that he is accepting the agency cannot escape its consequences, though he used no express words and carefully avoided any express acceptance. Wright v. Rankin, 18 Grant (U. C.), Ch. 625. The mere understanding or belief of the principal is not enough, there must be something from which it can fairly be said that the agent undertook the service. Vickery v. Lanier, 58 Ky. (1 Metc.) 133. See also Amber Petroleum Co. v. Breech (Tex. Civ. App.), 111 S. W. 668. Agent may be estopped by his conduct to deny the agency (Siers v. Wiseman, 58 W. Va. 340); or by his recitals in deeds, etc. Walters v. Bray (Tex. Civ. App.), 70 S. W. 443.

pointed or would appoint the agent; but no rights against the principal would arise out of dealings with such an agent, after the third persons had been informed that the supposed agent had not accepted or would not accept the appointment.⁹⁴

As between the agent and third persons, the same considerations would ordinarily apply as in the corresponding cases mentioned in the preceding section.

§ 253. — How acceptance established.—In the ordinary case, unless required by the terms of the authorization, no particular method of acceptance is necessary. As said in one case, "To constitute one an agent there must be consent on the part of the agent either expressed by words or inferable from something done."⁹⁵ As against himself, at least, there could not ordinarily be better evidence than that the agent had actually undertaken to perform.⁹⁶

Where a bilateral contract by mutual promises is sought to be established, notice to the principal of the agent's acceptance would ordinarily be necessary;⁹⁷ but where the offer of the principal may be accepted by the doing of the act proposed, no other notice of acceptance than performance and notice thereof within a reasonable time would be required, unless made necessary by the terms of the offer.⁹⁸

⁹⁴ See Barr v. Lapsley, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 151, 4 L. Ed. 58. Here the alleged principals had informed the other party with whom they were negotiating that he might conclude the matter with one McCoun, saying "to this effect we shall direct Mr. McCoun, to whom we propose to write by the next mail." As matter of fact, they never wrote to McCoun. When the other party approached McCoun, he disclaimed all knowledge or authority in the matter, and declined to act. Held, that the other party, in view of McCoun's disclaimer was not justified in proceeding upon the supposition that McCoun was agent.

By accepting the agent becomes bound to act according to the terms of the appointment and not according to his own discretion. McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457, 466.

⁹⁵ First National Bank v. Free, 67 Iowa, 11.

⁹⁶ George v. Sandel, 18 La. Ann. 535; Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269.

⁹⁷ Lamb v. Prettyman, 33 Pa. Super. 190. Entering upon performance with the knowledge and consent of the principal would be sufficient notice here. Brown v. Smith, 113 Mo. App. 59; Veale v. Green, 105 Mo. App. 182; Smith v. Williams, 123 Mo. App. 479.

⁹⁸ Lamb v. Prettyman, supra; Arnold v. National Bank, 126 Wis. 362, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 530. Where a factor is given an order for the purchase of goods, his failure to give notice of the acceptance of the order will not discharge the principal where the order is complied with and notice of that fact is given, within a reasonable time. Parkhill v. Im-lay, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 431. To same effect: Garvey v. Scott, 9 Ill. App. 19.

But see In re Consort Deep Level Gold Mines, [1897] 1 Ch. 575, where an offer of an underwriter to subscribe for a certain number of shares "or such less number as may be accepted by you" and in the event of his failure to do so authorizing the

II.

EVIDENCE OF APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORIZATION.

§ 254. Purpose of this subdivision.—Some illustrations have already been given of the nature of the evidence that may be competent upon the question whether an agency exists or not, and many others will hereafter appear. But it is necessary to consider here a few of the general rules which apply to this branch of the subject.

§ 255. Authority must be proved—Burden of proof.—In the first place it is to be recalled that, except in the few cases already referred to wherein the law confers authority, the law itself makes no presumption of agency: it is always a fact to be proved; and the person who alleges it has the burden of proving it by a preponderance of the evidence.⁹⁹

§ 256. Authority under seal or in writing.—In the next place it is to be observed that where the law requires that the authority shall be conferred only in a certain way, as by instrument under seal or by instrument in writing, no other form of authorization will suffice, and the evidence tendered must be adequate to establish that the form required was adopted.

So though authority in writing was not required, it may appear that the parties nevertheless in the particular case have reduced it to writing, and when this appears the mode of proof may be affected accordingly.

§ 257. Written authority must be produced—When.—Where the authority appears to have been conferred by a power of attorney or other written instrument, and where, from the nature of the case, the other party to subscribe for them in his name, was held to require notice of acceptance. Notice of acceptance is necessary where that is one of the terms of the offer. Conklin v. Cabanne, 9 Mo. App. 579.

Where a written appointment of plaintiff, a corporation, as an agent contained no express language respecting acceptance, but was signed by the corporation, the court said: "The signature of plaintiff's name to that paper was obviously for the purpose of acceptance. The presumption is that such signing was done for some purpose, and no other is apparent. If an acceptance, it bound the plaintiff to perform any acts on its part necessarily implied either from those things which defendants were bound to do or from the situation created by the contract." W. G. Taylor Co. v. Bannerman, 120 Wis. 189.

⁹⁹ Stratton v. Todd, 82 Me. 149; Castner v. Richardson, 18 Colo. 496; Schmidt v. Shaver, 196 Ill. 108, 89 Am. St. Rep. 250; Jones v. Mansfield Lum. & Merc. Co., 97 Ark. 643; Midland Savings Ass'n v. Sutton, 30 Okla. 448.

authority must be in writing, the writing is, of course, the best evidence of its contents and of the existence, nature and extent of the agency; and in any case in which any question concerning the authority as so conferred is directly involved, the writing, in accordance with familiar rules, must be produced or its absence accounted for.¹

§ 258. Collateral inquiry.—But where the fact of the agency is only collaterally or incidentally involved, it may be proved by the acts, declarations or conduct of the parties as in other cases, although it was conferred by written instrument.²

§ 259. — Unnecessary writing.—And where the law does not require the authority to be conferred by writing, though in the given case writing was resorted to, a third person attempting to prove the agency, against either the principal or the agent, cannot be required to produce the writing, or account for its absence; but may show the existence of the agency by any competent evidence, which is within his reach, as by conduct, admissions, course of dealing, holding out and the like.³ And even if the writing be produced, it will not necessarily

¹ Elliott v. Stocks, 67 Ala. 336; McNeill v. Arnold, 17 Ark. 154, 177; Lee v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 79 Iowa, 379; Neal v. Patten, 40 Ga. 363; Columbia Bridge Co. v. Geisse, 38 N. J. L. 39; Emery v. King, 64 N. J. L. 529; Somers v. Wescoat, 66 N. J. L. 551; Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Grimmer, 28 Nev. 235; Langbein v. Tongue, 25 Misc. 757. See also McCreery v. Garvin, 39 S. C. 375; Thompson v. Green River Power Co., 154 N. C. 13; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611.

² Columbia Bridge Co. v. Geisse, supra.

³ What these methods of proof by conduct, etc., are, will appear in the following sections.

The same rule prevails in the analogous case of partnership; it is not necessary for the creditor to produce the articles or even to prove an actual partnership inter sese. See Griffin v. Stoddard, 12 Ala. 783; Rogers v. Suttle, 19 Ill. App. 163; Henshaw v. Root, 60 Ind. 220; Bryer v. Weston, 16 Me. 261; Campbell v. Hood, 6 Mo. 211.

In Walsh v. Pierce, 12 Vt. 130, Redfield, J., says: "The agency claimed is not of a character which might not as well be created by mere words or acts as by writing. In such cases it is well settled that the agency may be proved by 1st, direct evidence of agency. In this case if the authority was in writing, it must be produced and proved. 2 Stark. Ev. (6 Ed.) 31; Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. 89; Coore v. Callaway, ib. 115. In the present case, perhaps, if the plaintiffs had relied solely upon an authority conferred upon the agent by writing, they should either have produced the writing or accounted for its absence. But, 2, this agency may be proved by the habit and course of dealings between the parties. And, where one man suffers another to carry on business upon his credit, he is bound, I take it, to the fullest extent by all his contracts within the apparent scope of that business, without regard to the terms of the particular contract of agency, unless brought home to those with whom the agent has dealings, and in that be conclusive: the principal will be bound to third persons by the authority as he has caused it to appear even though that be different from or greater than the authority created by the written instrument.⁴

§ 260. In other cases authority may be proved by parol—By any competent witness.—It has already been seen that, except in the cases wherein the common law requires authority under seal or some statute requires authority in writing, no particular method of authorizing is necessary; and, except in those cases, no particular method of proving the authority need be resorted to. Any competent witness having knowledge of the facts may be called,⁵ or any lawful mode of proof be adopted.⁶ The evidence offered need not be of the same nature as the act of authorization except in the cases referred to in the preceding sections. Thus the authority may have been conferred by express word of mouth and be proved by evidence of recognition; it may have been conferred informally but proved by evidence of an express admission.

§ 261. By informal writings—By conduct—By facts and circumstances.—The existence of agency is a fact, and like other facts may be proved by any evidence, traceable to the alleged principal, and hav-case it is for the defendant to show their limitation to be short of the apparent extent of the business."

In Kaskaskia Bridge Co. v. Shannon, 6 Ill. 15, it is said: "Although the plaintiffs below had constituted N., their agent by virtue of a power of attorney in writing, yet it was competent for the defendants, who were strangers to that instrument, to give parol proof of such agency. A stranger may prove a partnership by the acts and admissions of the partners, although written articles of partnership may exist between them. The same principle is applicable in cases of agency." To same effect: Curtis v. Ingham, 2 Vt. 287.

⁴ Thus in Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 456, 477, it is said: "If the principal by his declarations or conduct towards the parties dealing with such agent has authorized the opinion that he had in fact given more extensive powers to him than were conferred in terms by the writing, the principal ought to be and would be bound by the acts of such agent in his negotiations with such persons at least to the extent of the authority which such declarations and conduct have fairly led them to believe did exist."

⁵ "The relation of principal and agent is a condition of which anyone having personal knowledge may testify." Ruthven v. Clarke, 109 Iowa, 25; Huesinkveld v. St. Paul Ins. Co., 106 Iowa, 229; Lough v. Davis, 35 Wash. 449.

Where it is sought to show the agency of the local operator of a telegraph company, testimony of a witness that he knew the office, was frequently there, and had seen the alleged agent there regularly, receiving, transmitting and delivering messages for the company, makes a prima facie case. Markley v. Western Union Tel. Co., 144 Iowa, 105, 138 Am. St. Rep. 263.

⁶ Kansas Loan & Trust Co. v. Love, 45 Kan. 127; Rice, etc., Co. v. Bank, 185 Ill. 422.

ing a legal tendency to establish it.⁷ Informal writings of the alleged principal, his letters, telegrams, book-entries, and the like are clearly admissible.⁸ But it need not be proved by written instruments (except in the cases already mentioned) or by express or formal oral language. The agency may be shown by conduct, by the relations and situation of the parties, by acts and declarations, by matters of omission as well as of commission, and, generally, by any fact or circumstance with which the alleged principal can be connected and having a legitimate tendency to establish that the person in question was his agent for the performance of the act in controversy.⁹ Many illustrations of these rules have already been given in the earlier sections of ⁷ Thus in Hill v. Helton, 80 Ala. 528, it is said: "Agency, like any other controvertible fact, may be proved by circumstances. It may be inferred from previous employment in similar acts or transactions; or from acts of such nature, and so continuous, as to furnish a reasonable basis of inference, that they were known to the principal, and that he would not have allowed the agent so to act unless authorized. In such cases, the acts or transactions are admissible to prove agency. But in order to be relevant, the alleged principal must in some way, directly or indirectly, be connected with the circumstances. The agent must have assumed to represent the principal, and to have performed the acts in his name and on his behalf."

⁸ Letters purporting to come from the principal and received by the agent in due course of mail in reply to letters sent by him addressed to the principal are admissible. Peycke v. Shinn, 76 Neb. 364. See also Burnell v. Morrison, 46 Colo. 533.

Letters may be sufficient to establish agency, but, when they are relied upon, it must appear either from their face or when read in connection with the surrounding circumstances, that agency was intended. Uniontown Grocery Co. v. Dawson, 68 W. Va. 332.

⁹ Bergtholdt v. Porter Bros. Co., 114 Cal. 681; Tennessee River Transp.

Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Nelson, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 223; Jesson v. Texas L. Co., 3 Tex. Civ. App. 25; Dull v. Dumbauld, 7 Kan. App. 376; In re Zinke, 90 Hun (N. Y.), 127; Mitchum v. Dunlap, 98 Mo. 418; Ferneau v. Whitford, 39 Mo. App. 311; Castner v. Richardson, 18 Colo. 496; Silver Mt. Mine Co. v. Anderson, 51 Colo. 298; Gambrill v. Brown Hotel Co., 11 Colo. App. 529; Bull v. Duncan, 9 Kan. App. 887; Werth v. Ollis, 61 Mo. App. 401; Ames-Brooks Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 83 Minn. 346; Indiana, etc., Ry. Co. v. Adamson, 114 Ind. 282; Bonner v. Lisenby, 86 Mo. App. 666; Watkins v. Edgar, 77 Mo. App. 148; Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. v. Humphrey, 27 Okla. 694.

In Sheanon v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co., 83 Wis. 507, where an insured person had been accidentally shot in the spine causing paralysis and practically complete helplessness, the beneficial acts of his brother, who was the only friend or acquaintance present, in making proofs of loss and endeavoring to secure a settlement, done with such acquiescence and consent as the insured in his helpless condition was able to give, were held to have been done with the insured's authority. It "need not be express, but might be implied from the uncontradicted evidence as to the circumstances, and showing the deplorable situation of the assured."

this chapter and many more will appear in various places as the discussion proceeds.

For the purpose of making this proof, a wide range may often be properly given to the testimony, provided that that which is offered has a real probative tendency toward the main question in issue. It is, however, not enough that the testimony offered tends to prove something: to be competent, it must legitimately tend to prove that the alleged agent had been authorized to act as such, in the transaction in question, for the alleged principal. As will be seen in a later section, the question whether testimony offered has any legal tendency to prove authority, is usually a question for the court; whether the evidence admitted does prove authority is for the jury.

§ 262. By proof of agency on other occasions.—As has been seen, evidence of agency in a given case may sometimes be supplied by proof of agency on other occasions. Whether this is true or not, in a given case, depends upon a great variety of circumstances. The act in question may be so closely connected in time or character with the one proved as to leave no room for doubt. It may appear that the act in question and the one proved are parts of the same transaction or series of transactions. The acts proved may show a course of dealing of which the act in question is seen to be a part. This kind of evidence is strengthened as the acts proved increase in number, in likeness and in contiguity.

On the other hand, where the acts are unlike, where they are few in number, where they are separated by long periods of time, where they have no necessary relation to each other, the evidence is very slight or wanting altogether. The fact that a person was, perhaps formally and expressly, appointed an agent for a particular purpose on one occasion furnishes often very slight evidence indeed that he was agent for even a like purpose on a different occasion:¹⁰ while the fact that he was thus agent at one time for one purpose furnishes usually no evidence at all that he was agent at another time for an entirely different purpose.¹¹ So many contingencies may intervene, so many ¹⁰ Owens v. Hughes (Tex. Civ. App.), 71 S. W. 783; Rice v. James, 193 Mass. 458.

In Nourse v. Jennings, 180 Mass. 592, where the question was as to the authority of one Ball to make an agreement respecting the mortgaging of plaintiff's property, the court said: "The fact that plaintiff had mortgaged her dwelling house on two previous occasions to raise money to assist Ball, coupled with the fact that the arrangements for those loans for Ball's benefit were conducted by Ball, did not clothe Ball with an apparent authority to enter into agreements in behalf of the plaintiff for additional incumbrances on her property."

¹¹ Duryea v. Vösburch, 121 N. Y. 57; Molt v. Baumann, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 445; Green v. Hinkley, 52 Iowa, changes of purpose, of ownership, of relation, of confidence, that to deduce authority in the one case from evidence of its existence in another, becomes usually, as is said in one case, a mere "matter of guess-work," and is "too shadowy entirely to support the inference of agency in this particular transaction."¹²

§ 263. By acquiescence in, or recognition of, similar acts.—So evidence of agency is also often found in the fact that the alleged principal has acquiesced in, recognized or adopted similar acts done on other occasions by the assumed agent¹³ (and the considerations will be similar to those dealt with in the preceding section). Where the 633; Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66; Stevenson v. Hoy, 43 Pa. 191; Stewart v. Rounds, 7 Ont. App. 515; Stratton v. Todd, 82 Me. 149; Hazeltine v. Miller, 44 Me. 177.

The fact that a person acted as agent in procuring a loan will not alone warrant the assumption that he was, a year later, agent to pay it. Ballard v. Nye, 138 Cal. 588.

Fact that one was agent to sell goods furnishes no evidence that he was later authorized to collect the price (Collins v. Crews, 3 Ga. App. 238), and many other cases cited in the chapter upon Construction of Authorities.

Fact that one was agent to loan money is not evidence that he was later authorized to receive or collect payments upon it (Trull v. Hammond, 71 Minn. 172), and many other cases cited in the chapter above referred to.

Fact that agent was authorized at one time to collect money does not justify the inference that he was later authorized to make contracts involving its expenditure. Hazeltine v. Miller, 44 Me. 177.

Fact that one was authorized to buy coal for use in a boiler upon the principal's premises, does not justify an inference that he was authorized to make contracts for disposing of steam from the boiler. Union Hosiery Co. v. Hodgson, 72 N. H. 427.

¹² Duryea v. Vosburgh, supra.

¹³ Lytle v. Bank of Dothan, 121 Ala. 215; Tennessee River Transp.

Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Columbia Mill Co. v. National Bank, 52 Minn. 224; Wheeler v. Benton, 67 Minn. 293; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Nelson, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 223; Bartley v. Rhodes (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 604; First Nat. Bank v. Ridpath, 47 Neb. 96; Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Gilinsky, 84 Neb. 821; Sariol v. McDonald, 127 App. Div. 648; Ladenberg v. Beal-Doyle Dry Goods Co., 83 Ark. 440; Leipner v. MacLean, 8 Com. L. R. (Austr.) 306.

In Wheeler v. Benton, supra, it is said that "a long course of dealing by an agent for his principal, during which his acts have never been questioned or in any manner repudiated by the latter, will, as a general rule, raise a presumption that the agent had actual authority to do what is done by him in line with such course of dealing."

(But not if, in the previous cases, the agent acted for himself. Williams v. Stearns, 59 Ohio St. 28.)

This rule applies as well to corporate principals as to any other. Tennessee River Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, supra; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Nelson, supra.

The acts relied upon must also be acts having some constructive tendency and some probative force. Agency is not to be inferred from the doing of acts of a wholly indifferent and inconsequential sort, having no more tendency to prove agency than any other relation. See Burson v. Bogart, 18 Colo. App. 449.

acts so adopted are so closely connected as to constitute a course of dealing, or to establish a custom, there can usually be but little difficulty; neither can there be where the acts are so numerous or so closely related as to reasonably lead to no other conclusion than that of a general agency for the doing of acts of that character.¹⁴

They must also be substantially similar to the act in question. No inference can ordinarily be drawn of authority to do one act merely from previous acquiescence in doing dissimilar acts. Stevenson v. Hoy, 43 Pa. 191.

¹⁴ In Valiquette v. Clark Bros. Min. Co., 83 Vt. 538, 138 Am. St. R. 1104, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 440, defendant's agent, without authority, had, between April 15th and May 25th, drawn three drafts on defendant, two for $75 each and one for $150, to the order of the plaintiff, and these drafts defendant had paid. Plaintiff was a hotel keeper and the agent was staying at the hotel while engaged in soliciting trade for defendant. The drafts were drawn partly to pay the agents bills at the hotel and partly for cash which plaintiff advanced to the agent. The agent claimed to be interested in the defendant corporation. Defendant had written to the agent protesting against his drawing drafts and after payment of the third one notified him that it would, under no circumstances, pay any more. It gave no notice to the plaintiff of the agent's lack of authority. On June 15th the agent drew a fourth draft for $250 to the order of plaintiff which plaintiff cashed as before, applying part upon the agent's bill and giving him the balance in cash. This draft when sent forward as before, the defendant refused to pay, and this action is to recover the amount. Held, that defendant's payment of the first three drafts, without objection so far as the plaintiff was aware, was sufficient evidence of a general power in the agent to draw such drafts, and that the defendant was liable upon the one in question. The court distinguished this case from those where but one or two acts had been recognized, upon the ground that here there were repeated acts of the same sort acquiesced in by the defendant. One judge dissented. The court relied largely upon Munn v. Commission Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 44, 8 Am. Dec. 219, where it was proved that one D. whose acceptance was in question, "was the general agent of the defendants, and that he was in the habit of accepting bills, which the company afterwards paid, under the like circumstances;" Weed v. Carpenter, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 219, where defendant had for three or four years recognized notes made in his name by another without authority; Barber v. Gingell, 3 Espinasse 60, where it was proved that the defendant had in fact paid "several bills" drawn like the one in suit; Lytle v. Bank of Dothan, 121 Ala. 215, where it was said that the giving of "other notes" [it does not appear how many] by the agent at about the time that those in controversy were given, and defendant's subsequent recognition of their validity, were circumstances competent to be shown in evidence "though they may have been of slight weight as bearing on the execution or ratification of plaintiff's notes;" Bryan v. Jackson, 4 Conn. 288, where, the fact that a father had paid a bill for various articles furnished to his son by the plaintiff "without objecting to the same or giving any notice to the plaintiff not to trust his son any further," was held sufficient to charge him for further like articles furnished to the son by the plaintiff; Watkins v. Vince, 2 Stark. 368,

But where the acts of acquiescence relied upon are few in number, or separated by long periods of time, different considerations arise, and the probative force of the circumstances may be very weak or entirely lacking. Where all that can be shown is recognition of or acquiescence in the performance of a single similar act, the question is still more difficult. That act may have been remote in time, the circumstances may have altered and its recognition on that occasion may have been under protest and coupled with efforts to prevent its repetiwhere in order to charge a father upon a guarantee signed in his name by his son, it was proved "that he had signed for his father in three or four instances, and that he had accepted bills for him;" Gibson v. Hunter, 2 H. Bl. 288, where on a bill alleged to have been drawn by an agent to a fictitious person, the majority of the court held it competent to prove that many other bills drawn in the same way by the agent had been accepted by the principal, though there was nothing to show that he knew the payees to be fictitious. The court distinguished Bank of Deer Lodge v. Hope Mining Co., 3 Mont. 146, 35 Am. Rep. 458, on the ground that there had been but one previous act, though the court there said it would have been different if "repeated acts" like the one in question had been shown. Also Cook v. Baldwin, 120 Mass. 317, 21 Am. Rep. 517; Paige v. Stone, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 160, 43 Am. Dec. 420; and some others: Hix v. Eastern Steamship Co., 107 Me. 357, where agency to ship horses and agree upon the terms of shipment was held to be sufficiently shown by the fact that the same person had made "several prior shipments" in the same way and his authority had never been repudiated or questioned.

But in Groneweg v. Kusworm, 75 Iowa, 237, evidence that plaintiff had cashed a draft drawn by an agent upon his principal to the plaintiff's order, in order, as the agent stated, to procure traveling expenses; that this draft was paid apparently without objection; that four or five weeks later he cashed another which was also paid, was held to furnish no evidence upon which the principal could be held upon another similar draft drawn about six weeks later and not paid, the agent in the meantime having been discharged by the principal.

In Baudouine v. Grimes, 64 Iowa, 370, a traveling salesman had twice obtained defendant's indorsement of a draft of $100 drawn, as he said, upon his principal to procure traveling expenses. These drafts were paid. Some time later [the case does not show how long] and after he had in fact been discharged by the principal, the same agent again procured defendant's indorsement of a draft for $400, again said to be for traveling expenses. This draft the principal refused to pay. In an action by the principal for the price of goods sold to defendant, he attempted to counter-claim the amount of this draft. Held, that he could not do so. Court said it was matter "of great doubt" whether the payment of first two drafts was any evidence of authority to draw the third one; that the third one was so large that it ought to have aroused inquiry; but that, as defendant relied upon an express or implied agreement that plaintiff would reimburse defendant, and as the agent had never held himself out as being authorized to do more than draw upon his principal, —and not to procure an accommodation endorser—there could be no recovery for the amount.

tion. On the other hand, it may have been so recent, and so coupled with unequivocal acknowledgment of a continuing authority as to leave no room for question. Inferring a general or a continuing authority, however, from a single act of adoption or recognition, is usually subject to all of the dangers which attend, in other cases, upon attempts to generalize from a single instance;¹⁵ and ought not to be indulged in except in cases showing a clear recognition of the authority.¹⁶

¹⁵ Authority not usually inferable from a single act. Tennessee River Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Duryea v. Vosburgh, 121 N. Y. 57; Stewart v. Rounds, 7 Ont. App. 515; Bank of Deer Lodge v. Hope Mining Co., 3 Mont. 146, 35 Am. Rep. 458; First Nat. Bank v. Hall, 8 Mont. 341; Rice v. James, 193 Mass. 458. Especially where that act was an isolated transaction done more than a year from the one in question with no evidence of similar acts in the meantime. Bartley v. Rhodes (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 604. To same effect: Green v. Hinkley, 52 Iowa, 633.

The fact that an agent had on two occasions signed contracts by his principal's direction and in his presence does not create an inference that he had independent power to make contracts. Fadner v. Hibler, 26 Ill. App. 639.

In an action on a note against two principals given by an agent without authority, evidence that the agent had previously given two notes, to one of which only one of the principals assented, and the other of which for only $4, the principals settled after suit upon it, is not sufficient to show authority to execute the note now in suit. Paige v. Stone, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 160, 43 Am. Dec. 420.

Part payment of a note given without authority is not of itself sufficient to bind the principal to pay the remainder. The part payment may have been accompanied by a positive refusal to pay more. Cook v. Baldwin, 120 Mass. 317, 21 Am. Rep. 517.

The fact that the agent, upon one prior occasion, had given a note, to which his principal objected when he learned of it, and which he paid only after obtaining security from the agent, does not justify an inference that the agent later had authority to give another note. Temple v. Pomroy, 4 Gray (Mass.), 128.

"It is hardly necessary to discuss the proposition that the ratification of one unauthorized act is not a ratification of another and entirely distinct act; or that the acceptance of the results of a series of unauthorized acts of the same kind is the creation of an implied agency to do an entirely different thing;" therefore recognition of acts of agency, in collecting interest only, justifies no inference of authority to collect part or all of the principal sum. Hoffmaster v. Black, 78 Ohio St. 1, 125 Am. St. R. 679, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 52, 14 Ann. Cas. 877.

Approval of one act on one occasion has no legal tendency to establish agency "months before and for purposes of an entirely different character." Gordon v. Vermont Loan & Trust Co., 6 N. Dak. 454.

The fact that a mother had, during a period of several years, paid under pressure for three or four horses which her minor son, "a spoilt boy," had bought, has no tendency to prove that he is her general agent to buy horses. Barrett v. Irvine, [1907] 2 Irish, 462.

¹⁶ "A single act of an assumed agent and a clear recognition of his authority by his principal may be sufficient to prove his authority in

It must, moreover, be kept in mind that when authority is deduced from recognition of certain acts, it must be limited to the performance of other acts of the same general kind, and cannot be extended to acts of a wholly different nature.¹⁷

It must also be kept in mind that one who might otherwise have been justified in relying upon this appearance of authority, is no longer justified in doing so if he has inquired of the principal and learned the real facts.¹⁸

§ 264. — Acquiescence to show expired authority continuing.—Acquiescence or misleading conduct may be as potent to show that an expired authority apparently continues, or that a really special authority was apparently general, as to furnish evidence of an authority in any other case. In the former case, as will be seen hereafter, a general authority will ordinarily continue operative as to certain classes of persons until notice has been given of its termination;¹⁹ and as to the second case, while notice of the termination of a special authority is not usually necessary,²⁰ yet if the principal knows that an agent authorized to do a single act is assuming to do other acts of the same sort, a duty to give notice of the facts may arise which will charge him with responsibility if it be not performed.²¹

§ 265. — Acquiescence to construe authority.—Acquiescence, as will be more fully seen hereafter, may also be as material in showing the nature and the extent of an authority, as in proving its existence. The fact that the principal, with knowledge, recognizes and other similar cases." Ames-Brooks Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 83 Minn. 346. "A single act of an assumed agent and a single recognition of it, may be of so unequivocal and of so positive and comprehensive a character as to place the authority of the agent to do similar acts for the principal beyond question." Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66; Wilcox v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 24 Minn. 269. Same: Quinn v. Dresbach, 75 Cal. 159, 7 Am. St. Rep. 138; Bryan v. Jackson, 4 Conn. 288; Harrison v. Legore, 109 Iowa, 618.

¹⁷ See ante, § 262; Smith v. Georgia R. Co., 113 Ga. 625; Graves v. Horton, supra; Stratton v. Todd, 82 Me. 149; Hazeltine v. Miller, 44 Me. 177; Robinson v. Nevada Bank, 81 Cal. 106; Mt. Morris Bank v. Gorham, 169

Mass. 519; Robinson v. Nipp, 20 Ind. App. 156; Bickford v. Menier, 107 N. Y. 490; Gregory v. Loose, 19 Wash. 599. "Ostensible authority for one purpose certainly does not confer authority for all purposes." Ruddock Co. v. Johnson, 135 Cal. xix, 67 Pac. 680.

¹⁸ After inquiry he must rely only upon what he was told. Norton v. Richmond, 93 Ill. 367.

¹⁹ See post, § 628.

²⁰ See post, § 629.

²¹ Where the principal knew, or was charged with notice, that an agent constituted for a single act was continuing to act in some way in the matter, it was held that he ought to have inferred that the agent was continuing to act as he began, and if the principal objection to this acquiesces in the performance of the authority in a certain manner or to a certain extent, is ordinarily competent evidence that execution in that manner or to that extent was authorized.²²

§ 266. By acts so notorious as to justify inference of acquiescence.—Usually, of course, no inference of recognition or acquiescence can be drawn unless it appears that the alleged principal had knowledge of what had thus been assumed in his name or on his account;²³ but this knowledge need not be expressly shown: the act done may have been so public or notorious or so closely related to the alleged principal that he could not be heard to say that he was ignorant of it.²⁴ As stated in one case,²⁵ if the acts “are of such nature and so continuous as to justify a reasonable inference that the principal knew of them, and would not have permitted them if unauthorized, the acts are competent evidence of agency to be submitted to the jury.”

§ 267. By regular and public exercise of office or agency.—It is upon this ground that proof of the agency of those who regularly and publicly exercise the duties or functions of an agent of a corporation or individual serving the public, is frequently made. Thus evidence that a person regularly and publicly sits in the place and performs the duties and exercises the functions of the cashier of a bank, the ticket agent or freight agent of a railroad company, the agent of a telegraph, or telephone, or insurance company, the clerk of a hotel, and the like in an almost endless variety of instances, would furnish prima facie evidence at least of his authority to act as he thus publicly purports to do.²⁶ Regular and public possession or use of the distinctive property he should have given notice. Quinn v. Dresbach, 75 Cal. 159, 7 Am. St. Rep. 138.

Principal charged where he knew agent was continuing to act in the matter and made no objection. Harrison v. Legore, 109 Iowa, 618; Johnson v. Brewing Co., 66 App. Div. 103; Cosmopolitan Range Co. v. Midland R. Term. Co., 44 App. Div. 467; Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. Rep. 988.

²² See First Nat. Bank v. Ridpath, 47 Neb. 96; Dodge v. McDonnell, 14 Wis. 553; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Foster, 104 Ind. 293, 54 Am. Rep. 319; Grand Pacific Hotel Co. v. Pinkerton, 217 Ill. 61; Hagerman v. Bates, 24 Colo. 71.

²³ Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94.

²⁴ Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94;

Hooe v. Oxley, 1 Wash. (Va.) 19, 1 Am. Dec. 425; Indiana, etc., Ry. Co. v. Adamson, 114 Ind. 282; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Holdfodt, 86 Ill. 455, 22 Am. Rep. 43; Neibles v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 37 Minn. 151; Black Lick Lumber Co. v. Camp Construction Co., 63 W. Va. 477.

²⁵ Reynolds v. Collins, supra.

²⁶ Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94 (cashier); Singer Mfg. Co. v. Holdfodt, 86 Ill. 455, 22 Am. Rep. 43 (sewing machine agent); Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4, 53 Am. Rep. 242 (clerk in hotel); Southern Exp. Co. v. Platten, 93 Fed. 936 (agent of express company); Elsner v. State, 30 Tex. 524 (barkeeper); Markley v. Western Un. Tel. Co., 144 Iowa, 105, 138 Am. St. Rep. 263 (agent of tele-of the principal, wearing his uniform, or badge, etc., may serve the same purpose.²⁷

§ 268. Presumptions based upon ordinary course of conduct—Answering letters, telephone, etc.—The ordinary conduct of men, and the inherent improbability of the given act occurring if it were not authorized, may also furnish prima facie evidence. Thus if I write to a business house concerning a matter of business, and receive in due course a reply to my letter, purporting to be made through a manager, superintendent, or other agent or officer within whose department such a matter would ordinarily lie, a presumption that he so replied with the authority of his principal would arise which would suffice until evidence to the contrary was offered.²⁸ If I buy a harvesting machine under a contract providing that, in case of trouble, I shall notify the home office and give opportunity for an expert to come to cure the difficulty; and I write such a letter and in due course a man appears who purports to have been sent by the seller in pursuance of my letter, a similar presumption would arise that he came with the authority of the seller.²⁹ So, also, it has been held—though there are contrary holdings—that if I call a business house by telephone upon a proper matter of business with it, and receive in due course what purports to be the authorized response of one in charge, a similar presumption that the response is authorized attends this transaction.³⁰

§ 269. By proof of an express authority to which the authority in question is an incident.—It is, of course, but a restatement of a rule already referred to, to say that proof of authority to do a particular act may often be made by showing authority to do some other and graph company); Smith v. Pullman Co., 138 Mo. App. 238 (railroad agent acting as agent for sleeping car company); Pullman Car Co. v. Nelson, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 223 (same); Sheanon v. Pac. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 83 Wis. 507 (agent of insurance company).

²⁷ Norris v. Kohler, 41 N. Y. 42; Thiry v. Brewing Co., 37 N. Y. App. Div. 391; Bowman v. Brewing Co., 17 Tex. Civ. App. 446; Foss-Schneider Brew. Co. v. McLaughlin, 5 Ind. App. 415 (agent in charge of wagon with principal's name painted on it); Hughes v. New York, etc., R. Co., 36 N. Y. Super. 222 (man wearing brakeman's coat and jacket); McCoun v. New York, etc., R. Co., 66 Barb. (N.

Y.) 338 (man working on engine in working attire).

²⁸ Armstrong v. Advance Thresher Co., 5 S. Dak. 12; Norwegian Plow Co. v. Munger, 52 Kan. 371; McDonald v. Gilbert, 16 Can. Sup. 700 (partnership).

²⁹ See Aultman-Taylor Mach. Co. v. Ridenour, 96 Iowa, 638.

³⁰ Gilliland v. Southern Ry. Co., 85 S. C. 26, 137 Am. St. R. 861, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1106; General Hospital Co. v. New Haven, etc., Co., 79 Conn. 581, 115 Am. St. R. 173, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 168; Godair v. Ham Nat. Bank, 225 Ill. 572, 116 Am. St. R. 172, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 447; Wolfe v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 97 Mo. 473, 10 principal act to which the act in question may fairly be regarded as a natural and ordinary incident reasonably necessary and proper to be done under the circumstances in question.³¹

§ 270. By proof of a custom covering the case.—It is also only another form of a rule already referred to and hereinafter often discussed, to say that proof of authority to do a given act may be made by showing that it falls within the range of an established general custom or of a proved particular custom in contemplation of which it is shown that the parties dealt.³²

§ 271. By proof of an established course of dealing.—Equally so, is the rule that proof of authority to do the act in question may be made by showing that it is one of a class concerning which the parties had established a course of dealing which recognized its validity, whether it would otherwise have been so or not; or concerning which there was such a general course of dealing as would justify the conclusion that this authority had in fact been conferred.³³ The doctrine of estoppel would often enter into the first; the latter would usually rest wholly upon inferences of fact.

Evidence of an established course of dealing may also, as will be more fully seen hereafter, be admissible in many cases for the purpose of showing how the parties had interpreted an authority undoubtedly conferred.

§ 272. Liability by ratification.—The liability of the principal in a given case may also be established by proof that the agent's performance of the act in question has subsequently been ratified and approved by the person alleged to be his principal. Something of the scope and application of this mode of authentication has been incidentally developed in the preceding pages, but its full treatment will be reserved for a following chapter.

§ 273. Limitations upon these rules.—But it is not to be inferred, however, that authority is, in any case, to be implied without reason, or presumed without cause. The implication must be based upon facts for which the principal is responsible,³⁴ and cannot arise from any Am. St. R. 331, 3 L. R. A. 539; Reed v. Burlington, etc., Ry. Co., 72 Iowa, 166, 2 Am. St. R. 243; Oskamp v. Gadsden, 35 Neb. 7, 37 Am. St. R. 428, 17 L. R. A. 440.

³¹ See ante, § 242; post, Book II, Chap. I.

³² See ante, § 243; post, Book II, Chap. I.

³³ See Standley v. Clay, 68 Neb. 332.

³⁴ In the absence of express authority, the facts upon which an implied authority is to be based must be traced home to the principal—to his conduct, acquiescence, approval, ratification. Without this there is no foundation upon which to build. Gregory v. Loose, 19 Wash. 599; Kansas & Tex. Coal Co. v. Millett, 50 Mo. App. 382; Stratton-White Co. v. Castleberry, 15 Tex. Civ. App.

mere argument as to the convenience, utility or propriety of its existence.³⁵ So, too, the facts from which it is sought to be implied are to be given their natural, legal and legitimate effect, and this effect is not to be expanded or diminished in order to establish or overthrow the agency. And again, when implied, the agency is to be limited in its scope and operation to the reasonable and necessary requirements of the case which called it into being. If implied from the ratification or adoption of acts of a certain kind, its scope is to be limited to the performance of acts of that kind, and it can not be construed as warranting the performance of acts of a different kind.³⁶

§ 274. What facts sufficient—Instances.—Illustrations of these rules are too numerous for complete enumeration. A few, however, will be given which may be taken as typical of the greater number. Express or tacit acquiescence is the feature in many of them. Thus where one stands by and permits another, in his presence, to make a contract for him as his agent, without disclosing the want of authority, he will be estopped from denying the authority;³⁷ and one who knows that another is collecting money on his account and does not object, but allows him to keep it as a loan, makes him his agent to collect it.³⁸

149; Harvey v. Trust Co., 199 Pa. 421; Rowland Lumber Co. v. Ross, 100 Va. 275.

"While a principal is bound by his agent's action when he justifies a party dealing with his agent in believing that he has given to the agent authority to do those acts, he is responsible only for that appearance of authority which is caused by himself, and not for that appearance of conformity to the authority which is caused only by the agent." Edwards v. Dooley, 120 N. Y. 540.

³⁵ See Bickford v. Menier, 107 N. Y. 490.

³⁶ See Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66; McAlpin v. Cassidy, 17 Tex. 449; Gordon v. Loan & Trust Co., 6 N. Dak. 454; Gregory v. Loose, supra; Wikle v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 116 Ga. 309; Collins v. Crews, 3 Ga. App. 238; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Blocker, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 138 S. W. 156.

The fact that a principal has permitted an agent to solicit orders which the principal may accept or not as he chooses, as the person who gives them well knows, is not evidence of a holding out of the agent as authorized to make binding contracts or to agree that the principal will in any event accept orders given. Spooner v. Browning, [1898] 1 Q. B. 528.

³⁷ James v. Russell, 92 N. C. 194. But where one who is not an agent says to another who is under no obligation to pay bills contracted by him, that he will expect the other to pay them, the silence of the latter where no one is misled by it, does not justify an inference of assent. Parker v. Brown, 131 N. C. 264. Where a man without objection receives a copy of a contract which on its face purports to be made by another as his agent and thereafter accepts from the other contracting party part performance of the contract he is estopped to deny the authority of him who assumed to act as agent in negotiating the contract. Farrer v. Caster, 17 Colo. App. 41.

³⁸ Simon v. Brown, 38 Mich. 552.

§ 275. — Where it was shown that a son had for years been signing his father's name to his own notes to the knowledge of the father who took no steps to prevent it, and gave no notice that it was unauthorized, the son's authority to so bind the father was presumed;³⁹ so where a son had been, to his father's knowledge, in the habit of attending the father's store and there selling goods, taking orders, receiving payment for goods sold and ordering goods from wholesale houses, the authority of the son to bind the father by a purchase of goods was inferred, although the son appropriated the goods so purchased to his own use;⁴⁰ so where a son, acting for his father in procuring a mortgage, took upon himself with his father's consent the whole negotiation, examined the title, attended to the execution of the papers, received the money from his father and delivered it to the mortgagor, and in short did everything there was for an agent to do in the matter, and as much as any agent could have done in a similar negotiation, he was conclusively presumed to have been the agent of his father in the transaction.⁴¹

§ 276. — Again where one charged as defendants' agent was shown to have been for years a clerk in their store, and in many instances as their agent to have done business with the plaintiffs, it was held that there was sufficient proof of a general agency;⁴² and where one sent another who desired to purchase lands of him, to his father to make a bargain, with the statement that whatever bargain they might make he would agree to, it was held that this authorized the person

One who knowingly permits another to make collections for him is bound by payments made to such other. Sax v. Drake, 69 Iowa, 760; Quinn v. Dresbach, 75 Cal. 159, 7 Am. St. Rep. 138; Wilson v. Fones, 99 Iowa, 132; Grant v. Humerick, 123 Iowa, 571; Gross v. Owen, 86 N. Y. Supp. 266; Morgan v. Neal, 7 Idaho, 629, 97 Am. St. Rep. 264.

"If in consequence of a notorious agency, the agent is in the habit of drawing bills, and the principal in the habit of paying them, this is such an affirmation of his power to draw that a purchaser of his bills has a right to expect payment of them by the principal, and if refused he may coerce it." Hooe v. Oxley, 1 Wash. (Va.) 19, 1 Am. Dec. 425.

³⁹ Weaver v. Ogletree, 39 Ga. 586.

See also Brown v. Deloach, 28 Ga. 486.

⁴⁰ Thurber v. Anderson, 88 Ill. 167; Elsner v. State, 30 Tex. 524. See also Watkins v. Vince, 2 Stark. 368.

⁴¹ Matteson v. Blackmer, 46 Mich. 393. Same effect: Durfee v. Seale, 139 Cal. 603.

In Center v. Rush, 35 Misc. 294, a father sending his son away to school left the boy to make the necessary arrangements as to tuition, etc., and the son arranged for an entire year. Held, that the father was liable though the son withdrew before the year was ended.

⁴² Eagle Bank v. Smith, 5 Conn. 71, 13 Am. Dec. 37.

Where the alleged agent was shown to have been openly in charge of defendant's shop, alone, on the thus sent to regard the father as the son's agent, and bound the son by his father's statements.⁴³

§ 277. — So in an action to charge a married woman for goods sold and delivered to her husband as her agent, it was held competent to show that she had paid for similar goods bought by her husband during the same period within which the goods in question were bought;⁴⁴ and evidence that a husband who had the management of certain land belonging to his wife, ordered material for building a house thereon, and that the wife knew that the house was being built, and occupied it when finished, was held to warrant a finding that the husband acted as her agent.⁴⁵

§ 278. — So, where the question was whether an employee, in case of absence from work, might employ a substitute and it appeared that soon after he was employed he was given permission to be day in question and there conducted business for the defendant, there was held to be prima facie evidence of agency. Ingalls v. Averitt, 34 Mo. App. 371.

⁴³ Reeves v. Kelly, 30 Mich. 133. Agency by reference.—So if one party refers another to a third person for information, as authorized to answer for him, he will be bound by the statements of the person so referred to. Rosenbury v. Angell, 6 Mich. 508; Beebe v. Knapp, 28 Mich. 53; Beebe v. Young, 14 Mich. 136; Marx v. King, 162 Mich. 258; McBroom v. Cheboygan Co., 162 Mich. 323; Armstrong, Byrd & Co. v. Crump, 25 Okla. 452; Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Gilinsky, 84 Neb. 821.

Where goods are shipped to P with directions to notify A, this prima facie makes A agent of P to receive notice of the arrival of the goods. Southern Ry. Co. v. Adams Mach. Co., 165 Ala. 436.

In Haner v. Furuya, 39 Wash. 122, the plaintiff had sold goods for the use of a group of men employed by the defendant to M. who represented that he had authority to bind the defendant. The plaintiff called at the defendant's place of business and by the general manager who had authority to pay or to pass upon the thing was referred to another man in the place. There the plaintiff was told that it was all right and that the defendant would pay. The defendant was held bound by these statements and was held to pay for goods supplied both before and after the visit.

⁴⁴ Lovell v. Williams, 125 Mass. 439.

⁴⁵ Arnold v. Spurr, 130 Mass. 347. And see Thomas v. Wells, 140 Mass. 517; Lindquist v. Dickson, 98 Minn. 369, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 729; Gillies v. Gibson, 17 Manitoba, 479; and cases cited ante, § 171.

Where after the transfer of the legal title of a mine from the name of the father to that of his son, the father continued to take entire charge and management; the son paying no attention to the property, authority in the father to lease the premises may be inferred. Jordan v. Greig, 33 Colo. 360.

Where lumber was bought of the plaintiff by one without authority from the defendant to pledge defendant's credit, but in the defendant's name and the defendant accepted shipment of the lumber to it in its name and sees that the following correspondence comes in defendant's name and at no time made any ob-absent upon supplying a substitute and upon three or four subsequent occasions he had absented himself and provided a substitute, with the knowledge and without the objection of the employer, it was held that there was at least sufficient evidence to go to the jury that he was authorized to employ a substitute on the occasion in question.⁴⁶ So where the question was whether the agent in charge of a building was authorized to make repairs thereon and it appeared that the owner was a non-resident and had left it in charge of the agent, that on more than one occasion the agent had caused repairs to be made and had paid for them out of the principal's money without his objection, and that the agent had funds in his hands from which such repairs could be made, it was held that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury that the agent had authority to make the repairs, at least so far as to charge him in tort to third persons for injury caused to them by his failure to make the repairs.⁴⁷ Where the question was whether the agent in charge of a farm had implied power to employ the plaintiff as manager upon it, evidence that the agent directed the work on the farm, kept the time of the employees and paid them their wages, coupled with the fact the owner later saw the plaintiff upon the farm and made no objection, was held to be sufficient to justify the jury in finding that the agent was authorized to employ the plaintiff.⁴⁸ So where the question was whether the father of the defendant had authority to assign to the plaintiff a contract for the sale of land, made by her, and it appeared that the father acted for the defendant in the purchase of the land, that the daughter left the contract with him, that he sold it for its full value, that he used the proceeds in erecting a house on other land belonging to the daughter, and that the daughter appropriated the house to her own use, it was held that this evidence was sufficient to make a prima facie case that the assignment of the contract to the plaintiff had been made by the daughter's authority.⁴⁹

§ 279. — So where the question was whether the defendant was justified in purchasing from the agent of the plaintiff certain checks, drawn to the order of the plaintiff and indorsed by the agent with the plaintiff's name by means of a rubber stamp, and it appeared that, although when the account was first opened another agent had jection, but silently turned things over to the contractor, the defendant was held estopped to deny the contractor's agency to pledge defendant's credit. Graff Bros. v. Lena Lumber Co., 96 Ark. 350.

⁴⁶ Aga v. Harbach, 127 Iowa, 144, 109 Am. St. R. 377, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 441.

⁴⁷ Lough v. Davis, 35 Wash. 449.

⁴⁸ Trollinger v. Fleeer, 157 N. C. 81.

⁴⁹ Cooper v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank, 68 Wash. 310.

been designated as the only one whose signature should bind the plaintiff in transactions with the bank, yet for a period of two or three years the agent in question had been allowed, apparently in the regular course of business, to indorse checks with such rubber stamp and deposit them, to transfer checks by such indorsement, and to receive money upon checks indorsed with such stamp or with no indorsement at all, it was held that the jury were justified in finding that the agent was apparently authorized to deal as he did with the checks in question.⁵⁰ Where a mother, having practically finished negotiation of a contract to purchase land, then left her son to complete matters and he made the first payment by a check upon her bank account, and she kept the contract so made in her possession for several weeks and then claimed that he had authority only to take an option, it was held that the evidence would sustain a finding that the son had authority to make the contract, and justify a judgment of specific performance.⁵¹ Where the evidence showed that the defendant, knowing there was a disagreement as to the terms upon which she might remove her buildings from the land she was selling, sent her brother to sign for her a specific contract at the agreed price and later sought to repudiate it because she was dissatisfied with the terms on that point, it was held that "when the defendant directed [the agent] to act for her in executing a specific contract of sale, the terms of which had not been previously agreed upon, she necessarily gave him authority to fix such terms."⁵²

§ 280. — So where a person openly and notoriously exercises the functions of a particular agency of a corporation, he will be presumed to have sufficient authority from the corporation to so act;⁵³ and where a manufacturing company knowingly permitted a person to ⁵⁰ Columbia Mill Co. v. National Bank of Commerce, 52 Minn. 224.

⁵¹ Wren v. Cooksey, 147 Ky. 825.

⁵² Clark v. Pett, 150 Iowa, 707.

⁵³ Singer Mfg. Co. v. Holdford, 86 Ill. 455.

Where it appeared that a person had acted for two or three years as the agent of corporation in settling its obligations, it was held that this was sufficient prima facie to establish his agency. "From the natural improbability," said Dickinson, J., "that one should voluntarily, without authority, assume to act for another, settling his obligations for a considerable period of time, and from the fact that such conduct would naturally come to the knowledge of the assumed principal, the fact of agency may be presumed." Neibles v. Minneapolis, etc., R. R. Co., 37 Minn. 151, 33 N. W. 332. See also Rockford, etc., R. R. Co. v. Wilcox, 66 Ill. 417; Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94; Summerville v. Hannibal, etc., R. R. Co., 62 Mo. 391; Vicksburg, etc., R. R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 54 Miss. 200; McCormick Harv. Co. v. Lambert, 120 Iowa, 181; Southern Express Co. v. Platten, 93 Fed. 936; Smith v. Bank, 72 N. H. 4.

sell goods in a store-house with their name over the door, though in a town distant from their place of business, and there to sell goods of their manufacture and to buy country produce as their agent, they were charged as his principals in the purchase of such produce.⁵⁴ So placing a man in general charge of a retail store is such a holding out of him as general agent as to bind the principal for goods purchased for sale in the store by the agent, although he had agreed with the principal not to buy any goods without the latter's consent.⁵⁵ And where it appears that the alleged agent has repeatedly performed acts, like the one in question, which the principal has ratified and adopted, his authority for the performance of the disputed act may be inferred.⁵⁶

§ 281. What facts not sufficient—Instances.—The cases upon this side are also too numerous for detailed statement, and a few must serve as illustrations for all. Thus, for example, the mere making a note payable at a certain bank will not make the bank the agent of the payee to receive payment unless the note is left there for collection,⁵⁷

⁵⁴ Gilbraith v. Lineberger, 69 N. C. 145. But this authority does not extend to borrowing money or buying goods for himself. Id.

The fact that one was in charge of a truck with defendant's name upon it and delivered beer from it with bills and receipts bearing defendant's name, is evidence from which a jury might infer agency (Thiry v. Taylor Brewing Co., 37 N. Y. App. Div. 391); and where a brewing company furnished to one claiming to be its agent horses and wagon and a place of storage, there was evidence of agency (Bowman v. Texas Brewing Co., 17 Tex. Civ. App. 446); and so where a brewing company furnished a person with an ice house and wagon with his name painted on it as agent (Foss-Schneider Brewing Co. v. McLaughlin, 5 Ind. App. 415). So where the agent had the name of his principal posted in his office to the latter's knowledge. Daggett v. Champlain Mfg. Co., 71 Vt. 370.

⁵⁵ White v. Leighton, 15 Neb. 424.

⁵⁶ Jewett v. Lawrenceburgh, etc., R. R. Co., 10 Ind. 539; Fisher v. Campbell, 9 Por. (Ala.) 210; Robinson v. Green, 5 Har. (Del.) 115; Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 456; Em- erson v. Cogswell, 16 Me. 77; Odi-orne v. Maxcy, 15 Mass. 39; Walsh v. Pierce, 12 Vt. 130; Downer v. Morrison, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 237; Hawkins v. Windhorst, 77 Kan. 674, 127 Am. St. R. 445, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 219.

⁵⁷ Ward v. Smith, 74 U. S. (7 Wallace) 447, 19 L. Ed. 207; Mutual Ben., etc., Co. v. Miles, 81 Fed. 32; Glatt v. Fortman, 120 Ind. 384; Caldwell v. Evans, 68 Ky. (5 Bush.) 380, 96 Am. Dec. 358; Trowbridge v. Ross, 105 Mich. 598; St. Paul National Bank v. Cannon, 46 Minn. 95, 24 Am. St. R. 189; Adams v. Hackensack Imp. Co., 44 N. J. L. 638, 43 Am. Rep. 406; Hollinshead v. Stuart & Co., 8 N. D. 35, 42 L. R. A. 659; Bank of Montreal v. Ingerson, 105 Iowa, 349; Bartel v. Brown, 104 Wis. 493. In Cheney v. Libbey, 134 U. S. 68, 33 L. Ed. 818, the bank at which certain notes were made payable had actual control of the notes, but they had not been left there for collection. It was held that the deposit of money in the bank for the payment of the notes did not operate as payment, that the bank was not agent of the payee to receive payment, but held the notes for the payee and the money for the payor.

In Grissom v. Bank, 87 Tenn. 350, nor, in any event, unless the officers are disposed to accept the agency;⁵⁸ nor will the delivery of a subscription list to a person of itself confer authority on such person to collect the money and discharge the subscribers;⁵⁹ nor is authority to collect a debt to be implied merely from the possession by the party claiming the authority, of a copy of the account.⁶⁰

So an agency will not be presumed from a previous employment in a similar matter where it does not appear that the former employment was with the principal's knowledge, although he may have accepted the advantages resulting from such previous employment.⁶¹

§ 282. — The lender of money who asks the borrower to obtain the indorsement of a third person as surety does not thereby make the borrower his agent so as to be charged with notice if the surety's signature is forged.⁶²

And if a debtor employs an agent to carry money to his creditor, the creditor by accepting the money, does not so make the messenger his agent that if at any future time the messenger should appropriate

10 Am. St. R. 669, 3 L. R. A. 273, the bank at which a note was by its terms payable had a general account of the surety on the note and when the note was brought in, paid it out of this general account without express directions. In holding that this was unauthorized on the part of the bank the court said that making a note payable at a bank simply names a place of payment and does not make the bank agent for anyone.

If however the note is left at the bank for collection, the bank is the payee's agent, and the incidents of agency attach. Smith v. Bank, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 627; Alley v. Rogers, 19 Grattan, 366.

⁵⁸ Pease v. Warren, 29 Mich. 9. But where a savings bank delivers to a national bank money drafts, notes, securities, etc., to pay a creditor, the relation between the debtor bank and the national bank is that of principal and agent, until the creditor assents or acts upon the transaction; and the assent of the creditor will not be presumed when he has no notice or knowledge of it. Brockmeyer v. Washington Nat. Bank, 40 Kan. 376, 40 Kan. 744.

⁵⁹ Antram v. Thorndell, 74 Penn. St. 442.

⁶⁰ Dutcher v. Beckwith, 45 Ill. 460, 92 Am. Dec. 232; Swofford Bros. Co. v. Berkowitz, 7 Kan. App. 24.

⁶¹ Cobb v. Hall, 49 Iowa, 366. And see Abrahams v. Weiller, 87 Ill. 179.

⁶² Wheeler v. Barr, 7 Ind. App. 381. So where a creditor pushing for payment was unwilling to take his debtor's note but suggested that he could take the debtor's note if endorsed by the defendant and the debtor went to defendant and obtained his accommodation endorsement, no agency of the debtor for the creditor to obtain the endorsement has been established and the defendant cannot show that his undertaking with the debtor was to sign for accommodation of the creditor as well as of the debtor. Carter v. Goff, 141 Mass. 123. See also, to the same effect, Woodward v. Bixby, 68 N. H. 219.

money so sent, the loss would be that of the creditor and not of the debtor; ⁶³ and if a debtor leaves with A money to pay a note, informing the creditor of that fact, and the creditor thereupon writes to A to bring or send the money to him, this does not make A the agent of the creditor so as to impose upon the latter the loss of the money while in A's possession.⁶⁴

§ 283. — So the mere fact that, under the terms of the contract for the sale of goods of which the title is to be retained by the seller until payment, it is agreed that the buyer shall cause the goods to be shipped in a certain way in order to protect the seller's interest, does not make the buyer the seller's agent in making the shipment, so as to give the seller a cause of action against the carrier, the seller not appearing upon the face of the contract to be a party to it.⁶⁵ The fact that a third person had agreed, as the friend of one employed to sell chattles, to vouch for the genuineness of the signatures upon notes which such employee was to procure by way of security for an existing indebtedness to his employer, such third person not having any authority to accept the notes or to do anything with them, does not make him the agent of the employer, so as to charge the employer with notice which such third person had that the employee was practicing a fraud upon one of the sureties upon the note.⁶⁶ In an action by plaintiffs to rescind certain mortgages given by them, upon the ground of fraud, it appearing that plaintiffs were present and acting for themselves, when the mortgages were executed, the mere fact that a third person was present at their request "in order to see that everything was done right" does not make such third person the agent of plaintiffs, so as to charge them with his knowledge or bind them by his testimony as to what was then said and done.⁶⁷ Where plaintiff, who had bought land of another for the latter's accommodation and had agreed that the latter might have the privilege of reselling it at any time and of retaining all that he could obtain for it above a fixed sum, and the latter employed defendants, who were real estate agents, to assist him in making a sale, the defendants are not thereby made the agents of the plaintiff, so as to relieve them from their indorsement of certain drafts taken in payment of the purchase price and turned over to the plaintiff in payment of the fixed sum due him.⁶⁸ One who bought property

⁶³ Fisher v. Lodge, 50 Iowa, 459.

⁶⁶ Hardin v. Chenault, 25 Ky. L.

⁶⁴ First Nat. Bank v. Free, 67 Iowa, 11.

R. 1083, 77 S. W. 192.

⁶⁵ Mills v. Abbeville, etc., Ry. Co., 137 Ala. 505.

⁶⁷ Grewing v. Minneapolis Thresh. Mach. Co., 12 S. Dak. 127.

⁶⁸ O'Connell v. Marvin, 47 Wash. 8.

and had employed a title company to examine the title and had given an assignable non-negotiable mortgage bond to the title company for money, which under the mortgagor's direction the title company then applied in paying vendor and in improving the property, and who then resold the property and delivered the deed and received the purchase money through the title company, and who without any knowledge that the mortgage bond had been assigned, allowed the title company to keep part of the purchase money in satisfaction of the mortgage bond, has not so made the title company her agent as to be bound by its knowledge of the assignment and to have her payment defeated.⁶⁹ The fact that one who had made a catalogue of the cattle of a decedent's estate answered plaintiff's letter addressed to the estate, and that he sold cattle of that herd to plaintiff, making representations as to the condition of the cattle, where the administrators claim that he was not their agent and that they sold to him, does not make him the agent of the administrators so as to bind them by his representations.⁷⁰

§ 284. — The fact that the mortgagee of a stock of goods is employed in the mortgagor's store and that while there the mortgagor buys goods "as agent," does not tend to show that the mortgagee was the principal, he not being such in fact and receiving no benefit of the goods.⁷¹ So where a person suggests to a judgment debtor that he will buy the judgment against him and the latter tells him to do so but furnishes no money to make the purchase, the buyer is not thereby made the agent of the judgment debtor in such sense that the latter is afterwards entitled to satisfaction of the judgment upon reimbursing the buyer for what he paid for it, having bought it at a discount.⁷²

The fact that the owner of land gives another an option contract or a bond for title does not make the latter the agent of the owner even though they are tenants in common.⁷³

Nor will the fact that one as a father or friend merely gives information or advice in reference to a land trade, make such father or friend the agent of the person to whom such advice or information is given.⁷⁴

⁶⁹ Fidelity T. & S. V. Co. v. Carr, 24 Ky. L. R. 156, 66 S. W. 990.

⁷⁰ Newell v. Clapp, 97 Wis. 104. The fact that defendant allowed his brother to live in and transact business from the defendant's residence does not constitute a holding out of the brother as defendant's agent. Rowan v. Kemp, 103 N. Y. Supp. 775. A stockbroker who tells a customer that he may send him directions over a certain private wire, does not make the operator of that wire his own agent so as to be bound by his mistakes. Smith v. Hutton, 138 App. Div. 859.

⁷¹ Steele v. Watson, 86 Iowa, 629.

⁷² Walton v. Dore, 113 Iowa, 1.

⁷³ Alger v. Keith, 105 Fed. 105.

⁷⁴ McNamara v. McNamara, 62 Ga. 200.

§ 285. Agent's authority cannot be established by his own statements or admissions.—The authority of an agent, and its nature and extent where these questions are directly involved, can only be established by tracing it to its source in some word or act of the alleged principal. The agent certainly cannot confer authority upon himself or make himself agent merely by saying that he is one. Evidence of his own statements, declarations or admissions, made out of court therefore (as distinguished from his testimony as a witness), is not admissible against his principal for the purpose of establishing,⁷⁵ en-

See also upon this general subject, Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400; Hazard v. Treadwell, 1 Stra. 506; Burt v. Palmer, 5 Esp. 145; Peto v. Hague, Id. 134; Anderson v. Sander-son, 2 Stark. 204; Clifford v. Burton, 1 Bing. 199; Fenner v. Lewis, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 38; Bryan v. Jack-son, 4 Conn. 291.

⁷⁵ Williamson v. Tyson, 105 Ala. 644; Manly v. Sperry, 115 Ala. 524; Drum v. Harrison, 83 Ala. 384; Tanner Engine Co. v. Hall, 86 Ala. 305; Eagle Iron Co. v. Baugh, 147 Ala. 613; Gould v. Cates Chair Co., 147 Ala. 629; Smiley v. Hooper, 147 Ala. 646; Gambill v. Fuqua, 148 Ala. 448; Union Naval Stores Co. v. Stewart, 156 Ala. 369; Cohn, etc., Co. v. Robbins, 159 Ala. 289; Crone v. Long, 159 Ala. 487; Eubanks v. Anniston Co., 171 Ala. 488; Carter v. Burnham, 31 Ark. 212; Dennis v. Young, 85 Ark. 252; Latham v. Bank, 92 Ark. 315; Bell v. State, 93 Ark. 600; Petterson v. Stockton, etc., Ry. Co., 134 Cal. 244. See also Ferris v. Baker, 127 Cal. 520; Santa Cruz Butchers' Union v. I. X. L. Lime Co. (Cal.), 46 Pac. 382; Union Const. Co. v. W. U. Tel. Co., — Cal., 125 Pac. 242; Murphy v. Gumaer, 12 Colo. App. 472; Mulford v. Rowland, 45 Colo. 172; C. & C. Electric Motor Co. v. Frisbie, 66 Conn. 67; Coe v. Kutinsky, 82 Conn. 685; Russell v. Washington Savings Bank, 23 App. D. C. 398; Orange Belt Ry. Co. v. Cox, 44 Fla. 645; Griffin v. Societe Anonyme la Floridienne, 53 Fla. 801; Martin v.

Johnson, 54 Fla. 487; Fla. East Coast Ry. v. Lassiter, 58 Fla. 234, 19 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 192; Cottondale State Bank v. Burroughs Add. Mach. Co., 61 Fla. 143; Nelson v. Tumlin, 74 Ga. 171; Amicalola Marble Co. v. Coker, 111 Ga. 872; Jones v. Harrell, 110 Ga. 373; Grand Rapids Co. v. Moral, 110 Ga. 321; Almand v. Equitable Mortgage Co., 113 Ga. 983; Abel v. Jarratt & Co., 100 Ga. 732; Alger v. Turner, 105 Ga. 178; Harris Loan Co. v. Elliot, etc., Co., 110 Ga. 302; Massillon Engine, etc., Co. v. Akerman, 110 Ga. 570; Americus Oil Co. v. Gurr, 114 Ga. 624; Hood v. Hendrickson, 122 Ga. 795; Indiana Fruit Co. v. Sandlin, 125 Ga. 222; Franklin Co. Lumber Co. v. Grady Co., 133 Ga. 557; Becker v. Donalson, 133 Ga. 864; Southern Ry. Co. v. Grant, 136 Ga. 303; Georgia Steel Co. v. White, 136 Ga. 492; Johnson County Bank v. Richardson, 9 Ga. App. 466; Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Parker, 10 Ga. App. 697; Maxey v. Heckethorn, 44 Ill. 437; Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 455; Chicago, etc., R. R. Co. v. Fox, 41 Ill. 106; Mullanphy Sav. Bank v. Schott, 135 Ill. 655, 25 Am. St. Rep. 401; Mellor v. Carithers, 52 Ill. App. 86; Cleveland, etc., Ry. Co. v. Jenkins, 75 Ill. App. 17; Sonnenschein v. Max Malter Co., 144 Ill. App. 183; Elevator Safety Co. v. Iron Works, 153 Ill. App. 313; Columbus, etc., Ry. Co. v. Powell, 40 Ind. 37; Blair-Baker Horse Co. v. Bank, 164 Ind. 77; Wood Mowing, etc., Machine Co. v. Crow, 70 Iowa, 340; Fritz v. Chi- cago Elevator Co., 136 Iowa, 699; Whitam v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 96 Iowa, 737; Sax v. Davis, 81 Iowa, 692; Sandusky, etc., Works v. Hooks, 83 Iowa, 305; Heusinkveld v. Ins. Co., 106 Iowa, 229; Schlitz Brew. Co. v. Barlow, 107 Iowa, 252; Mentzer v. Sargeant, 115 Iowa, 527; McManus v. Chicago G. W. Ry. Co., — Iowa, —, 136 N. W. 769; Streeter v. Poor, 4 Kan. 412; Howe Machine Co. v. Clark, 15 Kan. 492; Leu v. Mayer, 52 Kan. 419; Mo. Pac. Ry. Co. v. Johnson, 55 Kan. 344; St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Kinman, 49 Kan. 627; Ream v. McElhone, 50 Kan. 407; Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Berkowitz, 7 Kan. App. 24; Kane v. Barstow, 42 Kan. 465, 16 Am. St. Rep. 490; French v. Wade, 35 Kan. 391; Edmiston v. Hurley, 30 Ky. L. R. 557, 99 S. W. 259; Hensley v. McDonald, 32 Ky. L. R. 1333, 108 S. W. 362; B. & O. S. W. Ry. Co. v. Clift, 142 Ky. 573; Crenshaw v. Ware's Exr., 148 Ky. 196; Dawson v. Landreaux, 29 La. Ann. 363; State v. Harris, 51 La. Ann. 1105; Lafourche Transportation Co. v. Pugh, 52 La. Ann. 1517; Eaton v. Provident Asso., 89 Me. 58; Harker v. Dement, 9 Gill (Md.), 7, 52 Am. Dec. 670; Wilson v. Kelso, 115 Md. 162; Stollenwerck v. Thacher, 115 Mass. 224; Mussey v. Beecher, 3 Cush (57 Mass.), 511; Brigham v. Peters, 1 Gray (67 Mass.), 139; Nowell v. Chipman, 170 Mass. 340; Haney v. Donnelly, 78 Mass. (12 Gray) 361; Baker v. Gerrish, 96 Mass. (14 Allen) 201; Westheimer v. State Loan Co., 195 Mass. 510; Deane v. American Glue Co., 200 Mass. 459; Hatch v. Squires, 11 Mich. 185; Kornemann v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36; Reynolds v. Continental Ins. Co., 36 Mich. 131; Fontaine Crossing, etc., Co. v. Rauch, 117 Mich. 401; Grover & Baker S. M. Co. v. Polhemus, 34 Mich. 247. See also Bond v. Pontiac, etc., R. R. Co., 62 Mich. 643, 4 Am. St. R. 885; Henneberger v. Matter, 88 Mich. 396; Swanstrom v. Improvement

Co., 91 Mich. 367; Coldwater Nat. Bank v. Buggie, 117 Mich. 416; McPherson v. Pinch, 119 Mich. 36; Logan v. Agricultural Society, 156 Mich. 537; Cronk v. Mulvaney, 168 Mich. 346; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Cocke, 64 Miss. 713; Therrell v. Ellis, 83 Miss. 494; Sumrall v. Kitselman, — Miss. —, 58 So. 594; Peck v. Ritchey, 66 Mo. 114; Salmon Falls Bank v. Leyser, 116 Mo. 51; Murphy v. Mechanics Ins. Co., 83 Mo. App. 481; Mitchum v. Dunlap, 98 Mo. 418; Waverly, etc., Co. v. St. Louis Cooperage Co., 112 Mo. 383; National Bank v. Morris, 125 Mo. 343; Handlan v. Miller, 143 Mo. App. 101; Groneweg v. Estes, 144 Mo. App. 418; Nyhart v. Pennington, 20 Mont. 158; Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association v. Murray, 47 Neb. 627; Nosttrum v. Halliday, 39 Neb. 828; Burke v. Frye, 44 Neb. 223; Norberg v. Plummer, 58 Neb. 410; Richardson & Boyton Co. v. School District, 45 Neb. 777; Blanke Tea Co. v. Rees Co., 70 Neb. 510; Fitzgerald v. Kimball Bros. Co., 76 Neb. 236; Warner v. Sohn, 86 Neb. 519; Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Grimmon, 28 Nev. 235; Bohanan v. Railroad, 70 N. H. 526; Clough v. Rockingham, etc., Co., 75 N. H. 84; Dowden v. Cryder, 55 N. J. L. 329; Pederson v. Kiensel, 71 N. J. L. 525; Brounfield v. Denton, 72 N. J. L. 235; Ryle v. Manchester, etc., Asso., 74 N. J. L. 840; Standard Oil Co. v. Linol Co., 75 N. J. L. 294; Nicholas v. Oram, 77 N. J. L. 220; Yoshimi & Co. v. U. S. Express Co., 78 N. J. L. 281; Schweitzer v. Church, — N. J. —, 78 Atl. 400; Stringham v. St. Nicholas Ins. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. 315; Jaeger v. Kelley, 52 N. Y. 274; Fleming v. Ryan, 9 N. Y. Misc. 496; Reid v. Horn, 25 Misc. 523; Wana-maker v. Megraw, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 54; Booth v. Newton, 46 App. Div. 175. See also Mullen v. Quinlan & Co., 195 N. Y. 109, 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 511; Mitchell v. Gennis, 124 N. Y. Suppl. 996; Berry v. Broadway Co., 148 App. Div. 159; Willis larging⁷⁶ or renewing⁷⁷ his authority; nor can his authority be established by showing that he acted as agent or that he claimed to have the powers which he assumed to exercise.⁷⁸ His written statements and admissions are as objectionable as his oral ones, and his letters, tele-

Cab. Co. v. General Assurance Co., 136 N. Y. Suppl. 100; Taylor v. Hunt, 118 N. C. 168; Summerrow v. Baruch, 128 N. Car. 202; Parker v. Brown, 131 N. Car. 264; Smith v. Browne, 132 N. Car. 365; Daniel v. Railway Co., 136 N. Car. 517, 67 L. R. A. 455; Brittain v. Westall, 137 N. Car. 30; McCormick v. Williams, 152 N. Car. 638; Sutton v. Lyons, 156 N. Car. 3; Gordon v. Vt. Loan Asso., 6 N. Dak. 454; Plano Mfg. Co. v. Root, 3 N. Dak. 165; General Carriage Co. v. Cox, 74 Ohio St. 284, 113 Am. St. R. 959; Sloan v. Sloan, 46 Or. 36; Harding v. Oregon-Idaho Co., 57 Or. 34; Spande v. Western Life, etc., Co. (Or.), 117 Pac. 973; Aerne v. Gostlow, 60 Or. 113; Long v. North British Fire Ins. Co., 137 Pa. 335, 21 Am. St. R. 879; Pepper v. Cairns, 133 Pa. 114, 19 Am. St. R. 625, 7 L. R. A. 750; Baltimore Relief Asso. v. Post, 122 Pa. 579, 9 Am. St. R. 147, 2 L. R. A. 44; Fee v. Adams Exp. Co., 38 Pa. Super. Ct. 83; New England Mtg. Secur. Co. v. Baxley, 44 S. C. 81; Martin v. Suber, 39 S. C. 525; Ehrhardt v. Breeland, 57 S. C. 142; Gen. Elect. Co. v. Southern Ry., 72 S. C. 251, 110 Am. St. R. 600; Seneca Co. v. Crenshaw, 89 S. C. 470; J. I. Case Machinery Co. v. Gidley, — S. D. —, 132 N. W. 711; Page v. Cortez (Tex. Civ. App.), 31 S. W. 1071; Western Industrial Co. v. Chandler (Tex. Civ. App.), 31 S. W. 314; Brady v. Nagle (Tex. Civ. App.), 29 S. W. 943; Mills v. Berla (Tex. Civ. App.), 23 S. W. 910; Sullivan v. Fant, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 6; Missouri Bridge Co. v. Ballard, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 110; Stockton v. Crow, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 132 S. W. 952; Young v. Robinson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 135 S. W. 715; Madeley v. Kellam, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 135

S. W. 659; Guitar v. McGee, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 139 S. W. 622; Cannel Coal Co. v. Luna, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 144 S. W. 721; McCornick v. Queen of Sheba, etc., Co., 23 Utah, 71; Dickerman v. Quincy Ins. Co., 67 Vt. 609; Prouty v. Nichols, 82 Vt. 181, 72 Atl. 988, 137 Am. St. Rep. 996; Fisher v. White, 94 Va. 236; Hoge v. Turner, 96 Va. 624; Comegys v. Lumber Co., 8 Wash. 661; Gregory v. Loose, 19 Wash. 599; Larson v. Am. Bridge Co., 40 Wash. 224, 111 Am. St. R. 904; Singer v. Guy Invest. Co., 60 Wash. 674; Rosendorf v. Poling, 48 W. Va. 621; Garber v. Blatchley, 51 W. Va. 147; McCune v. Badger, 126 Wis. 186; Henderson v. Coleman, 19 Wyo. 183, 115 Pac. 439, 1136; Empire State Nail Co. v. Faulkner, 55 Fed. 819, affirmed 67 Fed. 913; Walmsley v. Quigley, 129 Fed. 583; W. K. Niver Coal Co. v. Piedmont, etc., Co., 136 Fed. 179; C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Chickasha Nat. Bank, 174 Fed. 923.

Non-declarations. — Where the fact of agency is in dispute evidence that the alleged agent made no declarations that he was such is not admissible. Moore v. Rankin, 33 N. Y. Misc. 749.

⁷⁶ Stollenwerck v. Thacher, 115 Mass. 224; Mussey v. Beecher, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 511; Merchants' Nat. Bank of Peoria v. Nichols & Shepherd Co., 223 Ill. 41; John Gund Brew. Co. v. Peterson, 130 Iowa, 301; Superior Drill Co. v. Carpenter, 150 Mich. 262; West v. Grocery Co., 138 N. C. 166; Edwards v. Doolley, 120 N. Y. 540.

⁷⁷ Van Dusen v. Mining Co., 36 Cal. 571, 95 Am. Dec. 209.

⁷⁸ James v. Stookey, 1 Wash. (U. S. C. C.) 330; Harker v. Dement, supra; Grover & Baker S. M. Co. v.

grams, advertisements and other writings cannot be used as evidence of his agency.⁷⁹ The fact that the agent has since died does not change the rule.

Where his authority is in writing he cannot extend its scope by his own declarations.⁸⁰ His acts and statements cannot be made use of against the principal until the fact of the agency has been shown by other evidence.⁸¹

Polhemus, supra; Bacon v. Johnson, 56 Mich. 182; North v. Metz, 57 Mich. 612; Doonan v. Mitchell, 26 Ga. 472; McDougald v. Dawson, 30 Ala. 553; Coburn v. Paine, 36 Me. 105; Schmidt v. Shaver, 196 Ill. 108, 89 Am. St. Rep. 250; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Frost, 70 Kan. 480; Hart v. Waterhouse, 1 Mass. 433.

⁷⁹ Letters.—Sax v. Davis, 81 Iowa, 692; Wilcox v. Eadie, 65 Kan. 459; Spande v. Western Life Indem. Co. (Or.), 117 Pac. 973.

Telegram.—Manly v. Sperry, 115 Ala. 524.

Newspaper advertisement.—Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Barlow, 107 Iowa, 252.

Sign on wagon.—Anheuser Busch Brew. Ass'n v. Murray, 47 Neb. 627. Written statement that he had a power of attorney. Abel v. Jarratt, 100 Ga. 732.

Entries in alleged agent's private books.—Boyd v. Jennings, 46 Ill. App. 290.

⁸⁰ Mapp v. Phillips, 32 Ga. 72.

⁸¹ Hatch v. Squires, 11 Mich. 185; McClung v. Spotswood, 19 Ala. 165; South & North Ala. R. R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; Peck v. Ritchey, 66 Mo. 114; Francis v. Edwards, 77 N. C. 271; Gilbert v. James, 86 N. C. 244; Grandy v. Ferebee, 68 N. C. 356; Williams v. Williamson, 6 Ired. (N. C.) 281, 45 Am. Dec. 494; Galbreath v. Cole, 61 Ala. 139; Baltimore & O. Relief Ass'n v. Post, 122 Pa. 579, 9 Am. St. Rep. 147, 2 L. R. A. 44.

What meant by showing by other evidence.—When it is said that the agent's statements, admissions and declarations cannot be made use of until the fact of his agency has been shown by other evidence, it is, of course, not meant that there must first be a separate verdict found establishing that fact; what is meant is, that there must first be some competent testimony offered tending to prove that fact.

Curing error later by proper evidence.—But if after the evidence has been admitted, the agency is otherwise proved as by the admissions of the principal or the testimony of the agent or some other competent witness, the error will be cured. Rowell v. Klein, 44 Ind. 290, 15 Am. Rep. 235; McCormick v. Roberts, 36 Kan. 552; Singer, etc., Co. v. Hutchinson, 184 Ill. 169; Union Guaranty Co. v. Robinson, 79 Fed. 420; Domasek v. Kluck, 113 Wis. 336; Singer, etc., v. Christian, 211 Pa. 534; Roux v. Blodgett, etc., Lumber Co., 94 Mich. 607; Eagle Iron Co. v. Baugh, 147 Ala. 613; Albert v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 122 N. C. 92, 65 Am. St. R. 693.

Discretion of court as to order of proof.—The mere order of proof upon this subject is usually within the discretion of the court (Woodbury v. Larned, 5 Minn. 339; First Unitarian Soc. v. Faulkner, 91 U. S. 415, 23 L. Ed. 283; Central Penn. Tel. & Supply Co. v. Thompson, 112 Pa. 118; Buist v. Guice, 96 Ala. 255; General Hospital Co. v. New Haven, etc., Co., 79 Conn. 581, 118 Am. St. R. 173, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 168); and the court may, in its discretion, admit the evidence upon condition of the subsequent proof of the agency (C. & C. Elec. Motor Co. v. Friesbie, 66 Conn. 67); though it is said that this practice should not be

§ 286. — When admissible.—His statements and admissions would, however, in any proper case be admissible against himself.⁸² So the statements and dealings of the principal with third persons in recognition of the alleged agency are admissible against the principal.⁸³ And so, of course, in any case if the statement or admission of the agent was made in the presence of the principal or under such other circumstances that the principal may fairly be deemed to have assented to it, it would be admissible against him as his own statement or admission.⁸⁴

§ 287. — To show attitude or intention of parties.—Where the purpose of the admission is not to bind the principal, but merely to show the attitude of the agent, as, for example, to show that he purported to act as agent and not personally, or to show for which of two adopted except for special reasons (Comegys v. Am. Lum. Co., 8 Wash. 661).

Statements as to Agency after other Evidence of it is offered.—It is said in several cases that, after other evidence of agency has been offered, the agent's statements may then be used in corroboration (White Sewing Mach. Co. v. Hor-kan, 7 Ga. App. 283); or are harmless (Stringfellow v. Brazelton, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 142 S. W. 937; Gilliland v. Ellison, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 137 S. W. 168; Robinson v. Greene, 148 Ala. 434; Childress v. Smith, etc., Hdw. Co., 162 Ala. 371; Miller-Brent Lumber Co. v. Stewart, 166 Ala. 657, 21 Ann. Cas. 1149; Stewart v. Climax Road Mach. Co., 200 Pa. 611); or may be received for the purpose of showing what induced the other party to deal with the agent (Singer Mfg. Co. v. Christian, 211 Pa. 534).

Where there was evidence of the former existence of a power of attorney which was now apparently lost, evidence of the agent's statements was admitted as making together a prima facie case. Mulford v. Rowland, 45 Colo. 172.

Statements of Agent to disprove Agency.—The statements of the alleged agent that he was not such cannot usually be used by the alleged principal to disprove it. Peck v. Ritchie, 66 Mo. 114; Harrington v. Bronson, 161 Pa. 296.

Admissions of one Agent to prove Agency of another.—The agency of one alleged agent cannot be shown by the admissions, declarations or recognition of another agent of the same principal, unless the latter be one authorized to make those admissions, etc. Hirsch v. Oliver, 91 Ga. 554; Heusinkveld v. Ins. Co., 106 Iowa, 229.

A declaration of an agent to a third person is inadmissible in behalf of the principal to prove that the third person was not his agent or to support the agent's testimony that such third person was not an agent. Short Mt. Coal Co. v. Hardy, 114 Mass. 197.

⁸² As where principal or a third person is suing the agent. New Home Sew. Mach. Co. v. Seago, 128 N. C. 158; Blake v. Bremyer, 84 Kan. 708, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 165.

⁸³ Haughton v. Maurer, 55 Mich. 323; Ransom v. Duckett, 48 Ill. App. 659; Mitchell v. Samford, 149 Mo. App. 72.

⁸⁴ Hoge v. Turner, 96 Va. 624; International Harvester Co. v. Campbell, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 421.

persons he purported to act, it would be admissible,⁸⁵ or to show that the other party understood that he purported to act as agent only;⁸⁶ or to show with whom the other party attempted or purported to deal.⁸⁷ So where the purpose is to show the information upon which the other party acted, statements made to him by the agent as to what the agent had done upon other occasions would be admissible.⁸⁸

§ 288. — The mere order of the proof is not vital, and it is not reversible error that evidence of the agent's acts was admitted before proof of his agency had been offered, if it was supplied at a later stage in the trial.⁸⁹

§ 289. Or by his own acts only.—The agent's authority moreover, may not be shown merely by proving that he acted as agent.⁹⁰ A person can no more make himself an agent by his own acts only than he can by his own declarations or statements. If his acts can be connected with the principal in some way, as by showing that the principal knew of them and assented to them, a different result ensues; and where the acts are of such a public or intimate nature, so notorious or so long continued as reasonably to justify the inference that the principal must have known of them and would not have permitted them to continue if they were unauthorized, evidence of them is admissible as against the alleged principal.⁹¹

§ 290. Agent's authority cannot be proved by general reputation.—The authority of a private agent to represent his principal where that is a fact in issue cannot be established by proof that he was generally reputed to be so authorized, unless the principal can in some way be ⁸⁵ Nowell v. Chipman, 170 Mass. 340; Hirschmann v. Railroad Co., 97 Mich. 384; White v. Elgin Creamery Co., 108 Iowa, 522. See also Hine v. Cushing, 53 Hun (N. Y.), 519; Johnson v. Cole, 178 N. Y. 364; Siers v. Wiseman, 58 W. Va. 340; Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Ladd, 135 Fed. 636; Parker v. Bond, 121 Ala. 529.

⁸⁶ Swinnerton v. Argonaut, etc., Co., 112 Cal. 375; Bergtholdt v. Porter Bros. Co., 114 Cal. 681.

⁸⁷ Wishard v. McNeill, 85 Iowa, 474.

⁸⁸ Grant v. Humerick, 123 Iowa, 571.

⁸⁹ Childress v. Smith, etc., Hdw. Co., 162 Ala. 371, and other cases cited supra.

⁹⁰ Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94; Richards v. Newstifter, 70 Kan. 350; Fletcher v. Willis, 180 Mass. 243; Jones v. Bloomgarden, 143 Mich. 326; Loverin-Browne Co. v. Bank of Buffalo, 7 N. D. 569.

⁹¹ Fowlds v. Evans, 52 Minn. 551; Neibles v. Railway Co., 37 Minn. 151. See also Best v. Krey, 83 Minn. 32; Reynolds v. Collins, 78 Ala. 94; Bradford v. Barclay, 39 Ala. 33; Gimon v. Terrell, 38 Ala. 208; Southern Express Co. v. Platten, 93 Fed. 936; Timpson v. Allen, 7 N. Y. Misc. 323; Dodge v. Weill, 158 N. Y. 346; Black Lick Lumber Co. v. Construction Co., 63 W. Va. 477.

held responsible for the reputation or has acquiesced in it or can be estopped to deny it.⁹²

§ 291. Agent must be called as a witness.—If it is deemed essential to prove the authority by the agent himself, he must be called as a witness; his testimony both as to the fact, and as to the nature and extent, of his authority, where it rests in parol, being as competent as that of any other witness.⁹³ The rule upon this subject has been stated

⁹² Blevins v. Pope, 7 Ala. 371; Central R. Co. v. Smith, 76 Ala. 572, 52 Am. Rep. 353; Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66; Bartley v. Rhodes (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 604; Dyer v. Winston, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 412, 77 S. W. 227; Union Trust Co. v. McKeon, 76 Conn. 508; Thompson v. Laboringman's Merc. Co., 60 W. Va. 42, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 311.

⁹³ Parker v. Bond, 121 Ala. 529; Beekman Lumber Co. v. Kittrell, 80 Ark. 228; Ayer & Lord Co. v. Young, 90 Ark. 104; Dierks, etc., Co. v. Coffman Bros., 96 Ark. 505; McRae v. Land Co. (Cal.), 54 Pac. 743; Kast v. Miller, 159 Cal. 723; Culver v. Newhart, 18 Cal. App. 614; Wales v. Mower, 44 Colo. 146; Russell v. Wash. Savings Bank, 23 D. C. App. 398; Flournoy v. Interstate Elect. Co., 61 Fla. 216; Armour v. Ross, 110 Ga. 403; Thayer v. Meeker, 86 Ill. 470; St. L. S. Ry. Co. v. Elgin Condensed Milk Co., 74 Ill. App. 619, s. c. 175 Ill. 557, 67 Am. St. R. 238; Phillips v. Poulter, 111 Ill. App. 330; Moffitt v. Cressler, 8 Iowa, 122; Van Sickle v. Keith, 88 Iowa, 9; O'Leary v. German Amer. Ins. Co., 100 Iowa, 390; O'Neill v. Wilcox, 115 Iowa, 15; French v. Wade, 35 Kan. 391; Aultman, etc., Co. v. Knoll, 71 Kan. 109; Jähren v. Palmer, 71 Kan. 841; Drummond v. Krebs, 8 Kan. App. 180; Rice v. Gove, 39 Mass. (22 Pick.) 158, 33 Am. Dec. 724; Gould v. Norfolk Lead Co., 63 Mass. (9 Cush.) 338, 57 Am. Dec. 50; De Witt v. Prescott, 51 Mich. 298; First National Bank v. St. Anthony Co., 103 Minn. 82; Crothers v. Acock, 43 Mo. App. 318; State v. Henderson, 86 Mo. App.

482; Griswold v. Haas, 145 Mo. App. 578; Nyhart v. Pennington, 20 Mont. 158; Nostrum v. Halliday, 39 Neb. 828; Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Grimmon, 28 Nev. 235; Union Hosiery Co. v. Hodgson, 72 N. H. 427; Clough v. Rockingham Co., 75 N. H. 84; Joseph v. Shutler, 25 (N. Y.) Misc. 173; Mullin v. Sire, 37 Misc. 807; Stone v. Cronin, 72 App. Div. 565; Brown v. Cone, 80 App. Div. 413; Norden v. Duke, 106 App. Div. 514; Steuerwald v. Jackson, 123 App. Div. 569; Irvin v. Cohen, 109 N. Y. Suppl. 169; Lefkowitz v. Iba, 114 N. Y. Suppl. 29; Appel v. Lipman, 125 N. Y. Suppl. 400; New Home Co. v. Seago, 128 N. C. 158; Hill v. Bean, 150 N. C. 436; State v. Yellowday, 152 N. C. 793; Sutton v. Lyons, 156 N. C. 3; Reeves & Co. v. Bruening, 13 N. D. 157; Chickasha Co. v. Lamb, 26 Okla. 275; Wicktorwitz v. Insurance Co., 31 Or. 569; McInnes v. Rittenhouse, 1 Montag. (Pa.) 657; Lawall v. Groman, 180 Pa. 532, 57 Am. St. R. 662; Empire Mfg. Co. v. Hench, 219 Pa. 135; Brown v. Kirk, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 157; Fee v. Adams Express Co., 38 Pa. Super. Ct. 83; Connor v. Johnson, 59 S. C. 115; Kean v. Landrum, 72 S. C. 556; Am. Tel. Co. v. Kersh, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 127; Rainey v. Kemp, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 486; Bybee v. Embree-McLean Co., — Tex. Civ. App. —, 135 S. W. 203; Autrey v. Linn, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 138 S. W. 197; Cannel Coal Co. v. Luna, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 144 S. W. 721; Litter v. Mining Co., 7 Utah, 487; Bender v. Ragan, 53 Wash. 521; Singer v. Guy Investment Co., 60 Wash. 674; Piercy v. Hedrick, 2

by a learned judge as follows: "It is competent to prove a parol agency and its nature and scope by the testimony of the person who claims to be the agent. It is competent to prove a parol authority of any person to act for another, and generally, to prove any parol authority of any kind by the testimony of the person who claims to possess such authority. But it is not competent to prove the supposed authority of an agent for the purpose of binding his principal by proving what the supposed agent has said at some previous time. Nor is it competent to prove a supposed authority of any kind, as against the person from whom such authority is claimed to have been received, by proving the previous statements of the person who, it is claimed, had attained such authority."⁹⁴

§ 292. — Agent's testimony—Effect.—What the agent is to testify to is the facts of the case; he is no more competent than any other witness to testify to conclusions.⁹⁵ And his testimony is no more conclusive than that of any other witness; it is received for what it is worth; and the jury may find the fact to be opposed to his testimony.⁹⁶ He may be called by either party—by the principal to disprove the alleged agency, as well as by the other party to establish it.⁹⁷

After a prima facie case of authority has been made by the agent's testimony, evidence of his acts and declarations, if they would be competent under such an authority if established, is admissible as in

W. Va. 458, 98 Am. Dec. 774; Union Bank Co. v. Long Pole Co., 70 W. Va. 558, 74 S. E. 674; Somers v. Germania Nat. Bank, — Wis. —, 138 N. W. 713; Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Ladd, 135 Fed. 636; Joslyn v. Cadillac Co., 177 Fed. 863.

⁹⁴ Valentine, J., in Howe Mach. Co. v. Clark, 15 Kan. 492.

⁹⁵ Where the question of agency or not is the issue it is not competent for the witness to express his opinion or testify merely to his conclusions; he must give the facts upon which he relies. McCornick v. Queen of Sheba, etc., Co., 23 Utah, 71; Stuart v. Asher, 15 Colo. App. 403; Gore v. Canada Life A. Co., 119 Mich. 136; McCluskey v. Minck, 18 N. Y. Misc. 565; Cottondale State Bank v. Burroughs Add. Mach. Co., 61 Fla. 143.

His testimony however "cannot be restricted to the mere words used by the principal, but is admissible generally on the whole subject." Lawall v. Groman, 180 Pa. 532, 57 Am. St. R. 662.

But see Parker v. Bond, 121 Ala. 529, 25 So. 898.

⁹⁶ Majors v. Goodrich (Tex. Civ. App.), 54 S. W. 919; Jones v. Mansfield Lumb. & Merc. Co., 97 Ark. 643, 132 S. W. 1004. Where the alleged agent testifies that he was not agent, a letter written by him in the same transaction and tending to show that he was agent, may be used to contradict him. Gregg v. Berkshire, 10 Kan. App. 579, 62 Pac. 550.

⁹⁷ Dowell v. Williams, 33 Kan. 319; Rope v. Hess, 118 N. Y. 668. One agent is, of course, competent to testify as to another agent's authority, if he knows the facts. Moyers v. Fogarty, 140 Iowa, 701.

other cases,⁹⁸ subject of course to be disregarded if the authority be finally not proved.

§ 293. How question of agency determined—Court or jury.—The questions, what constitutes agency and what evidence is necessary or admissible to prove its existence; whether evidence offered has any legal tendency to prove agency; and whether there is any evidence in the case tending to establish it; are all questions of law to be determined by the court.⁹⁹

Whether, under the evidence, there is agency, is usually a question of fact, to be determined by the triers of the facts, whether court or jury; what the agent may do by virtue of the agency so found, is usually a question of law.¹

§ 294. ——— Construction of writing for court.—Whether a certain writing or a series of writings creates an agency or not, and if so, what is the nature and extent of the power conferred, the writing being produced, and being couched in such terms as to require no aid from extrinsic evidence, are questions of law for the decision of the court.²

§ 295. ——— Effect of undisputed facts to be determined by court.—And so where the facts are undisputed, and only one inference can reasonably be drawn from them, the court must determine whether they create an agency, and if so with what powers and limitations, and this is equally true whether it is sought to establish the agency by previous authorization or by subsequent ratification.³

⁹⁸ See ante, § 285; O'Leary v. German Am. Ins. Co., 100 Iowa, 390.

⁹⁹ See National Mechanics Bank v. National Bank, 36 Md. 5; New Orleans Coffee Co. v. Cady, 69 Neb. 412; Trimble v. Mercantile Co., 56 Mo. App. 683.

¹ Neppach v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 46 Or. 374; Anderson v. Adams, 43 Or. 621; Rumble v. Cummings, 52 Or. 203.

² Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Penn. St. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Clafin v. Continental Works, 85 Ga. 27; Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio St. 514; Simonds v. Wrightman, 36 Or. 120; Williamson v. Lumber Co., 38 Or. 560; Tarbox v. Cruzen, 68 Minn. 44; State v. Fellows, 98 Minn. 179; Queen City Ins. Co. v.

First Nat. Bank, 18 N. D. 603, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 509; McCreery v. Garvin, 39 S. Car. 375; Hackworth v. Hastings Industrial Co., 146 Ky. 387; Atwood v. Rose, 32 Okla. 355.

³ Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 97 Am. Dec. 728; Ryle v. Manchester, etc., Ass'n, 74 N. J. L. 840; Belcher v. Manchester, etc., Ass'n, 74 N. J. L. 833; Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, supra; South Bend, etc., Co. v. Dakota Ins. Co., 3 S. D. 205; McCornick v. Queen of Sheba Co., 23 Utah, 71; Walsh v. Peterson, 59 Neb. 645; Franklin Bank Note Co. v. Mackay, 83 Hun, 511, but see s. c. 158 N. Y. 140; Willcox v. Hines, 100 Tenn. 524, 66 Am. St. Rep. 761; Parker v. Brown, 131 N. C. 264; Harris v. Fitzgerald, 75 Conn. 72; Lester v. Snyder, 12 Colo. App. 351; Seehorn v.

Within the operation of the foregoing rules, is the question whether the agency in issue is general or special.⁴

§ 296. — In other cases question is for the jury.—Where, however, the authority was not conferred by written instrument and the facts are in dispute, or if, though the facts are not disputed, there may fairly be difference of opinion as to the inferences—whether of the existence of authority or of its nature or extent—which may reasonably be drawn from them, it is for the jury to determine, under proper instructions from the court, not only whether agency exists, but, if so, what is its nature and extent.⁵

Hall, 130 Mo. 257, 51 Am. St. R. 562; Michigan Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 44 Ind. App. 180; Parr v. Northern Elec. Mfg. Co., 117 Wis. 278.

⁴ Witcher v. Brewer, 49 Ala. 119.

⁵ Savings Fund Soc. v. Savings Bank, supra; So. & N. Ala. R. R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606, 23 Am. Rep. 578; Buist v. Guice, 96 Ala. 255. See also Lafayette Ry. Co. v. Tucker, 124 Ala. 514; Robinson & Co. v. Greene, 148 Ala. 434; Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. Tenn. Coal & Iron Co., 127 Ala. 137; Irving v. Shethar, 71 Conn. 434. See also Union Trust Co. v. McKeon, 76 Conn. 508; Hyman v. Waas, 79 Conn. 251; Held v. Walker, 25 App. D. C. 486; Arnold v. Adams, 4 Ga. App. 56; Morgan v. Neal, 7 Idaho, 629, 97 Am. St. R. 264; Cook v. Stimpson, 73 Ill. App. 483; Schmoldt Bros. v. Langston, 106 Ill. App. 385; Jewell v. Posey, 119 Iowa, 412; Shenkberg v. Porter, 137 Iowa, 245; Meagher v. Bowling, 107 Ky. 412, 21 Ky. L. R. 1149; Cartmel v. Unverzagt, 21 Ky. L. R. 1282, 54 S. W. 965; Groscup v. Downey, 105 Md. 273; Whittier v. Child, 174 Mass. 36; Heath v. New Bedford Safe Deposit Co., 184 Mass. 481; Marston v. Reynolds, 211 Mass. 590, 98 N. E. 601; Roberts v. Pepple, 55 Mich. 367; Wilkinson v. Steel & Spring Works, 73 Mich. 405; Fontaine, etc., Co. v. Rauch, 117 Mich. 401; Clark v. Dillman, 108 Mich. 625; Wilhelm v. Voss, 118 Mich. 106. See also Scheibeck v. Van Derbeck, 122 Mich. 29; McClure v. Murphey, 126 Mich. 134;

Mail & Express Co. v. Wood, 140 Mich. 505. See Bartleson v. Vanderhoff, 96 Minn. 184; Black River Lumber Co. v. Warner, 93 Mo. 374; Seehorn v. Hall, 130 Mo. 257, 51 Am. St. R. 562; Walsh v. Peterson, 59 Neb. 645; Scull v. Skililton, 70 N. J. L. 792; Crossley v. Kenny, 71 N. J. L. 124; Franklin Bank Note Co. v. Mackey, 83 Hun, 511 (but see s. c. 158 N. Y. 140); Dickinson v. Salmon, 36 Misc. 169; Williams v. Brandt, 90 App. Div. 607; Delafield v. J. K. Armsby Co., 99 App. Div. 622; Merkel v. Lazard, 114 App. Div. 25; Ricker National Bank v. Stone, 21 Okla. 833; Mullen v. Thaxton, 24 Okla. 643; McNabb v. Hunt, 28 Okla. 43; Allen v. Kenyon, 30 Okla. 536; Midland Saving & Loan Co. v. Sutton, 30 Okla. 448; Mahon v. Rankin, 54 Or. 328; Lawall v. Groman, 180 Pa. 532, 57 Am. St. Rep. 662; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Christian, 211 Pa. 534; Am. Car & Fdy. Co. v. Water Co., 218 Pa. 542, 128 Am. St. R. 749, 15 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 641; Stockwell v. Loecher, 9 Pa. Super. 241; Buchholtz v. Barrie, 36 Pa. Super. 454; Reid v. Kellogg, 8 S. D. 596; Willcox v. Hines, 100 Tenn. 524, 66 Am. St. Rep. 761; McCornick v. Queen of Sheba Co., 23 Utah, 71; Moore v. Blackburn, 67 Wash. 117.

The court should only take the case from the jury when there is no evidence whatever tending to prove agency. Buist v. Guice, 96 Ala. 255. See Osburn & Co. v. Ringland & Co., 122 Iowa, 329.

§ 297. — Under proper instructions from the court.—The court, however, in cases of this sort should carefully instruct the jury as to their function in the matter, and as to the rules of law by which they are to be guided. That function is not to determine whether the jury think it might be just or desirable or appropriate or convenient that the alleged principal should be held in the given case, but to decide whether, according to the rules of law, the alleged principal has, in fact, by word or conduct authorized the assumed agent to perform the act in question; or has, by conduct rationally and logically tending to that end, led the other party, who has himself exercised due care and caution, reasonably to believe that such authority has been conferred and to act upon such belief.

What the legal rules are which govern such situations should be explained by the court; and it is the duty of the jury to apply to the facts in the case the rules of law given them by the court. It is not for juries to make the law of agency.

§ 298. Burden of proof.—As has already been stated, the burden of proving agency, including not only the fact of its existence, but its nature and extent, rests ordinarily upon the party who alleges it.⁶

Where, however, there was a conceded agency but the principal contends that it has been terminated; or an otherwise undoubted authority but the principal contends that it had been limited or restricted; or an ostensible authority which the principal contends was not the real one; and the like, the burden of proving that the fact was as he contends and that the other party had notice of it where notice is necessary, would be upon the principal.⁷

§ 299. Amount of evidence requisite.—It is impossible to lay down any inflexible rule by which it can be determined what evidence shall be sufficient to establish agency in any given case. That is a question which must be determined in view of the facts in each particular case. Whatever form of proof is relied upon, however, must have a tendency to prove agency, and must be sufficient in probative force to establish it by a preponderance of the evidence. It may be said in general terms, however, that whatever evidence has a tendency to prove the

If there is more than a scintilla, it should go to the jury. Gates v. Max, 125 N. C. 139.

If different minds may honestly differ about it, it should go to the jury. South Bend, etc., Co. v. Dakota Ins. Co., 3 S. D. 205; Reid v. Kellogg, 8 S. D. 596; Parr v. North- ern Elec. Mfg. Co., 117 Wis. 278. See also Beston v. Amadon, 172 Mass. 84; Southern Pine, etc., Co. v. Fries, 1 Neb. Unoff. 691.

⁶ See ante, § 255.

⁷ See Lowry v. Atlantic Coast Line, — S. C. —, 75 S. E. 278; Whaley v. Duncan, 47 S. C. 139.

agency is admissible,⁸ even though it be not full and satisfactory,⁹ as it is the province of the jury to pass upon it. So if evidence has first been introduced tending to prove the agency or to make out a prima facie case thereof, the admissions and declarations of the alleged agent, if otherwise competent, may then be shown, and the whole case be passed upon by the jury.¹⁰

§ 300. Whose agent is the agent.—The question whose agent a person is, who is undoubtedly the agent of some one of the parties to a transaction—whether, for example, a person clearly the agent of one or the other of two parties shall be deemed to be the agent of this one rather than of that one—is often a question of no little difficulty. A person who begins a negotiation as the undoubted agent of one party only may become, in the course of the transaction, the agent of both or of the other. The auctioneer or the broker often does this,—he may, for example, offer the goods as the agent of the seller, but sign a memorandum as the agent of the buyer. Other agents also may act first for one and then for the other of the parties to a transaction.

In the last analysis the question of whose agent the agent was, becomes a question of fact; and where the question is doubtful all of the facts must be taken into account in deciding it.¹¹ Who set him in mo-

⁸ South & North Ala. R. R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; Buist v. Guice, 96 Ala. 255; Dickinson v. Salmon, 36 N. Y. Misc. 169; Goodman v. Saperstein, 115 Md. 678.

⁹ Morrison v. Whiteside, 17 Md. 452, 79 Am. Dec. 661; Goodman v. Saperstein, supra.

¹⁰ National Mechanics' Bank v. National Bank, 36 Md. 5; York Co. Bank v. Stein, 24 Md. 447; Henderson v. Mayhew, 2 Gill (Md.), 393, 41 Am. Dec. 434; Central Penn. Tel. Co. v. Thompson, 112 Penn. St. 118; Buist v. Guice, supra.

¹¹ See Ford v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 124 Ala. 400 (where the question was whether a person who was generally the agent of a city could be deemed to be the agent of the plaintiff so as to enable the plaintiff to sue upon a contract with defendant. Held, not to be plaintiff's agent); White City State Bank v. St. Joseph Stock Yards Bank, 90 Mo. App. 395 (where the question was whether a person acting under the direction of the president of a bank was to be deemed agent of the bank or of the president personally. Held, the former); Land Mortgage Co. v. Gillam, 49 S. Car. 345 (where the question was whether a certain person applied to for the purpose of procuring a loan was to be regarded as the agent of the borrower or the lender. Held (by a divided court) the latter); Staats v. Pioneer Ins. Ass'n, 55 Wash. 51 (similar question where insurance was applied for); Fair v. Bowen, 127 Mich. 411 (where question was whether a person who wrote to a mortgagee that the mortgagor wished to pay part of a mortgage and get a part release, and asking the mortgagee to send on such a release, was to be deemed the agent of the mortgagee or of the mortgagor, so as to locate the loss of money paid to such person but not paid over to the mortgagee. Held, to be agent of mortgagor); McMultion originally? Who gave him his instructions? Whose interests was he primarily to protect? Who was to pay him? Who could complain of his negligence? Will holding him to be the agent of one party leave the other without a representative present?—these and similar inquiries may throw light upon the situation.

len v. People's Savings & L. Ass'n, 57 Minn. 33 (where the question was whether a bank to which a debtor requested the creditor to send his claim for payment, was to be regarded as the agent of the debtor or the creditor. Held, the former.); De Turck v. Matz, 180 Pa. 347 (where the question was whether the general financial agent of another, having embezzled his principal's funds and being desirous of covering his shortage, and endeavoring to obtain a mortgage for that purpose under the guise of a loan of his principal's money to a borrower, was to be regarded as the agent of his general principal or of this borrower, so as to charge one or the other of them with the consequences of his fraud in trying to get the mortgage without actually advancing any money upon it. Held, that he was the agent of his general principal).

See also, Blaney v. Rogers, 174 Mass. 277; Polhemus v. Trust Co., 59 N. J. Eq. 93; Schroeder Lumber Co. v. Stearns, 122 Wis. 503.

In Moore v. Blackburn, 67 Wash. 117, where the question was whether a broker to secure a loan was the agent of the borrower or the lender, the court said the question was to be decided by determining under whose direction he was acting, and held him to be the agent of the borrower, relying upon Englemann v. Reuse, 61 Mich. 395; Lipman v. Noblit, 194 Pa. 416; Pepper v. Cairns, 133 Pa. 114, 19 Am. St. R. 625, 7 L. R. A. 750.

In a series of cases in Alabama one who applies to another to procure him a loan and promises to pay him a commission for taking the application, conducting the correspondence, making abstract of title, and securing and paying over the money, is held to be the principal of the agent, so as to charge the borrower with the loss if the agent fails to pay over the money to the borrower when received by the agent from the lender. Hamil v. American Freehold Land Mortgage Co., 127 Ala. 90; Land Mtg. Co. v. Preston, 119 Ala. 290; American Mtg. Co. v. King, 105 Ala. 358; Edinburgh-Am. Mtg. Co. v. Peoples, 102 Ala. 241; George v. New England Mtg. Co., 109 Ala. 548. Same effect: Owings v. Howington, 31 Okla. 651. See also, Fatta v. Edgerton, 143 App. Div. 658.

In Morris McGraw Woodenware Co. v. German Fire Ins. Co., 126 La. 32, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 614, 20 Ann. Cas. 1229, where the question was whether the firm of Rocquet & Co. were to be regarded as the agents of the insurer or the insured, they not being the regular agents of the insurance companies, but an independent firm through whom the parties were brought together, the court said:

"One of the propositions of plaintiff through learned counsel is that the intermediary between an insurance company and a person seeking insurance is the agent of the applicant in procuring the policy, but after the policy has been issued he ceases to be the agent of the assured and becomes the agent of the insurance company for completing the contract, by delivery of the policy and collection of the premium.

"We have found no authority to sustain the position. There is precedent for holding that the local agency was the agent of the insured; to be explicit, that in those instances Rocquet & Co. were the agents of the insured. It looked after the plaintiff's insurance business, as before stated.

In some cases the inferences of fact may be so clear as to justify the court in drawing them.¹² Where more than one inference may reasonably be drawn, the question is usually for the jury.

"In a case where the facts were somewhat similar, that conclusion was arrived at in a lengthy opinion. Stone v. Franklin Insurance Co., 105 N. Y. 543. In another case it was held that the agency acted as a broker and exercised some discretion in selecting the companies. It was the agent of the insured. Dibble v. Northern Assur. Co., 70 Mich. 1, 14 Am. St. Rep. 470.

"The following is directly in point: It is unanswerable, we think. Though a duly appointed agent of an insurance company must, as relates to that company, be regarded as the agent of the insurer, yet as to other companies, as in the case in hand (as to the Rocquet Company) in which he procures insurance for a property owner, he may be considered as the agent of the insured. Smith & Wallace Insurance Co. v. Prussian Mutual Insurance Co., 68 N. J. Law, 674.

"In another decision it was held that one who was intrusted with keeping the property insured became the agent of the insured. Johnson v. North British Insurance Co., 66 Ohio St. 6.

"An insurance agent, to whom a request for insurance is made, and who, acting as broker, procures all or part of such insurance through other agents of companies not represented by him, is the agent of the insured. Parrish v. Rosebud Min. Co., 140 Cal. 635.

"Though, under special circumstances, a broker may be the agent of the insurer, it was decided the mere fact that he receives a commission from the insurer, for placing the insurance with him, does not change his character as agent of the insured. United Firemen's Insurance Co. v. Thomas, 92 Fed. 127, 47 L. R. A. 450; East Texas Fire Insurance Co. v. Brown, 82 Tex. 631; Seamans v. Knapp-Stout & Co., 89 Wis.

171, 27 L. R. A. 362, 46 Am. St. Rep. 825; American Fire Insurance Co. v. Brooks, 83 Md. 822."

Holding the agent to be the agent of the company. Abraham v. North German Ins. Co., 40 Fed. 717; Indiana Ins. Co. v. Hartwell, 123 Ind. 177; Packard v. Dorchester Mut. F. Ins. Co., 77 Me. 144; Hahn v. Guardian Assur. Co., 23 Or. 576, 37 Am. St. R. 709. There are many others.

¹² "Where a debtor delivers money to a third person for the purpose of paying a note which is not due, and of which such third person is not in the possession, the presumption is that the person receiving the money does so not as the agent of the creditor but as the agent of the debtor. This presumption can only be overcome, and the converse established, by evidence to the contrary." Goodyear v. Williams, 73 Kan. 192.

So where the court deems that the facts disclose a case of agency "so conclusive that it is not possible to adopt any other view." Pochin v. Knoebel, 63 Neb. 768.

In Evans v. Pierce, 70 Ill. App. 457, the court approved a peremptory instruction that the registrar of a university to whom was delivered a check for a professor's salary was the agent of the treasurer of the university and not of the professor.

In Payne v. Newcomb, 100 Ill. 611, 39 Am. Rep. 69, where a loan agent was required to investigate the title for the lender and was liable to the lender for any mistake he made in title or in valuation, the court said he was the agent of the lender "beyond all dispute," although he was paid by the borrower alone. See also Figley v. Bradshaw, 35 Neb. 337.

§ 301. ——— Stipulations declaring — Validity — Testimony of parties.—The question, moreover, is one to be determined by the law's methods rather than by the mere stipulations of the parties. It is not uncommon, especially in the case of insurance companies, loan companies, and the like, to insert stipulations in the printed applications that the agent conducting the negotiations shall be deemed to be the agent of the applicant rather than of the company. Stipulations of this sort may sometimes be helpful, but they cannot change the real conditions of things, and if, under all the circumstances, the agent is really the agent of the company, the stipulation that he shall be deemed to be the agent of the other party will be unavailing.¹³ For similar

One who pays a county debt to the deputy county clerk, who has neither duty nor authority to receive it, it being payable to the county treasurer, but who undertakes to receive it, makes the deputy his agent to pay it to the treasurer, and he must lose if the deputy misappropriates it. Knox Co. v. Goggin, 105 Mo. 182.

Where the defendant, seeking a loan from a building association, borrowed instead from its agent S, giving him notes and a deed, with the understanding that S should endeavor later to secure a loan from the association, it was held that there was no authority to S to mortgage to the association and receive the money for the defendant; but that the defendant had contemplated getting the money in his own name to pay his notes and redeem the land from S. American Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Warren, — Ark. —, 141 S. W. 765.

Actual agency is not terminated by the agent's deception, whereby he made the plaintiff think he was a fellow purchaser, so the real principal is liable for his misrepresentations as to the quality of the land. Wicks v. German Loan & Investment Co., 150 Iowa, 112.

¹³ Thus in Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pappan, — Okla. —, 128 Pac. 716, where the question was whether certain agents through whom a loan was made were the agents of the lender or the borrower, although the application for the loan undertook to make them the agents of the borrower, the court said:

"The court had the right to examine all the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining whose agents Winne & Winne were, and if, upon a consideration of all the evidence, it appeared that they were the agents of the company to pay the money to Pappan, then it was proper for the court to cancel the mortgage, notwithstanding the instruments purporting to make Winne and Winne Pappan's agents to receive the money. No case has been cited opposing this doctrine. The cases of McLean v. Ficke, 94 Iowa, 283; Larson v. Lombard Investment Co., 51 Minn. 141; Jensen v. Lewis Investment Co., 39 Neb. 371; Olmstead v. New England Mtg. Sec. Co., 11 Neb. 487; New England Mtg. Sec. Co. v. Addison, 15 Neb. 335; Banks v. Flint, 54 Ark. 40, 10 L. R. A. 459; Travelers' Insurance Co. v. Jones, 16 Colo. 515; Bates v. American Mtg. Co., 37 S. C. 88, 21 L. R. A. 340; State v. Bristol Savings Bank, 108 Ala. 3, 54 Am. St. Rep. 141—sustain the rule applied here."

reasons, the testimony of the principal or the agent is not conclusive. The jury may find that the agent was the agent of one party although he may testify that he was agent of the other.¹⁴

The medical examiner of a life insurance company is the agent of the company in making the examination and writing down the answers, and a stipulation in the application that he shall be deemed the agent of the applicant is unavailing. Sternaman v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 170 N. Y. 13, 88 Am. St. R. 625, 57 L. R. A. 318.

So of the soliciting agent of the insurance company. Clark v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 40 N. H. 333, 77 Am. Dec. 721, and note collecting the earlier cases.

So in the case of an investment company (Larson v. Lombard In- vestment Co., 51 Minn. 141; Jensen v. Lewis Inv. Co., 39 Neb. 371) and of a loan company (McLean v. Ficke, 94 Iowa, 283; State v. Bristol Savings Bank, 108 Ala. 3, 54 Am. St. Rep. 141).

The cases upon this subject are too numerous to cite exhaustively. But where such a stipulation is as much in keeping with the facts as the opposite inference, the court will not disregard it. Detwilder v. Heckenlaible, 63 Kan. 627.

¹⁴ State v. Bristol Savings Bank, supra; Stuart v. Asher, 15 Colo. App. 403.

CHAPTER VI

OF THE APPOINTMENT OF AGENTS BY OTHER AGENTS, AND HEREIN OF DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY

§ 302. In general—What here included.

303. Same subject.

I. OF DELEGATION BY THE AGENT

304. What included here.

305. Delegatus non potest delegari.

306. The general rule.

307, 308. Judgment and discretion not to be delegated.

309. Attorneys may not delegate personal undertaking.

310. Arbitrators may not delegate their duties.

311. Auctioneers, brokers and factors may not delegate.

312. Executors, etc., may not delegate.

313. Same rule applies to municipal corporations and officers.

314. Exceptions and modifications.

315. I. Subagent may be employed to perform acts which are mechanical or ministerial merely.

316, 317. II. When the proper conduct of the business demands it.

318. III. When justified by usage or course of trade.

319. IV. When originally contemplated.

320. V. When necessity or emergency requires it.

321. — Assistants employed by servants.

322. VI. Ratification of unauthorized employment.

323. Care required in making authorized appointment.

324. Re-delegation — Subdelegation.

325. What the delegate may be.

326-329. Whose agent, etc., is the subagent.

330, 331. Is there privity between principal and subagent.

332. Effect of employment—Subagent is principal's agent, etc., if employment was authorized.

333. — But he is agent's agent, etc., in other case.

II. OF AUTHORITY OF AN AGENT TO EMPLOY AGENTS, SERVANTS AND OTHERS FOR HIS PRINCIPAL

334. Agents generally have no such power.

335. Servants usually have no such authority.

336. Independent contractors have usually no such authority.

337. Authority to appoint may be expressly conferred.

338. Authority to employ may arise by implication.

339. Sudden emergency or special necessity may justify it.

340. — Authority so arising is a narrow one.

341. — Employment of physicians and surgeons in emergencies.

342. Privity between principal and persons thus employed.

§ 302. In general.—As has already been seen, the appointment and authorization of agents, in the sense in which those terms are used in this work, result only from some act or omission of the principal.

No one can, in general, appoint agents for him, except the principal himself or some one who acts by his authority, express or implied. Authority to appoint agents for him, or to employ servants, contractors, and others, may, however, be given by the principal to some one else, as agent for this purpose for him, and this may be done either expressly or by implication. The question to be discussed here is, when has one agent express or implied authority to appoint other agents or servants or contractors for his principal.

This question will, upon consideration, be seen to involve two aspects: I. The authority of an agent to employ some one else to do the very act, or some portion of the very act, which he was originally authorized to do; and II. The authority of one agent to appoint others or to employ other persons to do some other act or acts for his principal.

The first of these acts may take on either of two aspects. The agent may be permitted to put some one else in his place—a substitute—and get out of the transaction entirely, which may perhaps be called substitution; or he may be permitted to have some one under him—a subordinate—either as his agent or as his principal's agent, which may then be called delegation. As matter of fact, the latter term is constantly applied to both situations.

The second is a different question, namely, an authority to appoint other agents for other purposes, either generally or specially. Both will be considered in the present chapter, and in the order named.

§ 303. — It will also be observed that in the cases in which the agent is to appoint a substitute and retire, other considerations may be involved. If he retires, does the substitute step into the agent's existing obligations, or does he simply assume new ones on his own account? If the former, there may be the ordinary novation; if the latter, there needs to be a new arrangement with the substitute and, perhaps, a release of the agent from the obligations of the old one. If the latter be the situation, then the consent to the substitution will involve (1) an authority to appoint a new agent for the principal, and (2) a release of the old agent from any further obligation. If it be the ordinary novation, there is no difficulty about the consideration. If it be merely a new appointment, plus the release of the agent, what is the consideration for the release? If the agent procures the acceptance of the new appointment as a consideration for the release, there is no difficulty. If the new appointee accepts the appointment only upon condition that the old agent be released there is probably in most states a consideration. The transaction may possibly take on such a form as to show no consideration. This latter kind of novation is called delegation in the civil law.¹

With this much of explanation, perhaps, there will be no difficulty experienced in accepting the common nomenclature, and treating the whole matter under the generic title of delegation.

I.

OF DELEGATION BY THE AGENT.

§ 304. What here included.—In dealing with the question of delegation by the agent it is necessary, as has already been suggested, to distinguish two different situations which are sometimes very distinct and sometimes more or less similar. One is the power which an agent may have to appoint other agents for his principal, and the other is his power to appoint sub-agents. An agent may have power, either expressly or by implication, to appoint other agents for his principal, and this may, perhaps, be his only power. Such agents are not necessarily in any respect sub-agents, they need not exercise all or any part of the power of the appointing agent, but may be appointed to do acts which he has no power at all to do. In appointing them, he may be, not delegating his authority, but exercising it, and, perhaps, exhausting it in the exercise. Such appointment is not the delegation here involved.

In the other case, what the agent is attempting to do is to pass his own authority on to some one else either wholly or in part, and with or without retiring on his own part—endeavoring to make a substitution partially or completely; or, if he is not making a substitution, he is procuring assistance in the exercise of the power conferred upon him. These two acts may be more or less unlike—to get a substitute to do the act may be one thing; to get an assistant to aid in doing the act may be another. They are alike in this, that, whether a substitute or an assistant, the person employed is exercising a part or all of the authority originally conferred upon the agent who appointed him.

There may also be a combination of the two kinds of powers. Thus an agent may be sent out to collect a claim himself if he can, and, if he cannot, to appoint an attorney to collect it; or to do all that a layman may do in a given transaction and to engage an attorney to do the professional part of it.

What is here to be dealt with under the head of delegation is the power of an agent to appoint a substitute to do all, or to appoint an assistant to do part of that which he was authorized to do.

¹ See Stewart v. Campbell, 58 Me. Enc. of Law (1st Ed.) p. 876; Cas-439, 4 Am. Rep. 296, 16 Am. & Eng. well v. Fellows, 110 Mass. 52.

§ 305. Delegatus non potest delegari.—The selection of an agent in any particular case is made, as a rule, because he is supposed by his principal to have some fitness for the performance of the duties to be undertaken. In certain cases his selection is owing to the fact that he is considered to be especially and particularly fit. The undertaking demands judgment and discretion, which he is supposed to possess; or it requires the skill and learning of an expert, which he assumes to be; or personal force and influence are desirable, and these the agent is thought to be able to exercise, or honesty or even financial responsibility is relied upon, and this the agent selected is supposed to possess. Here is the delectus personæ, and it is obvious that unless the principal has expressly or impliedly consented to the employment of a substitute, the agent owes to the principal the duty of a personal discharge of the trust.

§ 306. General rule.—Hence it is the general rule of the law that in the absence of any authority, either express or implied, to employ a subagent, the trust committed to the agent is presumed to be exclusively personal and cannot be delegated by him to another so as to affect the rights of the principal.² Putting it into more specific form, an agent generally has no implied authority either to put a substitute in his place or to employ assistants on his principal's account.

² Appleton Bank v. McGilvray, 4 Gray (Mass.), 518, 64 Am. Dec. 92; McCormick v. Bush, 38 Tex. 314; White v. Davidson, 8 Md. 169, 63 Am. Dec. 699; Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485, 37 Am. Dec. 271; Wright v. Boynton, 37 N. H. 9, 72 Am. Dec. 319; Smith v. Sublett, 28 Tex. 163; Stoughton v. Baker, 4 Mass. 522, 3 Am. Dec. 236; Lynn v. Burgoyne, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 400; Loomis v. Simpson, 13 Iowa, 532; Connor v. Parker, 114 Mass. 331; Gillis v. Bailey, 21 N. H. 149; Furnas v. Frankman, 6 Neb. 429; Haralson v. Stein, 50 Ala. 347; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. DeJarnett, 111 Ala. 248; Bromley v. Aday, 70 Ark. 351; North American Trust Co. v. Chappell, 70 Ark. 507; Harris v. San Diego Flume Co., 87 Cal. 526; Dingley v. McDonald, 124 Cal. 682; National Cash Register Co. v. Ison, 94 Ga. 463; Fudge v. Seckner Contracting Co., 80 Ill. App. 35; Ruthven v. American Fire Ins. Co., 92 Iowa, 316; Floyd v. Mackey, 112 Ky. 646, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2030; Plummer v. Green, 49 Neb. 316; Carroll v. Tucker, 2 N. Y. Misc. 397; Fargo v. Cravens, 9 S. Dak. 646; Tynan v. Dullnig (Tex. Civ. App.), 25 S. W. 465; Smith v. Lowther, 35 W. Va. 300; Rohrbough v. United States Exp. Co., 50 W. Va. 148; McKinnon v. Vollmar, 75 Wis. 82, 17 Am. St. Rep. 178, 6 L. R. A. 121; Kohl v. Beach, 107 Wis. 409, 50 L. R. A. 600. "One who has a bare power of authority from another to do any act, must execute it himself, and cannot delegate it to a stranger; for this being a trust or confidence reposed in him personally, it cannot be assigned to one whose integrity or ability may not be known to the principal, and who, if he were known, might not be selected by him for such a purpose. The authority is exclusively personal unless from the ex-

The principal may, of course, expressly authorize the appointment of subagents, the delegation of the authority or the substitution of another in the place of the agent named; and formal powers of attorney quite frequently expressly confer "full power of substitution and revocation," and in terms confirm whatever the attorney named "or his substitute" may lawfully do in the premises.³

The general rule is, also, as will be seen, subject to be modified by the peculiar circumstances and necessities of each particular case, from which or from the usage of trade, a power to delegate the authority may be inferred;⁴ but in the absence of such express authority or such circumstances the general rule is fixed, imperative and inflexible, resting upon ample foundation and constantly enforced by the courts.

The same rule applies to a servant as to an agent. That is to say, a servant ordinarily has no implied power to get someone else to do the work or to employ co-servants, sub-servants, or assistant servants, on his master's account.⁵

The rule, however, is ordinarily one for the protection of the principal only, and if he is satisfied with the performance third persons cannot object.⁶

It must also be kept in mind that there is no delegation where the act is so done in the presence and by the direction or consent of a party as to constitute in law his own act.⁷

§ 307. Judgment and discretion not to be delegated.—The reasons for this rule are particularly applicable (though not confined) to those cases where the performance of the agency requires, upon the part of the agent, the exercise of special skill, judgment or dis-press language used or from the fair presumptions growing out of the particular transaction a broader power was intended to be conferred." Bell, J., in Wright v. Boynton, supra.

³ As in Peries v. Aycinena, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 64; Hoag v. Graves, 81 Mich. 628; Lockwood v. Abdy, 14 Simons, 437. And many others.

⁴ See post, § 314, et seq.

⁵ Gwilliam v. Twist, [1895] 2 Q. B. 84; Engelhart v. Farrant, [1897] 1 Q. B. 240; Harris v. Fiat Motors, 22 Times L. Rep. 556; James v. Muehleback, 34 Mo. App. 512; Cooper v. Lowery, 4 Ga. App. 120; Board of Trade Building Co. v. Cralle, 109 Va. 246, 132 Am. St. R. 917, 22 L. R. A.

(N. S.) 297; St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Jones, 96 Ark. 558, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 418; Hot Springs Railroad Co. v. Dial, 58 Ark. 318; Vassor v. Atlantic Coast Line, 142 N. C. 68, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 950, 9 Ann. Cas. 535; Church v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 50 Minn. 218, 16 L. R. A. 861; Cooper v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 136 Ind. 366; Eaton v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 382, 15 Am. Rep. 513. See also 3 Michigan Law Review, 198.

See also post, § 325. In cases of emergency, see post, § 320.

⁶ See Peterson v. Christensen, 26 Minn. 377; Harralson v. Stein, 50 Ala. 347.

⁷ See ante, § 208.

cretion. Such relations are obviously created because the principal places special confidence in the particular agent selected, and, there is abundant reason why the trust should not be transferred to another of whose fitness or capacity the principal may have no knowledge, without the latter's express consent.⁸

Thus where an agent had been entrusted with the general administration of the affairs of a trading company, but no power to substitute others in his place had been given him, it was held that no such power could be implied, because there was evidently a confidence reposed in him which the company might not be willing to repose in others.⁹ And so where one was appointed general agent to conduct the sale of subscription books in a certain territory under circumstances showing that the principal "depended upon the experience, skill and energy, as well as the resources and facilities of the general agent," it was held that his powers and duties could not be assigned or delegated without the principal's consent.¹⁰ For the same reasons the agent who has been given the important power to bind his principal by the execution of promissory notes,¹¹ or to settle disputed claims,¹² or to adjust losses by fire,¹³ or to loan money¹⁴ or receive or collect money¹⁵ cannot delegate the power to a subagent.

⁸ Emerson v. Providence Hat Co., 12 Mass. 237, 7 Am. Dec. 66; Paul v. Edwards, 1 Mo. 30; Lewis v. Ingersoll, 3 Abb. (N. Y.) App. Dec. 55; Sayre v. Nichols, 7 Cal. 535, 68 Am. Dec. 280; Commercial Bank v. Norton, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 501; Dorchester, etc., Bank v. New England Bank, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 177; Planters, etc., Bank v. First National Bank, 75 N. C. 534; Pendall v. Rench, 4 McLean (U. S. C. C.) 259; Titus v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 46 N. J. L. 393; North American Trust Co. v. Chappell, 70 Ark. 507; Plummer v. Green, 49 Neb. 316; McConnell v. Mackin, 22 N. Y. App. Div. 537; Carroll v. Tucker, 2 N. Y. Misc. 397; Smith v. Lowther, 35 W. Va. 300; Tynan v. Dullnig (Tex. Civ. App.), 25 S. W. 465; Kohl v. Beach, 107 Wis. 409, 50 L. R. A. 600; Rohrbough v. U. S. Exp. Co., 50 W. Va. 148.

⁹ Emerson v. Providence Hat Co., supra.

¹⁰ Bancroft v. Scribner, 72 Fed. 988.

¹¹ Emerson v. Providence Hat Co., supra; Brewster v. Hobart, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 302.

¹² Fargo v. Cravens, 9 S. D. 646.

¹³ Ruthven v. American Fire Ins. Co., 92 Iowa, 316.

¹⁴ Kohl v. Beach, 107 Wis. 409, 50 L. R. A. 600.

¹⁵ People v. Public Serv. Com., 143 N. Y. App. Div. 769; McConnell v. Mackin, 22 N. Y. App. Div. 537; Dingley v. McDonald, 124 Cal. 682; Lewis v. Ingersoll, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 347; Yates v. Freckleton, 2 Doug. 623; though the authority may be so restricted as to amount to no more than a power to do a merely mechanical act, in which event the rule would not apply. Grinnell v. Buchanan, 1 Daly (N. Y.), 538; Fellows v. Northrup, 39 N. Y. 117; Dunlap v. De Murrieta & Co., 3 T. L. R. 166.

Same rule applies to an agent authorized to locate land (Smith v. Suvlett, 28 Tex. 163); and to an agent authorized to keep his principal's property insured and to make con-

§ 308. — A bailment of personal property to an agent with duty to deliver it,¹⁶ or an authority to sell it¹⁷ also creates a personal trust which cannot be delegated. And so does authority to sell real estate.¹⁸ So where an agent had been authorized to sell real estate, but in his absence and without his knowledge, the land was sold by one falsely assuming to be a subagent, it was held that the sale was binding neither upon the principal nor the agent, as the principal was entitled to the judgment and discretion of the agent in making the sale.¹⁹ For similar reasons, authority to lease real estate cannot be delegated.²⁰

For similar reasons also, the important duties confided to the agent of an insurance company of passing upon risks, accepting applications, making contracts of insurance, cancelling or consenting to the surrender of policies and the like fall within the rule against delegation.²¹ The agent of a casualty or surety company is within the same rule.²²

Within the same principle, also, it is thought by some courts, is the case of the stockholder in a corporation who undertakes, through the form of a "voting trust," or otherwise, to surrender the discretionary power and duty resting upon him to vote for the best interests of the corporation.²³ tracts of insurance, accept policies, etc. (New v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 171 Ind. 33, 131 Am. St. Rep. 245).

¹⁶ Murray v. Postal Tel. Co., 210 Mass. 188, 24 Ann. Cas. 1183, where a dressmaker delivered to a particular messenger of defendant in whom she had confidence, valuable gowns for delivery, and he without her knowledge or consent turned them over to another messenger to deliver.

¹⁷ Hunt v. Douglass, 22 Vt. 128; Drum v. Harrison, 83 Ala. 384; Hodgkinson v. McNeal Co., 161 Mo. App. 87.

¹⁸ Floyd v. Mackey, 112 Ky. 646, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2030; Bromley v. Aday, 70 Ark. 351; Williams v. Moore, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 402; Carroll v. Tucker, 2 N. Y. Misc. 397; Bonwell v. Howes, 15 Daly (N. Y.), 43; Bock v. Pavey, 8 Ohio St. 270; Foss Investment Co. v. Ater, 49 Wash. 446; Craver v. House, 138 Mo. App. 251; Chouteau Land Co. v. Chrisman, 204 Mo. 371; Kilpatrick v. Wiley, 197 Mo. 123; Groscup v. Downey, 105 Md. 273; Lynn v. Burgoyne, 52 Ky. (13 B. Mon.) 400; Doggett v. Greene, 254 Ill. 134.

¹⁹ Barret v. Rhem, 6 Bush (Ky.), 466.

²⁰ Fairchild v. King, 102 Cal. 320.

²¹ But see the cases cited post, § 317.

Within the same rule is the agent to keep his principal's property insured in reliable companies. Ins. Co. of No. Am. v. Wis. Cent. Ry. Co., 134 Fed. 794.

²² Cullinan v. Bowker, 180 N. Y. 93.

²³ See Shepaug Voting Trust Cases, 60 Conn. 553; Harvey v. Linville Improvement Co., 118 N. C. 693, 54 Am. St. R. 749, 32 L. R. A. 265; Bridgers v. First Nat. Bank, 152 N. C. 293; Morel v. Hoge, 130 Ga. 625, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1136, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 935; Warren v. Pim, 66 N. J. Eq. 353. Compare Smith v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 115 Cal. 584, 56

§ 309. Attorneys may not delegate personal undertaking.—The appointment of an attorney to argue or conduct a cause, compromise a dispute, or enforce a claim, creates a personal trust, and he can not entrust the performance of this duty to another attorney of his own selection, or let the case out on shares, or in any other wise delegate the performance, without the consent of his principal.²⁴

This rule, however, does not demand that the attorney shall perform, in person, all of the merely mechanical or ministerial work involved in the case, and he may avail himself of as much assistance of that nature as occasion may require. As will be seen in a subsequent section, the performance of such duties through the agency of others falls under a well recognized exception to the general rule.²⁵

§ 310. Arbitrators may not delegate their powers.—This rule also applies with special force to arbitrators. They are selected by parties who have placed particular confidence in their personal judgment, discretion and ability, and it would be a palpable injustice if they were to be permitted to delegate their responsibilities and powers to others.²⁶

Am. St. R. 119, 35 L. R. A. 309; Faulds v. Yates, 57 Ill. 416, 11 Am. Rep. 24; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas, 98 Ala. 92; Brightman v. Bates, 175 Mass. 105; Carnegie Trust Co. v. Security L. Ins. Co., 111 Va. 1, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186; Boyer v. Nesbitt, 227 Pa. 398. There are many other cases on both sides.

²⁴ Johnson v. Cunningham, 1 Ala. 249; Eggleston v. Boardman, 37 Mich. 14; Crotty v. Eagle, 35 W. Va. 143; Hilton v. Crooker, 30 Neb. 707; National Bank v. Oldtown Bank, 112 Fed. 726; Sloan v. Williams, 138 Ill. 43, 12 L. R. A. 496; City of New York v. Dubois, 86 Fed. 889; Meaney v. Rosenberg, 32 N. Y. Misc. 96; Reese v. Resburgh, 54 N. Y. App. Div. 378; Lucas v. Rader, 29 Ind. App. 287; Sedgwick v. Bliss, 23 Neb. 617; Dickson v. Wright, 52 Miss. 585; Danley v. Crawl, 28 Ark. 95; King v. Pope, 28 Ala. 601; Ratcliff v. Baird, 14 Tex. 43; Johnston v. Baca, 13 New Mex. 338; Corson v. Lewis, 77 Neb. 446; Lacher v. Gordon, 127 App. Div. 140.

If he does so, the client may declare the contract at an end, and recover whatever he has given for the services. Hilton v. Crooker, supra.

The client may, however, ratify it with full knowledge of the facts. Reese v. Resburgh, supra.

As will be seen in the chapter upon Attorneys the attorney has no implied power to employ assistant counsel at his clients' expense. See also Chicago & So. Traction Co. v. Flaherty, 222 Ill. 67; Emblem v. Bicksler, 34 Colo. 496; Lathrop v. Hallett, 20 Colo. App. 207.

An attorney has no implied power to delegate to another his authority to receive and collect for the benefit of his client the amount due upon a judgment recovered. Mo., etc., Ry. Co. v. Wright, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 458; Dickson v. Wright, supra; Hendry v. Benlisa, 37 Fla. 609, 34 L. R. A. 283.

²⁵ See post, § 315; Eggleston v. Boardman, supra; Covell v. Hart, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 252.

An attorney has authority to get another to appear for him in the cause, and such an appearance is conclusive upon the client. Reich v. Cochran, 105 App. Div. 542, 102 N. Y. Supp. 827, aff'd, no opinion, 139 App. Div. 931.

²⁶ Harley Co. v. Barnefield, 22 R. I. 267; Allen-Bradley Co. v. Anderson,

But it is entirely proper for arbitrators, in a case requiring it, to obtain from disinterested persons of acknowledged skill such information and advice in reference to technical questions submitted to them, as may be necessary to enable them to come to correct conclusions, provided that the award is the result of their own judgment after obtaining such information.²⁷ They may also avail themselves of such mechanical or ministerial assistance as the nature of their duties may require.²⁸

§ 311. Auctioneers, brokers and factors may not delegate.—As will be seen also when these various forms of agency are taken up, the same rule applies to auctioneers,²⁹ brokers³⁰ and factors,³¹ who are forbidden to delegate without the principal's consent the powers confided to them not merely mechanical or ministerial.

§ 312. Executors, etc., may not delegate personal trusts.—This principle is, likewise, of frequent application to the case of persons upon whom the law has devolved discretionary or fiduciary powers, such as executors, administrators, guardians and public trustees. Such powers cannot be delegated without express authority.³²

§ 313. Rule applies to public and private corporations and officers. The same rule applies to the powers and duties conferred upon municipal corporations and municipal officers. Purely administrative or ministerial powers may be delegated, but wherever judgment and dis-

etc., Co., 99 Ky. 311; Williamson v. North Pacific Lumber Co., 43 Or. 337; Blakeston v. Wilson, 14 Man. 271; Lingood v. Eade, 2 Atk. 501; Proctor v. Williams, 8 C. B. (N. S.) 386; Whitmore v. Smith, 5 H. & N. 824; Little v. Newton, 2 Scott N. R. 509.

Arbitrators have no inherent power to select an umpire unless they are authorized by the terms of the submission. Allen-Bradley Co. v. Anderson, etc., Co., supra.

²⁷ Harley Co. v. Barnefield, supra; Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474; Caledonian Ry. Co. v. Lockhart, 3 Macq. 808; Anderson v. Wallace, 3 Cl. & Fin. 26; Eads v. Williams, 4 DeGex, Mac. & Gor. 674.

²⁸ Thorp v. Cole, 2 Cr. M. & R. 367; Harvey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455; Moore v. Barnett, 17 Ind. 349.

²⁹ See post, Book V, Chapter on Auctioneers.

³⁰ See post, Book V, Chapter on Brokers.

³¹ See post, Book V, Chapter on Factors.

³² Berger v. Duff, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 369; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 89; Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485, 37 Am. Dec. 271; Hicks v. Dorn, 42 N. Y. 51; St. Peter v. Denison, 58 N. Y. 421; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 190; Merrill v. Farmers, etc., Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.), 300; Terrell v. McCown, 91 Tex. 231; Whitlock v. Washburn, 62 Hun (N. Y.), 369; Gates v. Dudgeon, 173 N. Y. 426, 93 Am. St. Rep. 608; The California, 1 Sawyer, 596; White v. Davidson, 8 Md. 169, 63 Am. Dec. 699; Stoughton v. Baker, 4 Mass. 522, 3 Am. Dec. 236; Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645; Williamson v. Robinson, 134 Iowa, 345; Levara v. McNeny, 5 Neb. (Unoff.) 318; Rice v. Conwill, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 341; Dyer v. Winston, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 412.

cretion are to be exercised,—where legislative powers are involved, where rates are to be fixed, policies determined, and the like—there the body or officer entrusted with the duty must exercise it; it cannot be delegated or farmed out.³³

It also applies to the directors and officers of private corporations. For while the directors may, of course, employ all necessary agents, and may appoint committees to look after matters of administration, they may not delegate to others the general duty of management and control which has been confided to their judgment and discretion.

§ 314. Exceptions and modifications.—But the general rule above given of course gives way before an express power of delegation or substitution; and it is also subject, as has been stated, to certain exceptions and modifications growing out of the nature of the authority or the exigencies and necessities of the case, or based upon the custom and usage of trade in similar cases. Thus—

§ 315. I. Subagent may be employed to perform acts mechanical or ministerial merely.—Where in the execution of the authority an act is to be performed which is of a purely mechanical, ministerial or

³³ State v. Hauser, 63 Ind. 155; State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194; Bird-sall v. Clark, 73 N. Y. 73, 29 Am. Rep. 105; Brooklyn v. Breslin, 57 N. Y. 591; Matthews v. Alexandria, 68 Mo. 115, 30 Am. Rep. 776; Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 41 Mich. 453; Clark v. Washington, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 40, 6 L. Ed. 544; Thompson v. Schermerhorn, 6 N. Y. 92; Davis v. Read, 65 N. Y. 566; Supervisors v. Brush, 77 Ill. 59; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 178 Ill. 571, affirmed 180 U. S. 624; Thomson v. Boonville, 61 Mo. 282; State v. Fiske, 9 R. I. 94; State v. Paterson, 34 N. J. L. 168; Hydes v. Joyes, 4 Bush. (Ky.) 464; Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540; Galindo v. Walter, 8 Cal. App. 234, 96 Pac. 505; Ex parte, Grey, 11 Cal. App. 125, 104 Pac. 476; Whyte v. Nashville, 2 Swan (Tenn.), 364; Lord v. Oconto, 47 Wis. 386; Lauenstein v. Fond du Lac, 28 Wis. 336; Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gas Co., 66 Ind. 396; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; Meuser v. Risdon, 36 Cal. 239; Darling v. St. Paul, 19 Minn. 389; St. Louis v. Clemens, 43 Mo. 395, s. c. 52 Mo. 133; State v. Garibaldi, 44 La. Ann. 809; Blair v. Waco, 75 Fed. 800; People v. McWethy, 177 Ill. 334; Zanesville v. Zanesville Telephone & Tel. Co., 63 Ohio St. 442; McCrowell v. Bristol, 89 Va. 652; Knight v. Eureka, 123 Cal. 192; State v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass'n, 59 N. J. L. 110; Harcourt v. Common Council, 62 N. J. L. 158; Lyth v. Buffalo, 48 Hun (N. Y.), 175; Trenton v. Clayton, 50 Mo. App. 535; Edwards v. Kirkwood, 147 Mo. App. 599; Ramsey v. Field, 115 Mo. App. 620; Seibel-Suessdorf, etc., Co. v. Manufacturers' Ry. Co., 230 Mo. 59; Curran Co. v. Denver, 47 Colo. 221, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 544; Brummitt v. Ogden Water Works Co., 33 Utah, 285; Tilford v. Belknap, 126 Ky. 244, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 708; Bowling Green v. Gaines, 29 Ky. L. 1013, 96 S. W. 852; Biddeford v. Yates, 104 Me. 506, 15 Ann. Cas. 1091; Mayor of Baltimore v. Gahan, 104 Md. 145; State ex rel. Thurmond v. City of Shreveport, 124 La. 178; Allman v. City of Mobile, 162 Ala. 226.

executive nature, involving no elements of judgment, discretion or personal skill, the reason for the general rule does not apply, and the power to entrust the performance of it to a subagent may be implied.³⁴

Thus an agent empowered to execute a promissory note,³⁵ or to bind his principal by an accommodation acceptance,³⁶ or to sign his name to a subscription agreement,³⁷ or to execute a deed,³⁸ having himself first determined upon the propriety of the act, may direct another to perform the mechanical act of writing the note or signing the acceptance, subscription or deed, and the act so performed will be binding upon the principal.

So an agent authorized to sell real estate, who exercises his own discretion as to the price and the terms, may employ a subagent to look up a purchaser,³⁹ or to point out the land to one contemplating a purchase.⁴⁰

³⁴ Williams v. Woods, 16 Md. 220; Chouteau Land Co. v. Chrisman, 204 Mo. 371; Grinnell v. Buchanan, 1 Daly (N. Y.), 538; Eldridge v. Holway, 18 Ill. 445; Joor v. Sullivan, 5 La. Ann. 177; Grady v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 60 Mo. 116; Newell v. Smith, 49 Vt. 255; Lord v. Hall, 8 C. B. 627.

In Michael v. Crawford, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 150 S. W. 465, a deed of trust to secure notes provided that if the trustee named in the deed refused to act, any holder of the notes might appoint one. This contingency happened, and the holder appointed an agent who appointed a substitute trustee. The court thought that because the power was originally conferred upon any holder, who might be a wholly unknown person, it could not have been thought that any personal trust or confidence entered into the case, and that therefore the power might be delegated.

Where the act is a signing or writing for the agent in his presence and at his request, there is really no question of delegation, and the act is regarded as the personal act of the agent. Calhoon v. Buhre, 75 N. J. L. 439; Worsley v. Ayres, 144 Iowa, 676; White-Wilson-Drew Co. v. Egelhoff, 96 Ark. 105.

³⁵ Sayre v. Nichols, 7 Cal. 535, 68 Am. Dec. 280; Lord v. Hall, supra; Weaver v. Carnall, 35 Ark. 198, 37 Am. Rep. 22; White-Wilson-Drew Co. v. Egelhoff, 96 Ark. 105.

³⁶ Commercial Bank v. Norton, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 501.

³⁷ Norwich University v. Denny, 47 Vt. 13; or to an advertising contract, Calhoon v. Buhre, 75 N. J. L. 439.

³⁸ Smith v. Swan, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 115.

³⁹ Renwick v. Bancroft, 56 Iowa, 527 (in which the court thought that a subagent employed to sell land to a responsible buyer upon terms entirely set by the agent furnished was but the instrumentality through which the agent accomplished his service and therefore held that his appointment was proper and this contract which he negotiated binding upon his principal); or to sign the principal's name to a particular contract (Worsley v. Ayres, 144 Iowa, 676); or to collect rent and if payment was refused to demand possession (McCroskey v. Hamilton, 108 Ga. 640, 75 Am. St. R. 79).

⁴⁰ McKinnon v. Vollmar, 75 Wis. 82, 17 Am. St. Rep. 178, 6 L. R. A. 121 (in which the act of the agent's clerk when he was sent to point out the land to be sold, in showing

So, in a different field, a city council having power to adopt ordinances may adopt a code compiled by the city attorney. "The adoption, not the compilation, was the legislative act."⁴¹

§ 316. II. When the proper conduct of the business requires it.—It is obvious, too, that notwithstanding the general rule, there are many cases wherein from the very nature of the duty, or the circumstances under which it is to be performed, the employment of subagents is imperatively necessary, and the principal's interests will suffer if they are not so employed. In such cases, although the general rule might otherwise apply, an exception is suggested based upon the presumed assent of the principal, and therefore if he has not manifested a contrary intent, the power to employ the necessary subagents will be implied.⁴² The authority of the agent is always construed to include the necessary and usual means to execute it properly.

Thus if a note be sent to a bank for collection, and for the protection of the principal it becomes necessary to have the note protested, the authority of the bank to employ the proper officer will be implied;⁴³ and so if a note or draft be sent to a bank or other agent,⁴⁴ to be collected at a distant point, the authority of the bank or other agent to employ a subagent at the place of collection, and to forward the note or draft to him there, would be presumed.⁴⁵

So an agent employed to collect a demand by suit or to do any other act requiring the services of a lawyer, would have implied power to wrong land to the purchaser was held the act of the principal upon the ground that the duty of showing the land was a merely ministerial act and therefore properly delegated).

⁴¹ Western, etc., R. Co. v. Young, 83 Ga. 512; Garrett v. Janes, 65 Md. 260.

⁴² DeBussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. Div. 286; Dorchester, etc., Bank v. New England Bank, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 177; Johnson v. Cunningham, 1 Ala. 249; Rossiter v. Trafalgar Life Assur. Ass'n, 27 Beavan, 377; Appleton Bank v. McGilvray, 4 Gray (Mass.), 518, 64 Am. Dec. 92; McCroskey v. Hamilton, 108 Ga. 640; Strong v. West, 110 Ga. 382; Luttrell v. Martin, 112 N. C. 593; Kuhnert v. Angell, 10 N. Dak. 59; Breck v. Meeker, 68 Neb. 99; Mc-

Cants v. Wells, 4 S. C. 381; Canfield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 59 Mo. App. 354; Tennessee River Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Rohrbough v. U. S. Express Co., 50 W. Va. 148, 88 Am. St. R. 849; The Guiding Star, 53 Fed. 936.

⁴³ Tiernan v. Commercial Bank, 7 How. (Miss.) 648, 40 Am. Dec. 83; Baldwin v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 La. Ann. 13, 45 Am. Dec. 72; Commercial Bank v. Martin, 1 La. Ann. 344, 45 Am. Dec. 87.

⁴⁴ Breck v. Meeker, 68 Neb. 99.

⁴⁵ Whether the bank or other agent really undertakes to act as an agent merely or rather as an independent contractor is a disputed question. See post, Book IV, Chap. II, where the cases are collected.

employ the necessary attorneys;⁴⁶ or if authorized to sell land⁴⁷ or goods,⁴⁸ to employ a necessary broker or auctioneer where this method was contemplated; or if authorized to charter a vessel, to employ a vessel broker to assist him in securing the charter.⁴⁹

§ 317. — So an agent like the general manager of a mercantile business, or the district agent of an insurance company, given charge of a large territory or of an extensive business in a smaller territory and expected to accomplish results which could not reasonably be demanded of his individual and personal efforts, would ordinarily be deemed to have implied power to appoint such subagents and assistants as the contemplated results reasonably required.⁵⁰ The mechanical and ministerial parts would, of course, be delegable within the rule already considered; but even discretionary portions might also be delegable in such a case upon the ground of an implied authority.

⁴⁶ Commercial Bank v. Martin, supra; Buckland v. Conway, 16 Mass. 396; Davis v. Matthews, 8 S. Dak. 300.

In Strong v. West, 110 Ga. 382, it is said: "If the services of an attorney are necessary to execute the duties of a created agency, the person intrusted with those duties, if not himself an attorney, is invested with the power to procure the services of an attorney for his principal, and * * * the attorney so employed is the attorney of the principal and not of the agent."

⁴⁷ Lee v. Conrad, 140 Iowa, 16; Renwick v. Bancroft, 56 Iowa, 527 (in which it was held that so long as the agent himself fixed the terms of the contract he might employ a subagent to find a purchaser and to make the contract with the purchaser). May employ auctioneer. Union Garment Co. v. Newburgher, 124 La. 819. An agent to buy land would likewise have implied power to employ an attorney "to close the title." Egan v. De Jonge, 113 N. Y. Supp. 737.

⁴⁸ Strong v. Stewart, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137; Harralson v. Stein, 50 Ala. 347. See also McCants v. Wells, 4 S. C. 381.

The rule of course covers the purchase of stocks. See Hoogewerff v. Flack, 101 Md. 371.

⁴⁹ Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431.

⁵⁰ Bodine v. Exchange Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117, 10 Am. Rep. 566; Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co., 125 N. Y. 57, 21 Am. St. R. 721, 10 L. R. A. 609; Deitz v. Ins. Co., 33 W. Va. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 908; Grady v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 60 Mo. 116; Insurance Co. v. Eshelman, 30 Ohio St. 647; Krumm v. Insurance Co., 40 Ohio St. 225; Swan v. Insurance Co., 96 Pa. 37; McGonigle v. Insurance Co., 168 Pa. 1; Insurance Co. v. Thornton, 130 Ala. 222, 55 L. R. A. 547, 89 Am. St. R. 30.

Authority of ordinary local insurance agent to delegate.—In Bodine v. Exchange Ins. Co., supra, it was said: "We know, according to the ordinary course of business that insurance agents frequently have clerks to assist them; and that they could not transact their business if obliged to attend to all the details in person, and these clerks can bind their principals in any of the business which they are authorized to transact. An insurance agent can authorize his clerk to contract for risks, to deliver

For similar reasons an agent whose employment involves the performance of duties at various places may be found to have implied power to employ assistants because of the physical impossibility of his performing in person.⁵¹

And, generally, an agent put in charge of a business or a department of a business which can regularly and properly be carried on only by the employment of assistants and subordinates, would, where no other arrangement is made, have implied power to appoint them.⁵²

The same rules will apply to the appointment of servants as of agents.⁵³ policies, to collect premiums and to take payments of premiums in cash or securities, and to give credit for premiums or to demand cash; and the act of the clerk in all such cases is the act of the agent, and binds the company just as effectually as if it were done by the agent in person." This rule has sometimes been cited as authority for a sort of general power in the ordinary insurance agent to employ clerks who would thereby be vested with all his powers, discretionary as well as mechanical. Such a view is believed to be both unsound and dangerous unless the insurance business is to be put upon a different footing from others. See Waldman v. Insurance Co., 91 Ala. 170, 24 Am. St. R. 883; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. De Jarnett, 111 Ala. 248; distinguished in Insurance Co. v. Thornton, 130 Ala. 222, 55 L. R. A. 547, 89 Am. St. R. 30; Ruthven v. American F. Ins. Co., 92 Iowa, 316. See § 1049 et seq. See also McClure v. Miss. Valley Ins. Co., 4 Mo. App. 148; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman, 127 Ill. 364, 11 Am. St. R. 121 (here there was evidence of ratification.)

⁵¹ The Guiding Star, 53 Fed. 936.

⁵² Breck v. Meeker, 68 Neb. 99; Tennessee River Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Luttrell v. Martin, 112 N. C. 593; Canfield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 59 Mo. App. 354; McCroskey v. Hamilton, 108

Ga. 640; Williams v. Moore, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 402; Ladonia Dry Goods Co. v. Conyers (Tex. Civ. App.), 58 S. W. 967; McConnell v. Mackin, 22 App. Div. 537. In the last case, wherein it was urged that an agency to collect and receive money is one of personal trust and confidence and therefore not to be delegated, the court said, "That rule is applicable to special authority and not to a general agency to take charge of and manage the business of the principal." See also Shepherd v. Milwaukee Gas L. Co., 11 Wis. 234; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Blair, 63 Tenn. (4 Baxt.) 407; Thompson v. Mills, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 642. So the directors of a business corporation may appoint an executive committee to attend to the corporate business in the intervals between the meetings of the directors. First Nat. Bank v. Com. Travel. Assn., 108 App. Div. 78, affirmed, 185 N. Y. 575.

⁵³ That servants may be employed when usual or necessary or within the range of the employing agent's power of management, see Wanstall v. Pooley, 6 Cl. & Fin. 910, note; Bucki v. Cone, 25 Fla. 1, 6 So. 160; Gleason v. Amsdell, 9 Daly (N. Y.), 393; Banks v. Southern Express Co., 73 S. Car. 211.

As to the number which may be employed, see Beaucage v. Mercer, 206 Mass. 492, 138 Am. St. R. 401. As to the liability of a master for Whose agent the subagent is in these cases—that is whether the consent is to employ the subagent as the agent of the principal or of the agent, is considered in a later section.

§ 318. III. When justified by usage or course of trade.—Again, the employment of a subagent may be justified by the presumed assent of the principal to a known and established usage or course of dealing.⁵⁴ Parties contracting in reference to a subject-matter concerning which there is such a usage and who indicate no contrary purpose may well be presumed to have it in contemplation. In contractis tacite insunt quae sunt moris et consuetudinis, is a maxim of law.⁵⁵

Thus where goods were entrusted by the plaintiff to a merchandise broker to sell, deliver and receive payment, and the broker deposited them in accordance with a usage with a commission merchant connected with an auctioneer, taking his note therefor, and some of the goods were afterward sold at a less price than the broker was authorized to sell them for, it was held that the principal was bound by such act of the broker and that he could not maintain trover against the commission merchant. Said the court: "Business to an immense amount has been transacted in this way, and the usage being established, it follows that when the plaintiff authorized his broker to sell, he authorized him to sell according to the usage; and when the defendants dealt with the broker, even if they had known that the goods were not his own, they had a right to consider him as invested with power to deal according to the usage."⁵⁶

The power of a bank receiving a note for collection at another place, to forward the note to a bank at that place for payment, may also be derived from the same source, as may other powers referred to in the preceding section.⁵⁷ Usage, however, will not be permitted to contravene express instructions, and if the agent has been denied the the negligence of persons employed by a servant to assist him see post, § 321; 3 Michigan Law Review, 198.

⁵⁴ Buckland v. Conway, 16 Mass. 396; Smith v. Sublett, 28 Tex. 163; Lynn v. Burgoyne, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 400; Moon v. Guardians, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 814; Gray v. Murray, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 167; Darling v. Stanwood, 14 Allen (Mass.), 504; Johnson v. Cunningham, 1 Ala. 249; Breck v. Meeker, 68 Neb. 99; Rohrbough v. U. S. Exp. Co., 50 W. Va. 148, 88 Am. St. R. 849; De Bussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. Div. 286.

⁵⁵ See Ewell's Evans' Agency, 58.

⁵⁶ Lausatt v. Lippincott, 6 Serg. & R. (Penn.) 386, 9 Am. Dec. 440. See also Wallace v. Bradshaw, 6 Dana (Ky.), 383; Darling v. Stanwood, 14 Allen (Mass.), 504; Jackson v. Union Bank, 6 H. & J. (Md.) 146; Strong v. Stewart, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137.

⁵⁷ Wilson v. Smith, 3 How. (U. S.) 763, 11 L. Ed. 820, where the court speaks of it as an authority fairly to be implied from the usual course of trade or the nature of the transaction.

power of delegation, usage can not confer it.⁵⁸ Nor can usage justify the agent in violating the fundamental duties which he owes to his principal or change the intrinsic character of the contract existing between them.⁵⁹

Whose agent the subagent, so employed, is to be deemed to be, will be considered in a later section.

§ 319. IV. When originally contemplated.—And so, if the employment of a subagent was contemplated by the parties at the time of the creation of the agent's authority, or if it was then expected that subagents might or would be employed, this would be treated as at least implied authority for such employment.⁶⁰

The fact that the employment of subagents was contemplated by the parties need not be shown by express proof. The nature of the service, the place at which it is to be performed, the distance between the place of appointment and the place of performance and similar circumstances may be taken into account. Thus where the principal and agent were both residents of California and the agency was to sell land in Texas the court said, "It is a fair presumption growing out of the exigencies of the transaction that it was contemplated that a purchaser should be obtained through a subagent."⁶¹ So in another case in which an agent appointed to sell land of small value was a busy man of large affairs living at some distance from the location of the land, the court said that the principal "must have known that he could not personally act for her in such unimportant matters" and that therefore action through a subagent must have been contemplated.⁶²

⁵⁸ Barksdale v. Brown, 1 Nott. & McC. (S. C.) 517, 9 Am. Dec. 720; Bliss v. Arnold, 8 Vt. 252, 30 Am. Dec. 467; Hall v. Storrs, 7 Wis. 253; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Parsons v. Martin, 11 Gray (Mass.), 112; Clark v. Van Northwick, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 343; Leland v. Douglass, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; Catlin v. Smith, 24 Vt. 85; Hutchings v. Ladd, 16 Mich. 493.

⁵⁹ Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. L. 802; Blackburn v. Mason, 63 L. T. (N. S.) 510; Minnesota Cent. R. R. Co. v. Morgan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 217.

⁶⁰ Johnson v. Cunningham, 1 Ala. 249; Duluth Nat. Bank v. Fire Ins. Co., 85 Tenn. 76, 4 Am. St. Rep. 744; National Steamship Co. v. Sheehan, 122 N. Y. 461, 10 L. R. A. 782; De-Bussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. Div. 286.

⁶¹ Eastland v. Maney, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 147.

⁶² Wright v. Isaacks, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 223. So in Arkadelphia Lumber Co. v. Thornton, 83 Ark. 403, the court said, "The land being situated in Arkansas and Head, the agent, authorized to sell same, being in Texas, it may be fairly presumed that the owners in executing the power of attorney contemplated that W. B. Head would employ a subagent to find a purchaser, and to perform the other merely incidental and ministerial acts necessary to consummate the sale of the land if made to a purchaser in this state."

So where an agent in Connecticut was given for collection a note payable in Georgia and secured by a

The cases in which claims are to be collected at a distance and many others of a similar nature, already referred to in the preceding sections, might also be embraced within this principle.

As in the previous cases, the question of whose agent the subagent is to be deemed to be, is reserved for consideration in a following section.

§ 320. V. When necessity or sudden emergency justifies it.—So there may be cases in which supervening necessity or sudden emergency may justify the employment of subagents.⁶³ Thus, for example, if a railroad train in transit should suddenly be deprived of its fireman or brakeman, the authority of the conductor to employ someone else to fill the place until the necessity was past or the company could act would doubtless be sustained,⁶⁴ and so it would doubtless be where the conductor himself was incapacitated and he delegated to another servant or even to a competent stranger the control of the train until the exigency was past or the company could act. In England it is held that the power can not exist if the circumstances are such that the principal may be communicated with and his instructions procured. "The impossibility of communicating with the principal," said Smith, L. J., "is the foundation of the doctrine of an agent of necessity."⁶⁵ trust deed to a Georgia trustee upon Georgia land it was held that it was fairly within the contemplation of the parties that a subagent in Georgia should be appointed. Davis v. King, 66 Conn. 465, 50 Am. St. R. 104.

But the reason for the rule does not exist and the rule does not therefore apply to a case in which the agent to sell land, although he does not live in the place where the land is, has been in the habit of visiting that place from time to time in connection with the management and leasing of the land. Williams v. Moore, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 402.

While in Cockran v. Irlam, 2 M. & Sel. 301, it is said that a broker to whom goods are consigned for sale "has no right without notice to turn his principal over to another of whom he knows nothing;" it was held in Bromley v. Coxwell, 2 Bos. & Pul. 438, that where A entrusts goods to B to sell them in India, with the understanding that what B could not sell he might return to A, but allowing

B to keep what he could obtain above a certain sum and to sell them for what he could get if he could not get that sum; and B, not being able to sell them himself in India left them with an agent to be disposed of and to remit the proceeds to B in England; A cannot maintain trover against B for so doing. Chambre, J., one of the judges, said: "It seems therefore that the delivery to his agent was within the terms of the agreement."

⁶³ Gwilliam v. Twist, [1895] 2 Q. B. 84; Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Propst, 85 Ala. 203; Sloan v. Central Iowa Ry. Co., 62 Iowa, 728; Fox v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 86 Iowa, 368, 17 L. R. A. 289.

⁶⁴ So held in Georgia Pac. Co. v. Propst; Sloan v. Central Iowa Ry. Co.; Fox v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., supra. Same effect: Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Ginley, 100 Tenn. 472.

⁶⁵ In Gwilliam v. Twist, supra. See also Harris v. Fiat Motors, 22 Times L. R. 556.

This is a salutary principle, though not always recognized in the American cases.

§ 321. — Assistants employed by servants.—The doctrine of the emergency has also been resorted to in several instances to support the employment by a servant of some one to assist him in some sudden exigency arising during the performance of the service.⁶⁶ Thus in a case ⁶⁷ in which the master was held responsible for the negligence of a bystander requested by the driver to assist him in repairing a cart which had broken down on the street, the court said: "We think that the act of the bystander must be regarded as the act of the driver. The cart was out of order and the driver was trying to fix it as he was bound to do. For that purpose he asked the bystander to assist him. And in doing so he used the assistance of the bystander as he would have used a tool or appliance which he had procured and which he must be regarded as having implied authority to procure under the circumstances. The fact that the tool or appliance was an intelligent human being does not affect the matter any more than the fact that another person held the reins did in Booth v. Mister.⁶⁸ The case is not one where the servant attempted to delegate his duty to another as in Gwilliam v. Twist;⁶⁹ but a case where the driver needed for a moment, in the performance of his duty in a sudden emergency, another hand, and found it in the assistance given at his request by a stranger, and what was done by the stranger was as if done by himself."⁷⁰

The liability of the master in these cases is considered more fully in a later section.⁷¹

§ 322. VI. Ratification of an unauthorized employment.—And, finally, even though authority to employ subagents cannot be deduced by any of the methods already enumerated, it may be found that such an appointment has subsequently, with knowledge of the facts, been either expressly or impliedly ratified;⁷² and here, as in other cases, ⁶⁶ See the cases discussed by the present writer (in 1905) in 3 Michigan Law Review, 198. See also the discussion post, Book IV, Chap. V.

⁶⁷ Hollidge v. Duncan, 199 Mass. 121.

⁶⁸ Booth v. Mister, 7 C. & P. 66 (not a case of emergency).

⁶⁹ Gwilliam v. Twist, [1895] 2 Q. B. 84. (Here there was held to be no emergency or necessity since the master was within reach.)

⁷⁰ The court cites Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355; Campbell v. Trimble, 75 Tex. 270; Bucki v. Cone, 25 Fla. 1; Pennsylvania Co. v. Gallagher, 40 Ohio St. 637, 48 Am. Rep. 689; James v. Muehlebach, 34 Mo. App. 512; all of which are more fully considered later.

⁷¹ See post, Book IV, Chap. V.

⁷² Haluptzok v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 55 Minn. 446; Katzenstein v. Raleigh, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Car. 688;

such a ratification is equivalent to a prior authority. Knowledge of the facts⁷³ and voluntary action, however, are as essential here as elsewhere, and the principal by accepting what he was entitled to from the agent, in ignorance that a subagent had been employed, does not ratify his appointment.⁷⁴

§ 323. Care required in making authorized appointment.—Where the employment of a subagent is authorized, the agent appointing him does not impliedly warrant that the person selected by him will be in all respects a fit and proper agent. The measure of his duty in that regard is to exercise reasonable care and skill to appoint a suitable person.⁷⁵

§ 324. Re-delegation — Sub-delegation.—The same principles which will admit of delegation in any case may suffice to justify a re-delegation or sub-delegation. If, for example, a bill is confided to a London banker for collection or protest in Los Angeles, it may be quite within the expected or usual or necessary course that the London banker will confide the matter to his New York correspondent, who will send it to his Chicago correspondent, who will send it on to a San Francisco banker, who will confide it to his correspondent in Los Angeles, who may in turn employ a local notary to certify the protest.

Formal powers not infrequently expressly provide for substitution, with authority to the substitute to re-delegate.

§ 325. What the delegate may be.—It is not at all essential that the delegate shall be an agent in the strict sense. The rules heretofore referred to may apply equally where he is a servant, an independent contractor, a public service corporation, or a public officer. One to whom goods are confided for sale may require the services of a carrier, a porter, a watchman, as well as of a broker, factor or auctioneer. If it becomes necessary to transport the goods from one place to another, the question of who may sue the carrier for his default, for example, may involve the same considerations as though an auctioneer had been employed.

§ 326. Whose agent, etc., is the subagent.—Wherever a subagent, etc., has been lawfully employed, in pursuance of the foregoing rules, Teucher v. Hiatt, 23 Iowa, 527, 92 Am. Dec. 440; Sedgwick v. Bliss, 23 Neb. 617; Dewing v. Hutton, 48 W. Va. 576; Bellinger v. Collins, 117 Iowa, 173; Sergeant v. Emlen, 141 Pa. 520. See also Terrell v. McCown, 91 Tex. 231.

⁷³ Winkleback v. National Exch. Bank, 155 Mo. App. 1.

⁷⁴ Rice v. Post, 78 Hun (N. Y.), 547, 61 N. Y. St. Rep. 229.

⁷⁵ Kuhnert v. Angell, 10 N. Dak. 59; Baldwin v. Bank, 1 La. Ann. 13, 45 Am. Dec. 72; Tiernan v. Commercial Bank, 7 How. (Miss.) 648, 40 Am. Dec. 83; Conwell v. Voorhees, 13 Ohio, 523, 42 Am. Dec. 206.

he undoubtedly acts so far with the consent of the principal that the latter is bound by the act of the subagent done within the authority confided to him and within the scope of the authority conferred upon the original agent. Whether, however, he is the agent, etc., of the principal in such sense that there is a privity of contract between them—so that, for example, the principal may or must look to the subagent for redress if the authority be improperly exercised, or that the subagent may or must look only to the principal for indemnity or compensation—is another matter. The principal may, of course, authorize the employment of the subagent on his account and as his agent and thus create privity of contract between them. But he may also do less. He may occupy a middle ground. He may clearly be willing to consent that his agent may perform the duty through a substitute employed at the agent's risk and expense, when he would not be willing, at his own risk and expense, to have such a substitute employed.

Thus a principal who has put goods for sale into the hands of an agent,—the agent having no power to delegate his authority and it being perhaps a wrongful act on the part of the agent to entrust them to any one else and a wrongful act on the part of the latter to exercise any control over them,—may be willing that his agent may employ a subagent so far that the entrusting of the goods by the agent to the subagent, or the exercise of control over them by the latter, or the latter's sale of them upon the terms prescribed to the agent, may all be acts done with the principal's consent, and yet not done by a person who stands in any contractual relations to the principal, or who can look to the principal for compensation, or for whose promises or conduct the principal would be responsible to third persons.

The familiar case of the independent contractor also furnishes an analogy. The employer here expects that the contractor will avail himself of agencies and means selected by himself and for which he is responsible; but the employer does not expect to answer for the defaults of the contractor's servants or to pay them for their services. The principal may consent to the employment of subagents on such terms as please him, and where he has consented only upon the express or implied condition that the subagent shall not be deemed his agent, that condition, as between the parties, must control.

§ 327. ——— This distinction has been made in many cases. Thus it is said by Senator Verplanck in a leading case ⁷⁰ in New York:

⁷⁰ Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215, 34 Am. Dec. 289.

"There is a wide difference made as well by positive law as by the reason of the thing itself between a contract or undertaking to do a thing, and the delegation of an agent or attorney to procure the doing of the same thing—between a contract for building a house, for example, and the appointment of an overseer or superintendent, authorized and undertaking to act for the principal in having the house built. The contractor is bound to answer for any negligence or default in the performance of his contract, although such negligence or default be not his own, but that of some sub-contractor or under workman. Not so the mere representative agent who discharges his whole duty if he acts with good faith and ordinary diligence in the selection of his materials, the forming of his contracts and the choice of his workmen."

§ 328. — The same distinction is also stated in much the same way by Mr. Justice Blatchford in the supreme court of the United States. "The distinction," he says, "between the liability of one who contracts to do a thing and that of one who merely receives a delegation of authority to act for another is a fundamental one. If the agency is an undertaking to do the business, the original principal may look to the immediate contractor with himself, and is not obliged to look to inferior or distant under-contractors or subagents when defaults occur injurious to his interest. * * * The nature of the contract is the test. If the contract be only for the immediate services of the agent, and for his faithful conduct as representing his principal, the responsibility ceases with the limits of the personal services undertaken. But when the contract looks mainly to the thing to be done, and the undertaking is for the due use of all proper means to performance, the responsibility extends to all necessary and proper means to accomplish the object, by whomsoever used."⁷⁷

§ 329. — So where the question was as to the liability of a factor for the defaults of another to whom he had sent the goods for sale, the latter [the defendant] contended that if plaintiffs [the principals] told him to "do with the goods as with his own," or if "the employment of a subagent was necessary, and that fact was known to plaintiffs," then, in either event, defendant had a right to send the goods to a factor of good credit, to whom and not to the defendant, plaintiffs should look for their proper disposition. But the court said, "We do not think that if the jury had found both of these facts in favor of defendant it necessarily followed that he would not be liable for the default of the person so selected. The inquiry still remained, was this person selected as the servant of the agent or factor, or did he become the agent of the principal? It by no means follows, where produce, for instance, is intrusted to a commission merchant in Du-buque, and sent forward by him to his correspondent or agent at Chi-cago or St. Louis, that a privity of contract exists between such cor-respondent and principal, to the extent that the original factor is released and the subagent only is liable. Nor does it make any dif-ference that the principal or consignor knows that it must and will be sent forward to find a market. He has a right to, and is presumed to repose confidence in, the financial ability and business capacity of the person so employed, and if such factor employs other persons, he does so upon his own responsibility; and, having greater facilities for in-forming himself and extending his business relations, upon him and not upon the principal should fall the loss of any negligence or default. If, however, another person has been substituted who, with the knowl-edge and approbation of the principal, takes the place of the original factor, or if such substitution is necessary from the very nature of the business, and this fact is known to the principal, the liability of the substitute may be direct to the principal, depending upon questions of good faith and the like on the part of the factor in selecting the sub-stitute."⁷⁸

⁷⁷ Exchange National Bank v. Third National Bank, 112 U. S. 276, 28 L. Ed. 722.

§ 330. Is there privity between principal and subagent.—The question whether the subagent has been brought into privity with the principal and thus made the principal's agent is one not always easy of determination.⁷⁹ The statement is indeed found in many cases that wherever the principal has consented to the appointment of a subagent privity is thereby created between them; but it is obvious that that cannot be true as a universal rule. As has already been pointed out, the principal may consent to the appointment of a subagent as his agent or as the agent's agent. It may be urged that the agent does not need the consent of the principal to the appointment of the sub-agent as the agent's agent, but however true that may be as to the ⁷⁸ Loomis v. Simpson, 13 Iowa, 532.

Where an English principal employed an agent to send goods to the Amsterdam market and there to dispose of them and it was acknowl-edged that the employment of some subagent was in the contemplation of the parties, but yet that the prin-cipal dealt only with the agent and relied upon him, it was held that the subagent could not claim commis-sions from the principal directly. Schmaling v. Thomlinson, 6 Taun-ton, 147.

⁷⁹ See an interesting article on the question so far as it relates to Dutch-South African law in 26 South African Law Journal, 517.

agent's affairs it is, as has been pointed out, not necessarily true as to the principal's affairs. Without the principal's consent many acts of the subagent in dealing with the principal's property would simply amount to a conversion.

It being thus true that the principal may consent to the appointment of a subagent as his agent or as the agent's agent, it becomes material to determine which form of consent has been given in a particular case. The consent may be expressly given and show its extent by its own terms; but in the ordinary case it is not expressly given, and its extent must be determined from the facts and circumstances of the case. In order to justify the inference of an employment as the principal's agent, the circumstances must be such as to reasonably warrant the conclusion that the principal has taken the subagent as his agent, and thereby, ordinarily, becoming liable for his compensation, assuming responsibility for his conduct, accepting the subagent's responsibility to him, and releasing the original agent from such responsibility.

Whether the principal has done so or not is ordinarily a question of fact, to be determined by the jury, unless the inference is so clear as to justify the court in deciding what it is.

§ 331. — The form in which the question most frequently presents itself is in determining the liability of a bank for the defaults of its correspondent banks in the process of collecting checks, notes and the like delivered to it for collection. Upon this question the authorities, as will be seen, are hopelessly in conflict—not, however, as to the rule of liability when the nature of the undertaking is determined but as to the proper construction of the facts in deciding upon the nature of the undertaking.⁸⁰

⁸⁰ See post, Book IV, Chap. II, where the question is fully considered. See also Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 276, 28 L. Ed. 722; Smith v. National Bank, 191 Fed. 226; Mackersy v. Ramsays, 9 Cl. & Fin. 818; Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 47 N. Y. 570, 7 Am. Rep. 489; Simpson v. Waldby, 63 Mich. 439; Bank v. Butler, 41 Ohio St. 519, 52 Am. Rep. 94; Titus v. Bank, 35 N. J. L. 588; Power v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Mont. 252; Streissguth v. Nat. Bank, 43 Minn. 50, 19 Am. St. R. 213, 7 L. R. A. 363; Campbell v. London, etc., Bank, 1 Roscoe (So. Afr.), 419. Compare Fabens v. Mercantile Bank, 23 Pick. 330, 34 Am. Dec. 59; Lawrence v. Stonington Bank, 6 Conn. 521; Jackson v. Union Bank, 6 H. & J. (Md.) 146; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Alton Bank, 25 Ill. 243; Stacy v. Dane County Bank, 12 Wis. 629; Guelick v. Nat. State Bank, 56 Iowa, 434, 41 Am. Rep. 110; Third Nat. Bank v. Vicksburg Bank, 61 Miss. 112, 48 Am. Rep. 78; Daly v. Bank, 56 Mo. 94, 17 Am. Rep. 663; Landa v. Traders' Bank, 118 Mo. App. 356; Bank of Louisville v. First Nat. Bank, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 101, 35 Am. Rep. 691; Merchants' Nat. Bank v.

§ 332. Effect of employment—Subagent is principal's agent when appointment as such authorized.—It is not the purpose here to go minutely into the mutual rights and obligations of the principal, agent, and subagent. This subject is reserved for subsequent consideration as each of the various relations shall be taken up. But—

In general.—If, under the circumstances, it appears that the agent employed the subagent for his principal, and by his authority, expressed or implied, then the subagent is the agent of the principal; his acts and contracts within the scope of the authority of the original agent and lawfully delegated to him are binding upon his principal.⁸¹ Notice to him is notice to his principal as in the case of other agents.⁸²

Goodman, 109 Pa. 422, 58 Am. Rep. 728; Hyde v. Planters' Bank, 17 La. 560; Irwin v. Reeves Pulley Co., 20 Ind. App. 101. This list does not purport to be exhaustive.

⁸¹ Thus where the appointment of a subagent to collect a mortgage was held to be within the implied power of the agent, payment of the mortgage debt to the subagent was payment to his principal. Breck v. Meeker, 68 Neb. 99.

Payment to a subagent appointed with the authority of the principal under the rule stated is payment to the principal. Hoag v. Graves, 81 Mich. 628.

So where it was held that the general manager of a transportation company had implied power to appoint a local agent, the transportation company was held bound by a contract made in the course of his employment by such a local agent on behalf of the company. Tennessee R. Trans. Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1.

Where the appointment of a purchasing agent is within the implied power of a general manager, the principal is liable for the price of goods properly bought by such a purchasing agent. Luttrell v. Martin, 112 N. C. 593.

Where an agent to charter a boat upon a certain condition with the knowledge and consent of the principal employed a vessel broker that vessel broker was held to be the agent of the principal and the principal bound by his agreement unconditionally to charter the boat. Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431.

Thus where an agent authorized to look at certain pieces of land and to determine what was best to be done with the land and if he saw fit to sell upon such terms as he should think wise, viewed the land and investigated its condition, a contract made by a subagent authorized by the agent to sell upon terms absolutely set by the agent was held specifically enforceable against the principals. Renwick v. Bancroft, 56 Iowa, 527.

⁸² See Notice to Agent; Merritt v. Huber, 137 Iowa, 135; Bates v. American Mtg. Co., 37 S. C. 88, 21 L. R. A. 340; Carpenter v. German American Insurance Co., 135 N. Y. 298; Bergeron v. Pamlico Ins. & B. Co., 111 N. C. 45; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Ward, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 13; Goode v. Georgia Home Ins. Co., 92 Va. 392, 53 Am. St. R. §17, 30 L. R. A. 842.

He may look to the principal for his compensation,⁸³ reimbursement⁸⁴ or indemnity, as in the case of other agents. He owes to his principal the same duty of loyalty and fair dealing as other agents.⁸⁵ He must account to the principal, if he be called upon⁸⁶ and is directly responsible to the principal for his conduct; and if damage results from the conduct of such subagent, the agent is only responsible to his principal in case he has not exercised due care in the selection of the subagent.⁸⁷

⁸³ Thus a lawyer who was employed by a bank to which a note secured by a mortgage had been sent for collection, and had rendered services by which the mortgaged property was applied to the satisfaction of the debt was allowed to recover compensation against the owner of the note. Strong v. West, 110 Ga. 382. To the same effect are Davis v. Matthews, 8 S. D. 300; Hornbeck v. Gilmer, 110 La. 500.

So where one of two joint owners of a farm authorized the other one who was in possession and management to sell the farm, it was held within the power of the one authorized to sell to employ a real estate broker, and to bind them both by an agreement to pay commissions to such a broker. Lee v. Conrad, 140 Iowa, 16.

⁸⁴ So where a note had been put by an agent to collect in a bank for collection and the bank with the mistaken idea that the amount of the note had been paid, paid the amount of it to the agent, the principal was not allowed, in a suit against him by the bank to recover the money after the agent had paid it over, to object that there was no privity between them. It was held that they were not strangers to one another. Appleton Bank v. McGilvray, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 518, 64 Am. Dec. 92.

⁸⁵ Thus the subagent may not sell to himself or make secret profits and if he does he will be liable to the principal. DeBussche v. Alt, 8 Chan. Div. 286; Powell v. Jones, C. A. (1905) 1 K. B. 11.

⁸⁶ Commercial Bank v. Jones, 18

Tex. 811; Wilson v. Smith, 44 U. S. (3 How.) 763, 11 L. Ed. 820. See also Miller v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 30 Md. 392.

⁸⁷ Where it was understood that a steamship agent was to have subagents, and the agent distributed tickets among them, he was not liable in replevin for the tickets in the hands of subagents after the termination of his agency, as the subagents were also agents of the company. National Steamship Co. v. Sheahan, 122 N. Y. 461, 10 L. R. A. 782.

So where a bank had a note for collection and placed it in the hands of a notary chosen with reasonable diligence, to demand payment and if necessary protest the note, it was held that the bank was not liable for the notary's failure to do his duty. Tiernan v. Commercial Bank of Natchez, 7 Howard (Miss.), 648, 40 Am. Dec. 83. To the same effect: Baldwin v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 La. Ann. 13, 45 Am. Dec. 72; Warren Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 582.

So where an agent to collect a note was directed to hire an attorney to collect the note by suit, and the owner of the note claimed that the attorney, who was the one to whom the agent sent its own business and who was thought therefore to have been chosen with reasonable care, had unreasonably delayed in prosecuting the suit to judgment, it was held that if that were the fact the agent would not be liable for the lawyer's omission to the owner of the note. Commercial Bank v. Martin, 1 La. Ann. 344, 45 Am. Dec. 87.

For the torts of such subagent to third persons the agent would not be liable merely by virtue of his relation, but the principal would be liable as for the torts of any agent.⁸⁸

§ 333. — But he is agent's agent in other cases.—But if the agent, having undertaken to transact the business of his principal, employs a subagent on his own account to assist him in what he has undertaken to do, even though he does so with the consent of the princi-

So where it was held to be within the implied power of an agent to collect a note secured by a foreign mortgage to employ a subagent, it was held that the agent was not liable in a suit by the principal for the conversion of the note, for the act of the subagent in surrendering the note and accepting a renewal vote. Davis v. King, 66 Conn. 465, 50 Am. St. R. 104.

So where with at least the knowledge and approval of the railway company a station agent had a cashier and a transfer agent, and the station agent's own time was filled with other duties it was held that the station agent and his sureties were not liable to the railway company for the default of one or both of the subagents. Louisville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Blair, 63 Tenn. 407.

So where one employed a commission merchant to buy cotton in a foreign market, and the commission merchant had implied authority by virtue of a known custom of the trade to employ a broker in that market, the principal could not have of the commission merchant damages for injury consequent upon the broker's negligence in selecting the cotton and in preparing it for shipment, where the broker was one selected by the commission merchant with usual and reasonable care. Darling v. Stanwood, 96 Mass. (14 Allen) 504.

So where a commission merchant to ship cotton used "reasonable skill and diligence" in the choice of a vessel he was held not responsible to the owner of the cotton for the negligence of the master. McCants v. Wells, 4 S. C. 381.

So where a real estate agent authorized to employ a workman to make repairs used due care in selecting him, the agent was not liable to his principal for the workman's negligence. Morris v. Warlick, 118 Ga. 421.

⁸⁸ Where the general manager and the train despatcher properly employed a watchman to keep strikers from the right of way of a railway and the watchman in the course of his employment made an improper assault upon the plaintiff, it was held that the watchman and the railway company were liable to the plaintiff but that the general manager and the train despatcher were not. Canfield v. C. R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 59 Mo. App. 354.

So where the owner of land had directed that his real estate agent have a fence put upon the land and the agent used due care in the selection of a workman, it was held in a suit against the agent for injuries sustained by the plaintiff's horse alleged to be due to negligent construction of the fence, that the agent was not liable, and it was said that the workman and the owner would be liable. Kuhnert v. Angell, 10 N. D. 59, 88 Am. St. R. 675.

Where the agent, e. g. a factor brings suit on the contract, he is then affected so far as the defendant is concerned by any acts of his subagent which would constitute a defence against any principal. Harralson v. Stein, 50 Ala. 347.

pal he does so at his own risk, and there is no privity between such subagent and the principal. The subagent is, therefore, the agent of the agent only. His acts and contracts would bind the principal only so far as they could be deemed to be the authorized acts of the original agent.⁸⁹ Notice to or knowledge in him would not be imputed to the principal.⁹⁰ His statements or admissions except in so far as they could be deemed to be the statements or admissions of the agent would not be binding upon the principal.⁹¹ He could not look to the principal for his compensation.⁹² The principal would have no claim against him for accounting⁹³ which he would not have against any ⁸⁹ National Bank v. Old Town Bank, 112 Fed. 726; Winkleback v. National Exchange Bank, 155 Mo. App. 1.

Payment to the agent of the agent is not payment to the principal unless it is paid over by the subagent to the agent. Chouteau Land Co. v. Chrisman, 204 Mo. 371.

Sale by unauthorized subagent does not bind principal. Hodkinson v. McNeal Mach. Co., 161 Mo. App. 87.

⁹⁰ Waldman v. Ins. Co., 91 Ala. 170, 24 Am. St. R. 883; Hoover v. Wise, 91 U. S. 308, 23 L. Ed. 392.

⁹¹ Where without express or implied authority an agent for his own convenience employs a clerk, the principal is not bound by the acts or statements of such clerk. Springfield, etc., Ins. Co. v. De Jarnett, 111 Ala. 248.

⁹² In such a case he must look to the agent only. Houston Cotton Oil Mill & Mfg. Co. v. Bibby, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 100. See also Triplett v. Jackson, 130 Iowa, 408.

In such a case the rights of a subagent to commissions against the principal would in any case be limited by the contract which the agent has made with the principal. Brown v. Haigh, 113 La. 563.

Where the contract between the agent and the subagent provides that the subagent is to look to the agent for his compensation and the contract between the agent and the principal expressly provides that the principal shall not be responsible for the compensation of subagents, the subagent can acquire no claim against the principal for compensation at a time or under circumstances when the principal would not be liable to the agent. Union Casualty Co. v. Gray, 114 Fed. 422.

An agent authorized merely to solicit and take orders within the territory assigned to him, and to send them to the company, and who "could delegate his authority only to the extent of employing his own salesmen," cannot bind his principal by a contract to pay a salesman so employed for his services. National Cash Register Co. v. Hagan, 37 Tex. Civ. App. 281.

Where it was acknowledged that the principal must have contemplated the employment of some subagent to handle goods at a foreign market, but where the court thought that the circumstances were such that the principal looked fully and wholly to the agent and to him alone, it was held that the subagent could maintain no claim for commission against the principal. Schmalting v. Thomlinson, 6 Taunton, 147.

⁹³ New Zealand Land Co. v. Watson, 7 Q. B. Div. 374; Lockwood v. Abdy, 14 Simons, 437; Att'y General v. Earl of Chesterfield, 18 Beavan, 596; Mawr v. Pearson, 28 Beavan, 196. See also Pinto v. Santos, 1 Marsh. 132; Robbins v. Fennell, 11 Q. B. 248. Where a lawyer authorized to collect a debt due to a client left his business in the hands of a stranger. He would not be liable to the principal for negligence,⁹⁴ except where any stranger would be, but his liability would be to the agent only,⁹⁵ while the agent would be responsible to the principal for the manner in which the business had been done, whether by himself, or his servant or his agent.⁹⁶

As intimated above, even though no privity exists between the principal and the subagent, yet, if the subagent were employed by the agent clerk, who received and receipted for the money due the client, it was held in a suit by the client against the clerk that the clerk's duty to account was to the lawyer only and that the client could have no action against him. Stephens v. Badcock, 3 B. & Adol. 354.

Where there was a bill for a discovery and for an accounting, it was held that a man who made a defense that his only concern with the affair was as agent of the agent, he was properly a witness and not an accounting party. Cartwright v. Hately, 1 Vesey Jr. 292.

Where one part owner of a ship was entrusted with the management of the ship and employed to collect rents one who acted and professed to act as the agent of the managing owner and who accounted to such owner, the other part owners could not maintain a suit against the subagent for money which he had collected on the ship's account. Sims v. Britten, 1 N. & M. 594.

Where an agent who was employed to secure a loan employed a subagent who without the knowledge of either the agent or the principal received a commission from the lender as well, it was held that he was liable to account therefor to the principal. The court thought there was evidence to establish privity of contract between the principal and the subagent but it held that the subagent with or without privity of contract stood under a fiduciary obligation to the people for whose benefit he knew he was being employed not to receive compensation from the other side. Powell v. Jones (1905), 1 K. B. 11 (C. A.).

⁹⁴ That is, for any resulting from the relation.

⁹⁵ Subagent liable to agent for negligence. Pownall v. Bair, 78 Pa. 403.

⁹⁶ Cowley v. Fabien, 204 N. Y. 566. Where an agent to buy stock with the consent of his principal appoints a subagent to make the actual purchase, the agent still owes to his principal the duty to get the stock from the subagent or to see that it is delivered to the principal. See Hoogewerff v. Flack, 101 Md. 371.

So where an agent without authority to appoint a subagent for his own convenience employed one to go out and make offers for the sale of lands which the agent was employed to sell, the agent was liable to his principal for fraudulent acts of the subagent by which the principal was damaged. Barnard v. Coffin, 141 Mass. 37, 55 Am. Rep. 443.

Even though the principal consented to the appointment of the subagent, the agent would be responsible to the principal for his failure to properly instruct the subagent or to communicate to him the limitations placed by the principal upon the authority of both. Strong v. Stewart, 56 Tenn. (9 Heiskell) 137; Barnard v. Coffin, supra.

Where an agent to sell goods without authority or custom of the trade to appoint subagents turned over the goods to another to sell, his act constitutes a conversion for which he is liable to his principal. Campbell v. Reeves, 3 Head (Tenn.), 226.

as the latter's agent with the consent of the principal, the acts and contracts of the subagent done for the agent and in his name within the scope of the agent's authority and within the field in which the principal has consented that a subagent may be employed, would bind the principal as the agent's acts.⁹⁷ But where the subagent is appointed without any consent of the principal either express or implied, his acts can only be binding upon the principal where they can be regarded as the acts of the agent done through a mechanical or ministerial agency.⁹⁸

II.

OF AUTHORITY OF AN AGENT TO EMPLOY AGENTS, SERVANTS AND OTHERS FOR HIS PRINCIPAL.

§ 334. Agents generally have no such authority.—The ordinary agent, employed to do other acts, has usually no authority whatever to bind his principal by the employment of other agents, servants or contractors for him. For obvious reasons, this is a matter which the principal will ordinarily do in person or through an agent appointed for that purpose.

§ 335. Servants have usually no such authority.—The ordinary servant, also, has usually no authority to employ other servants, or agents or contractors for his principal. The test of the existence of the relation, as has been seen, is that the servant is not employed to create contractual relations between his master and third persons. How far a person, employed by a servant to assist him, can impose ⁹⁷ Thus in Lingenfelter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 252, it is said, "There is no occasion for the application or discussion of the maxim, delegatus non potest delegare; for it may be conceded that Hubert had no power to delegate his agency to another or to sublet it. But he may employ clerks and subagents, whose acts if done in his name and recognized by him, either specially or according to his usual method of dealing with them, will be regarded as his acts, and as such binding on the principal." This language is quoted and approved in Rohrbough v. Ex- press Co., 50 W. Va. 148, 88 Am. St. R. 849.

⁹⁸ In Hope v. Dixon, 22 Grant's Ch. (Ont.) 439, it is held that a contract of sale made by the clerk of the real estate agent in the name of the agent but without his knowledge or consent was not binding on the principal. The statement in Fry on Specific Performance (4th Ed. § 531) that "the clerks of agents are not agents for the principal unless the principal has assented to their acting as such" was cited and relied upon.

liability upon the master for such person's negligence, is a question which will be found fully treated in a later chapter.⁹⁹

§ 336. Independent contractors have usually no such authority.—The independent contractor, also, has usually no authority to employ agents, servants or other contractors for his employer. It is usually of the very essence of this relation, as has been seen, that the independent contractor is to accomplish the results stipulated for, by the employment of his own agents, servants and employees, and that the employer shall not be liable for the negligence or defaults of either the independent contractor himself or of his servants, agents or employees.

§ 337. Authority to appoint may be expressly conferred.—The authority to appoint or employ agents, servants, contractors, and the like may, of course, be expressly conferred; and the authority conferred may be general or special. Persons so employed, in accordance with the authority, become the agents, servants or employees of the principal and when so employed the same rules apply to the relation as though they had been employed by the principal in person.¹

How an authority to employ, when conferred, is to be construed, and what can be done under it, are questions which will be found fully considered in a later chapter, upon the construction of authorities, in dealing with the construction of an authority to employ.

§ 338. Authority to employ may arise by implication.—The authority to employ agents, servants and others may arise by implication. Thus the chief executive of a corporation may, by virtue of his position, have by implication the authority to employ all the agents, servants and other employees whom the proper conduct of the business confided to his charge may reasonably require. The general manager or general superintendent of a business, corporate or otherwise, may have a similar authority, and some discussion of this question will be found in a later chapter when dealing with the implied authority of a manager of business.

⁹⁹ Servant ordinarily no authority to employ (St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, 96 Ark. 558, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 418; Eaton v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 382, 15 Am. Rep. 513; Cooper v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., 136 Ind. 366); unless there be some emergency (Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Propst, 85 Ala. 203; Sloan v. Central Iowa Ry. Co., 62 Iowa, 728; Fox v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 86 Iowa, 368, 17 L. R. A. 289).

Liability of employer for negligence of a stranger assisting servant is discussed in Book IV, Ch. V.

¹ Where an agent is sent out to do work requiring assistants, and his authority real or apparent is to employ only so many as are necessary the unnecessary men would not be the principal's servants; but if he is authorized to hire as many as he thinks necessary or as many as he pleases, all the men employed will be the principal's servants, though the agent employed an unnecessary number. Beaucage v. Mercer, 206 Mass. 492, 138 Am. St. Rep. 401.

It may also arise in particular instances, as in the case of a collection agent who may have implied authority to employ attorneys, and the like,—a matter hereafter to be considered.

It may also arise from considerations such as those which are considered in the preceding subdivision on Delegation. Thus the necessary and proper conduct of the business,² the custom or course of trade, an original tacit understanding, the subsequent acquiescence,³ and the like, may, as mere inference of fact, be found sufficient to justify it. Many of the illustrations and citations there given are equally applicable here.

§ 339. Sudden emergency or special necessity may justify it.—So, also, as seen in the preceding subdivision on Delegation, there may be cases in which a sudden emergency or some supervening necessity may justify, not simply delegation, but the employment of some one to perform service on the part of the principal. The illustrations and citations given there are equally applicable here, and need not be repeated. What is there said about the narrow range of this authority is also equally applicable here.

§ 340. — Authority arising from emergency or necessity a narrow one—Ceases when the emergency or necessity ceases.—As has been well pointed out in a leading English case,⁴ “An authority to be exercised only in cases of emergency, and derived from the exigency of the occasion, is evidently a limited one, and before it can arise a state of facts must exist which shows that such exigency is present, or from which it might reasonably be supposed to be present.”

So, also, the authority so derived must cease when the emergency ceases to which it owes its origin. No authority to act, based upon an emergency, can arise after the emergency itself has ended and things have resumed their ordinary course.⁵

² Banks v. Southern Express Co., 73 S. Car. 211 (where the company was held liable for the negligence of a man driving its wagon who had been employed by the company's local agent) was put upon the ground that the proper performance of the business required and justified it.

³ See Haluptzok v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 55 Minn. 446, 26 L. R. A. 739 (where an inference of authority was drawn from acquiescence and retention); Katzenstein v. Raleigh R. Co., 84 N. Car. 688 (where for more than two years the general superintendent knew of the employment and made no objection).

⁴ Bank of New South Wales v. Owston, 4 App. Cas. 270.

⁵ Bank of New South Wales v. Owston, supra.

§ 341. — Employment of physicians and surgeons in emergencies.—Upon this ground of emergency, is usually placed the power, not entirely easy to support, held by some courts to reside in subordinate administrative agents or servants of railroad companies, such as station agents, yard masters, conductors, and the like, to employ, on the company's account, physicians, surgeons or nurses to care for injured employees or, perhaps, passengers of the road, when there is no higher authority upon the ground and immediate action seems necessary.⁶ (The power of the general manager or the general superintendent or other similar officers to authorize or ratify the employment in such cases is usually regarded as one of the attributes of management and is discussed in a later section.⁷) The same power is

⁶ Terre Haute & Indianapolis R. Co. v. McMurray, 98 Ind. 358, 49 Am. R. 752, in which was sustained the conductor's employment upon the railroad's credit of a physician to give immediate care to a brakeman injured in an accident, where there was necessity for immediate care and the conductor was the highest agent of the company on the ground or within practicable communication. Louisville, etc., Ry. Co. v. Smith, 121 Ind. 353, 6 L. R. A. 320, in which it was held that although in a case of emergency a conductor who was the highest agent on the ground might employ upon the railroad's credit necessary medical attention for a brakeman injured in the line of his duty, still he could not bind the company to pay for an additional physician. Arkansas, etc., R. Co. v. Loughridge, 65 Ark. 300, and Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Mylott, 6 Ind. App. 438, are cases to the same effect and upon substantially the same state of facts.

Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Freeland, 4 Ind. App. 207, in which a physician was allowed to recover for services in caring for an employee of the defendant railroads who was injured in an accident to a construction train upon which he was being carried. The physician was called by the conductor of the construction train to give immediate service.

Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 94 Ill. App. 54, in which it was held that where a member of a wrecking crew was injured about his work, the conductor of the wrecking train had authority in and for the emergency to employ a physician to care for the injury.

As to passengers, see Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Beatty, 35 Kan. 265, 57 Am. Rep. 160 (denying the power of subordinate officers, but conceding that it may exist in the higher officers); Patterson v. Consolidated Trac. Co., 9 Pa. Dist. 362 (conceding that a street car conductor might have the power in an emergency, but denying the emergency).

A physician so employed has no authority to employ assistants on the company's account. Bond v. Hurd, 31 Mont. 314.

A physician regularly employed by a railroad company to render first aid to the injured has therefrom no implied authority to bind the company by an arrangement with a hotel keeper to board injured persons or their attendants. Southern Ry. Co. v. Grant, 136 Ga. 303, Ann. Cas. 1912, C. 472.

⁷ See post, Book II, Ch. III, Authority of Agent Authorized to Manage Business.

extended by some courts to similar agents or servants of other corporations,⁸ and if the power exists in the one case upon the principles of agency it is not easy to see why it should not exist also in the others, and also in the case of partnerships and individuals.

These cases proceed upon the theory that, by reason of the injury and the necessity of immediate help to save life or limb, an emergency exists which justifies the highest authority upon the spot in procuring, upon the principal's account, such medical or surgical aid as the emergency demands. The cases however which go furthest in sustaining the authority limit it strictly to the emergency presented. The authority, it is said, arises with the emergency and with it it expires.⁹

Other cases deny that the emergency justifies any such authority,¹⁰ and still other cases hold that, whatever may be the rule respecting railroad companies, the doctrine cannot be extended to other corporations and individuals.¹¹

⁸ Texas Bldg. Co. v. Albert, 57 Tex. Civ. App. 638, in which an incorporated building company was held upon a contract which the foreman made with a physician to care for a workman injured in handling materials upon a piece of work being done at a distance from the defendant's office and under the guidance and control of this foreman. The services rendered were the immediate amputation of the legs.

In Weinsberg v. St. Louis Cordage Company, 135 Mo. App. 553, the same principles were applied although the agent who employed the physician was there the president of the company.

In Holmes v. McAllister, 123 Mich. 493, 48 L. R. A. 396, the court said that the rule allowing whatever agent of the principal was in control and upon the ground to employ a physician to attend in an emergency an employee injured at his work applied to cases "in which the employment is hazardous, exposing the employees to dangers and risks greater than those in the ordinary pursuits of life," but it was held that the owner of a laundry was not bound by a forewoman's employment of a physician to care for an injury to an employee which occurred while that forewoman was in charge, the court saying "There is no evidence in this case that employment in a laundry is accompanied by any such dangers."

⁹ Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Freeland, 4 Ind. App. 207; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Mylott, 6 Ind. App. 438, citing and quoting Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. McMurray, 98 Ind. 358, 49 Am. R. 752.

¹⁰ Peninsular R. Co. v. Gary, 22 Fla. 356, 1 Am. St. R. 194, in which it was held that the employment of a physician to care for a man injured at work upon the track was not binding on the company when made either by the roadmaster in charge of the work upon which the man was injured or by the conductor who brought in the injured man upon his train. The court does not discuss the matter of emergency but cites Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. McMurray, ante, with express disapproval.

¹¹ Godshaw v. Struck Bros., 109 Ky. 285, 51 L. R. A. 668; New Pittsburgh Coal, etc., Co. v. Shaley, 25 Ind. App. 282 (coal yards); Chaplin v. Freeland, 7 Ind. App. 676 (an unincorporated factory for the manufacture of buggies); Spelman v. G. C. M. & M. Co., 26 Mont. 76, 55 L. R. A. 640, 91 Am. St. R. 402.

§ 342. Privity between principal and persons thus employed.—

The difficult question, considered in the preceding subdivision, of privity of contract between the principal and the persons employed by the agent of the principal authorized for that purpose, does not arise here. By the hypothesis, the person employed under the circumstances now contemplated, is, if properly employed, employed by the express or implied authority of the principal. He becomes therefore the agent or servant of the principal, privity of contract is created between them, and all the rights, duties and liabilities attach as though the employment had been made by the principal in person.

A minor son who takes out his father's automobile for his own pleasure and who, while using it, injures a third person, has no implied authority to employ a physician at his father's expense to care for the injured person. Habegger v. King, 149 Wis. 1, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 881.

CHAPTER VII

OF RATIFICATIO

§ 343, 344. Purpose of this chapter.

I. WHAT IS MEANT BY RATIFICATION

- 345. In general.
- 346. Fictitious character of the doctrine.
- 347. Ratification defined.
- 348. Ratification not a form of authorization.
- 349. Ratification differs from estoppel.
- 350. Ratification not a contract.
- 351. No new consideration required.
- 352. Ratification wholly optional with principal.

II. WHAT ACTS MAY BE RATIFIED

- 353. In general.
- 354. The general rule.
- 355. What acts need ratification.
- 356. — Waiver rather than ratification.
- 357. Torts may be ratified as well as unauthorized contracts.
- 358. Void acts cannot be ratified—Voidable acts may be.
- 359. Illegal acts cannot be made legal by ratification.
- 360. Forgery.
- 361-363. — Ratification.
- 364. — Estoppel.

III. WHO MAY RATIFY

- 365. General rule.
- 366. State may ratify.
- 367. Municipal corporations.
- 368. Private corporations.
- 369. Partners.
- 370. Infants.
- 371. Insane persons—Persons under duress.
- 372. Married women.

373. Executor, administrator, etc.

374. When agents may ratify.

375. — Subagents.

IV. CONDITIONS OF RATIFICATION

- 376. Certain conditions must be satisfied.
- 377. 1. Principal must have been identified.
- 378. 2. Principal must have been in existence.
- 379. — Administrator, assignee, etc.
- 380-383. — Corporations subsequently organized.
- 384. 3. Transaction must still stand.
- 385. 4. Principal must have present ability.
- 386-392. 5. Act must have been done as agent.
- 393-396. 6. Principal must have knowledge of material facts.
- 397. — What facts are material within this rule.
- 398-402. — Illustrations.
- 403. — Actual knowledge required.
- 404. — Wilful ignorance.
- 405. — Presumption of knowledge.
- 406. — Knowledge inferred from facts.
- 407. — Imputed knowledge—Knowledge of agents — Of the particular agent.
- 408. — Duty to inquire.
- 409. — Effect of ratification without knowledge.
- 410. 7. No ratification of part of an act only.
- 411. — Responsibility for instrumentalities employed.

- 412, 413. — Limitations—Collateral contracts.
- 414. — Collateral stipulation which makes whole contract illegal.
- 415. — Divisible acts—Involuntary receipt, etc.
- 416. Intention to ratify.

V. WHAT AMOUNTS TO A RATIFICATION

- 417. Importance of question.
- 418. Written or unwritten—Express or implied.

1. Express Ratification

- 419. General rule.

a. By Instrument under Seal

- 420. Deed at common law ratified only by instrument under seal.
- 421. — Rule relaxed in partnership cases.
- 422. — Massachusetts rule.
- 423. — Modern rule more liberal.
- 424. — Unnecessary seal may be disregarded.
- 425. — By power of attorney subsequently granted.

b. By Instrument in Writing

- 426. Where authority must be conferred by writing, ratification in writing necessary.
- 427. — Contracts for sale or leasing of land.
- 428. Written ratification not otherwise required.
- 429. "Lawfully authorized" under statute of frauds.

2. Implied Ratification

- 430. In general.
- 431. Variety of methods.
- 432. 1. By declaring approval.
- 433. 2. By proceeding to perform.
- 434. 3. By accepting benefits.
- 435. — Must take benefits with burdens.
- 436. — Duty to restore what he has received.

- 437. — Principal must have received proceeds—Money apparently free from trust.
- 438. — Knowledge of facts indispensable.
- 439. — Acceptance and receipt must have been voluntary and confirmatory.
- 440. — Mere efforts to avoid loss no ratification.
- 441-443. — Illustrations of general rule.
- 444, 445. — Other instances.
- 446. 4. By bringing suits based on validity of agent's act.
- 447, 448. — Illustrations.
- 449. — Suits based on invalidity of agents act no ratification.
- 450. — Delay in suing to disaffirm.
- 451. 5. By acquiescence.
- 452. — What meant by acquiescence.
- 453. — Mere silence or failure to repudiate.
- 454, 455. — How differs from estoppel.
- 456. — Elements of estoppel may be present.
- 457. — Other statements of the rule.
- 458. — Relations of the parties.
- 459, 460. Failure to dissent as between principal and agent.
- 461, 462. — As between principal and the other party.
- 463. Principal must act within a reasonable time.
- 464. Same rules apply to private corporations.
- 465. — And to municipal and quasi-municipal corporations.
- 466. How when assumed agent is a mere stranger.
- 467. — The contrary view.
- 468. — The true rule.
- 469. — Silence does not ratify if stranger acts in his own name.
- 470. — How when former agent continues to act.
- 471. Acquiescence coupled with conduct inconsistent with disapproval.

472-474. Illustrations of ratification by acquiescence.

475. Retaining in employment as ratification.

476. Rule of ratification by acquiescence applies only to principals.

VI. MANIFESTATION OF RATIFICATION

477. Manifestation necessary.

478. — To whom.

VII. PROOF OF THE RATIFICATION

479. Burden of proof.

480. Amount of proof—Liberal interpretation of facts.

481. Court or jury.

VIII. THE RESULTS OF RATIFICATION

482. What for this subdivision.

1. In General

483. Usually equivalent to precedent authority.

484. — Scope and duration.

485. — May be so alleged in pleadings.

486. Cannot affect intervening rights of third persons.

487. — Defenses, conditions, rights to cancel.

488. Law of what place governs.

489. Ratification irrevocable — Changing repudiation to ratification.

2. As between Principal and Agent

490. In general.

491. General effect to release agent, etc.

492, 493. — Limitations.

494. — Methods of ratification.

495. — Ratification of entire act.

496. — Knowledge of the facts.

497. — Agent's motives unimportant.

498. — Liberal interpretation.

499. — Acts of subagent.

500. Gives agent claim for compensation, reimbursement, etc.

501. Entitles principal to benefits as against agent.

3. As between Principal and other Party

502. In general.

a. Other Party against Principal

503. What considerations involved.

504, 505. 1. In contract cases.

506. 2. In tort cases.

507. — Unique character of doctrine.

b. Principal Against the Other Party.

508. What considerations involved here.

509, 510. 1. In contract—May principal ratify and enforce unauthorized contract?

511, 512. If agent and other party have previously consented to cancel the contract.

513. If other party has attempted to withdraw from the contract.

514. If agent and other party have done nothing to cancel the contract.

515. — The Wisconsin cases—Dodge v. Hopkins.

516-518. — The English cases—Bolton v. Lambert.

519-521. — American cases.

522. — Rules compared—The weight of authority.

523. — Applications of the rule.

524, 525. — Ratification by insured of insurance effected for his benefit.

526. — Defence based on ratification.

527. 2. In tort cases.

528. 3. Other acts creating rights or duties.

529. — Actions, ratification of unauthorized.

530. — Assignment of cause of action.

531. — Adding parties to existing actions.

532. — Attachment affidavits and bonds.

533. — Declaration of maturity to accelerate action.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 534. — Demand of payment, delivery, etc.
535. — Notice of abandonment.
536. — Notice of dishonor.
537. — Notice to quit.
538. — Options.
539. — Stoppage in transit. | 542. Ratification releases agent in contract cases.
543. — Limitations — Ratification after suit begun—Change in conditions.
544. — Failure of the ratification.
545. Ratification releases agent on justifiable trespass.
546. In tort case ratification does not release agent but charges principal. |
|---|---|
4. As Between Agent and Other Party.
- 540, 541. In general.

§ 343. Purpose of this chapter.—The matters thus far dealt with have been those which relate to the creation of authority before an act is done. Cases, however, not infrequently arise in which a person has done an act as agent for another which proves to be unauthorized, either because the authority was not broad enough to include it, or because though it once existed it had expired, or because, perhaps, there was no semblance at any time of authority and the act was based upon a mere gratuitous assumption of authority. In all of these cases, of course, the supposed principal is not bound and may repudiate the act when brought to his attention.

Suppose, however, on the other hand, that, when the act is brought to his attention, he approves of it, and would be glad, or at least willing, to have it regarded as an act done on his account; or, without expressly deciding upon it, proceeds to treat it as authorized; or, still further, that he is so indifferent towards it that he simply does nothing, leaving the matter in such a condition that an inference of approval is just as legitimate as the inference of disapproval, or, perhaps, is stronger. What is now the legal situation? May an unauthorized act be subsequently approved, either expressly or by implication, so as to give it legal effect; and if so what are the nature and effect of such approval?

§ 344. — It would seem, at first view, that such a question must be answered in the negative. If the act be a contract, and the principal was not in fact a party to it, for lack of authority, when it was made, how can any act on his part alone later make him a party to it? Are not the rights of parties to contracts ordinarily determined when the contract is made, and by mutual consent? Can a new party be added by his own act alone, when that was not provided for by the original agreement? If the act be a tort, and the alleged principal was not liable for it when it was done, how can any later act of his, short of some express assumption of liability for a consideration, operate to make him liable? Is a man liable for a tort, merely because he afterwards approves of it?

To these questions, the law gives no uncertain answer. The lack of prior authority, however anomalous it may seem, may often be supplied by subsequent approval, so as to give to the act the same effect, for many purposes, as though it had been originally authorized. This act or fact of approval is termed ratification, and the existence of this doctrine of ratification is one of the peculiar facts, heretofore referred to, which serve to give to agency, as a distinct subject, a place in the body of the law.

To consider this peculiar doctrine is the purpose of the present chapter. For convenience of treatment the matter may be arranged under the following heads.

I. What is meant by ratification; II. What acts may be ratified; III. Who may ratify; IV. Conditions of ratification; V. What amounts to ratification; and VI. The results of ratification.

WHAT IS MEANT BY RATIFICATION.

§ 345. In general.—The doctrine of ratification presents at once one of the most unique and characteristic chapters in the law of agency, and also one of the most important. The idea that one who was not actually a party to a contract—though he was one nominally,—may actually become one by some subsequent act of his own without new consideration or the assent of the other party; or that one who was not really a participant in a trespass or other wrong—though it was done on his account—may become responsible for it subsequently merely by assenting to it, would, as has been stated, seem very strange if it had not become so familiar.

It is, however, a very old idea. The Roman law had manifestations of it. It appears at an early date in our English law. The French Civil Code¹ and the German Civil Code² recognize and to some extent regulate it. In Scotch law it is usually termed homologation.³

In the early statements of the doctrine ratification was a thing analogous or comparable to authorization. "Ratihabitio mandato comparatur," was usually the form, but since Coke's time it has taken on

¹ See the translation by Wright.

² See the translation by Wang or Loewy.

³ See Erskine's Principles of the Law of Scotland, (20th ed.) par. 11; Bell's Principles, (10th ed.) par. 27.

a stronger aspect ; it has become equivalent and "mandato acquiratur" is now the almost universal form. Its retroactive force is now also equally emphasized, and the established maxim has become "Omnis ratihabito retrotrahitur, et mandato priori acquiratur."

§ 346. Fictitious character of the doctrine.—Two passages from opinions given in a recent case, in the House of Lords,⁴ may serve to still further emphasize the extraordinary character of this doctrine, if further emphasis is needed. Said Lord Macnaghten, "As a general rule, only persons who are parties to a contract, acting either by themselves or by an authorized agent, can sue or be sued on the contract. A stranger cannot enforce the contract, nor can it be enforced against a stranger. That is the rule, but there are exceptions. The most remarkable exception, I think, results from the doctrine of ratification as established in English law. That doctrine is thus stated [quoting from Tindal, C. J., in Wilson v. Tumman ⁵]. And so by a wholesome and convenient fiction, a person ratifying the act of another, who, without authority, has made a contract openly and avowedly on his behalf, is deemed to be, though in fact he was not, a party to the contract." Said Lord Lindley, "The mere statement of the general nature of what is meant by ratification shows that it rests on a fiction. Where a man acts with an authority conferred upon him, no fiction is introduced ; but where a man acts without authority and an authority is imputed to him, a fiction is introduced, and care must be taken not to treat this fiction as fact."

§ 347. Ratification defined.—Ratification may briefly be defined as the subsequent adoption and affirmance by one person of an act which another, without authority, has previously assumed to do for him while purporting to act as his agent.⁶

⁴ Keighley v. Durant, [1901] Ap. Cas. 240, 1 Br. Rul. Cas. 351. Some exception could be taken to Lord Macnaghten's statement for it is clear that, if the proper conditions exist to make the contract ratifiable, the assumed principal can scarcely be regarded as an entire stranger to it.

⁵ 6 M. & G. at p. 242.

⁶ See Keighley v. Durant, [1901] App. Cas. 240, 1 Br. Rul. Cas. 351; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96, 81 Am. Dec. 96; Smyth v. Lynch, 7 Colo. App. 383; Jameson v.

Coldwell, 25 Oreg. 199; Steffens v. Nelson, 94 Minn. 365; Minnich v. Darling, 8 Ind. App. 539.

"Ratification means the adoption by a person, as binding upon himself, of an act done in such relations that he may claim it as done for his benefit, although done under such circumstances as would not bind him, except for his subsequent assent, as where an act was done by a stranger having at the time no authority to act as his agent, or by an agent not having adequate authority." Ansonia v. Cooper, 64 Conn. 536

§ 348. Ratification not a form of authorization.—Proceeding now to consider the question more fully, it may, in the first place, be observed, that, although frequently said to be such, ratification is not a form of authorization. It is rather a cure for the lack of authorization, or a substitute for authorization. It presupposes that there was no authority; and there can, in the nature of the case, be no authority to do an act given after the act is done. The utmost that is then possible is to do something to cure that defect, or to provide some method of now dealing with the situation as though authority had been given.

§ 349. Ratification differs from estoppel.—Ratification, moreover, differs from estoppel, though they are often very closely associated. Estoppel requires that the party alleging it shall have done something or omitted to do something, in reliance upon the other party's conduct, by which he will now be prejudiced if the facts are shown to be different from those upon which he relied. Ratification requires no such change of condition or prejudice: if the principal ratifies, the other party may simply avail himself of it. As soon as ratification takes place, the act stands as an authorized one, and not merely as one whose effect the principal may be estoppel to deny.⁷ If there be ratification, there is no occasion to resort to estoppel. There may, however, be cases in which one may be estopped to deny that he has ratified.

The difference in effect may be striking: ratification is retroactive, estoppel operates upon that done after the act and in reliance upon it;

Ratification is a subsequent act. A contract cannot be ratified before it is made. Atlanta, etc., Ass'n v. Bollinger, 63 Ark. 212.

⁷ See Steffens v. Nelson, 94 Minn. 365; Stiebel v. Haigney, 134 App. Div. 516; Thompson v. Manufacturing Co., 60 W. Va. 42, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 311; Welch v. Brown, 46 Colo. 129; Blood v. La Serena Land & Water Co., 113 Cal. 221.

In Forsyth v. Day, 46 Me. 176, it is said: "The distinction between a contract intentionally assented to, or ratified in fact, and an estoppel to deny the validity of the contract, is very wide. In the former case the party is bound, because he intended to be; in the latter he is bound notwithstanding no such intention, because the other party will be prejudiced and defrauded by his conduct, unless the law treat him as legally bound. In the one case, the party is bound because this contract contains the necessary ingredients to bind him, including a consideration. In the other, he is not bound for these reasons, but because he has permitted the other party to act to his prejudice under such circumstances, that he must have known, or be presumed to have known, that such party was acting on the faith of his conduct and acts being what they purported to be, without apprising him to the contrary."

However, in St. Louis Gunning Adv. Co. v. Wanamaker, 115 Mo. App. 270, the court seems to be of the opinion that the question of ratification makes the whole act good from the beginning, while estoppel may only extend to so much as can be shown to be affected by the estopping conduct.⁸

§ 350. Ratification not a contract.—Ratification is an approval of a previous act or contract, which thereby becomes the act or contract of the person ratifying. It is not a contract to assume such liability. In the case of contracts, ratification is an affirmance of a contract already made, as it was made, and as of the date when it was made; and it is neither the making of a new contract to be bound by the old one, nor the making of a new contract in the terms of the old one.

§ 351. No new consideration required.—It therefore requires no new consideration to support it or the contract ratified. If the contract ratified was upon a sufficient consideration, it is enough.⁹

§ 352. Ratification wholly optional with principal.—Ratification is ordinarily a matter which is wholly optional with the principal. An act has been done which, by the hypothesis, was unauthorized. The principal may ratify it or he may repudiate it. The choice ordinarily is his only. No matter how advantageous ratification might be to himself or to the other party or to the agent, the principal is under no legal duty to ratify the act.¹⁰ ratification is always one of estoppel. Doughaday v. Crowell, 11 N. J. Eq. 201, seems to hold the same view.

⁸ Thus see Stiebel v. Haigney, supra. The defendant had bought, on speculation, certain stock through the plaintiffs, and had left it in the plaintiff's hands for further manipulation. All directions for buying and selling were given to the plaintiffs by one Ryan, through whom the defendant first opened his account. Ryan gave many of the orders without authority from the defendant. But each time as soon as the direction was complied with, the plaintiffs had sent the defendant notice thereof and the defendant had never made any objection. Finally, after there was a considerable balance due to the plaintiffs, they rendered an account to the defendant to which he assented. The suit was upon that account, and for the interest that had accrued upon it. The defendant claimed that, even although he had in conversation directly with the plaintiffs fully admitted the account, yet, inasmuch as the plaintiffs' action was all prior to the conversation, there could be no estoppel. This, the court admitted was true, but held that there was in the particular conversation a ratification, which would be good when made after all of the plaintiffs' actions were complete.

⁹ Grant v. Beard, 50 N. H. 129; Montgomery v. Crossthwait, 90 Ala. 553, 24 Am. St. R. 832, 12 L. R. A. 140; Drakely v. Gregg, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 242, 267, 19 L. Ed. 409; Pearsoll v. Chapin, 44 Pa. St. 9, 17; Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103; McLeod v. Morrison, 66 Wash. 683, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783.

¹⁰ Principal may repudiate unauthorized act even though it would be beneficial to him. Williams v. Storm, 46 Tenn. (6 Coldw.) 203.

If the principal decides to repudiate, he is not obliged to allege reasons for doing so; and, if he gives a reason which afterwards proves to be unfounded, the giving of such untenable reason cannot, in the absence of something to work an estoppel, be construed as a ratification.¹¹

WHAT ACTS MAY BE RATIFIED.

§ 353. In general.—The power to ratify an act done for and in behalf of another, necessarily presupposes in that other the power to do the act himself, both in the first instance¹² and at the time of ratification;¹³ it also presupposes the power in that other to have authorized the doing of the act in the first instance and also to authorize its doing at the time of ratification.¹⁴

§ 354. The general rule.—It is, therefore, the general rule that one may ratify the previous unauthorized doing by another in his behalf, of any act which he might then and could still lawfully do himself, and which he might then and could still lawfully delegate to such other to be done.¹⁵

§ 355. What acts need ratification.—It must be borne in mind that the only cases, in which a resort to ratification is necessary, are those in which everything which was done before or contemporaneously with the act in question, and all inferences which may properly be drawn from the things so done, are insufficient to support the act as an authorized one. The various elements which go to make up authority, the distinction between real limitations and secret instructions, the doctrine of apparent powers or of estoppel, the rules of construction, the distinctions between general and special agents, and the like,¹⁶ must all have been exhausted before there is any occasion to resort to ratification. What can be deemed to be authorized under any of these rules does not require ratification.

The persons involved must also be kept in mind. For it is very clear that there are cases in which, from the standpoint of third per-

¹¹ Brown v. Henry, 172 Mass. 559.

¹² Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156.

¹³ Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 332, 21 L. Ed. 933.

¹⁴ Post, § 385.

¹⁵ Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96, 81 Am. Dec. 96; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 619; Brady v. Mayor, 16 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 432; O'Conner v. Arnold, 53 Ind. 205; Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124; Supervisors v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668; Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22; Clarke v. Lyon Co., 8 Nev. 188; Etheridge v. Price, 73 Tex. 597; Moore v. Hupp, 17 Idaho, 232.

¹⁶ See post, Book II, Chapter I, on the Nature and Extent of Authority.

sons, the principal may be bound without recourse to ratification, when he would not be if the question arose between the agent and himself.¹⁷

The distinction between a real absence of or departure from authority, and a mere irregularity or informality in the exercise of a conceded authority, must be observed. For while this distinction is not always an easy one to draw, it is perfectly clear that not every slight irregularity or departure from instructions will invalidate an act, so as to make resort to ratification necessary.¹⁸

§ 356. — Waiver rather than ratification.—It seems also possible to say that, what is needed in some cases, is not so much ratification as waiver, however much one may hesitate to use that uncertain and unsatisfactory expression. An act wholly or essentially unauthorized requires ratification; but there may be irregularities in the performance of an authorized act so insignificant that they may be ignored; and there seem also to be cases in which, in the exercise of an admitted authority, there may be irregularities, deficiencies or excesses, not so insignificant that they may be ignored, nor yet so material as to really require ratification of the act as an unauthorized one, but as to which there may be such acquiescence, condonation or disregard as to entitle one to say that they have been waived. It seems very clear also that, as an act progresses, there may, from time to time, be such waivers of conditions or requirements that the act may be valid at completion without the aid of ratification.

§ 357. Torts may be ratified as well as unauthorized contracts.—It is immaterial whether the unauthorized act arises from contractual dealings, or results in or is founded upon a tort. Whoever, with knowledge of the facts, adopts as his own, or knowingly appropriates the benefits of, a wrongful act which another has, without authority, assumed to do in his behalf, will be deemed to have assumed the responsibility of the act.¹⁹ Ratification, of course, can not render valid acts which, when done, were so far illegal in themselves that they could not be lawfully authorized; but an act which is a trespass, simply because it was not authorized, may be ratified by the subsequent approval

¹⁷ See post, §§ 492, 493.

¹⁸ See post, Book III, Chapter I, on the Execution of Authority in General.

¹⁹ Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. Rep. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219; Wilson v. Tuman, 6 Man. & G. 242; Brewer v. Sparrow, 7 B. & C. 310; Morehouse v. Northrop, 33 Conn. 380, 89 Am. Dec. 211; Gris- wold v. Haven, 25 N. Y. 595, 82 Am. Dec. 380; Lee v. West, 47 Ga. 311; National Life Ins. Co. v. Minch, 53 N. Y. 144; Lane v. Black, 21 W. Va. 617; Tucker v. Jerris, 75 Me. 184; Judd v. Walker, 215 Mo. 312 (affirming 114 Mo. App. 128); Levy v. Abramsohn, 39 Misc. 781 (a case of partnership). See also Crockett v. Sibley, 3 Ga. App. 554.

of the person whose authority was needed; and so a person may assume liability by the adoption of an act which another has done in his behalf and as his agent, and which proves to be a trespass or other tort because, while it might lawfully be done under some circumstances, it was not lawfully done in the case in question.

§ 358. Void acts cannot be ratified—Voidable acts may be.—An act which was absolutely void at the time it was done cannot be ratified. If the principal himself could not lawfully have done the act, and certainly if it could not lawfully have been done by anyone, no subsequent ratification or confirmation can give it force or effect.²⁰ If, however, the act were voidable merely it can, of course, be rendered valid.²¹

This rule is of constant application to the contracts of private and public corporations. Thus if a contract cannot lawfully be made at all, or can be made only upon certain statutory conditions which have not been complied with, it cannot be rendered valid by subsequent ratification;²² and it has been held to be immaterial that the statute, which rendered the contract void, has since been repealed.²³ But if the contract be neither immoral nor illegal, and is such as the corporation might lawfully make under proper circumstances, the only defect being in the power of the agents who made it, it may lawfully be ratified as in the case of a private individual.²⁴

§ 359. Illegal acts cannot be ratified.—It is but a re-statement of the same rules to say that an act done in violation of law or in contravention of public policy, the performance of which, as has been seen, ²⁰ Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124; Chapman v. Lee, 47 Ala. 143; Henry v. State Bank, 131 Iowa, 97; Day v. McAllister, 15 Gray (Mass.), 433; Workman v. Wright, 33 Ohio St. 405, 31 Am. Rep. 546; Decuir v. Lejeune, 15 La. Ann. 569; Harrison v. McHenry, 9 Ga. 164, 52 Am. Dec. 435; Milford Borough v. Water Co., 124 Pa. 610, 3 L. R. A. 122; Rawlings v. Neal, 126 N. C. 271; Woodcock v. Merrimon, 122 N. C. 731; Christian B. & L. Ass'n v. Walton, 181 Pa. 201, 59 Am. St. Rep. 636.

²¹ Pearsoll v. Chapin, 44 Pa. St. 9; Negley v. Lindsay, 67 Pa. St. 217, 5 Am. Rep. 427.

²² Spence v. Wilmington Cotton Mills, 115 N. C. 210; La France Fire

Engine Co. v. Syracuse, 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 516; Packard v. Hayes, 94 Md. 233; Thompson v. West, 59 Neb. 677, 49 L. R. A. 337; Handy v. Globe Pub. Co., 41 Minn. 188, 4 L. R. A. 466, 16 Am. St. R. 695; Rue v. Mo. Pac. Ry. Co., 74 Tex. 474, 15 Am. St. R. 852; Savage v. Springfield, 83 Mo. App. 323; Markey v. School District, 58 Neb. 479; Supervisors v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668; Smith v. Newburgh, 77 N. Y. 130; Aldrich v. Collins, 3 S. Dak. 154; Baldwin v. Travis County, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 149; Plattsmouth v. Murphy, 74 Neb. 749.

²³ See Spence v. Wilmington Cotton Mills, supra.

²⁴ See post, § 367.

could not lawfully be delegated to an agent,²⁵ cannot be ratified so as to give it legal effect.²⁶

But liability for a merely unlawful but not legally void act may be incurred by ratification, as is frequently done in the case of trespasses and other torts.

§ 360. Forgery.—Whether a forgery is capable of ratification is a question upon which there is much conflict of opinion. In every forgery there are two parties interested,—the state in its efforts to detect and punish it as a crime; and the person whose responsibility has been pledged without his authority.

So far as the right of the state to pursue and punish the forger as a criminal is involved, it is certain that a subsequent ratification by the individual sought to be charged, will be unavailing to defeat it.²⁷ Any undertaking to suppress the crime would, as has been seen, be contrary to public policy and void.²⁸

From the standpoint of the individual, however, different considerations apply. So far as the act may be regarded merely as the act of an unauthorized agent, there is no doubt that it may be ratified like any other unauthorized act. If at the time of the signing, therefore, the person doing so purported to act as agent, the act might doubtless be ratified;²⁹ but such a case is not a case of forgery—it is simply a case of a profession of authority which does not exist, and, although it may be so made as to render the actor responsible for some other offense, it does not ordinarily constitute forgery.³⁰

²⁵ See ante, Chap. III.

²⁶ State v. Matthis, 1 Hill (S. C.), 37; Turner v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 55 Mich. 237; Harrison v. McHenry, supra. See Willoughby v. Allen, 25 R. I. 531; Hinsey v. Supreme Lodge, 138 Ill. App. 248.

²⁷ In McKenzie v. British Linen Co., 6 App. Cas. 82, Lord Blackburn says: "I wish to guard against being supposed to say that if a document with an unauthorized signature was uttered under such circumstances of intent to defraud that it amounted to the crime of forgery, it is in the power of the person whose name was forged to ratify it so as to make a defense for the forger against a criminal charge. I do not think he could. But if the person whose name was without authority used chooses to ratify the act, even though known to be a crime, he makes himself civilly responsible just as if he had originally authorized it. It is quite immaterial whether this ratification was made to the person who seeks to avail himself of it or to another." See also Williams v. Bayley, L. R., 1 H. L. 200; Howell v. McCrie, 36 Kan. 636, 59 Am. Rep. 584. So in case of embezzlement. State v. Frisch, 45 La. Ann. 1283.

²⁸ See ante, Chap. III.

²⁹ See Harper v. Devene, 10 La. Ann. 724.

³⁰ Rex v. Arscott, 6 C. & P. 408; Reg. v. White, 2 C. & K. 404, 2 Cox C. C. 210; Heilbonn's Case, 1 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 429; Mann v. People, 15 Hun (N. Y.), 155; People v.

§ 361. — Ratification.—The chief difficulty in applying the doctrine of ratification to the case of actual forgery appears to lie in the fact that, in such a case, the forger usually neither intends nor purports to be acting as agent at all. The success of the forgery depends usually upon its appearing to be the personal act of the one whose name is signed. As will be seen in a later section³¹ the doctrine of ratification can only apply where the act was done as agent; in some states it is not essential that he shall have purported to act as such; in England and in other states it is essential.

In Massachusetts, for example, where it is said to be not essential that the assumed agent shall have purported to act as such, it is held that there may be ratification of a forgery.³² In England, on the other

Mann, 75 N. Y. 484, 31 Am. Rep. 482; Com. v. Foster, 114 Mass. 311, 19 Am. Rep. 353; State v. Wilson, 28 Minn. 52.

³¹ Post § 386 et seq.

³² Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen, 447; Wellington v. Jackson, 121 Mass. 157; Central Nat. Bank v. Copp, 184 Mass. 328.

In Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, the court, after calling attention to the unquestioned fact that a merely unauthorized signing might be ratified, proceeds: "It is, as it seems to us, equally competent for the party, he knowing all the circumstances as to the signature and intending to adopt the note, to ratify the same, and thus confirm what was originally an unauthorized and illegal act. We are supposing the case of a party acting with full knowledge of the manner in which the note was signed, and the want of authority on the part of the actor to sign his name, but who understandingly and unequivocally adopts the signature, and assumes the note as his own. It is difficult to perceive why such adoption should not bind the party whose name is placed on the note as promisor, as effectually as if he had adopted the note when executed by one professing to be authorized, and to act as an agent, as indicated by the form of the signature, but who in fact had no authority. It is however urged that public policy forbids sanctioning the ratification of a forged note, as it may have a tendency to stifle a prosecution for the criminal offense. It would seem, however, that this must stand upon the general principles applicable to other contracts, and is only to be defeated where the agreement was upon the understanding that if the signature was adopted, the guilty party was not to be prosecuted for the criminal offense."

That there may be ratification.—

See also, Bartlett v. Tucker, 104 Mass. 336, 6 Am. Rep. 240; Wellington v. Jackson, 121 Mass. 157; Scott v. Bank, 23 Can. Sup. Ct. 277; Hefner v. Vandolah, 62 Ill. 483, 14 Am. Rep. 106; Livings v. Wiler, 32 Ill. 387; Chicago Edison Co. v. Fay, 164 Ill. 323; Fay v. Slaughter, 194 Ill. 157, 88 Am. St. R. 148, 56 L. R. A. 564; Thorn v. Bell, Lalor's N. Y. Suppl. (Hill & Den.) 430; Howard v. Duncan, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 174. [See also Trustees v. Bowman, 136 N. Y. 521; Commercial Bank v. Warren, 15 N. Y. 577]; Campbell v. Campbell, 133 Cal. 33; Montgomery v. Cross-thwait, 90 Ala. 553, 24 Am. St. R. 832, 12 L. R. A. 140, semble; First National Bank v. Gay, 63 Mo. 33, 21 Am. Rep. 430; Cravens v. Gillilan, 63 Mo. 28 [but contra Kelchner v. Morris, 75 Mo. App. 588. See also Dow v. Spenny, 29 Mo. 386; Ferry hand, where it is essential that he shall have purported to act as agent, it seems to be held that there may be no ratification of a forgery.³³ In the same line, it is said in Indiana, "One who commits the crime of forgery, by signing the name of another to a promissory note, does not assume to act as the agent of the person whose name is forged. Upon principle, there would seem to be no room to apply the doctrine of ratification or adoption of the act in such a case."³⁴

§ 362. — If the real meaning of the rule, that the act must have been done as agent, were that the assumed agent should have purported to bind another and not himself, then the requirement would be satisfied in the most emphatic way in the case of the alleged forgery. The person committing the alleged forgery certainly does not intend to bind himself; what he puts forward purports to be the act and signature of the assumed principal; if the signing had been done in the same way with authority, it would clearly bind the principal (since, while common, it is not essential that an authorized agent shall add anything to the signature of his principal to show that it was made by an agent); the difference between the authorized act and the forgery amounts then merely to an absence of authority, and it is the chief function of ratification to supply the lack of authority.

v. Taylor, 33 Mo. 323; Harris v. Tinder, 109 Mo. App. 563; Fitzpatrick v. School Commissioners, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 224, 46 Am. Dec. 76; Ofenstein v. Bryan, 20 App. D. C. 1.

³³ Brook v. Hook, L. R. 6 Exch. 89; but see M'Kenzie v. British Linen Co., 6 App. Cas. 82, especially per Lord Blackburn.

That there may not be ratification, except where estoppel is involved or there is a new consideration. McHugh v. Schuylkill County, 67 Pa. 391, 5 Am. Rep. 445; Shisler v. Vandike, 92 Pa. 447, 37 Am. Rep. 702; Christian B. & L. Ass'n v. Walton, 181 Pa. 201, 59 Am. St. Rep. 636; Shroyer v. Smeltzer, 38 Pa. Super. 400; Workman v. Wright, 33 Ohio St. 405, 31 Am. Rep. 546; Corser v. Paul, 41 N. H. 24, 77 Am. Dec. 753; Woodruff v. Munroe, 33 Md. 146; Henry v. Heeb, 114 Ind. 275, 5 Am. St. Rep. 613; Howell v. McCrie, 36 Kan. 636, 59 Am. Rep. 584. The latest case on this side of the question is Shinew v. First National Bank, 84 Ohio St. 297, 36 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1006.

A mere promise to pay a forged note does not constitute a ratification where there was no duty, no consideration, and nothing to work an estoppel. Barry v. Kirkland, 6 Ariz. 1, 40 L. R. A. 471; Owsley v. Phillips, 78 Ky. 517, 39 Am. Rep. 258. No ratification without full knowledge. Trustees v. Bowman, 136 N. Y. 521; First Nat. Bank v. Martin, 56 Kan. 247. No ratification where statements were equivocal. Smith v. Tramel, 68 Iowa, 488.

There can be no ratification so as to give the forger himself an action on the instrument. Wilson v. Hayes, 40 Minn. 531, 12 Am. St. Rep. 754, 4 L. R. A. 196.

³⁴ Henry v. Heeb, 114 Ind. 275, 5 Am. St. Rep. 613.

If the requirement of the rule were, that the act should have been done in the name and as the act of the alleged principal, then that requirement would be satisfied in the case of forgery. It is only when so made, that the forgery has any prospect of success.

If the requirement be, that the act shall purport to have been done by an agent, then the case fails, for the disclosure of that fact would usually defeat the forger's purpose. Moreover, merely signing as agent without authority, as has been already stated, is usually not a forgery.³⁵

§ 363. — To the objection that to permit ratification is to encourage the compromise of crime—that, in the words of the court in Indiana "it is impossible in such a case to attribute any motive to the ratifying party but that of concealing the crime and suppressing the prosecution,"³⁶ it may be replied in the language of the supreme court of Massachusetts, "that this must stand upon the general principles applicable to other contracts, and is only to be defeated where the agreement was upon the understanding that, if the signature was adopted, the guilty party was not to be prosecuted for the criminal offense."³⁷

§ 364. — Estoppel.—But whatever may be regarded as the true rule as to ratification, in the abstract, it is certain that the principal may, upon the discovery of the forgery, so conduct himself, as by permitting the paper to be taken upon the strength of his assertion of its genuineness; or by inducing the holder to change his position or intermit some remedial proceeding upon an assurance of its validity or a promise of protection; or, generally, by remaining silent as to its invalidity when in equity and good conscience he ought to have spoken, as to estop himself from asserting that it is not binding upon him.³⁸

The elements of estoppel, however, must be present, and if the party complaining has in no way been prejudiced by the conduct of the other no estoppel will result.³⁹

³⁵ Ante, § 360 and cases cited.

³⁶ In Henry v. Heeb, supra.

³⁷ In Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen (Mass.), 447.

³⁸ M'Kenzie v. British Linen Co., 6 App. Cas. 82 (but see Ogilvie v. West Australian Mtg. Co., [1896] A. C. 257); Casco Bank v. Keene, 53 Me. 103; Union Bank v. Middlebrook, 33 Conn. 95; Forsyth v. Day, 46 Me. 176; Buck v. Wood, 85 Me. 204; Crout v. DeWolf, 1 R. I. 393;

Rudd v. Matthews, 79 Ky. 479, 42 Am. Rep. 231 (see also Forsythe v. Bonta, 5 Bush (Ky.), 547); Cohen v. Teller, 93 Pa. 123; Fall River Nat. Bank v. Buffington, 97 Mass. 498; Hefner v. Dawson, 63 Ill. 403, 14 Am. Rep. 123; Continental Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 50 N. Y. 575; Lynch v. Richter, 10 Wash. 486.

³⁹ Second Nat. Bank v. Wentzel, 151 Pa. 142; Smith v. Tramel, 68 Iowa, 488; Dean v. Crall, 98 Mich.

III.

WHO MAY RATIFY.

§ 365. The subdivisions of this chapter are so intimately connected, that much which is applicable to one is equally true of another. Thus, carrying out the line of the last subdivision, it may be said to be the—

General rule, that whoever was capable of doing an act or entering into a contract which another, unauthorized, has assumed to do or make for him as his agent, and who is still capable of doing or entering into it, is capable of ratifying that act or contract, thereby rendering it good from the beginning, and the same as though he had himself originally done or made it.⁴⁰

§ 366. State may ratify.—Thus, beginning with the highest grade of organization known, it is settled that the state not only may have agents, binding it by virtue of a previous authorization, but it may also incur liability subsequently by ratifying acts and contracts made on its behalf.⁴¹

§ 367. Municipal corporations.—The rule extends also to municipal and quasi-municipal corporations, which may ratify all those acts and contracts,—and, as has been seen,⁴² those only—which they might and can lawfully authorize.⁴³

591, 39 Am. St. R. 571; Traders' Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 167 Mass. 315, 57 Am. St. R. 458, 36 L. R. A. 539.

⁴⁰ Wilson v. Dame, 58 N. H. 392; Williams v. Butler, 35 Ill. 544; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Morris, 67 Ill. 295; Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio St. 514; Sentell v. Kennedy, 29 La. Ann. 679; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

⁴¹ State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1, 37 Am. Rep. 395; Jewell Nursery Co. v. State, 4 S. Dak. 213; State v. Shaw, 28 Iowa, 67; State v. Exr. of Buttles, 3 Ohio St. 309.

But the state, unlike the individual may ratify a portion of the act only, or forgive certain violations of duty, without affecting all. State v. Buchanan (Tenn.), 52 S. W. 480. Where the governor has employed an expert without authority, but the legislature makes an appropriation to pay him, this does not ratify the contract of employment. Young v. State, 19 Wash. 634.

⁴² See ante, § 358.

⁴³ Moore v. Hupp, 17 Idaho, 232; Ft. Wayne v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 132 Ind. 558, 32 Am. St. R. 277, 18 L. R. A. 367; Union School Furn. Co. v. School District, 50 Kan. 727, 20 L. R. A. 136; Mound City v. Snoddy, 53 Kan. 126; School District v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Packard v. Hayes, 94 Md. 233; Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22; Highway Commissioners v. Van Dusan, 40 Mich. 429; Wheat v. Van Tine, 149 Mich. 314; True v. Commissioners, 83 Minn. 293; Supervisors v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668; Savage v. Springfield, 83 Mo. App. 323; Markey v. School District, 58 Neb. 479; Omaha v. Croft, 60 Neb. 57; Green v. Cape May, 41 N. J. L. 45; Smith v. New-

§ 368. Private corporations.—And this rule is as true in the case of a private corporation as of an individual. An act not within the corporate powers of the corporation cannot be rendered operative by ratification,⁴⁴ but if the act were one which the corporation might lawfully have done or authorized in the first instance, its unauthorized performance, in its behalf, may be ratified in the same manner and with the like effect as by an individual.⁴⁵

So, as in the case of an individual, it is not necessary that there should be a direct proceeding, with an express intention to ratify. It may be done indirectly, and by acts of recognition or acquiescence, or by acts inconsistent with repudiation or disapproval.⁴⁶

burgh, 77 N. Y. 130; O'Brien v. City of Niagara Falls, 65 Misc. 92; Hague v. Philadelphia, 48 Pa. St. 527; Silsby Mfg. Co. v. Allentown, 153 Pa. 319; In re Shiloh St., 165 Pa. 386, 44 Am. St. R. 671; Willoughby v. Allen, 25 R. I. 531; Aldrich v. Collins, 3 S. Dak. 154; Denison v. Foster (Tex. Civ. App.), 28 S. W. 1052; Commercial Elect. Co. v. Tacoma, 20 Wash. 288, 72 Am. St. R. 103; Koch v. Milwaukee, 89 Wis. 229; Findlay v. Pertz, 13 C. C. A. 559, 66 Fed. 427, 29 L. R. A. 188.

⁴⁴ "A contract which a corporation has no power to make, it has no power to ratify." Park Hotel Co. v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 86 Fed. 742, 30 C. C. A. 409 (citing California Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. Ed. 198; Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. Ed. 265; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. Ed. 55; Jacksonville, etc., Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 40 L. Ed. 515); Wheeler v. Home, etc., Bank, 188 Ill. 34, 80 Am. St. Rep. 161; National, etc., Ass'n v. Home Sav. Bank, 181 Ill. 35, 72 Am. St. R. 245, 64 L. R. A. 399; Buckeye Marble Co. v. Harvey, 92 Tenn. 115, 36 Am. St. R. 71, 18 L. R. A. 252; Thompson v. West, 59 Neb. 677, 49 L. R. A. 337; Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230; Bangor Boom Corp. v. Whiting, 29 Me. 123.

⁴⁵ Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. 426; Fleckner v. U. S. Bank, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 363, 5 L. Ed. 631; Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. 1, 9 Am. Dec. 111; Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 2 Conn. 252, 7 Am. Dec. 271; Peterson v. Mayor, 17 N. Y. 449; Baker v. Cotter, 45 Me. 236; Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205, 37 Am. Dec. 203; Whitewell v. Warner, 20 Vt. 425; City of Detroit v. Jackson, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 106; Church v. Sterling, 16 Conn. 388; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 4 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 75, 43 Am. Dec. 470. See also Schlesinger v. Forest Products Co., 78 N. J. L. 637, 138 Am. St. R. 627, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 347; Keenan v. Lauritzen Malt Co., 57 Wash. 367.

⁴⁶ Singer Mfg. Co. v. Belgart, 84 Ala. 519; Tabler v. Sheffield, etc., Co., 87 Ala. 305; Indianapolis, etc., R. R. Co. v. Morris, 67 Ill. 295; Cairo & St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 82 Ill. 73, 25 Am. Rep. 299; Wolf Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 107 Ill. App. 58; Pacific R. R. Co. v. Thomas, 19 Kan. 256; Sherman Center Town Co. v. Morris, 43 Kan. 282, 19 Am. St. R. 134; Brown v. Winnisimmet Co., 11 Allen (Mass.), 326; Sherman v. Fitch, 98 Mass. 59; Lyndeborough Glass Co. v. Mass. Glass Co., 111 Mass. 315; Arlington v. Peirce, 122 Mass. 270; Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22; Scott v. Methodist Church,

The rule extends to torts ⁴⁷ as well as contracts, and to frauds, misrepresentations and deceits practiced in the course of the business.⁴⁸

§ 369. Partners.—Partners, also, are undoubtedly competent to ratify what they might previously have authorized, and, within the same limits, one partner may ratify for the firm, and the ratification by the whole partnership may be implied from acquiescence after knowledge brought home to one, under such circumstances as to make the knowledge and approval of one the knowledge and approval of all.⁴⁹

§ 370. Infants.—In the case of the infant, the expression “ratification” seems often to be unconsciously used in two different senses. One, the approval by a former infant, after attaining majority, of acts which during his infancy were voidable because he was an infant; and the other, the one now here involved, the question of ratification of what one as his agent has assumed to do without authority. As has been seen,⁵⁰ it is usually held that, as an infant cannot appoint an agent, 50 Mich. 528; Hitchcock v. Griffin & Skelley Co., 99 Mich. 447, 41 Am. St. R. 624; Washington Savings Bank v. Butchers' Bank, 107 Mo. 133, 28 Am. St. R. 405; Thomas v. City Nat'l Bank, 40 Neb. 501, 24 L. R. A. 263; German Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 59 Neb. 7; Bennett v. Millville Imp. Co., 67 N. J. L. 320; Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207; Scott v. Middletown, etc., R. R. Co., 86 N. Y. 200; Dupignac v. Bernstrom, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 677, affirmed 76 App. Div. 105; Moyer v. East Shore Terminal Co., 41 S. Car. 300, 44 Am. St. R. 709, 25 L. R. A. 48; Taylor Co. v. Baines Co., 31 Tex. Civ. App. 385; North Point, etc., Co. v. Utah, etc., Canal Co., 16 Utah, 246, 67 Am. St. R. 607, 40 L. R. A. 851; Dexter Horton & Co. v. Long, 2 Wash. 435, 26 Am. St. R. 867; Moody Co. v. Leek, 99 Wis. 49; Law v. Cross, 1 Black (U. S.), 533, 17 L. Ed. 185; Gold Mining Co. v. Nat'l Bank, 96 U. S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648; Augusta, etc., R. Co. v. Kittel, 52 Fed. 63, 2 C. C. A. 615; Nebraska Farm Loan Co. v. Bell, 53 Fed. 326, 7 C. C. A. 253; Prentiss Tool Co. v. Godchaux, 66 Fed. 234, 13 C. C. A. 420; Central Trust Co. v. Ashville Land Co., 72 Fed. 361, 18 C. C. A. 590; American Exch. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 82 Fed.

961, 27 C. C. A. 274; McKenzie v. Poorman Silver Mines, 88 Fed. 111, 31 C. C. A. 409; G. V. B. Mining Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 95 Fed. 23, 36 C. C. A. 633; Kessler v. Ensley Co., 123 Fed. 546.

⁴⁷ Nims v. Mt. Hermon School, 160 Mass. 177, 39 Am. St. R. 467, 22 L. R. A. 364 (following Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. R. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219).

⁴⁸ Flaherty v. Atlantic Lumber Co., 58 N. J. Eq. 467; Garrison v. Electrical Works, 55 N. J. Eq. 708.

⁴⁹ Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168. See Chouteau v. Goddin, 39 Mo. 229, 90 Am. Dec. 462; Baldwin v. Leonard, 39 Vt. 260, 94 Am. Dec. 324; Cassidy v. Saline Co. Bank, 14 Okla. 532 (by one partner of the other's unauthorized act); Gutheil v. Gilmer, 27 Utah, 496; Rosenthal v. Hasberg, 84 N. Y. Supp. 290; Levy v. Abramsohn, 39 N. Y. Misc. 781 (one partner's ratification of the other partner's act on behalf of the firm); Taylor v. Herron, 72 Kan. 652 (same kind of case); Clippinger v. Starr, 130 Mich. 463.

⁵⁰ See ante, § 142; Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124; Fonda v. Van Horne, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 631, 30 Am. Dec. 77.

he cannot, of course, while still an infant, ratify the act of one who has, unauthorized, assumed to act for him. But as the reason for this holding is, as has been seen,⁵¹ believed to be unsound, the true rule will doubtless be held to be that an infant, like any other person, may ratify what he might authorize, and with the same effect. Under the older rule, the appointment being void, there could be no ratification after he became of age;⁵² under the modern rule there could undoubtedly be.

§ 371. Insane person—Person under duress.—Upon the same principles which govern the creation of agency in the first instance, there can be no ratification of the unauthorized act of an agent if, at the time of the alleged ratification, the principal was insane.⁵³ On the other hand, one on whose behalf an act has been done during his insanity, may after his sanity is restored, ratify the act.⁵⁴ So likewise where a man's consent to an act on his behalf is obtained through duress, there can be no ratification while he is under the same duress.⁵⁵

§ 372. Married women.—It has been seen that, at common law, a married woman could not act by agent,⁵⁶ and she had clearly no capacity to bind herself by ratification. Under the modern statutes, however, which more or less completely remove her common law disabilities, she may, like any other person, ratify what she might have authorized. This rule is of very constant application in cases wherein her husband has assumed to act for her, and she has approved of his acts with full knowledge of the facts.⁵⁷ But, as in any other case, she cannot thus do indirectly what she could not do directly, and no amount of alleged ratification can validate that which it was beyond her capacity to authorize.⁵⁸

⁵¹ See ante, § 142.

⁵² Trueblood v. Trueblood, 8 Ind. 195, 65 Am. Dec. 756; Waples v. Hastings, 3 Harr. (Del.) 403. But see Ward v. Steamboat, 8 Mo. 358.

⁵³ Wilke v. Wackershauser, 143 Iowa, 107.

⁵⁴ Blinn v. Schwarz, 177 N. Y. 252, 101 Am. St. R. 806, aff'g 63 App. Div. 25.

⁵⁵ Henry v. State Bank, 131 Iowa, 97.

⁵⁶ See ante, § 148.

⁵⁷ Reed v. Morton, 24 Neb. 760, 8 Am. St. R. 247, 1 L. R. A. 736; McClintock v. South Penn Oil Co., 146 Pa. 144, 28 Am. St. R. 785; Royal Society v. Campbell, 17 R. I. 402, 13

L. R. A. 601; Ferguson v. Harris, 39 S. Car. 323, 39 Am. St. R. 731; Schloss v. Solomon, 97 Mich. 526; Hoene v. Pollak, 118 Ala. 617, 72 Am. St. R. 189; Buchanan v. Hubbard, 119 Ind. 187; Pattison v. Babcock, 130 Ind. 474; Edwards v. Barnes, 55 Ill. App. 38; Haar v. Benefit Ass'n, 71 Hun (N. Y.), 554; Kirkpatrick v. Pease, 202 Mo. 471. There are many others. Knowledge of the facts is here, as elsewhere, essential. Post, § 393; Brown v. Wright, 58 Ark. 20, 21 L. R. A. 467; Brown v. Rouse, 104 Cal. 672.

⁵⁸ McFarland v. Heim, 127 Mo. 327, 48 Am. St. R. 629. See also Rawlings v. Neal, 126 N. C. 271.

Where acts done by her during coverture are merely voidable, they doubtless may be ratified by her after that disability is removed; but where contracts made by her during coverture are void, acts done when she becomes discoverd must, in order to amount to a ratification, be practically equivalent to a new contract.⁵⁹

§ 373. Executor, administrator, etc.—An executor or administrator has usually no power to bind the estate by executory contracts, or to subject it to liability for his torts;⁶⁰ and cannot therefore usually ratify acts done in the life time of the deceased,⁶¹ but where acts have been done for the deceased or his estate, which the representative might have authorized, and which he deems beneficial to the estate, he may ratify and enforce them,⁶² and where he has power to bind the estate he may doubtless do it by ratification when the necessary conditions of knowledge and the like are present, but not otherwise.⁶³

§ 374. When agent may ratify.—An agent cannot ratify his own unauthorized act;⁶⁴ nor can one of two joint agents ratify the act of his coagent;⁶⁵ but where the act, which when done by one agent was unauthorized, is within the general power of another agent of the same principal, the doing of the act by the first agent may be ratified by the second.⁶⁶

“Ratification by an agent,” it is said,⁶⁷ “depends upon certain facts which must affirmatively be made to appear: 1. The agent ratifying must have had general power to do himself the act which he ratifies. 2. They must both be agents of the same principal, and the agent whose act is in question must have professed to act as agent of the common principal.”

⁵⁹ Nesbitt v. Turner, 155 Pa. 429; Brown v. Bennett, 75 Pa. 420; Buchanan v. Hazzard, 95 Pa. 240. See Dempsey v. Wells, 109 Mo. App. 470.

⁶⁰ See II Woerner's Am. Law of Administration, 756-7.

⁶¹ Bundoora Park Estate Co. v. Fisher, 20 Victorian L. R. 460, 16 Australian L. Times, 107.

⁶² Foster v. Bates, 12 Mees. & Wels. 226; Seaver v. Weston, 163 Mass. 202. But see Whiting v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 240, 37 Am. Rep. 317.

⁶³ Weber v. Bridgman, 113 N. Y. 600; Reeves v. Brayton, 36 S. Car. 384.

⁶⁴ Trudo v. Anderson, 10 Mich. 357, 81 Am. Dec. 795; Hotchin v. Kent, 8

Mich. 526; Bi-Spool Sew. Mach. Co. v. Acme Mfg. Co., 153 Mass. 404; Lyndon Mill Co. v. Lyndon Lit. & Bib. Institution, 63 Vt. 581, 25 Am. St. R. 783; Britt v. Gordon, 132 Iowa, 431; Driscoll v. Modern Brotherhood, 77 Neb. 282; Young v. Inman, 146 Iowa, 492.

⁶⁵ Penn v. Evans, 28 La. Ann. 576.

⁶⁶ Mound City Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Huth, 49 Ala. 530; Whitehead v. Wells, 29 Ark. 99; Dorsey v. Abrams, 85 Pa. 299; Palmer v. Cheney, 35 Iowa, 281. See also Platt v. Francis, — Mo. —, 152 S. W. 332.

⁶⁷ Ironwood Store Co. v. Harrison, 75 Mich. 197. See also Hartman Steel Co. v. Hoag, 104 Iowa, 269.

This doctrine is frequently applied to the ratification of the acts of subordinate agents by the superior agents of corporations.⁶⁸

§ 375. — Subagents.—An agent who has the power to appoint a subagent and give him authority may ratify his act (if within the agent's authority) and thereby make it binding on the agent's principal.⁶⁹

So where an agent, who has not authority to employ subagents for his principal, has employed one,—who thereby becomes the agent of the agent and for whose acts the agent is responsible,—acts of such subagent in excess of the authority given him by the agent may be ratified by the latter so as to make him liable for them to the principal.⁷⁰

IV.

CONDITIONS OF RATIFICATION.

§ 376. Certain conditions must be satisfied.—In order to effect a ratification, certain conditions must be satisfied. The following are the most important:—

§ 377. I. Principal must have been identified.—The act to be ratified must have been done by one claiming to represent the person ratifying or persons of his description.⁷¹ It is not necessary that the intended principal be known to the agent at the time, but it is necessary that the person for whom the agent professes to act must be a person who is then capable of being ascertained. He may be one of a class of persons, as where the agent acts for the "owners" of certain property, or effects insurance "for the benefit of those concerned," although he does not know the particular persons who answer this description.⁷²

⁶⁸ Thus see Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Mahoney, 82 Ill. 73, 25 Am. Rep. 299; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Rodrigues, 47 Ill. 188, 95 Am. Dec. 484; Toledo, etc., R. R. Co. v. Prince, 50 Ill. 26; Darst v. Gale, 83 Ill. 136; Wood v. Whelen, 93 Ill. 155; Reichwald v. Commercial Hotel Co., 106 Ill. 439; Ballston Spa Bank v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 129; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Mahoney Mining Co., 5 Sawy. (U. S. C. C.) 255, Fed. Cas. No. 392, s. c. 104 U. S. 192, 26 L. Ed. 707; Sherman v. Fitch, 98 Mass. 59; Walworth Co. Bank v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 16 Wis. 629; Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207; First National Bank v. Kimberlands, 16 W. Va. 555; Burrill v.

Nahant Bank, 2 Mete. (Mass.) 163, 35 Am. Dec. 395; Chouteau v. Allen, 70 Mo. 290; Lyndeborough Glass Co. v. Mass. Glass Co., 111 Mass. 315; Olcott v. Tioga R. R. Co., 27 N. Y. 546, 84 Am. Dec. 298; Union Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Masten, 3 Fed. 881; Pacific R. Co. v. Thomas, 19 Kan. 256.

⁶⁹ Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 89.

⁷⁰ Cowley v. Fabien, 204 N. Y. 566.

⁷¹ Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 226.

⁷² Hagedorn v. Oliverson, 2 M. & Selw. 485; Routh v. Thompson, 13 East, 274; Lucena v. Craufurd, 1 Taunt. 325; Stillwell v. Staples, 19 N. Y. 401.

So, also, where the agent acts for the administrators of A's estate,⁷³ or for the heirs of B,⁷⁴ though he does not know who these persons are, his act may be ratified by the persons so described. Neither is it necessary that the person represented should have been specifically named, but there must be such a description of him as shall amount to a reasonable designation of the person intended to be bound.⁷⁵

§ 378. II. Principal must have been in existence.—It follows necessarily from the doctrine of the preceding section, as well as from the retroactive effect of ratification, that the principal must also have been in existence, either actually or in contemplation of law, at the time the act to be ratified was done.⁷⁶

§ 379. — Administrator, assignee, etc.—In the case of the administrator, who is appointed and ratifies after the act,⁷⁷ the conclusion may be justified by the doctrine of relation, which causes the grant to operate from the date of the decease. And the same doctrine applies in the case of the assignee of bankrupts, and the like.⁷⁸

§ 380. — Corporations subsequently organized.—The question whether a corporation, subsequently organized, may ratify acts and contracts done or made in its behalf, before its organization, has given much difficulty, and led to confusion in the authorities. The English courts have carried the doctrine to its logical conclusion, and hold that there can be no ratification as such,⁷⁹ though "it does not follow from that," said Jessel, M. R., "that acts may not be done by the company, after its formation which make a new contract to the same effect as the old one, but that stands on a different principle."⁸⁰ The distinction here indicated is sustained by the weight of authority. The ⁷³ Foster v. Bates, supra.

⁷⁴ Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437.

⁷⁵ Watson v. Swann, 11 C. B. (N. S.) 756, 771; Kelner v. Baxter, L. R. 2 C. P. 174.

⁷⁶ Kelner v. Baxter, L. R. 2 C. P. 174.

⁷⁷ Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 226.

⁷⁸ Thus in Kelner v. Baxter, supra, it is said by Willes J.: "Ratification can only be by a person ascertained at the time of the act done,—by a person in existence either actually or in contemplation of law; as in the case of assignees of bankrupts and administrators, whose title, for the protection of the estate, vests by relation. The case of an executor requires no such ratification, inasmuch as he takes from the will."

⁷⁹ Kelner v. Baxter, L. R. 2 C. P. 174; Scott v. Ebury, L. R. 2 C. P. 255; Melhado v. Railway Co., L. R. 9 C. P. 503; In re Empress Engineering Co., 16 Ch. Div. 125; In re Northumberland Ave. Hotel Co., 33 Ch. Div. 16; Howard v. Patent Ivory Mfg. Co., 38 Ch. Div. 156; Natal Land Co. v. Pauline Colliery Co., [1904] App. Cas. 120.

⁸⁰ In re Empress Eng. Co., supra.

corporation cannot, by its subsequent act of approval, make itself a party to the very contract made,⁸¹ so as to be bound by it from the date of its making.

§ 381. — Novation.—There may undoubtedly, in such a case, be a novation. That is, the corporation and the parties to the contract may mutually agree that the corporation shall be substituted in place of the promoter; and this may doubtless be done by implication as well as in express terms. The difficulty in most cases is to find any evidence of such a novation.

§ 382. — Adoption.—It is also said, that though there can not be ratification, in its proper sense, of the contract, the corporation may nevertheless “adopt” that contract as its own from the date of the adoption, even though the contract so adopted imposes liabilities dating from the time it was made.⁸² This “adoption” it is said, need not be made formally or expressly, but may be effected in any way in which such a contract might be made originally by the corporation.

⁸¹ Abbott v. Hapgood, 150 Mass. 248, 15 Am. St. R. 193, 5 L. R. A. 586.

⁸² That there may be ratification. Oakes v. Cattaraugus Water Co., 143 N. Y. 430, 26 L. R. A. 544; Mesinger v. Mesinger Bicycle Saddle Co., 44 N. Y. App. Div. 26; Stanton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 272, 21 Am. St. R. 110; Whitney v. Wyman, 101 U. S. 392, 25 L. Ed. 1050; Schreyer v. Turner Flour Co., 29 Oreg. 1.

That there may be adoption but not ratification.—McArthur v. Times Printing Co., 48 Minn. 319, 31 Am. St. R. 653; Battelle v. N. W., etc., Paving Co., 37 Minn. 89; Smith v. Parker, 148 Ind. 127; Grape Sugar Co. v. Small, 40 Md. 395; Wasser v. Western Land Co., 97 Minn. 460; Richardson v. Graham, 45 W. Va. 134; Pittsburg, etc., Min. Co. v. Quintrell, 91 Tenn. 693; Huron Printing Co. v. Kittleson, 4 S. Dak. 520; Weatherford, etc., R. Co. v. Granger, 86 Tex. 350, 40 Am. St. R. 837; Colorado Land Co. v. Adams, 5 Colo. App. 190; Robbins v. Bangor Co., 100 Me. 496, 1 L. R. (N. S.) 963; Dubuque Female College v. District Township, 13 Iowa, 555.

Other theories.—Liability may be assumed by taking benefits. Bells Gap R. Co. v. Christy, 79 Pa. 54, 21 Am. Rep. 39; Paxton Cattle Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 21 Neb. 621, 59 Am. Rep. 852; Low v. Conn., etc., R. Co., 45 N. H. 370; Buffington v. Bardon, 80 Wis. 635; Robbins v. Bangor Co., supra; where they are the benefits of the particular contract and are received under circumstances reasonably justifying an inference of consent to be bound. Weatherford R. Co. v. Granger, 86 Tex. 350, 40 Am. St. R. 837.

May assume liability by express agreement. Reichwald v. Commercial Hotel Co., 106 Ill. 439; Wood v. Whelen, 93 Ill. 153; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Sage, 65 Ill. 328, 16 Am. Rep. 587.

Cannot ratify or adopt but may make new contract on same terms. Pennell v. Lathrop, 191 Mass. 357; Koppel v. Massachusetts Brick Co., 192 Mass. 223.

That it is immaterial whether it be called ratification or adoption. Schreyer v. Turner Flouring Co., 29 Oreg. 1.

It may, therefore, it is said, "be inferred from acts or acquiescence on the part of the corporation, or its authorized agents, as any similar original contract might be shown."⁸³

"But the liability of the corporation under such circumstances," it is said in one case,⁸⁴ "does not rest upon any principle of the law of agency, but upon the immediate and voluntary act of the company. Although the acts of a corporation, with reference to the contracts made by promoters in its behalf before its organization, are frequently loosely termed 'ratification,' yet a 'ratification,' properly so called, implies an existing person on whose behalf the contract might have been made at the time. There cannot, in law, be a ratification of a contract which could not have been made binding on the ratifier at the time it was made, because the ratifier was not then in existence. What is called 'adoption' in such cases is, in legal effect, the making of a contract of the date of the adoption, and not as of some former date."

The chief difficulty in the way of the acceptance of this doctrine of adoption, rather than ratification of the contract, lies in the fact that there seems not to be any such doctrine known to our law.

§ 383. — Continuing offer.—It has also been suggested that the proposal of the other party may be regarded as a continuing offer, which may be accepted by the corporation when it comes into existence, and thus create a real contract with the corporation. This acceptance may be express or may be implied from conduct.

Two difficulties present themselves in connection with this view. One, that to treat the so-called contract with the promoters as a continuing offer to the corporation, is, in many cases at least, contrary to the facts; and, second, the conduct from which acceptance of the offer is inferred seems often to have been too liberally construed in order to accomplish the result. Nevertheless, this theory is, perhaps, the most satisfactory one which has been suggested.

The proper solution of the difficulty, however, seems not to be a question in the law of agency.

That the contract may be expressly or by implication upon the term or condition that the promoter or agent shall be deemed to be released when the corporation comes into existence and he transfers and the corporation assumes the benefit of the contract. Heckman's Estate, 172 Pa. 185; Chicago Building Co. v. Talbotton Creamery Co., 106 Ga. 84;

Shields v. Clifton Hill Land Co., 94 Tenn. 123, 45 Am. St. R. 700, 26 L. R. A. 509; Case Mfg. Co. v. Soxman, 138 U. S. 431, 34 L. Ed. 1019.

⁸³ McArthur v. Times Printing Co., supra; Schreyer v. Turner Flouring Co., supra.

⁸⁴ McArthur v. Times Printing Co., supra.

§ 384. III. Transaction must still stand.—The transaction must also still stand, and be open to ratification,—there must be something to ratify. Hence if, before the principal has ratified a contract, the agent and the other party have rescinded what had been done,⁸⁵ or,—although the authorities differ as to this,⁸⁶ if the other party has withdrawn from the proposed contract, there can be no effective ratification. Thus, where an agent without authority made a payment, but the payee discovered that the payment was unauthorized and returned the money, it was held that no subsequent ratification could defeat an action to recover the debt from the principal.⁸⁷ And so where a mere volunteer had negotiated insurance, it was held that he might cancel and surrender the policies before the assumed principal knew of and ratified them.⁸⁸ After ratification, however, the agent has no right to return to the other party money received by him by virtue of the contract ratified.⁸⁹

§ 385. IV. Principal must have present ability.—As has been seen, the power to ratify presupposes a present ability in the principal to do the act himself or to authorize it to be done.⁹⁰ If, therefore, for any reason, the principal has become, since the doing of the act to be ratified, incapable of doing the act himself and of authorizing it to be done, he is incapable of ratifying it.⁹¹

And so if third persons acquire rights after the act is done and before it has received the sanction of the principal, the ratification cannot ordinarily operate retrospectively so as to overreach and defeat those rights.⁹²

⁸⁵ Walter v. James, L. R. 6 Ex. 124; Stillwell v. Staples, 19 N. Y. 401. See also Cockerham v. Perot, 48 La. Ann. 209.

⁸⁶ See post, § 514 et seq.

⁸⁷ Walter v. James, supra.

⁸⁸ Stillwell v. Staples, supra.

⁸⁹ Montgomery v. Pacific Coast Land Bureau, 94 Cal. 284, 28 Am. St. Rep. 122.

⁹⁰ Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96, 81 Am. Dec. 96. "Ratification can only be made when the principal possesses at the time the power to do the act ratified. He must be able at the time to make the contract to which, by his ratification he gives validity." Field, J., in McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591. See also Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; McDonald v.

McCoy, 121 Cal. 55; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 676, 19 L. Ed. 1040; Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 158.

⁹¹ Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 332, 21 L. Ed. 933; Dobbs v. Atlas Elevator Co., 22 S. D. 226 (where the plaintiff seeks to recover past rents which she claims as assignee of a principal lease, and can show no previous authority to the agent who made the lease on behalf of the lessor, and ratification by the lessor only after the lessor has already conveyed the premises even to the plaintiff, she has failed to show a good lease or a cause of action) but see s. c. on rehearing 25 S. D. 177.

⁹² Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612 (where before ratification of an unauthorized assignment

An exception to the rule is found in the case of the ratification of insurance effected for the benefit of a principal: he may ratify even after knowledge of the loss, though he could not then himself effect insurance.⁹³

§ 386. V. Act must have been done as agent.—Since the effect of ratification is to confirm the act as done, it is indispensable, in order to have an act of agency, that the act ratified must have been done by the assumed agent as agent and in behalf of a principal. If the act was done by him as principal and on his own account, or on account of some third person, it cannot thus be ratified.⁹⁴

of an account, the debtor had been served with garnishment process at the suit of the principal's creditor); Stoddart's Case, 4 Ct. of Cl. 511 (ratification of the purchase of cotton by an agent without authority, after it had been seized by the U. S. government as enemy's goods, is too late to give the principal a claim against the government under the statute). See also post, § 486.

⁹³ Williams v. North China Ins. Co., 1 C. P. Div. 757.

⁹⁴ Keighley v. Durant, [1901] A. C. 240, 1 B. Rul. Cas. 351, (overruling Durrant v. Roberts, [1900] 1 Q. B. 629); Wilson v. Tumman, 6 M. & G. 236; Morris v. Salberg, 22 Q. B. Div. 614; Marsh v. Joseph, [1897] 1 Ch. 213; Fraser v. Sweet, 13 Manitoba L. R. 147, 2 Br. Rul. Cas. 254; Smith v. Varawa, 5 Comw. L. R. (Austr.) 68; Croader v. McAlister, [1909] Queensland S. R. 203; Lonwrens v. Clulee, 1 So. Afr. L. R. (Prob. Div.) 192; Ferris v. Snow, 130 Mich. 254; Mitchell v. Minnesota Fire Ass'n, 48 Minn. 278; Schlessinger v. Forest Products Co., 78 N. J. L. 637, 138 Am. St. R. 627, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 347. See also Puget Sound Lumber Co. v. Krug, 89 Cal. 237; Ilfield v. Ziegler, 40 Colo. 401; Russo v. Maresca, 72 Conn. 51; Balloch v. Hooper, 6 Mack. (D. C.) 421, aff'd 146 U. S. 363, 36 L. Ed. 1008; Florida, etc., R. Co. v. Varnedoe, 81 Ga. 175; Linn v. Alameda, etc., Co., 17 Idaho, 45; Collins v. Waggoner, Breese (1 Ill.), 26; Beveridge v. Rawson, 51 Ill. 504; Grund

v. Van Vleck, 69 Ill. 478; Roby v. Cossitt, 78 Ill. 638; Merritt v. Kewanee, 175 Ill. 537; Western Pub. House v. Rock Tp., 84 Iowa, 101; Wycoff v. Davis, 127 Iowa, 399; Harrison v. Mitchell, 13 La. Ann. 260; Taliafero v. First Nat'l Bank, 71 Md. 200; Allred v. Bray, 41 Mo. 484, 97 Am. Dec. 283; Herd v. Bank of Buffalo, 66 Mo. App. 643; Vanderbilt v. Turnpike Co., 2 N. Y. 479, 51 Am. Dec. 350; Brainerd v. Dunning, 30 N. Y. 211; Garvey v. Jarvis, 46 N. Y. 310, 7 Am. Rep. 335; Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327; Collins v. Suau, 7 Robt. (30 N. Y. Super. Ct.) 623; Travis v. Scriba, 12 Hun (N. Y.), 391; Stanton v. Granger, 125 App. Div. 174; Ramsay v. Miller, 135 App. Div. 503 (there is a dictum to the contrary in Johnson v. Doll, 11 Misc. (N. Y.) 345); Rawlings v. Neal, 126 N. Car. 271; Williams v. Stearns, 59 Ohio St. 28; Johnson v. Insurance Co., 66 Ohio St. 6; Backhaus v. Buells, 43 Or. 558; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Gazzam, 32 Pa. St. 340; Minder, etc., Land Co. v. Brustuen, 24 S. D. 537; Fish, etc., Co. v. New Eng. Homestake Co., 27 S. D. 221, 130 N. W. 841; Commercial Bank v. Jones, 18 Tex. 811; Etheridge v. Price, 73 Tex. 597; Virginia Pocahontas Coal Co. v. Lambert, 107 Va. 368, 122 Am. St. R. 860, 13 Ann. Cas. 277; Shuman v. Steinel, 129 Wis. 422, 116 Am. St. R. 961, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1048, 9 Ann. Cas. 1064; In re Roanoke Furnace Co., 166 Fed. 944.

And not only must the assumed agent have intended to act as agent for the person ratifying, but, as declared by the House of Lords after

The fact that a man purported to act as agent may be shown by his own declarations at the time of the act. Landgrof v. Tanner, 152 Ala. 511. See also cases cited ante, § 287.

In Durant v. Roberts, overruled in Keighley v. Durant, supra, Roberts, having been authorized by Keighley Maxsted & Co. to buy wheat on joint account of himself and them at a fixed price, made a purchase of the plaintiffs in excess of his authority at a higher price, and signed a contract in his own name, giving the plaintiffs no indication that he was dealing as agent for anyone, though he intended that the purchase should be on joint account. At a subsequent interview with Roberts, the manager of Keighley, Maxsted and Co. told him to take the wheat, as he thought it was worth it. This the plaintiffs claimed to be a valid ratification, and the Court of Appeal so held. Collins, L. J., pointed out in his opinion that the doctrine of ratification had been adopted from the Roman Law, where the contemplation or intent of the agent at the time of the act was considered the essential point. In reviewing the English cases he undertakes to show that this idea was always present, though the phrases always used relate to the two extreme cases, where he purports to be the agent of the ratifier or purports to be the agent of some one else. Where no disclosure at all is made, the situation of the third party is the same as in the case of an undisclosed principal, and the judges in the Court of Appeal held that since a prior command would have been effective "whether the agent had contracted in his own name or in terms on behalf of the principal," therefore if there be conceded an "intention existing in the mind of the would-be agent it seems impossible to suggest any reason why * * * avowal of it to the other contracting party should be essential." But this view was entirely overruled by the House of Lords, where it was decided that the Roman Law, whatever it might be, would give no support to the Court of Appeals, that the doctrine of undisclosed principal was so far an anomaly in English law that there was no ground for extending it to analogous cases. Lord Lindley there pointed out that by the principle of ratification validity is given to an act already done, though done without authority, and that "the doctrine of ratification as hitherto applied in this country to contracts has always * * * in fact given effect in substance to the real intentions of both contracting parties at the time of the contract, as shown by their language or conduct. It has never yet been extended to other cases."

In Fraser v. Sweet, 13 Manitoba L. R. 147, 2 Br. Rul. Cas. 254, supra, where a partner bought goods in the name of a new firm which he expected to organize, under the expectation that the old partnership would be dissolved, which goods were used by the old partnership, it was held that there could be no valid ratification by the old firm since there was no indication to the seller that the partner was acting in behalf of the old partnership, and since "it has long been established that no ratification is effectual unless the act has been done by the agent on behalf of the party who ratifies."

In Ferris v. Snow, 130 Mich. 254, supra, where two of the defendants gave Snow parol authority to buy land, in which they were to have equal interests, it was held that they could not ratify the act made ostensibly by Snow for his own benefit. Hooker, C. J. said: "No consent most elaborate consideration⁹⁵ and according to the weight of authority in the United States,⁹⁶ he must have professed to act for a principal, though it is not necessary that he should have disclosed who that principal was if he be capable of identification within the rule already laid down.⁹⁷ It is not essential that the assumed agent shall have declared himself such in express terms. As stated by Lord Robertson, "Whether the unauthorized agent be marked out as an agent by what he says, or by what he wears, is, of course, a mere matter of circumstance and of evidence; but an agent he must be known to be, and as agent he must act."⁹⁸ The contrary rule is laid down in Massachusetts: "It is necessary in order to a ratification that the act should have been done by one who was in fact acting as an agent, but it is not necessary that he should have been understood to be such by the party with whom he was dealing."⁹⁹

by C to step into the place of A, who has assumed to make a contract with B, on his own behalf, would establish privity of contract between B and C, unless based on new consideration. It is different when A assumes to contract with B on behalf of C. In such a case the contract is not changed in its terms, but is vitalized by a ratification of the unauthorized act of the agent."

In Mitchell v. Minnesota Fire Ass'n, 48 Minn. 278, supra, where a firm of insurance adjusters had assumed, with no claim or pretension of authority, to act for the defendants in appraising a fire loss, and the defendants had repudiated their action, it was held that there was no evidence of authority or ratification which should have gone to the jury, and no evidence that the defendant had waived the conditions of the policy.

⁹⁵ Keighley v. Durant, [1901] App. Cas. 240, 1 Br. Rul. Cas. 351, overruling Durant v. Roberts, [1900] 1 Q. B. 629.

It seems, moreover, to be sufficient that he professed to act as agent, though he had a fraudulent purpose to really take the benefit on his own account. In re Tiedemann, [1899] 2

Q. B. Div. 66. See also Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327.

⁹⁶ See Ferris v. Snow, 130 Mich. 254; Mitchell v. Minnesota Fire Ass'n, 48 Minn. 278, and other cases cited in note 94.

What is said in Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, at p. 483, 45 L. Ed. 1183, is believed not intended to be contrary. The person acting was known to be a broker though at the time it was not known for whom he was acting.

⁹⁷ Ante, § 377.

⁹⁸ In Keighley v. Durant, supra.

⁹⁹ Hayward v. Langmaid, 181 Mass. 426 (citing Sartwell v. Frost, 122 Mass. 184; Ford v. Linehan, 146 Mass. 283; New England Dredging Co. v. Rockport Granite Co., 149 Mass. 381; Schendel v. Stevenson, 153 Mass. 351, no one of which, however, really involved the question. The allusion of Holmes J., in Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. Rep. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219, to the "requirement that the act should be done in the name of the ratifying party" is significant. It is believed that the Massachusetts court will not be found irrevocably committed to this view). See also Leavitt v. Fairbanks, 92 Me. 521.

§ 387. — What the prevailing rule amounts to, when reduced to its lowest terms, is, that the act or contract to be ratified shall purport to have been done or made not merely on the agent's behalf but, by the agent, in the name and on the account of the alleged principal, so that when ratified, as it was done or made, it shall be capable of being enforced by and against that principal as an act or contract to which he was a party. The rule makes impossible a ratification by an undisclosed principal, although, as will be seen,¹ it is held that an undisclosed principal may, in general, enforce, and be held liable upon, contracts really made for him by his agent, notwithstanding there was no disclosure even of the existence of a principal at the time the contract was made. It is urged that, if this be the rule where there really was authority, it is denying the ordinary effect of ratification to refuse to permit the lacking authority to be supplied by ratification.² To this contention the House of Lords replies, in the language of Lord Davey, "The rule which permits an undisclosed principal to sue and be sued on a contract to which he is not a party, though well settled, is itself an anomaly, and to extend it to the case of a person who accepts the benefit of an undisclosed intention of a party to the contract would be adding another anomaly to the law, and not correcting an anomaly."³

§ 388. — Where the assumed agent has in fact purported to act as such in the execution of a written contract made in the name of the principal, it does not seem to be essential that the fact that he does so purport to act shall be recited or declared on the face of the contract itself.

Whether there may be ratification where one, who in fact intends to act as agent, conceals that fact and assumes to himself the name or characteristics of the principal and makes the contract in the principal's name, seems not to have been considered, except incidentally in the forgery cases. It would seem that, in such a case, there could be no enforcement of the contract by the principal after ratification where personal considerations were involved, or except subject to such defenses as the other party may have, based upon the assumed identity of the person who acted and the real principal.

§ 389. — An act may doubtless, sometimes have been done "as agent" though done in the name of the agent, especially in the case of informal dealings. It would seem to be possible also though the contract were in writing; because, as will be seen hereafter,—sealed and

¹ Post Book IV, Ch. V, Ch. VII.

E. C. Goddard in 2 Michigan Law Review, 25.

² See the able article of Professor negotiable instruments excepted,—an authorized contract may often be deemed the contract of the principal although the agent used personal terms only. And so in this case, if the assumed agent purports to act for the principal, there may be a ratifiable contract (with the same exceptions) even though the agent in making it, inadvertently used language which might ordinarily have been appropriate to bind himself.⁴ Of course, as already pointed out, if the agent intended to act for himself and did not purport to act for a principal, this rule would not apply.

³ In Keighley v. Durant, supra.

§ 390. — Although the alleged agent may have purported to act as agent for a principal, still if in fact he was acting for himself only, and did the act in his own name, the purported principal can not by ratification acquire the benefit of the act.⁵ Unless he can work an estoppel against the pretended agent or can charge him as a trustee, he would be without remedy.⁶

⁴ Young v. Inman, 146 Iowa, 492; Kostopulos v. Pezzetti, 207 Mass. 277.

In Robinson v. Lincoln Savings Bank, 85 Tenn. 363, one of several debtors, acting for a part of them whose land had been seized, made an arrangement with the defendant bank to obtain money with which to redeem the land and to obtain an extension of time. He acted in his own name, but his relation to the others and their interest in the matter were fully known. Held that these others could enforce the contract against the bank. Although the syllabus speaks of ratification, there was apparently no question of ratification in the case. The agent apparently acted with authority, and it was at most merely a case of undisclosed principal.

⁵ In Garvey v. Jarvis, 46 N. Y. 310, 7 Am. Rep. 335, one M held a judgment against G and another for over $2,000. He offered to G that he would discharge it for $500. G did not then accept the offer. Later one R (through whom Jarvis claims) who was a stranger to G, by falsely representing that he was a friend of G and came for him, induced M to assign the judgment to him, R, and R then undertook to enforce the judgment for its full amount against G. Held, that G could not by ratification claim the benefit of the assignment as one made to him. "The essential element is wanting that the act must be done for another. Here it was not so done. The most that can be claimed is that the defendant said he was acting for the plaintiff, which was false. He paid his own money, and, in fact, acted for himself. He was a stranger to the plaintiff and of course under no obligation to act for him, and he deprived the plaintiff of nothing to which he was entitled."

Followed in the similar case of Virginia Pochahontas Coal Co. v. Lambert, 107 Va. 368, 122 Am. St. R. 860, 13 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 277.

But where he purports to act in the name and for the benefit of a principal, but has a fraudulent intention of performing the contract on his own account, the named principal may ratify. In re Tiedemann & Ledermann Freres, [1899] 2 Q. B. 66.

⁶ In Garvey v. Jarvis, supra, it was held that the alleged agent could not be charged as a trustee ex maleficio.

§ 391. — As has been seen, the agent of one party may become the agent of the other also with the knowledge and consent of the first party, or perhaps without it if the agent were merely a mechanical go-between. Where the agent of one party may thus act as the agent of the other, and purports to do so, the latter may ratify his act as in any other case. And even though, in a case in which A and B are opposite parties, the agent of B ought not to undertake to act as the agent of A also, yet if he does purport to do so, and A with knowledge ratifies the act, A cannot afterward hold B responsible for the act upon the ground that it was the act of B's agent.⁷

§ 392. — There may of course be other cases in which, by confirmation or adoption, results more or less similar to those following upon ratification may be reached, but which are not really cases of ratification at all, since they do not purport to adopt the transaction as done, but rest upon the basis of some new and further dealing. Thus it is said in one case, "One may wrongfully take the property of another, not assuming to act as his agent, and sell it in his own name and on his own account, and in such case there is no question of agency, and there is nothing to ratify. The owner may subsequently confirm the sale, but this he cannot do by a simple ratification. His confirmation must rest upon some consideration upholding the confirmation or upon an estoppel."⁸

There may also be other cases. Suppose, for example, that a principal directs his agent to buy goods in the principal's name and upon the principal's credit, but the agent buys in his own name and upon his own credit. He then brings the goods to his principal, tells his principal how they were acquired, and the principal accepts them as his own goods acquired through his agent. Is the principal liable as an undisclosed principal to the seller? He may be if this can be regarded as an authorized purchase, made merely in an unauthorized form, but as to which the departure from instructions has been condoned or waived. Or if it be regarded merely as a breach of secret instructions, the principal would be liable to the seller, although he would have a remedy against the agent unless he had waived the irregularity or ratified the act.

§ 393. VI. Principal must have knowledge of material facts.—It will be seen hereafter that the ratification of an unauthorized act may be express or implied. It may be the intentional act of the principal, and it may also be, in a measure, an unintentional act. Upon learning of the unauthorized act of his agent, the principal, deeming the act to be to his advantage, may expressly ratify it and avail himself of its benefits; or, deeming it to be to his detriment, he may expressly repudiate it; or, as is more often the case, he may take no decisive step in either direction, but tacitly leave his intention to be determined by his subsequent acts. He is under no obligation to expressly affirm,⁹ but if he decides to do so, he may fully inform himself of all the material facts, or he may intentionally assume the risk without inquiry,¹⁰ or he may deliberately ratify upon such knowledge as he possesses without caring for more.¹¹ If he determines expressly to repudiate the contract he must either ascertain the facts or incur the risk of having the contract subsequently shown to be within the agent's powers and enforced against him, notwithstanding his attempted repudiation.

In Virginia Pochahontas Coal Co. v. Lambert, supra, it was held that he might be so charged. See also Rollins v. Mitchell, 52 Minn. 41, 38 Am. St. R. 519.

⁷ Ramsay v. Miller, 202 N. Y. 72.

⁸ Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327, citing Workman v. Wright, 33 Ohio St. 405, 31 Am. Rep. 546.

§ 394. — But by far the most numerous and troublesome class of cases is that wherein it is attempted by third persons to hold the principal liable upon the basis of an implied affirmance. The principal may in fact have had a positive intention not to ratify the contract, and yet he may have so conducted himself with reference to third parties that he will be presumed to have ratified it. What shall amount to a ratification and what shall be deemed to be sufficient evidence thereof, are questions reserved for consideration hereafter; the question here is the necessity of knowledge. Ratification means the affirmance of that which the party was at liberty to reject. It involves the idea of choice between alternatives. It presupposes knowledge of the obligations to be assumed or rejected. However freely a party may voluntarily assume liabilities of which he is not fully advised, the law ought not to force upon a man responsibility for the acts of another, unless it appears that, with full knowledge of those acts, he has done something reasonably indicative of an intention to assume them as his own.

§ 395. — General rule.—It may therefore be stated as the general rule, that, except in those cases in which the principal intentionally assumes the responsibility without inquiry, or deliberately ratifies, having all the knowledge in respect to the act which he cares to have,¹² any ⁹ Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.), 493.

¹⁰ Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834.

¹¹ Kelley v. Newburyport Horse R. Co., 141 Mass. 496; Anderson v. Creston Land Co., 96 Va. 257; Ehrmantraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333;

Hunt v. Pitts Agricultural Works, 69 Minn. 539; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R. 7 C. P. 43; Wilder v. Beede, 119 Cal. 646.

¹² Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834; Kelley v. Newburyport Horse R. Co., 141 Mass. 496; Anderson v. Cres- ratification of an unauthorized act or contract, in order to be made effectual and obligatory upon the alleged principal, must be shown to have been made by him with a full and complete knowledge of all the material facts connected with the transaction to which it relates;¹³ and ton Land Co., supra: Ehrmantraut v. Robinson, supra; Marsh v. Joseph, [1897] 1 Ch. 213.

¹³ Brown v. Bamberger, 110 Ala. 342; Moore v. Ensley, 112 Ala. 228; Wheeler v. McGuire, 86 Ala. 398, 2 L. R. A. 808; McGlassen v. Tyrrell, 5 Ariz. 51; Valley Bank of Phoenix v. Brown, 9 Ariz. 311; Martin v. Hickman, 64 Ark. 217; Snow v. Grace, 29 Ark. 131; Mitchell v. Fennell, 101 Cal. 614; Dupont v. Wertheiman, 10 Cal. 354; Billings v. Morrow, 7 Cal. 171, 68 Am. Dec. 235; Miller v. Board of Education, 44 Cal. 166; Field v. Small, 17 Colo. 386; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 2 Colo. 565 (affirmed 96 U. S. 640); Schollay v. Moffitt-West Drug Co., 17 Colo. App. 126; Dean v. Hipp, 16 Colo. App. 537; Hale v. Goodell, 49 Colo. 95; Lester v. Kinnel, 37 Conn. 9; Bevin v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 23 Conn. 244; Hardeman v. Ford, 12 Ga. 205; Mapp v. Phillips, 32 Ga. 72; Turner v. Wilcox, 54 Ga. 593; Findlay v. Hildenbrand, 17 Idaho, 403, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 400; International Bank v. Ferri's, 118 Ill. 465; Mathews v. Hamilton, 23 Ill. 470; Reynolds v. Ferree, 86 Ill. 570; Kerr v. Sharp, 83 Ill. 199; Stein v. Kendall, 1 Ill. App. 103; Silverman v. Bush, 16 Ill. App. 437; Bensley v. Brockway, 27 Ill. App. 410; Manning v. Gasharie, 27 Ind. 399; Eggleston v. Mason, 84 Iowa, 630; Beebe v. Equitable Mut. L. Ass'n, 76 Iowa, 129; Tidrick v. Rice, 13 Iowa, 214; Sehrt-Patterson Milling Co. v. Hughes, 8 Kan. App. 514; Bohart v. Oberne, 36 Kan. 284; Fletcher v. Dy-sart, 9 B. Monr. (Ky.) 413; Bank of Owensboro v. Western Bank, 13 Bush (Ky.), 526, 26 Am. Rep. 211; Delaney v. Levi, 19 La. Ann. 251; Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45 Am.

Dec. 96; White v. Davidson, 8 Md. 169, 63 Am. Dec. 699; Penn. Steam Nav. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & John. (Md.) 248, 29 Am. Dec. 543; Adams Exp. Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; Bannon v. Warfield, 42 Md. 22; Manning v. Leland, 153 Mass. 510; Dickinson v. Conway, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 487; Combs v. Scott, id. 493; Price v. Moore, 158 Mass. 524; Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531; Deffenbaugh v. Jackson Paper Co., 120 Mich. 242; Cowan v. Sargent Mfg. Co., 141 Mich. 87; Pittsburgh, etc., Mining Co. v. Scully, 145 Mich. 229; Thiel Detective Service Co. v. Seavey, 145 Mich. 674; Godfrey v. New York L. Ins. Co., 70 Minn. 224; Woodbury v. Larned, 5 Minn. 339, Gil. 271; Humphrey v. Havens, 12 Minn. 298, Gil. 196; Hunt v. Pitts Agricult. Works, 69 Minn. 539; Gund Brew. Co. v. Tourtelotte, 108 Minn. 71; Meyer v. Baldwin, 52 Miss. 263; Steunkle v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 42 Mo. App. 73; Pitts v. Steele Mercantile Co., 75 Mo. App. 221; Citizens Savings Bank v. Marr, 129 Mo. App. 26; Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Chamberlain Bank, 63 Neb. 163, 57 L. R. A. 811; McCormick v. Peters, 24 Neb. 70; Henry v. Halter, 58 Neb. 685; O'Shea v. Rice, 49 Neb. 893; Nebraska Wesleyan University v. Parker, 52 Neb. 453; Cram v. Sickel, 51 Neb. 828, 66 Am. St. Rep. 478; Fitzgerald v. Kimball, 76 Neb. 236; Hovey v. Brown, 59 N. H. 114; Bohanan v. Boston & Me. Ry. Co., 70 N. H. 526; Dowden v. Cryder, 55 N. J. L. 329; Campbell v. Nat. Bank, 67 N. J. L. 301, 91 Am. St. R. 438; Russell v. Erie R. Co., 70 N. J. L. 808, 67 L. R. A. 433, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 672; Seymour v. Wyckoff, 10 N. Y. 213; Brass v. Worth, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 648; Roach v. Coe, 1 E. D. Smith especially must it appear that the existence of the contract and its nature and consideration were known to him.¹⁴ Knowledge of every detail or of every trivial circumstance is not essential, but knowledge of every fact which the issue shows to be material is, unless waived, required in order to hold the alleged principal.¹⁵ It is not necessary, however, that he should also be informed of the legal effect of the facts.¹⁶ If he

(N. Y.), 175; Craighead v. Peterson, 72 N. Y. 279, 28 Am. Rep. 150; Smith v. Kidd, 68 N. Y. 130, 23 Am. Rep. 157; Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199; Ramsay v. Miller, 135 App. Div. 503, 120 N. Y. Supp. 523; Burnham v. Lawson, 118 App. Div. 389; King v. MacKellar, 109 N. Y. 215; Bierman v. City Mills Co., 151 N. Y. 482, 56 Am. St. R. 635, 37 L. R. A. 799; Sherrill v. Weisiger Co., 114 No. Car. 436; Brittain v. Westall, 137 N. Car. 30; Diehl v. Adams Ins. Co., 58 Penn. St. 443, 98 Am. Dec. 302; Pittsburg, etc., R. R. Co. v. Gazzam, 32 Penn. St. 340; Zoebisich v. Rauch, 133 Pa. 532; Pollock v. Standard Steel Car Co., 230 Pa. 136; McCants v. Bee, 1 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 383, 16 Am. Dec. 610; Jewell Nursery Co. v. State, 5 S. D. 623 (aff'd 8 S. D. 531); Williams v. Storm, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 203; Commercial Bank v. Jones, 18 Tex. 811; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Moyle v. Congregational Society, 16 Utah, 69; Day v. Building Asso., 96 Va. 484; Spooner v. Thompson, 48 Vt. 259; Fuller v. Ellis, 39 Vt. 345, 94 Am. Dec. 327; Armstrong v. Oakley, 23 Wash. 122; Haynes v. Tacoma, etc., R. Co., 7 Wash. 211; Curry v. Hale, 15 W. Va. 867; Thompson v. Manufacturing Co., 60 W. Va. 42, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 311; Dodge v. McDonnell, 14 Wis. 553; Aetna Ins. Co. v. N. W. Iron Co., 21 Wis. 458; First Nat. Bank v. Bean, 141 Wis. 476; Owings v. Hull, 9 Peters (U. S.), 607, 9 L. Ed. 246; Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Peters (U. S.), 69, 7 L. Ed. 606; Bennecke v. Ins. Co., 105 U. S. 355, 26 L. Ed. 990; Bosseau v. O'Brien, Fed. Cas. No. 1,667, 4 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 395; Starr v. Gal- gate Ship Co., 68 Fed. 234, 15 C. C. A. 366; Pacific Rolling Mill v. Dayton, etc., Ry. Co., 7 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 61, 5 Fed. Rep. 852; Forrestier v. Bordman, 1 Story (U. S. C. C.), 43, Fed. Cas. No. 4,945.

Full and Complete Knowledge.—It is pointed out in many cases that the principal's knowledge must be "full" and "complete." "If his knowledge is partial or imperfect, he will not be held to have ratified the unauthorized act, and the proof of adequate knowledge of the facts should be reasonably clear and certain." Trustees, etc. v. Bowman, 136 N. Y. 526.

In Jones v. Williams, 139 Mo. 1, 61 Am. St. R. 436, 37 L. R. A. 682, it is said that "a fraction of knowledge cannot beget an integer of ratification."

¹⁴ Pitts v. Steele Merc. Co., 75 Mo. App. 221; Sword v. Reformed Congregation, 29 Pa. Super. 626; Hale v. Goodell, 49 Colo. 95; Jerman v. Neef Bros. Brew. Co., 46 Colo. 33.

¹⁵ Thus where a bond had been executed without authority, knowledge of its execution and purport was enough; it was not essential that he should know its exact terms or the extent of his liability upon it. Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103.

¹⁶ In a case in Massachusetts it is held that it is not necessary that the principal should have knowledge not only of all of the facts, but also of the legal effect of the facts, and that he should then, with a knowledge of both law and facts, have ratified the contract by some independent and substantive act. "It is sufficient," says Allen, J., "if a ratification is made with a full knowl-knows the facts, it is enough. But if the material facts were suppressed, or were unknown to him, except as the result of his intentional and deliberate act, the ratification will be invalid because founded upon mistake or fraud.¹⁷ And the same rule applies to the settlement of the liability of the agent to his principal for his unauthorized act.¹⁸

The requirement of knowledge of the material facts is just as important in tort cases as in those based upon contracts.¹⁹

The necessity of knowledge presents its most striking aspect in actions against the principal to charge him with liability thereby. Where the principal voluntarily takes the initiative and, upon the basis of his own ratification, attempts to enforce obligations against others, the question of the completeness of the principal's knowledge can rarely concern the defendant, and the principal himself could rarely set up his own lack of knowledge, as an excuse for retracting, or for the purpose of escaping the consequences of his own voluntary and deliberate act.

§ 396. — It is not to be denied that there may occasionally be found cases, in which it seems to be asserted that there may be ratification without knowledge. Most of these cases when examined seem to be sound enough upon their facts, though they properly proceed upon other reasons, and what is said as to ratification in many of them is probably merely an inadvertent expression. Part of them belong to a class of cases, important to be distinguished, which do not depend upon ratification at all. These are cases in which an agent while doing an edge of all the material facts. Indeed, a rule somewhat less stringent may properly be laid down where one purposely shuts his eyes to means of information within his own possession and control, and ratifies an act deliberately, having all the knowledge in respect to it which he cares to have." Kelley v. Newburyport Horse R. R. Co., 141 Mass. 496, citing Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.), 493; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R. 7 C. P. 43. To same effect: Hyatt v. Clark, 118 N. Y. 563.

But in Blass v. Terry, 156 N. Y. 122, where a wife was charged with having ratified the unauthorized act of her husband in accepting a deed for her which contained a clause assuming a mortgage, the court said: "There could be no ratification by the defendant until she had knowledge of the clause in the deed, and of its legal effects as a promise on her part."

¹⁷ Miller v. Board of Education, 44 Cal. 166; Dean v. Bassett, 57 Cal. 640; Adams Express Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; and see generally cases cited, supra.

Where the other party claims that he informed the principal of the facts, he must show that he did so fully, fairly and unambiguously. Wheeler v. Northwestern Sleigh Co., 39 Fed. 347.

¹⁸ Bank of Owensboro v. Western Bank, 13 Bush (Ky.), 526, 26 Am. Rep. 211; Hoffman v. Livingston, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 552.

¹⁹ Steinman v. Baltimore Laundry Co., 109 Md. 62, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 884.

authorized act has done some incidental act, given some promise, or made some representation which was not expressly authorized, but which is binding upon the principal under the ordinary rules of agency, as an act done within the scope of the authority or in the course of the employment. These acts are binding upon the principal, whether he be plaintiff or defendant, and it is not necessary here, any more than it is in any other case, that the principal shall have known of them at any particular time. Although ratification need not be resorted to at all in these cases, it is, especially where the principal is the plaintiff, often referred to as a ground of liability; and it is said that the principal is liable, if he takes the benefit of the performance, even although he did not know of these incidental acts. The conclusion would ordinarily have been the same, if the doctrine of ratification had not been referred to.²⁰

Another class of these cases does depend upon the doctrine of ratification, but there seems to be confusion as to the time when the knowledge must exist. They are cases of unauthorized acts which actually require ratification with knowledge, and they are properly referable to a rule, hereafter to be considered, which charges a principal with ratification, even though he had no knowledge at the outset, if, after knowledge at any stage in the proceeding, he still insists upon keeping or securing the benefits of the unauthorized act.²¹

§ 397. — What facts are material within this rule.—It is not possible to lay down a hard and fast rule by which it can, in all cases, be determined what facts are material. That is a question depending upon the circumstances in each case, and upon the ordinary considerations which influence human action. As has already been pointed out, the material facts do not include every detail or every trivial or incidental circumstance, but they do include all of those more important considerations which men would ordinarily take into account in voluntarily entering upon such a transaction. In the case of contracts, ²⁰ To this class belong such cases as Hollingsworth v. Holbrook, 80 Iowa, 151, 20 Am. St. R. 411; St. Louis Refrigerator Co. v. Vinton, Wash. Mach. Co., 79 Iowa, 239, 18 Am. St. R. 366; Krolik v. Curry, 148 Mich. 214.

²¹ To this class belong such cases as Eadie v. Ashbaugh, 44 Iowa, 519 (where, in an action to enforce a contract, the plaintiffs are held chargeable with the conditions attached to the contract, "they having now at least full and complete knowledge of the terms and conditions of such contract"); Moyers v. Fogarty, 140 Iowa, 701, or perhaps to the preceding class (here the court said, "It is not necessary to show that the principal, who takes advantage of an unauthorized contract by his agent had knowledge of all the terms and conditions entering into it").

the parties, the consideration, the subject matter, the time, the terms, the conditions, the obligations assumed, the risks incurred, the rights waived or surrendered—these all ordinarily would be regarded as material.

In the case of torts, the time, the place, the persons affected, the nature of the acts done, the extent of the injury—all these would seem to be material in the ordinary case.

As has several times been pointed out, however, in all of these cases it is the facts that are material, and not the legal consequences which are to attach to the facts.

§ 398. ——— Illustrations.—The cases in which the question has arisen are now exceedingly numerous and it is impracticable to give anything like a complete enumeration of them, but the following have been selected as fairly typical of a larger number.

Thus, where the question was whether the principal was liable for an unauthorized seizure of sheep under a distress for rent, because he had received the proceeds arising from the sale of the sheep, it was held that knowledge that the sheep in question had been seized elsewhere than upon the demised premises was material upon the question of his ratification;²² where an agent had made an unauthorized disposition of his principal's goods, and had been sent back to obtain either the return of the goods or a note as an addition to the purchase price, the fact that the agent gave a warranty of the goods, in order to secure the note, is material in determining whether the principal, by accepting the note, had ratified the sale with the warranty;²³ where an agent was employed by a vendor to get the vendee's signature to promissory notes for the purchase price, the fact that the vendee conditionally signed and delivered the notes to the agent was held material to bind the principal, through his acceptance of the notes, to a ratification of the agent's action in accepting the condition;²⁴ where an agent, authorized to bind his principal by contracts to carry goods as a common carrier, made an unauthorized contract which by its terms bound the principal as a carrier and as an insurer, knowledge of the transaction on which the money (paid over by the agent) was paid, and of the existence and terms of the especial contract, was material to bind the principal to a ratification of the agent's acts through accepting from the agent the money which the plaintiff had paid to the agent upon the contract.²⁵

²² Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834.

²⁵ Penn. Steam, etc., Co. v. Dand-

²³ Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45
Am. Dec. 96.

ridge, 8 Gill & John. (Md.) 248, 29
Am. Dec. 543.

²⁴ Watt v. Davidson, 82 Neb. 712.

§ 399. — Where an agent with authority to collect claims due to his principal and to remit the amounts collected, opened an account in his principal's name without authority, and remitted all collections by checks against this account, signed only in the agent's name, knowledge of the existence of the account in the principal's name, and of the creation of an overdraft against it, was held material to the principal in order to hold him to liability upon the overdraft;²⁶ where an agent was authorized only to find a purchaser for his principal's real estate, and the principal sent a blank deed of the land to a bank to deliver upon payment of the price, and withdrew it before the price was paid, knowledge that the agent had made a contract on the principal's behalf with a purchaser, was material to bind the principal to the contract;²⁷ where an agent had authority to buy a certain piece of land, and made a written contract to buy the land and gave two options as well, and the principal paid the price of the land and accepted a deed of it, knowledge of the existence of the terms of the contract covering the options was held material to bind the principal to the whole of the contract;²⁸ where the defendant's agent had made an unauthorized contract of sale, coupled with an unauthorized warranty of quality, it was held that knowledge of the terms of the transaction, and of the fact of the warranty, was material upon the question of the defendant's ratification by taking over the agent's bank account into which had been paid the purchase money;²⁹ where the defendant sent a note for collection to a man who also was liable on the note, and the agent, without authority, foreclosed a mortgage upon cattle which secured the note, and in so doing inadvertently took plaintiff's cattle, not covered by the mortgage, and the principal received money from the sale of all of the cattle taken, knowledge of the fact of the foreclosure, and that it was made on behalf of the principal, was held material;³⁰ in a case in which a creditor sought to hold the sureties on the debt, and the sureties claimed that, by accepting payment of part of the debt from an agent who had purported to act on behalf of the creditor in receiving the full amount of the debt, and in giving a receipt in full, both the debtor and the surety had been discharged, knowledge that the attorney purported to act on behalf of the creditor was material to the creditor's ratification.³¹

²⁶ Case v. Hammond, 105 Mo. App. 168.

²⁷ Stemler v. Bass, 153 Cal. 791.

²⁸ Daley v. Iselin, 218 Pa. 515.

²⁹ Hogue v. Simonson, 94 N. Y. App. Div. 139.

³⁰ Sanborn v. First Nat. Bank, 115 Mo. App. 50.

³¹ Bank of Batesville v. Maxey, 76 Ark. 472.

§ 400. — Where an agent, without authority, opened an account in his principal's name, made arrangements for an overdraft and, to secure the overdraft, pledged his principal's bills of lading, knowledge of the fact of the pledge was material in order to give the bank any special property in the goods, even although the principal knew of and ratified both the opening of the account and the overdraft;³² where in a suit upon a foreign judgment two defendant's disputed the jurisdiction of the foreign court to render the judgment, knowledge that the attorney, who acted on behalf of the other defendants, purported to be their attorney and to appear for them, is material to establish a ratification by acquiescence and failure to move to set aside the judgment, particularly since, while defendants were told that a judgment had been entered against them, they were likewise told and believed that the suit involved only property in which they had no interest;³³ in an action upon a promissory note, executed on behalf of the defendant corporation without authority by the defendant's president, knowledge that the note was given with a corporate obligation as a part of its consideration, was held material in order to charge the directors with ratification by acquiescing in accepting the benefits;³⁴ when, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, the defendant relied upon payment to G as agent for the mortgagee, ignorance by the mortgagee that the agent had received payment of the principal sum before the maturity of the debt, and before the agent had ever actually or with authority received any payments on behalf of this mortgagee, and that G was, at the time of the payment, attorney likewise for the mortgagor, was held fatal to the ratification which the mortgagor claimed to result from the taking of security by the mortgagee from G for the payment by G of the money which he had received upon this mortgage.³⁵

§ 401. — Where an agent to sell made a contract of sale to a corporation of which he was the president and chief shareholder, knowledge of this adverse interest was material in order to bind the principal to a ratification of the sale to the particular corporation, by virtue of the fact that she sent a signed blank deed to be filled in with the name of the agent's purchaser;³⁶ where an agent authorized to sell his principals' stock, employed a subagent and the principals sold the stock to a purchaser who they knew was found by the subagent, knowledge

³² Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. Chickasha Nat. Bank, 98 C. C. A. 535, 174 Fed. 923.

³³ Prichard v. Sigafus, 103 N. Y. App. Div. 525.

³⁴ Thompson v. Laboringmen's, etc., Co., 60 W. Va. 42.

³⁵ Smith v. Kidd, 68 N. Y. 130, 23 Am. Rep. 157.

³⁶ Foss Investment Co. v. Ater, 49 Wash. 446.

by the principals that the subagent had been employed on their behalf was material to effect a ratification of the agent's agreement that the subagent should be paid;³⁷ where an agent with no written authority made a lease for a term for which the statute of frauds required written authority, and the principal allowed the tenant to go into possession and received rent under the lease, knowledge of the length of the term was held material.³⁸

§ 402. — On the other hand in a case³⁹ often cited in which a lease had been executed under a power of attorney perhaps not sufficient to justify it, but there was also an additional circumstance connected with its execution which would have justified the principal in repudiating the lease, but of which she was ignorant, the court held that, by accepting the rent for several years without protest or objection, she ratified the lease as completely as she could have if she had known of two grounds upon which to disaffirm instead of only one. "Two grounds could not make the right any more effectual than one. If she had the right at all, the number of grounds upon which she could justify its exercise is unimportant. Her ratification was none the less complete, because, being unwilling to run the risk of a doubtful question of law, she did not at once act as she would have acted if she had known all of the facts."

The conclusion reached in this case however seems questionable. Grant that the additional fact is material,—and there could be no question about it in this case,—it would seem that the principal is entitled to knowledge of all the material facts, and certainly that, by not choosing to risk a repudiation upon a doubtful point, he should not be deprived of the right to repudiate upon an unquestionable ground, when he discovers it.

§ 403. — Actual knowledge required.—It must be kept in mind also that, where the law thus requires knowledge, it is ordinarily actual knowledge, and not merely the opportunity for acquiring knowl-

³⁷ Servant v. McCampbell, 46 Colo. 292.

³⁸ Clement v. Young-McShea Amusement Co., 70 N. J. Eq. 677, 118 Am. St. R. 747.

Where defendant is sought to be bound on the ground of ratification of the unauthorized act of a real estate broker in assuming to make a binding contract, knowledge that he had signed a written agreement and received a part payment, is indispensable. "It could become an existing and binding contract only upon the defendant's approval, not of a part, but of the entire instrument." Cohen v. Jackson, 210 Mass. 328, citing New England Dredg. Co. v. Rockport Granite Co., 149 Mass. 381; Revere Water Co. v. Winthrop, 192 Mass. 455.

³⁹ Hyatt v. Clark, 118 N. Y. 563.

edge, which is demanded.⁴⁰ As stated in one case,⁴¹ "knowledge—not the existence of circumstances which would, by the exercise of due care result in knowledge—is essential to the ratification of an act." The principal, where nothing has occurred to put him on his guard, is not bound to distrust his agent; he has the right to assume that the agent will not exceed his authority or practice fraud or commit crime; and he is not obliged, before accepting the benefits of an authorized act, to inquire whether, in performing it, the agent has not in some way violated his trust.⁴² Mere careless ignorance, or mere negligence in not discovering the departure from authority, where there is nothing to suggest it, is not enough.⁴³

Neither is the principal to be charged with mere constructive notice. He is not, for example, obliged to search the public records for evidences of his agent's defaults, and he is not charged because such records would disclose that the agent was performing unauthorized acts.⁴⁴

⁴⁰ Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.), 493; Brown v. Bamberger, 110 Ala. 342; Haswell v. Standring, 152 Iowa, 291; Sehrt-Patterson Milling Co. v. Hughes, 8 Kan. App. 514; Oxford Lake Line v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Fla. 349; Collins v. Durward, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 339; Iron City Nat. Bank v. Fifth Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.), 47 S. W. 533; Johnson v. Ogren, 102 Minn. 8; Gund Brewing Co. v. Tourtelotte, 108 Minn. 71, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 210; Heinzerling v. Agen, 46 Wash. 390.

⁴¹ Iron City Nat. Bank v. Fifth Nat. Bank, supra. So in Combs v. Scott, supra, it is said: "We do not mean to say that a person can be willfully ignorant or purposely shut his eyes to means of information within his own possession and control, and thereby escape the consequences of a ratification of unauthorized acts into which he has deliberately entered; but our opinion is that ratification of an antecedent act of an agent which was unauthorized cannot be held valid and binding, where the person sought to be charged has misapprehended or mistaken material facts, although he may have wholly omitted to make inquiries of other persons concerning them, and his ignorance and misapprehension might have been enlightened and corrected by the use of diligence on his part to ascertain them."

What might have been discovered upon inquiry where there was no duty to make it can not bind the principal. St. John & Marsh Co. v. Cornwell, 52 Kan. 712.

But in Phillips v. Phillips (Cal.), 127 Pac. 346, knowledge of facts sufficient to put a prudent person upon inquiry was held constructive notice, under § 19, Civil Code.

⁴² Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.), 493; Shepard & Morse Lumber Co. v. Eldridge, 171 Mass. 516, 68 Am. St. R. 446, 41 L. R. A. 617; Haswell v. Standring, 152 Iowa, 291; Oxford Lake Line v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Fla. 349; Lightfoot v. Horst (Tex. Civ. App.), 122 S. W. 606; Valley Bank of Phoenix v. Brown, 9 Ariz. 311; Gund Brewing Co. v. Tourtelotte, 108 Minn. 71, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 210.

⁴³ Brown v. Bamberger, 110 Ala. 342; Valley Bank of Phoenix v. Brown, supra; McIntosh v. Battel, 68 Hun (N. Y.), 216; Schmidt v. Garfield Bank, 64 Hun, 298 (affirmed 138 N. Y. 631).

⁴⁴ As where the records would disclose that the agent had made unau-

§ 404. ——— Wilful ignorance.—At the same time, however, the principal cannot be justified in wilfully closing his eyes to knowledge. He cannot remain ignorant where he can do so only through intentional obtuseness. He cannot refuse to follow leads, where his failure to do so can only be explained upon the theory that he preferred not to know what an investigation would have disclosed. He cannot shut his eyes where he knows that irregularities have occurred.⁴⁵ In such a case, he will either be charged with knowledge, or with a voluntary ratification with all the knowledge which he cared to have.⁴⁶

§ 405. ——— Presumption of knowledge.—The facts, moreover, may be so patent that for the principal to profess ignorance would merely be to stultify himself. They may be so obvious that the principal, as a reasonable man, cannot be heard to say that he was ignorant of them.⁴⁷ The duty to know them may be so interwoven with the thorized transfers by virtue of a power of attorney (Billings v. Morrow, 7 Cal. 171, 68 Am. Dec. 235; Collins v. Durward, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 339); or had attempted to bind the principal by an unauthorized assumption of a mortgage. Blass v. Terry, 156 N. Y. 122. There is an intimation to the contrary in Latham v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Kan. 9; Mulford v. Rowland, 45 Colo. 172.

⁴⁵ Where the principal knows that his agent has exceeded his authority he cannot escape the consequences of knowledge by failing to inquire as to the nature or extent of the excess. Neimeyer Lumber Co. v. Moore, 55 Ark. 240; Pope v. Armsby Co., 111 Cal. 159; Johnson v. Ogren, 102 Minn. 8. In Phillips v. Phillips, — Cal. —, 127 Pac. 346, certain facts known to the principal were held by the court to be "circumstances which were sufficient to put a prudent person upon inquiry" and therefore to constitute "constructive notice." Under Civil Code, § 19.

⁴⁶ Where the principal learns of the material facts, e. g., that his name has been signed to a bond by an assumed agent without authority, it is enough. "He may not have known its exact terms, or the extent of his liability thereon, but after knowledge of the material facts, he cannot escape the consequences of his silence by remaining wilfully ignorant, or purposely closing his eyes to means of information regarding details within his control." Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103. "Where a principal, knowing that an unauthorized contract had been made by an agent in his behalf for the use and occupation of certain premises, enters into possession and enjoys their use without knowing or ascertaining what the terms of the lease were, he must be held to have deliberately determined to ratify the contract whatever it may be." Ehrmanntraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333. To same effect: Russell v. Waterloo Threshing Mach. Co., 17 N. Dak. 248.

⁴⁷ See, for example, Ballard v. Nye, 138 Cal. 588; Scott v. Middletown, etc., R. Co., 86 N. Y. 200; Swisher v. Palmer, 106 Ill. App. 432; Bartleson v. Vanderhoff, 96 Minn. 184.

In Johnson v. Ogren, 102 Minn. 8, the court says that the principal cannot be permitted "to shut his eyes to the means of information in his possession and control," the means referred to being that "the whole transaction was entered in his account books, the money credited to his bank account which he exclusively controlled, and he personally proper conduct of the principal's business that he must, as an ordinary business man, be presumed to know them. This latter rule is constantly applied in the case of the directors of corporations, especially of banks, who are ordinarily presumed to know that which the proper performance of their duties would disclose.⁴⁸

§ 406. — Knowledge inferred from facts.—It must also be kept in mind that the existence of actual knowledge may be found by inference like any other fact. This is not "imputed" knowledge or "presumptive" knowledge; but the fact of knowledge may be found, like any other fact, either from direct evidence, or from the existence of other facts and circumstances from which the fact of actual knowledge may properly be inferred, as in other cases.⁴⁹ Any duty of the agent to inform his principal might be taken into account in determining the fact.

signed the checks whereby the money was drawn from the bank and used in paying his bills." "If he had exercised such care and oversight of his business as a person of ordinary prudence should or would have exercised, he would have had full and complete knowledge of every and all of such transactions."

In Bliven v. Lydecker, 130 N. Y. 102, the court says that such "notice as would cause a prudent person to make inquiry" is enough. But compare Brown v. Bamburgh, 110 Ala. 342; Heinzerling v. Agen, 64 Wash. 390.

⁴⁸ Thus there are many cases in which it is held that the corporation, from lapse of time, general notoriety, and course of business, must be presumed to have knowledge. See Scott v. Middleton Ry. Co., 86 N. Y. 200; Central R. Co. v. Cheatham, 85 Ala. 292, 7 Am. St. R. 48; Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. 426. So in Martin v. Webb, 110 U. S. 7, 28 L. Ed. 49, it is said: "Directors cannot, in justice to those who deal with the bank, shut their eyes to what is going on around them. It is their duty to use ordinary diligence in ascertaining the condition of its business, and to exercise reasonable control and supervision of its officers. They have something more to do than, from time to time, to elect the officers of the bank and to make declarations of dividends. That which they ought, by proper diligence, to have known as to the general course of business in the bank, they may be presumed to have known in any contest between the corporation and those who are justified by the circumstances in dealing with its officers upon the basis of that course of business." Followed in Hanover Nat. Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 148 N. Y. 612, 51 Am. St. R. 721; Sponberg v. First Nat. Bank, 18 Idaho, 524, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 736.

But a failure to discover that which inspection with ordinary care would not have discovered, will not work a ratification. Campbell v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 67 N. J. L. 301, 51 Am. St. R. 438.

⁴⁹ Thus, for example, in Reid v. Miller, 205 Mass. 80, it was said that the jury might infer knowledge from the facts shown, where it appeared that the husband of the alleged principal, with whom she was living in the ordinary way, was acting as the manager of her property and affairs. "There is a broad field for legitimate inference by a jury from facts like these," said the court.

§ 407. ——— Imputed knowledge — Knowledge of agents — Knowledge of the particular agent.—The knowledge which shall bind the principal may also, of course, be the knowledge possessed by some other agent having a general authority in the matter, and which may be imputed to the principal in accordance with the general rule making notice to an agent notice to his principal.⁵⁰ But the knowledge of the particular alleged agent himself of his own unauthorized act cannot thus be imputed to the principal, in such manner as to satisfy the requirement of knowledge by the principal; for, as to the matter in question, the person acting is not agent until ratification, and it cannot be said that the principal has ratified with knowledge at the time of ratification, simply because the person who thus becomes agent had knowledge.⁵¹ A fortiori is this true where the alleged agent was a mere stranger, not an agent for any purpose.

So in O'Connell v. Casey, 206 Mass. 520, the same point is held, and it was said that the jury were at liberty to refuse to credit the testimony of the parties that the wife was not told of the fact in controversy.

In Curry v. Hale, 15 W. Va. 867, it is said: "It is not necessary that such knowledge shall be shown by positive evidence; it may be deduced or inferred from the facts and circumstances of the case." Many other cases are to the same effect.

⁵⁰ As where notice comes to an agent or officer of a corporation who for this purpose may be regarded as the corporation itself. Union Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 2 Colo. 248; Beacon Trust Co. v. Souther, 183 Mass. 413; Hartford Deposit Co. v. Calkins, 109 Ill. App. 579.

⁵¹ In Thomson v. Central Pass. Ry. Co., 80 N. J. L. 328, it is said that the doctrine of imputed notice rests upon a legal fiction, which might suffice in certain other cases but not here. "Knowledge as a fact is the basis of implied acquiescence or ratification." See also Britt v. Gordon, 132 Iowa, 431; Reeves v. Lewis, 25 S. Dak. 44, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 82. In Adams Express Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47, 68, it is said: "It is true, notice to an agent of facts arising from and growing out of the subject matter of his agency, is constructive notice to the principal. But this rule has no application to the case where the question is, whether the act relied on to bind the principal, was done within the limits and scope of the agent's authority or not. * * * It is true, the act of the agent, though unauthorized at the time, may become binding upon the principal by ratification and adoption. But to make such ratification effectual it must be shown that there was previous knowledge on the part of the principal of all the material facts and circumstances attending the act to be ratified."

In Long v. Poth, 16 N. Y. Misc. 85, it is said: "True, it will be presumed that an agent discloses to his principal within a reasonable time all of the material facts that come to his knowledge while acting within the scope of his authority (Hyatt v. Clark, 118 N. Y. 563, 570; Krumm v. Beach, 96 Id. 398, 404, 405; Bank v. Davis, 2 Hill, 451), but this rule cannot be extended to imply that a special agent whose powers are limited to making a lease for one year informed his principal that he had transcended

It has been held, however, that where an agent authorized to do a certain act, or to do it in a certain way, has deviated from his instructions, there is a presumption that, in reporting to his principal, he will advise him, as, it is said, would be his duty,⁵² of this deviation, and that the principal who then takes the benefit of his act must be deemed to have knowledge.⁵³ This, however, if sound, can be no more than a presumption of fact, and may therefore be rebutted by evidence to the contrary.⁵⁴ In the great majority of the cases, the presumption is in fact rebutted by evidence showing that the principal did not know the circumstances.

his authority, and made two leases in violation of duty for longer terms. Adams Express Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47."

In Weisser v. Denison, 10 N. Y. 68, 61 Am. Dec. 731, quoted in Henry v. Allen, 151 N. Y. 1, 36 L. R. A. 658, the court emphasizes the fact that the knowledge imputed to the principal does not include the agent's own knowledge of his wrongful acts.

Especially will the notice not be imputed where the agent had an adverse interest. Post, Book IV, Chap. V, under the head of Notice to Agent. First Nat. Bank v. Foote, 12 Utah, 157; Barnett v. Daw, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 202.

Contrary statements.—It is true that statements opposed to the rule given in the text are occasionally to be met, e. g. in Hyatt v. Clark, 118 N. Y. 563; Meehan v. Forrester, 52 N. Y. 277; St. Louis Refrigerator Co. v. Vinton Washing Mach. Co., 79 Iowa, 239, 18 Am. St. R. 366; United States Fidelity Co. v. Shirk, 20 Okla. 576; Kickland v. Menasha Wooden Ware Co., 68 Wis. 34, 60 Am. Rep. 831; Windsor v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 37 Wash. 156, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 62, but these statements are probably either mere dicta or inadvertent expressions. The general adoption of this view would practically abolish the entire requirement of knowledge in ratification, and it is inconsistent with a large number of cases, as is pointed out in Adams Express Co. v.

Trego, supra; and in an article by Mr. Arthur L. Corbin in 15 Yale Law Journal, 331.

The statements concerning "constructive notice" in Andrews v. Robertson, 111 Wis. 334, 87 Am. St. R. 870, 54 L. R. A. 673, are doubtless mere inadvertent expressions.

⁵² In the ordinary case of imputing notice, an exception is made of the case in which the agent is acting adversely to his principal, upon the ground that the law will not presume that the agent will do what the circumstances show that it is certain he will not do. Post, Book IV, Ch. V. Is this a different case?

⁵³ Meehan v. Forrester, supra; Hyatt v. Clark, supra (State Bank v. Kelly, 109 Iowa, 544, puts the case upon the principal's duty to inquire). The case of Francis v. Litchfield, 82 Iowa, 726, doubtless goes upon this ground.

If this is to be deemed a conclusive presumption, it is, of course, only another form of reaching the same conclusion as by imputing the knowledge directly.

⁵⁴ Long v. Poth, 16 N. Y. Misc. 85, supra.

In Meehan v. Forrester, 52 N. Y. 277, supra, an attorney who had been employed to collect a claim and who had obtained a judgment upon it, brought to his principal a deed of lands, absolute upon its face, running from the debtor to the principal, and delivered it to the prin-

In controversies between the principal and the agent, the presumption would doubtless not be invoked in the agent's favor.

§ 408. ——— Duty to inquire.—And, finally, where the alleged agent was a mere volunteer, not then agent for any purpose,—in this respect differing from the cases mentioned in § 403,—who has assumed to act for the alleged principal, it is said to be “the duty of the principal who accepted it, apparently supposing it was in payment of the debt. As matter of fact, the attorney had received it upon parol understanding that it should be a security merely and subject to redemption. Some time later the principal sold the land to a bona fide purchaser. Five years later the debtor sought to redeem, and finding that redemption was impossible because of this sale, sought to recover the excess in value from the principal. The court said that it was the duty of the client to inquire and of the attorney to communicate what were the conditions upon which the deed was received and “in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that these duties were performed.” Presumptively, then, the principal knew the condition; but, apparently, he might have shown that he did not; and, in that event, apparently a different conclusion would have been reached.

In Hyatt v. Clark, 118 N. Y. 563, Mrs. Hyatt, who was going abroad, had given to her brother, one Lake, a formal power of attorney to manage and conduct her property and affairs in the United States, to sell and dispose of real or personal property and convey the same, etc. During her absence Lake proposed to lease certain of her land to Clark for a five year period, with right in the lessee to renew for two more five year periods, at increased rent. The lease was written and signed by Lake as agent, and then some question arose as to Lake's authority under this power of attorney to make leases. Pending a communication with Mrs. Hyatt, the lease was put into Clark's hands, but he did not accept delivery of it and postponed the decision of the question until Mrs. Hyatt should be heard from. Some days later a cable message came from Mrs. Hyatt cancelling the power of attorney, and directing Lake to sign no leases. Lake showed this to Clark, and requested a cancellation of the lease. Clark, however, refused to cancel the lease, but said he would take any risk there might be about it, recorded the lease and took possession of the premises. Later Mrs. Hyatt returned and was told by Lake that the lease had been signed before her message was received, and that it was valid and could not be cancelled. He did not tell her of the conditional delivery or of any of the other circumstances attending it. She made no effort to cancel the lease upon the ground that the power of attorney did not authorize it, and received the rents for four years or more, and until Clark demanded a renewal, when, learning of the facts attending the original delivery of the lease, she brought an action for its cancellation. The court held that she had ratified the lease, that it was Lake's duty to give her notice of the facts, that she was charged with his knowledge, and “after the lapse of sufficient time, therefore, she is presumed to have acted, with knowledge of all the acts of her agent in the line of his agency.” It will be observed that this case makes the presumption practically a conclusive one, and applies it in the face of the conceded facts that she was not informed upon her return, or until she attempted to secure cancellation, of the fact that the lease had never been unconditionally delivered and had been kept by Clark in face of her revocation of Lake's authority.

pal, or the person who becomes so by adopting the contract made in his name and for him, to make all needed inquiry and investigation into the facts, acts and representations of the person, who without authority has assumed to act for him, before he adopts the contract as his own.”⁵⁵ Certainly if he makes no such inquiry, but blindly accepts the proceeds as his own, there is strong evidence that he has voluntarily ratified, having all the knowledge which he cared to have.⁵⁶

The same rule has also been applied where the principal of an agent having certain authority, is advised that the agent has acted in excess of it: he is bound to ascertain the nature and extent of that excess or assume the responsibility of voluntary ignorance.⁵⁷

§ 409. ——— Effect of ratification without knowledge.—Finally it must be borne in mind, though it seems often to be overlooked, that the effect of ratification without knowledge is usually to defeat the entire ratification, and not to make it good as to all matters except that as to which there was no knowledge. And also, as will be seen in later sections, that though the principal at the outset had no knowledge, he cannot later, when he acquires it, insist upon retaining or securing the fruits of the unauthorized act and rejecting the residue.

§ 410. VII. No ratification of part of act.—It is a fundamental rule that, if the principal elects to ratify any part of the unauthorized act, he must, so far as it is entire, ratify the whole of it. He cannot avail himself of it so far as it is advantageous to him, and reject it as to the residue. He cannot take the benefits and repudiate the obligations; and this rule applies not only when his ratification is express but also when it is implied,⁵⁸ if the requirement of knowledge is satisfied.

⁵⁵ Busch v. Wilcox, 82 Mich. 336, 21 Am. St. Rep. 563, cited with approval in State Bank v. Kelly, 109 Iowa, 544; Wilder v. Beede, 119 Cal. 646.

⁵⁶ Meehan v. Forrester, 52 N. Y. 277; Eadie v. Ashbaugh, 44 Iowa, 519; Deering & Co. v. Grundy Nat. Bank, 81 Iowa, 222; Pope v. Armsby Co., 111 Cal. 159.

⁵⁷ Neimeyer Lumber Co. v. Moore, 55 Ark. 240; Pope v. Armsby Co., 111 Cal. 159, 43 Pac. 589; Aultman Threshing, etc., Co. v. Knoll, 71 Kan. 109; Phillips v. Phillips, — Cal. —, 127 Pac. 346, is to much the same effect.

⁵⁸ See post, § 434, et seq.; Crawford v. Barkley, 18 Ala. 270; Daniels

v. Brodie, 54 Ark. 216, 11 L. R. A. 81; Mulford v. Torrey Exploration Co., 45 Colo. 81; Hodnett v. Tatum, 9 Ga. 70; Southern Express Co. v. Palmer, 48 Ga. 85; Mercier v. Cope-lan, 73 Ga. 636; Dolvin v. American Harrow Co., 125 Ga. 699, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 785; Burke, etc., Co. v. Wells Fargo & Co., 7 Idaho, 42; Henderson v. Cummings, 44 Ill. 325; Barhydt v. Clark, 12 Ill. App. 646; Swisher v. Palmer, 106 Ill. App. 432; Krider v. Western College, 31 Iowa, 547; Key v. Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 107 Iowa, 446; McKinstry v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 57 Kan. 279; Aultman Thresh., etc., Co. v. Knoll, 71 Kan. 109; Wells v. Hickox, 1 Kan. App. 485; Loomis

Especially is this true where the person who did the act was not agent for any purpose. Here no part of his act was authorized, and there is no room for selection of a portion and the rejection of the residue.

Stated affirmatively, the ratification of part of an entire act or transaction will usually be a ratification of the whole of it, if there was knowledge of the material facts.

§ 411. — Responsibility for instrumentalities employed.— This doctrine is constantly applied in endeavoring to hold the principal responsible for the instrumentalities through which the act or contract in question was procured. Certainly the principal who expressly ratifies the act or contract, with knowledge of the facts, must assume responsibility for such of the instrumentalities by which the act or contract was induced, as he would have been obliged to assume if the act had been done, or the contract had been made, by his prior authority. Hence, if there were terms or promises or conditions upon which the contract as made was based, or if there was fraud, deceit or misrepresentation which would have affected the principal had the act or contract been authorized, the principal who ratifies with knowledge must ordinarily assume responsibility for these instrumentalities.

And even though he may, at the time of receiving the benefits of the act, have been ignorant of the practices resorted to, still if, instead of attempting or offering to undo the wrong or permitting it to be undone, Milling Co. v. Vawter, 8 Kan. App. 437; Elam v. Carruth, 2 La. Ann. 275; Stanard Milling Co. v. Flower, 46 La. Ann. 315; Boudreaux v. Feibleman, 105 La. 401; Widner v. Lane, 14 Mich. 124; Peninsular Bank v. Hammer, 14 Mich. 208; Hutchings v. Ladd, 16 Mich. 493; Eberts v. Selover, 44 Mich. 519, 38 Am. Rep. 278; Knappen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491; Bohlmann v. Rossi, 73 Mo. App. 312; Rogers v. Hardware Co., 24 Neb. 653; Walker v. Haggerty, 30 Neb. 120; Esterly Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Frolkey, 34 Neb. 110; Osborn Co. v. Jordan, 52 Neb. 465; Martin v. Humphrey, 58 Neb. 414; Citizens' State Bank v. Pence, 59 Neb. 579; Fremont Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370; Warder, etc., Co. v. Myers, 70 Neb. 15; Tasker v. Kenton Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 438; Eastman v. Provident, etc., Ass'n, 65 N. H. 176, 23 Am. St. R. 29, 5 L. R. A. 712; Warren v. Hayes, 74 N. H. 355; Crans v. Hunter, 28 N. Y. 389; Tallman v. Kimball, 74 Hun (N. Y.), 279; Slocum v. Gilman, 84 Hun (N. Y.), 405; Rudasill v. Falls, 92 N. C. 222; Coleman v. Stark, 1 Or. 115; McLeod v. Despain, 49 Or. 536, 124 Am. St. R. 1066, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276; Grover v. Hawthorne, 121 Pac. (Ore.) 804; Mundorff v. Wickersham, 63 Pa. 87, 3 Am. Rep. 531; Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Aughey, 144 Pa. 398, 27 Am. St. R. 638; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Christian, 211 Pa. 534; Shafer v. Russell, 28 Utah, 444; McClure v. Briggs, 58 Vt. 82, 56 Am. Rep. 557; Peterson v. Hicks, 43 Wash. 412; Ruffner v. Hewett, 7 W. Va. 585; Third Nat'l Bank v. Laboringman's Mfg. Co., 56 W. Va. 446; Aultman Co. v. McDonough, 110 Wis. 263.

The same rule applies to infants. See Ready v. Pinkham, 181 Mass. 351.

where it is practicable, he expressly ratifies, or insists upon having or retaining the fruits of, the malpractice of his agent after he is advised of it, he must ordinarily assume the same responsibility for the means by which those fruits were procured which he must have assumed had the act been authorized.⁵⁹ The rule, moreover, in this respect, is the ⁵⁹ Thus in Elwell v. Chamberlin, 31 N. Y. 611, 619, it is said: "It is not material that the plaintiffs authorized or knew of the alleged fraud committed by their agent in negotiating the sale of the note. They cannot be permitted to enjoy the fruits of the bargain without adopting all the instrumentalities employed by the agent in bringing it to a consummation. They have ratified the sale by seeking to enforce payment of the check given for the thing sold. If an agent defrauds the person with whom he is dealing, the principal, not having authorized or participated in the wrong, may no doubt, rescind, when he discovers the fraud, on the terms of making complete restitution. But so long as he retains the benefits of the dealing, he cannot claim immunity on the ground that the fraud was committed by his agent and not by himself" citing Bennett v. Judson, 21 N. Y. 238, which is to the same effect.

So in Knapen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491, it is said: "The plaintiff not only accepted the negotiations of her husband and Daniels in her behalf, but she is now insisting upon appropriating the benefits thereof." "From the time of adopting what they had done, the matter of prior authority in them ceased to be material. 'When one adopts the unauthorized act of another made in his behalf, and receives the benefits accruing therefrom, he is held to adopt and ratify the instrumentalities by which the fruits were obtained.' He cannot retain the benefits of the transaction and repudiate the remainder. If he accept and retain the contract thus made for him by another, he must take it with whatever taint attached to its origin," citing Albitz v. Minn., etc., Ry. Co., 40 Minn. 476; Busch v. Wilcox, 82 Mich. 315; Bennett v. Judson, supra; Hathaway v. Johnson, 55 N. Y. 93, 14 Am. Rep. 186; Krumm v. Beach, 96 N. Y. 398.

And in Busch v. Wilcox, 82 Mich. 336, 21 Am. St. Rep. 563, it is said: "In adopting the contract, he not only adopts it as written, but he thereby adopts as his acts all the instrumentalities of the self constituted agent in obtaining the consent of the opposite party to enter into the contract. By adopting the acts of the self constituted agent, he seeks to appropriate to himself all the benefits to be derived from it as fully as if he had himself induced it in the first instance, and with this he must assume all the liabilities which attach to it," citing Wilson v. Tumman, 6 M. & G. 236; Morse v. Ryan, 26 Wis. 356; Fitzsimmons v. Joslin, 21 Vt. 129, 52 Am. Dec. 46; Baker v. Ins. Co., 43 N. Y. 283; Elwell v. Chamberlin, supra; Presby v. Parker, 56 N. H. 409; Garner v. Mangam, 93 N. Y. 642; Bennett v. Judson, supra; Carpenter v. Ins. Co., 1 Story, 57, Fed. Cas. No. 2,428; Mundorff v. Wickersham, 63 Pa. 87, 3 Am. Rep. 531; Coleman v. Stark, 1 Or. 115.

To same effect: Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Aughey, 144 Pa. 398, 27 Am. St. Rep. 638; Davis Lumber Co. v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 95 Wis. 226; Mayer v. Dean, 115 N. Y. 556, 5 L. R. A. 540; Fairchild v. McMahon, 139 N. Y. 290, 36 Am. St. 701; Budd v. Howard Thomas Co., 40 Misc. 52; Aultman Co. v. McDonough, 110 Wis. 263; Rogers v. Empkie Hardware Co., 24 Neb. 653; Esterly Harv. Mach. Co. v. Frolkey, 34 Neb. 110; Cole v. Edwards, 52 Neb. 711; Beidman v.

same whether the instrumentality employed was fraudulent, or merely a matter of warranty or promise.⁶⁰

§ 412. — Limitations—Collateral contracts.—But this rule is not to be applied without limitation. Thus it is said in a leading case,⁶¹ though it is probably somewhat too wide, “even this responsibility for instrumentalities does not extend to collateral contracts made by the agent in excess of his actual or ostensible authority, and not known to the principal at the time of receiving the proceeds, though such collateral contract may have been the means by which the agent was enabled to effect the unauthorized contract, and the principal retain the proceeds thereof after knowledge of the fact.”

Goodell, 56 Iowa, 592; Eadie v. Ashbaugh, 44 Iowa, 519; Deering Co. v. Grundy Nat. Bank, 81 Iowa, 222; Osborn & Co. v. Jordan, 52 Neb. 465; Dresher v. Becker, 88 Neb. 619; Phillips, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Wild, 144 Ala. 545; Walling v. Poulsen, 160 Mich. 392; Fraternal Army of America v. Evans, 215 Ill. 629; Morse v. Whitcomb, 54 Or. 412, 135 Am. St. R. 832; Western Mfg. Co. v. Cotton, 126 Ky. 749, 31 Ky. L. R. 1130, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 427.

Contra: Nichols v. Bruns, 5 Dak. 28.

⁶⁰ Rackemann v. Riverbank Improvement Co., 167 Mass. 1, 57 Am. St. 427 (citing Udell v. Atherton, 7 H. & N. 172; Brady v. Todd, 9 C. B. (N. S.) 592; Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 145; Houldsworth v. Glasgow Bank, 5 App. Cas. 317; Kennedy v. McKay, 43 N. J. L. 288, 39 Am. Rep. 581; Titus v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 46 N. J. L. 393, 420; Krumm v. Beach, 96 N. Y. 398; Eberts v. Selover, 44 Mich. 519, 38 Am. Rep. 278; Knappen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491).

⁶¹ The leading case in this connection is Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79. Here the owner of bank stock put it into the hands of the president of the bank for sale. The president sold it to the plaintiff making representations concerning its value which he had no authority to make but which he believed to be true. He paid the proceeds to the owner saying nothing about the representations he had made. The seller died, apparently in ignorance of the making of the representations; the representations proved to be untrue, and the purchaser more than two years after the sale and without any previous effort to undo the transaction brought this action against the seller's executor to recover damages. The plaintiff claimed that power to warrant would be implied, but, if not, that the retention of the proceeds of the sale was a ratification of the warranty. It was held that no power to warrant would be implied and that the receipt of the proceeds was no ratification. “The receipt of the proceeds of the sale, in ignorance of any such undertaking, is neither an assent to the breach of duty nor an extension of the authority of the agent.” But suppose that the purchase price had not been paid and the owner were suing the buyer for the price. Would the court then have held that he could recover the price without regard to the representations? Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y. 219, 78 Am. Dec. 137, is also to the same effect. Here it was held that a principal who gives money to an agent to loan at legal rates does not by receiving the securities ratify an illegal exaction by the agent of a bonus making the loan usurious, the principal being ignorant of it. But three judges dis-

The principal here, it is said, has authorized his agent to make a certain contract. The agent makes that contract but also makes an additional one. The latter, as the person dealing with the agent is bound to know, is not binding unless authorized or ratified. It was not authorized: was it ratified? All that can be shown is that the prin-sent. Wheeler v. Northwestern Sleigh Co., 39 Fed. 347 (Jenkins and Gresham, JJ.) is also an important case. The owner of stock in a corporation upon which a dividend had been declared but not paid, authorized an agent to sell the stock at a certain price, expressly reserving the dividend. The agent made a sale at the price named by promising to throw in the dividend. He paid the price to the principal but did not tell him of the agreement respecting the dividend. It does not appear when the principal learned of the promise respecting the dividend. The agent denied that he made any such promise, but the finding was against him on this point. Neither party had offered or demanded a disaffirmance of the sale. It was urged, by the purchaser, that by so receiving and retaining the proceeds of the sale the principal ratified the contract that the dividend should be included, but this was held not to be true. "The plaintiff received as avails of the stock the exact amount for which he had authorized his agent to dispose of his stock. He had no reason to suppose that any false representation had been made, or that his agent had assumed to dispose of any other property than the stock as the consideration for the money paid by the purchasers and received by him. Under such circumstances, the retention of the money cannot be held to be a ratification by him of the unauthorized acts of the agent because it was retained without knowledge of the facts," citing Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Pet. 69, 7 L. Ed. 606; Hastings v. Bangor House Proprietors, 18 Me. 436; Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 87, 45 Am. Dec. 96; Thacher v. Pray, 113

Mass. 291, 18 Am. Rep. 480; Naviga-tion Co. v. Dandridge, 8 G. & J. (Md.) 248, 29 Am. Dec. 543; Smith v. Tracy, supra; Baldwin v. Burrows, supra; Smith v. Kidd, 68 N. Y. 130, 23 Am. Rep. 157; Reynolds v. Ferree, 86 Ill. 570; Roberts v. Rumley, 58 Iowa, 301; Bohart v. Oberne, 36 Kan. 284; Aetna Insurance Co. v. N. W. Iron Co., 21 Wis. 458.

Roberts v. Rumley, 58 Iowa, 301, cited supra, is also of interest. The defendant who lived in Indiana held certain notes against a resident of Iowa upon part of which one Roberts was a surety. Rumley put the notes into the hands of attorneys in Iowa who took judgment upon them. Roberts proposed to the attorneys that he would get the principal debtor to secure payment by a mortgage upon his homestead if certain extensions and privileges of payment were granted. The attorneys reported this to Rumley who instructed them to accept if a certain sum should also be paid to apply on fees. Roberts paid this sum and the attorneys without the knowledge or consent of Rumley agreed that it should be applied in a different way and that the mortgage should be pro tanto assigned to Roberts. Rumley accepted the mortgage, which was silent as to this agreement, and afterwards began foreclosure, whereupon Roberts began the suit in question to secure the performance of the agreement, claiming that Rumley by accepting the mortgage and payment ratified this contract. It was held (distinguishing Eadie v. Ashbaugh, 44 Iowa, 519, and Beidman v. Goodell, 56 Iowa, 592) that his claim could not be enforced. "To hold that the principal is bound by agreements between the principal, in ignorance of the additional contract, received, and has retained, what appeared to be the legitimate proceeds of the authorized contract. "It cannot, surely, be said that under such circumstances the retention of the money was an act of affirmance," declares Jenkins, J., in a case already cited.⁶² "To so hold would place every principal at the mercy of his agent with respect to matters as to which he had conferred no apparent authority. So that if one should authorize his agent to sell his house for $20,000, and the agent selling the house for that sum should include in the sale certain bank stock which he was not authorized to sell, and of which he had no possession, the principal, by the mere receipt and retention of the sum which he had authorized to be taken for the house, and in ignorance of the fact that the bank stock was part of the consideration running to the purchaser, would be bound to deliver the stock. I cannot yield assent to such doctrine."

§ 413. — This is not to say, however, that if the principal had been seeking by action to enforce the contract as he understood and authorized it, he could have done so. The defendant in that event could show that he never consented to that contract. Nor does it follow that the principal would have been able to retain the proceeds if the other party, returning what he had received, had demanded restoration upon the ground that the minds of the parties had never met upon any proposition.

The situation appears to be this: The principal has authorized his agent to make or accept a certain offer, or an offer upon certain terms. The agent in fact has made or accepted a different offer, or an offer upon different terms. The result is that the minds of the principal and the other party have never met; no valid contract has resulted; and, subject to a possible right of the principal to force a ratification,⁶³ either party is at liberty to withdraw from the negotiations. As soon as the principal learns the facts, it would, in general, be incumbent upon him, unless he wishes to affirm the contract, to offer to restore what he may have received under the negotiations and of the other party likewise to restore what he has received.⁶⁴ special agent and the person with whom he contracts, not authorized by the agent's appointment, and of which he had no knowledge when he accepted the benefits of the contract, would be entirely subversive of the whole doctrine of special agency, and instead of requiring the person dealing with the agent to ascertain, at his peril, that the agent has kept within his special authority, would require the principal to inquire, at his peril, whether the agent had gone beyond it." (But compare State Bank v. Kelly, 109 Iowa, 544.)

⁶² Wheeler v. Northwestern Sleigh Co., supra.

⁶³ As to which see post, § 513, et seq.

⁶⁴ See post, § 436.

If now the principal takes the initiative and endeavors to enforce the contract or secure rights under the contract, he must take the contract as he finds it, because that is the only contract or appearance of contract that has been made and to which the other party has assented. If there are unauthorized provisions in the contract, still, since they are terms in the only contract there is, the principal who would enforce that contract must be bound by them. If there are conditions or representations affecting this contract, which would equally affect an authorized contract, the principal must take subject to them.

Now, turn it about. Until the principal has done something to ratify, he is not bound. He is the only party who can ratify. Until he has ratified, the other party can not hold him upon the contract or upon any of the conditions or representations accompanying it. If the other party claims that the principal has ratified the contract, he has the burden of proving that the principal with knowledge has done so.⁶⁵ If he can establish that, he may succeed. The refusal of the principal to disaffirm upon a proper request would doubtless often be a ratification, though it is not necessarily so.⁶⁶

If the principal does not ratify, either by seeking to enforce or otherwise, the transaction stands like any other ineffectual dealings. Disaffirmance and restoration are the ends to be arrived at. If this can not be accomplished, and there are no quasi-contractual remedies available, any loss sustained must either be made good by the agent who caused it, or be left to lie where it has fallen.

§ 414. — Collateral stipulation which makes whole contract illegal.—A distinction may also be drawn in the case in which the collateral stipulation is one which would, as the other party who now insists upon it knows, make an otherwise lawful contract illegal. He has no right to suppose that such a stipulation was authorized, or will be approved. He himself ought to be supposed to have intended to make a lawful contract and not an illegal one. He is certainly entitled to very little consideration in endeavoring to set up against an actually innocent principal who is seeking to enforce an apparently lawful contract, an illegal provision to which he was a voluntary party and which will make the whole transaction illegal; and it has been held that he will not be permitted to do it.⁶⁷

⁶⁵ Thus in Lester v. Kinne, 37 Conn. 9, specific performance was denied to a buyer to whom the defendant's agent, authorized to sell lot A, had without authority agreed to convey lot B also for the price fixed for A alone, there being no evidence of ratification except that the principal had received the consideration, which he supposed was for lot A only, in ignorance of the fact that the agent had agreed to include lot B also.

⁶⁶ Although it is sometimes said that the refusal of the principal to return what he has received or pay for it, is a ratification, this is, of course, not necessarily so. Not every benefit received must be paid for. It is not always possible to restore it. Benefits thrust upon another cannot usually be made the basis of recovery. There can usually be no liability for refusing to return what one has the right to retain. See post, §§ 435, 436 and notes.

§ 415. — Divisible acts—Involuntary receipt, etc.—Moreover, by the terms of the rule, it does not apply to the ratification of wholly severable and disconnected parts of a general transaction. Nor, as will be seen hereafter, to the case in which something to which the principal is entitled independent of the act in question, is so bound up with that as to make separation impossible.⁶⁸

§ 416. Intention to ratify.—The statement is sometimes made that there can be no ratification unless the principal intended to ratify.⁶⁹ If by this is meant that there must always be a conscious, deliberate purpose to ratify, it is, of course, unsound. Where particular acts, alleged to be acts of approval, are relied upon, the question whether they were meant to be acts of approval or of disapproval, or whether

⁶⁷ Thus in Terry v. International Cotton Co., 138 Ga. 656, a special agent sent out with a printed form of contract to make contracts for the purchase of cotton took from the defendant and delivered to his principal an apparently regular and lawful contract upon one of the forms so furnished for the sale of defendants cotton to the plaintiff. On seeking to enforce it, plaintiff is met by defendant's contention that the contract was really made upon the terms that the cotton should not in fact be delivered, but should be settled by paying differences in value. Such a contract would be a gambling contract, illegal under the statutes of the state, and one which the agent had no authority to make. Held, that this collateral stipulation could not be set up. The court cites as analogous, the cases of alleged usury, where the agent and the borrower have agreed upon a total rate which would make the loan usurious. As will be seen in a later section, it is held in many cases, though not without dissent, that a collateral stipulation or act of this sort, not included in the very contract upon which the principal sues, cannot be set up to invalidate the loan. See Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y. 219, 78 Am. Dec. 137; Hall v. Maudlin, 58 Minn. 137, 49 Am. St. R. 492; Nye v. Swan, 49 Minn. 431; Richards v. Bippus, 18 App. D. C. 293; Franzen v. Hammond, 136 Wis. 239, 128 Am. St. R. 1079, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 399; McLean v. Camak, 97 Ga. 804; Clarke v. Havard, 111 Ga. 242, 51 L. R. A. 499.

⁶⁸ See post, § 439.

⁶⁹ Thus, for example, a statement in Ansonia v. Cooper, 64 Conn. 536, that "the acceptance of the results of the act, with an intent to ratify and with full knowledge of all the material circumstances, is a ratification"—which is of course a perfectly true statement—becomes the cited authority, in Russell v. Erie R. Co., 70 N. J. L. 808, 67 L. R. A. 433, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 672, for the statement "that in order to constitute a ratification there must be an acceptance of the results of the act with an intent to ratify and with full knowledge of all the material circumstances," which is obviously quite a different proposition.

See also Trustees v. Bowman, 136 N. Y. 521; Reid v. Warner, [1907] Transv. L. R. (Sup.) 961.

an inference of approval may or may not reasonably be drawn from them, or whether they may not be as consistent with some other conclusion as with that of approval, and the like, may well require a consideration of the intent or purpose with which the acts were done.⁷⁰

But it is perfectly settled that, in the creation of agency or of partnership or like situations, where the question is what inference the law draws from given facts, the matter of the actual intention of the parties is not conclusive. If they voluntarily intend to do the acts from which, as a legal consequence, agency, or partnership, or contract, or the like, results, that consequence can not be defeated because the parties may not have consciously intended to produce that result. It can not be otherwise with ratification.⁷¹

V.

WHAT AMOUNTS TO A RATIFICATION.

§ 417. Importance of question.—It is obvious that this is the most important question to be considered in this chapter, and that within it are embraced, to a greater or less degree, all of the preliminary topics that have just been considered. Given the proper parties and the right conditions, does this writing, this conduct, this speaking, this silence, amount to a ratification of this unauthorized act or contract, is the vital question to which all the preliminary considerations lead.

§ 418. Written or unwritten—Express or implied.—As has been seen and will hereafter be more clearly seen, the ratification of an unauthorized act is deemed to be equivalent to a prior authority to perform it; and as that prior authority may have been conferred in a great variety of ways—may have been written or unwritten, express or implied,—so this ratification may be effected in the same way.⁷²

1. Express Ratification.

§ 419. General rule.—It is the general rule that the act of ratification must be of the same nature as that which would be required for ⁷⁰ This is, doubtless, what is meant in such cases as Breaux v. Sarvoie, 39 La. Ann. 243, and Williams v. Pullman Car Co., 40 La. Ann. 87, 8 Am. St. R. 512, by the statement "that the acts from which the ratification of a contract is sought to be deduced must evince such intention clearly and unequivocally. None will be inferred where those acts can be otherwise explained."

⁷¹ Thus in Hazard v. Spears, 4 Keyes (43 N. Y.), 469, 2 Abb. Dec. 353, where this question was involved, it is said: "The law passes its judgment upon, and gives legal effect to, what is said and done. Intentions, except as they are manifested by the acts and statements of the parties, are of no avail."

⁷² Goss v. Stevens, 32 Minn. 472; Post, Subd. 1 and 2; Taylor v. Conner, 41 Miss. 722, 97 Am. Dec. 419.

conferring the authority in the first instance.⁷⁴ If, therefore, sealed authority would have been indispensable, then, as a general rule, sealed ratification must be shown; and if written authority would have been required, written ratification must appear.

Each of these methods will be separately considered.

a. By Instrument Under Seal.

§ 420. Deed at common law ratified only by instrument under seal.—As authority to execute an instrument under seal could only be conferred by authority under seal,⁷⁵ it was the doctrine of the common law that the unauthorized deed of an agent—meaning by deed, of course, any instrument to whose validity a seal was essential—could only be ratified by an instrument under seal.⁷⁶

As a rule of the common law, this generally still prevails where not changed either by express statute or as the result of general statutory provisions respecting the significance or necessity of seals.

⁷⁴“A ratification of an act done by one assuming to be an agent relates back and is equivalent to a prior authority. When therefore the adoption of any particular form or mode is necessary to confer the authority in the first instance there can be no valid ratification except in the same manner.” Parker, C. J. in Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205, 37 Am. Dec. 203.

Where a city could authorize a given contract only by ordinance it can ratify only by ordinance. Arnott v. Spokane, 6 Wash. 442; Kroffe v. Springfield, 86 Mo. App. 530; Mulligan v. Lexington, 126 Mo. App. 715; Penn v. Laredo (Tex. Civ. App.), 26 S. W. 636.

⁷⁵ Ante. § 212.

⁷⁶ Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., supra; Spoffard v. Hobbs, 29 Me. 148, 48 Am. Dec. 521; Bellas v. Hays, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 427, 9 Am. Dec. 385; Stetson v. Patten, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 358, 11 Am. Dec. 111; Blood v. Goodrich, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 68, 24 Am. Dec. 121; McDowell v. Simpson, 3 Watts (Pa.), 129, 27 Am. Dec. 338;

Heath v. Nutter, 50 Me. 378; Paine v. Tucker, 21 Id. 138, 38 Am. Dec. 255; Hanford v. McNair, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 54; Taylor v. Robinson, 14 Cal. 400; Ingram v. Little, 14 Ga. 173, 58 Am. Dec. 549; Drumright v. Philpot, 16 Ga. 424, 60 Am. Dec. 738; Pollard v. Gibbs, 55 Ga. 45; Neely v. Stevens, 138 Ga. 305; McCalla v. American, etc., Mtg. Co., 90 Ga. 113; Grove v. Hodges, 55 Penn. St. 504; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Kirkpatrick v. Pease, 202 Mo. 471; Skirvin v. O'Brien 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1, but see and cp. Eastham v. Hunter, 102 Tex. 145, 132 Am. St. R. 854; Oxford v. Crow, [1893] 3 Ch. 535.

But a parol acknowledgment by the principal that an agent possessed an authority under seal is sufficient. Blood v. Goodrich, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 525, 27 Am. Dec. 152.

And a few cases seem to ignore the rule stated in the text. See Donason v. Barbero, 230 Ill. 138; Finch v. Gillespie, 122 App. Div. 858; Mulford v. Rowland, 45 Colo. 172; Eastham v. Hunter, supra.

§ 421. — Rule relaxed in partnership cases.—This rule has been greatly relaxed in partnership cases, and it is now quite universally held that the act of one partner in executing, in the name of the firm, an instrument under seal, may be ratified by the other partner by parol. Said Breese, C. J.: "We think it may be safely said that the modern rule is that one partner may, in furtherance of the partnership business and for its benefit, execute a deed under seal which will be binding on the other if he has foreknowledge, or subsequently ratifies it, and this may be proved by acts and circumstances or by his verbal declarations and admissions."⁷⁷

§ 422. — Massachusetts rule.—And in Massachusetts the court has gone still further, and it is said that the law is settled in that commonwealth that the unauthorized execution of a deed in the name either of a partnership or of an individual may be ratified by parol.⁷⁸

§ 423. — Modern rule more liberal.—As has been already stated, the tendency in modern times is to attach less importance to the presence of a seal, and to mitigate the severity of those technical rules of the common law which were based upon reasons no longer applicable to the conditions and methods of the present day. In many of the states statutes have been enacted by which the absence of a seal from an instrument formerly requiring it is declared to be immaterial, or by which all of the old distinctions between sealed and unsealed instruments are swept away.⁷⁹ Where such statutes prevail, the technical rule requiring a ratification under seal has no force.⁸⁰

§ 424. — Unnecessary seal may be disregarded.—Moreover, in accordance with rules previously referred to,⁸¹ if the instrument executed by the agent, though under seal, be one upon which no seal is ⁷⁷ Peine v. Weber, 47 Ill. 45; and to the same effect are McIntyre v. Park, 11 Gray (Mass.), 102, 71 Am. Dec. 690; Cady v. Shepherd, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 400, 22 Am. Dec. 379; Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513, 10 Am. Dec. 286; Holbrook v. Chamberlain, 116 Mass. 155, 17 Am. Rep. 146; Russell v. Annable, 109 Mass. 72, 12 Am. Rep. 665; Kendall v. Carland, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 79; Swan v. Stedman, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 552; Dillon v. Brown, 11 Gray (Mass.), 179; Palmer v. Seligman, 77 Mich. 305; Fox v. Norton, 9 Mich. 207.

⁷⁸ Gray, C. J. in Holbrook v. Cham- berlain, 116 Mass. 155, 17 Am. Rep. 146; McIntyre v. Park, 11 Gray (Mass.), 102, 71 Am. Dec. 690.

⁷⁹ Provisions more or less complete of this nature are found in Arkansas, California, Colorado, Dakota, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and probably in other states.

⁸⁰ Rutherford v. Montgomery, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 319; Smyth v. Lynch, 7 Colo. App. 383; McLeod v. Morrison, 66 Wash. 683, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783.

⁸¹ Ante, § 215.

required, the seal may be disregarded and the instrument ratified as a simple contract.⁸²

§ 425. — By power of attorney subsequently granted.—The unauthorized execution of a deed may be expressly ratified by a power of attorney subsequently executed, authorizing its execution and dated back prior to the date of the deed. Thus, where an attorney appointed by parol, executed a bond in the name of his principal, and afterwards his principal gave him a power of attorney dated prior to the bond and authorizing its execution, this was held to be a good ratification of the bond and that the principal was estopped to assert that the power of attorney was, as a matter of fact, executed subsequently to the bond.⁸³ So a letter from a principal authorizing certain acts, but received after the performance, will be a ratification.⁸⁴

But a mere power to do acts in the future will not operate as a ratification of acts already done.⁸⁵

b. By Instrument in Writing.

§ 426. Where authority must be conferred by writing, ratification in writing is necessary.—It has been seen in preceding sections that in a few cases some statute, usually but not always the statute of frauds, requires that authority for certain purposes shall be conferred by writing. Where this is true, ratification must also be by writing.⁸⁶

⁸² Bless v. Jenkins, 129 Mo. 647; Goldring v. Reid, 61 Fla. 250; Adams v. Power, 52 Miss. 828 [citing Worral v. Munn, 5 N. Y. 229, 55 Am. Dec. 330; Lawrence v. Taylor, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 113; Randall v. Van Vechten, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 60, 10 Am. Dec. 193; Evans v. Wells, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 340]. And to the same effect are State v. Spartansburg, etc., R. R. Co., 8 S. C. 129; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490; Smyth v. Lynch, 7 Colo. App. 383.

But, contra, Rowe v. Ware, 30 Ga. 278; Pollard v. Gibbs, 55 Ga. 45; Hayes v. City of Atlanta, 1 Ga. App. 25; Dalton Buggy Co. v. Wood, 7 Ga. App. 477; Neely v. Stevens, 138 Ga. 305.

⁸³ Milliken v. Coombs, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 343, 10 Am. Dec. 70; United States Express Co. v. Rawson, 106 Ind. 215; Riggan v. Crain, 86 Ky. 249.

⁸⁴ Rice v. McLarren, 42 Me. 157. But in Moore v. Lockett, 2 Bibb

(Ky.), 67, 4 Am. Dec. 683, it was held that a letter giving an agent power to sell but written subsequently to an unauthorized sale under an insufficient power, did not ratify the previous sale. Certainly not where the letter names different terms. Stillman v. Fitzgerald 37 Minn. 186.

⁸⁵ Britt v. Gordon, 132 Iowa, 431.

⁸⁶ Hawkins v. McGroarty, 110 Mo. 546; Salfeld v. Sutter, etc., Co., 94 Cal. 546; Borderre v. Den, 106 Cal. 85; Miller v. Drexel, 37 Ill. App. 462; 594; Long v. Poth, 16 Misc. (N. Y.) Vaughn v. Slater, 147 Ill. App. 441; Lawler v. Armstrong, 53 Wash. 664; Moots v. Cope, 147 Mo. App. 76 (in which the court entirely refused to allow the proof of a contract for sale of realty without accompanying written authority or ratification); Matteson v. U. S. Land Co., 112 Minn. 190.

Where a statute requires that the authority of an agent to make con-

§ 427. — Contracts for sale or leasing of land.—Thus, as has been seen, in many of the states, authority to make contracts for the sale or leasing (for more than a certain term) of land of the principal is required to be in writing⁸⁷ and it has, therefore, been held in these states that the unauthorized making of such contracts can subsequently be ratified only by writing.⁸⁸

In other states, however, written authority for these purposes is not required, and therefore written ratification is not necessary.⁸⁹

§ 428. Written ratification not otherwise required.—Except in these cases wherein ratification by sealed instrument is required, or where ratification in writing is required because some statute demands authority by writing, it is the general rule that ratification, though it be express and formal, need not be in writing. Any words in any form clearly indicative of an intention to ratify will suffice. As will be seen in the following subdivisions, even express or formal ratification is not necessary; but, even if it were, it would not need to be in writing, unless some statute made it so, or unless instruments under seal were involved.

§ 429. "Lawfully authorized" under Statute of Frauds.—Thus it has been held sufficient to satisfy that provision of the Statute of Frauds tracts of suretyship should be in writing, a subsequent parol ratification is insufficient. Ragan v. Chenault, 78 Ky. 545; English v. Dycus, 8 Ky. L. R. 331.

Where the statute requires that the agent have written authority, the writing may be a previous authority, or may be made at any subsequent time. In re Balfour & Garrette, 14 Cal. App. 261.

The making of a simple agreement to pay money, not a promissory note, is not required by the California statute (Civ. Code § 2309), to be in writing, and it may therefore be ratified without writing. Goetz v. Goldbaum (Cal.), 37 Pac. 646.

In Mercantile Trust Co. v. Nigge-man, 119 Mo. App. 56, under a statute requiring the authority of an agent to sell real estate to be in writing, it was held that the execution of a deed and its delivery in pursuance of a contract negotiated by an agent without written authority, is a good and binding ratification. And in Kirkpatrick v. Pease, 202 Mo. 471, it was held that there might be ratification of a contract for the sale of land made by an agent acting under parol authority, by the acceptance of the price and its retention for the period of a year.

⁸⁷ See ante, § 223 et seq.

⁸⁸ Hawkins v. McGroarty, 110 Mo. 546; Miller v. Drexel, 37 Ill. App. 462; Kozel v. Dearlove, 144 Ill. 23, 36 Am. St. Rep. 416; Long v. Poth, 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 85; McDowell v. Simpson, 3 Watts (Pa.), 129, 27 Am. Dec. 838; Zimpelman v. Keating, 72 Tex. 318; Clement v. Young-McShea Amusement Co., 70 N. J. Eq. 677, 118 Am. St. R. 747; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490, is contra but the cases cited in it do not sustain it upon this point.

⁸⁹ See ante, § 229.

Authority to accept a lease need not be in writing and there may therefore be ratification without writing. Ehrmanntraut v. Robinson, 52 Minn. 333.

which requires that the contract shall be in writing, signed by the principal or by some one thereunto by him lawfully authorized, to show a subsequent parol ratification of the act of the agent in signing such a contract.⁹⁰

2. Implied Ratification.

§ 430. In general.—But since, as has been seen, authority for the doing of any lawful act,—except in those cases in which an authority in writing or under seal is expressly required,—can be conferred by parol, and since the existence of such authority may be inferred from the conduct of the parties, so also, with the same exceptions, the unauthorized doing of any such act may be ratified by parol, and the fact of such ratification may likewise be inferred from the conduct of the parties.⁹¹ In this case also, as in the other, it will be found that this is the most usual method by which the result is effected.

Ratification, like authorization of which it is the equivalent, is generally the creature of intent, but that intent may often be found by the law in cases where the principal, as matter of fact, either had no express intent at all, or had an express intent not to ratify.⁹²

The acts, words, silence of the principal which are relied upon are sometimes spoken of as in themselves a ratification. As a rule, however, this is not strictly accurate. They are rather the evidence of a ratification, than the ratification itself.

§ 431. Variety of methods.—The methods by which an implied ratification may be effected are as numerous and as various as the complex dealings of human life. It is impossible to state them all. But certain forms that have often been judicially passed upon may be grouped, and instances be given which may furnish a rule for future cases.

§ 432. I. By declaring approval.—Ratification being a matter of assent to and approval of the act as done on account of the person ratifying, any words or acts which show such assent and approval are ordinarily sufficient. Thus clearly, where the principal, when informed of the act, agrees to it,⁹³ or says that he is glad it is done,⁹⁴ or says that it is “all right,” and directs that the matter be proceeded ⁹⁰ McLean v. Dunn, 4 Bing. 722; Soames v. Spencer, 1 Dowl. & R. 32.

⁹¹ Campbell v. Millar, 84 Ill. App. 208; O'Reilly v. Keim, 54 N. J. Eq. 418; Dixon v. Bristol Sav. Bank, 102 Ga. 461, 66 Am. St. R. 193; Fant v. Campbell, 8 Okl. 586; Hartlove v. Fait, 89 Md. 254.

⁹² Campbell v. Millar, supra.

⁹³ Smith v. Schiele, 93 Cal. 144. See also Central Texas Grocery Co. v. Globe Tobacco Co., 45 Tex. Civ. App. 199.

⁹⁴ Blakeley v. Cochran, 117 Mich. 394. See also Lowman v. Nye, etc., Bank, 31 Nev. 306.

with,⁹⁵ or declares that he will assume the unauthorized contract,⁹⁶ or agrees to pay the price stipulated for,⁹⁷ or promises to perform on his part,⁹⁸ or directs that the transaction be completed,⁹⁹ and the like;¹ there is evidence of ratification.

On the contrary, where the principal distinctly repudiates the contract, there is no ratification though he accompanies the repudiation with the offer of a different contract.²

So, clearly, if the principal distinctly repudiates the contract, but later voluntarily does something to mitigate the other party's loss, no ratification of the contract can be inferred.³

§ 433. II. By proceeding to perform.—So approval and ratification are usually clearly shown where the person, on whose behalf the act was done, voluntarily recognizes it as binding upon him, and proceeds, with knowledge of the facts, to perform the obligations which it imposes. Thus, where the alleged principal voluntarily executes and delivers the deeds called for by an unauthorized contract for the sale of land,⁴ or delivers material in pursuance of an unauthorized contract for its sale,⁵ or makes partial payments upon an unauthorized contract,⁶ or otherwise proceeds to act upon and perform it,⁷ there is strong evidence of ratification.

⁹⁵ Hess v. Baar, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 286; Brown v. Wilson, 45 S. Car. 519, 55 Am. St. Rep. 779. So also Cameron v. Mut. L. & T. Co., 121 Iowa, 477.

⁹⁶ Pope v. Armsby Co., 111 Cal. 159; Canfield v. Johnson, 144 Pa. 61.

⁹⁷ Taylor v. Bailey, 169 Ill. 181.

⁹⁸ Prine v. Syverson, 37 Neb. 860; Fenn v. Dickey, 178 Pa. 258; Porter v. Raleigh, etc., R. Co., 132 N. C. 71. But not where the man who promises is not the one for whom the agent purported to act. Roby v. Cossitt, 78 Ill. 638.

⁹⁹ Tinsley v. Dowell (Tex. Civ. App.), 24 S. W. 928.

¹ Thus where the principal negotiates the sale of a chattel mortgage executed without authority he ratifies it (Iowa State Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 98 Iowa, 631); or endorses a note executed without authority (Washington Times Co. v. Wilder, 12 App. D. C. 62; Mitchell v. Finnell, 101 Cal. 614); or gives his daughter a blank check with which to pay for goods bought her her, Brown v. Reiman, 48 App. Div. (N. Y.) 295.

² Hardwick v. Kirwan, 91 Md. 285.

³ Thus in Findlay v. Hildenbrand, 17 Idaho, 403, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 400, the principal, when he was informed of the unauthorized contract, advised the other party that it was unauthorized, and warned him not to proceed. The other party nevertheless did so. Later the principal offered to pay the other party what the principal thought was the fair measure of any benefit conferred upon him. Held, no ratification of the entire contract.

⁴ Townsend v. Kennedy, 6 S. D. 47; Short v. Stephens, 92 Mo. App. 151; Van Name v. Queen's Land & T. Co., 130 App. Div. 857.

⁵ Canda v. Casey, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 322.

⁶ Manne v. Siegel-Cooper Co., 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 592.

⁷ See Taylor v. Albemarle Steam Nav. Co., 105 N. C. 484; Welker v. Ap-

§ 434. III. By accepting benefits.—There is, further, ordinarily no more certain and satisfactory a method of manifesting approval of an act than by voluntarily and knowingly taking the benefits which flow from its performance; and it is a general rule, of constant application in the law of agency, that he who, voluntarily and with knowledge of the facts, accepts the benefit of an act purporting to have been done on his account, by his agent, thereby ratifies it and makes it his own as though he had authorized it in the beginning.

§ 435. ——— Must take burdens with benefits.—It is, moreover, as has been seen, a rule of quite universal application that he who would avail himself of the advantages arising from the act of another in his behalf must so far as it is entire also assume its responsibilities. If the principal has knowingly appropriated and enjoyed the fruits and benefits of an agent's act he will not afterwards be heard to say that any portion of the act was unauthorized. One, therefore, who voluntarily accepts the whole or any part of the proceeds of an act done by one assuming, though without authority, to be his agent, must ordinarily be deemed to ratify the act and take it as his own with all its burdens as well as all its benefits. He may not ordinarily take the benefits and reject the burdens, but must either accept them or reject them as a whole.⁸

pleman, 44 Ind. App. 699. See also Anheny v. Young, 52 Wash. 235; Smith v. Cologan, 2 T. R. 188, n; Tate v. Aitken, 5 Cal. App. 505; Garlick v. Morley, 147 Wis. 397.

A principal who puts the tenant into possession and receives rent under an unauthorized lease, ratifies it. Christopher v. National Brew. Co., 72 Mo. App. 121. Where one left in charge of a repair shop but without authority took in a bicycle to be repaired and shipped to the owner, if the proprietor repairs the bicycle, he ratifies the contract and is bound by the agreement to ship it as directed. Rollins v. Cycle Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 287.

⁸ Florence, etc., Co. v. Louisville Banking Co., 138 Ala. 588, 100 Am. St. Rep. 50; Phillips, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Wild, 144 Ala. 545; Snow v. Grace, 29 Ark. 131; Levy v. Wolf, 2 Cal. App. 491; Brown v. Holloway, 47 Colo. 461; Witcher v. Gibson, 15 Colo. App.

163; Dunn v. Hartford, etc., R. R. Co., 43 Conn. 434; Haney School Furn. Co. v. Hightown Baptist Institute, 113 Ga. 289; Dolvin v. Amer. Harrow Co., 125 Ga. 699, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 785; Aurora Ag. Soc. v. Paddock, 80 Ill. 263; Union Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 133 Ill. 368; Fraternal Army v. Evans, 215 Ill. 629; Hurd v. Marple, 2 Ill. App. 402; Hauss v. Niblack, 80 Ind. 407; Albany Land Co. v. Rickel, 162 Ind. 222; Hunt v. Listenberger, 14 Ind. App. 320; American Quarries Co. v. Lay, 37 Ind. App. 386; Reeves v. Miller (Ind. App.), 91 N. E. 812; Eadie v. Ashbaugh, 44 Iowa. 519; National Imp. Co. v. Maiken, 103 Iowa, 118; Casady v. Manchester Fire Ins. Co., 109 Iowa, 539; Des Moines Nat'l Bank v. Meredith, 114 Iowa, 9; Johnson v. School Corp., 117 Iowa, 319; German Savings Bank v. Des Moines Nat'l Bank, 122 Iowa, 737; Whitaker v. Hicks, 123 Iowa, 733; Continental

Like all other general rules however, this is one which must be received with caution, and applied with discrimination; for it is perfectly clear that there are many cases in which one may receive a benefit without incurring any obligation either to return or to pay for it.⁹ It

Ins. Co. v. Clark, 126 Iowa, 274; Zelenka v. Port Huron Mach. Co., 144 Iowa, 592; Ormsby v. Johnson, 24 S. D. 494; Waterson v. Rogers, 21 Kan. 529; Ehrsan v. Mahan, 52 Kan. 245; Aultman Thresh. etc., Co. v. Knoll, 71 Kan. 109; Watt v. Railway Co., 82 Kan. 458; German Ins. Co. v. Emporia Ass'n, 9 Kan. App. 803; E. T. Kenny Co. v. Anderson, 26 Ky. L. R. 367; Western Mfg. Co. v. Cotton & Long, 126 Ky. 749, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 427; Perkins v. Boothby, 71 Me. 91; Hastings v. Bangor House, 18 Me. 436; Judik v. Crane, 81 Md. 610; Swindell Bros. v. J. L. Gilbert & Bro., 100 Md. 399; Cushman v. Loker, 2 Mass. 106; Narragansett Bank v. Atlantic Co., 3 Metc. (Mass.) 282; Ely v. James, 123 Mass. 36; Golding v. Brennan, 183 Mass. 286; Bacon v. Johnson, 56 Mich. 182; Botsford v. Plummer, 77 Mich. 31; Ripley v. Case, 86 Mich. 261; Sokup v. Letellier, 123 Mich. 640; Schmid v. Frankfort, 141 Mich. 291; Hansen v. Rolison, 156 Mich. 83; Walling v. Poulsen, 160 Mich. 392; Sherrod v. Duffy, 160 Mich. 488, 136 Am. St. Rep. 451; Payne v. Hackney, 84 Minn. 195; Johnson v. Ogren, 102 Minn. 8; Rugles v. Washington Co., 3 Mo. 496; Matthews v. French, 194 Mo. 553; Kirkpatrick v. Pease, 202 Mo. 471; Davis v. Krum, 12 Mo. App. 279; Judd v. Walker, 114 Mo. App. 128; Rich v. State Nat'l Bank, 7 Neb. 201, 29 Am. Rep. 382; Hughes v. Ins. Co., 40 Neb. 626; Johnston v. Milwaukee, etc., Inv. Co., 49 Neb. 68; Low v. Conn., etc., R. R. Co., 46 N. H. 284; Looschen Piano Case Co. v. Steinberg, 76 N. J. L. 130, 68 Atl. 1072; Bodine v. Berg (N. J. L.), 82 Atl. 901, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 65; Clement v. Young-McShea Amusement Co., 69 N. J. Eq. 347; Fowler v. N. Y. Gold Exchange, 67 N. Y. 138; Clark v.

Hyatt, 118 N. Y. 563; Fairchild v. McMahon, 139 N. Y. 290, 36 Am. St. R. 701; Smith v. Barnard, 148 N. Y. 420; Codwise v. Hacker, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 526; Moss v. Rossie Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.), 137; Palmerton v. Huxford, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 166; Houghton v. Dodge, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 326; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Sherman, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 181, aff'd 33 N. Y. 69; Hobkirk v. Green, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 18; Budd v. Howard Thomas Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 52; Siff v. Forbes, 63 Misc. (N. Y.) 319; Nutting v. Kings Co. Elev. Ry., 21 App. Div. (N. Y.) 72; West v. Banigan, 51 App. Div. 328, (aff'd without opinion, 172 N. Y. 622); Rosenthal v. Hasberg, 84 N. Y. Supp. 290; Brittain v. Westhall, 135 N. C. 492; Morris v. Ewing, 8 N. Dak. 99; State v. Perry, Wright (Ohio), 662; U. S. Fidelity Co. v. Shirk, 20 Okla. 576; McLeod v. Despain, 49 Ore. 536, 124 Am. St. R. 1066, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276; Mundorff v. Wickersham, 63 Pa. St. 87, 3 Am. Rep. 531; Welch v. Clifton Mfg. Co., 55 S. Car. 568; Union Trust Co. v. Phillips, 7 S. Dak. 225; Evans-Snyder-Buel Co. v. Hilje (Tex. Civ. App.), 83 S. W. 208; Watkins Land Mtge. Co. v. Thetford, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 536; Mayfield Woolen Mills Co. v. Long (Tex. Civ. App.), 119 S. W. 908; Gutheil v. Gilmer, 27 Utah, 496; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266; Collins v. Fidelity Trust Co., 33 Wash. 136; Kirwin v. Wash. Match Co., 37 Wash. 285; Irwin v. Buffalo Pitts Co., 39 Wash. 346; Reid v. Hibbard, 6 Wis. 175; Parish v. Reeve, 63 Wis. 315; Schiffer v. Anderson, 76 C. C. A. 667, 146 Fed. 457; Sutherland v. I. C. Ry. Co., 81 C. C. A. 620, 152 Fed. 694; Jefferson Hotel Co. v. Brumbaugh, 94 C. C. A. 279, 168 Fed. 867.

⁹ See, for example, Weatherford, etc., R. Co. v. Granger, 86 Tex. 350, is also generally true that one cannot have benefits thrust upon him, to be afterwards made the basis of a liability.¹⁰

§ 436. — Duty to restore what he has received.—When the principal discovers that there has come into his hands the proceeds of an unauthorized act done by one who assumed therein to act as his agent, to voluntarily retain such proceeds is ordinarily to ratify the act. If he would repudiate the act in such a case he must, ordinarily, so far as it is possible, restore or offer to restore what he has received¹¹ (subject, of course, to a correlative obligation on the part of the other party to restore what he has received). And this he must do within a reasonable time.¹²

The voluntary retention being in these cases the evidence of ratification, an involuntary retention would not be so cogent. Hence, if return is not possible, as where it cannot be done without substantial

40 Am. St. R. 837; In re Rotherham, etc., Co., 50 L. T. Rep. (N. S.) 219 (where it is said: "It is said that [the claimant] has an equity against the company, because the company had the benefit of his labor. What does that mean? If I order a coat and receive it, I get the benefit of the labor of the cloth manufacturer, but does any one dream that I am under any liability to him? It is a mere fallacy to say, that because a person gets the benefit of work done by somebody else, he is liable to pay the person who did the work.")

¹⁰ See, for example, Footte v. Cotting, 195 Mass. 55, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 693; Arey v. Hall, 81 Me. 17, 10 Am. St. R. 232; Spooner v. Thompson, 48 Vt. 259; Eggleston v. Mason, 84 Iowa, 630, where the principal was held not to be liable merely upon showing that he had unwittingly received the benefit of plaintiff's money, procured without authority by an agent.

Compare Perkins v. Boothby, 71 Me. 91; McDermott v. Jackson, 97 Wis. 64; First Nat. Bank v. Badger Lumber Co., 60 Mo. App. 255.

¹¹ First Nat. Bank v. Oberne, 121 Ill. 25; Harding v. Parshall, 56 Ill. 219; National Improvement Co. v. Malken, 163 Iowa, 118; Higbee v. Trumbauer, 112 Iowa, 74; Deering &

Co. v. Grundy Nat. Bank, 81 Iowa, 222; Johnston v. Milwaukee, etc., Invest. Co., 49 Neb. 68; McDermott v. Jackson, 97 Wis. 64; American Nat. Bank v. Cruger, 91 Tex. 446; Plano Mfg. Co. v. Nordstrom, 63 Neb. 123; Pike v. Douglass, 28 Ark. 59.

After the principal had repudiated unauthorized acts of his brokers, the fact that he did not return an account of the sale which they sent him, was held no ratification. Burhorn v. Lockwood, 71 App. Div. 301.

In Cole v. Baker, 16 S. Dak. 1, where this rule was sought to be applied because the principal had received and retained certain papers, it was held that what he had thus received was practically nothing and furnished no foundation for a ratification.

Where the other party persistently refuses to disaffirm or to restore what he has received from the principal's agent, a formal tender of restoration by the principal is not necessary before bringing replevin for his property. Roberts v. Francis, 123 Wis. 78.

¹² McDermott v. Jackson, 97 Wis. 64.

He is also entitled to a reasonable time in which to determine his course. McDermott v. Jackson, supra.

injury,¹³ or where what has been received has been disposed of,¹⁴ or has been consumed in the expected way, before notice of the act; or where what was received was personal services accepted before notice;¹⁵ and the like, the rule would not apply. There being no evidence of ratification in such a case any recovery which may be had must be had upon a quasi-contractual basis.¹⁶

¹³ See post, § 439. A principal does not ratify the unauthorized act of his agent by accepting the proceeds or fruits thereof, if knowledge of it did not come to him in time to enable him to repudiate the entire transaction without substantial injury. Clark v. Clark, 59 Mo. App. 532; Humphrey v. Havens, 12 Minn. 298; Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45 Am. Dec. 96; Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199. In Cooley v. Perrine, 41 N. J. L. 322, 32 Am. Rep. 210, the court states the rule still more broadly thus: "If, when he acquires knowledge, he cannot, in justice to himself, disavow the whole of his agent's contract, he is entitled to stand upon what he authorized, and repudiate the rest; the purchaser who dealt with a special agent without noting the bounds of his power, must suffer rather than the innocent principal." So in the case of unauthorized repairs or additions to property of such character that they cannot be removed and restored without serious injury. Forman v. The Liddesdale, [1900] App. Cas. 190; Young v. Board of Education, 54 Minn. 385, 40 Am. St. R. 340; Mills v. Berla (Tex. Civ. App.), 23 S. W. 910; Davis v. School District, 24 Me. 349.

In Arey v. Hall, 81 Me. 17, 10 Am. St. R. 232, it is said: "It is well settled, as a general rule, that a person who has received the benefit of the money or property of another, is not liable to such person therefor, in the absence of contract between the parties, if there be any ground upon which the money or property or its benefit may be rightfully retained by its possessor without accounting to the owner. Ratification of another's act does not result in such a case. It is the wrongful keeping of another's property which creates liability to him."

So, where the property can not be distinguished. Schutz v. Jordan, 32 Fed. 55, aff'd 141 U. S. 213. See Pratt v. Bryant, 20 Vt. 333.

¹⁴ Martin v. Hickman, 64 Ark. 217; Bryant v. Moore, supra; Thacher v. Pray, 113 Mass. 291, 18 Am. Rep. 480; Baldwin v. Burrows, supra.

In Timm v. Timm, 34 Wash. 228, it is said that the duty to make restoration is greatly modified in equitable proceedings, where remedies are more flexible.

¹⁵ Swayne v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 49 S. W. 518. In Crawford v. Insurance Co., 100 Ill. App. 454, affirmed, 199 Ill. 367, the receipt by the insured after a loss had occurred, and a claim had become fixed upon a policy of insurance, of the proceeds of a previous unauthorized surrender of the policy, was held not to be a ratification of the surrender. The insured then had a larger claim against the company. It was not possible to restore the parties to their original situation, and the retention of the smaller sum was not a waiver of the larger sum unless so agreed.

In Dempsey v. Wells, 109 Mo. App. 470, this rule was applied to a contract for a lawyer's services in saving property, made by a married woman before any statute had given her authority to contract, but when she retained the property after the statute had given her contractual ability.

¹⁶ The distinction between a liability upon the contract itself by ratification, and a liability quasi ex con-

If the principal attempts to restore the thing received he must, it is held, unless this is waived, return it to the other party at the place where it was received.¹⁷

This duty to return, moreover, may, when it exists, be made the ground of affirmative action by the other party. Thus if the principal repudiates the undertakings which, though unauthorized, formed the substantial basis of the transaction in question, the other party may maintain an action to rescind.¹⁸

§ 437. — Principal must have received proceeds—Money apparently free of trust.—But this rule presupposes that the principal has in fact received the proceeds. If they were never intended to come into the hands of the principal himself but of some third party, it is held not enough.¹⁹ So if they have come no further than into the hands of the very agent himself, this will not be enough, unless they stop there with the knowledge and acquiescence of the principal.²⁰

tractu for the benefit received, is often of importance and frequently overlooked. In some cases there would be no practical difference in result, but in other cases the difference might be great. Many of the cases, in which ratification is said to be the reason, were cases really decided upon equitable principles. They were often actions for money had and received—which is often equitable in its scope—or its code equivalent. That this was the basis is expressly recognized in some of the cases. See, for example, Fay v. Slaughter, 194 Ill. 157, 88 Am. St. R. 148, 56 L. R. A. 564; Foot v. Cotting, 195 Mass. 55, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 693.

There is discussion of the question in Keener on Quasi Contract, pp. 326-334; Woodward on Quasi Contract, § 72, et seq.

¹⁷ National Improvement Co. v. Maiken, 103 Iowa, 118; Lunn v. Guthrie, 115 Iowa, 501.

Where the principal attempts to restore, and tenders back part of what was received, and is met with an unconditional refusal to accept a disaffirmance, the fact that the residue was not tendered does not defeat the principal's right. Bromley v. Aday, 70 Ark. 351.

¹⁸ Rackemann v. Riverbank Improvement Co., 167 Mass. 1, 57 Am. St. R. 427. See also Knappen v. Freeman, 47 Minn. 491.

¹⁹ Thus in Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 79 Am. Dec. 728, where the principal was without authority, joined as a known accommodation maker on a note, and the proceeds of it did not and were not intended to come to him, but to the principal maker, it was held that the principal, on repudiating the note, was not bound to return the proceeds, which he had never received.

So in Northwestern Life Ass'n v. Findley, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 494, where a small sum had been paid in settlement of a life insurance policy, but it had all been used to pay the debts of the deceased for which the beneficiaries were not liable, it was held that the beneficiaries, upon repudiating the settlement, were not obliged to return this sum.

²⁰ See, for example, Railroad Nat. Bank v. City of Lowell, 109 Mass. 214, where a city treasurer, who was already an unknown defaulter, had assumed to have authority to borrow money for the city, had received it, put it in with other money which he held for the city, and disbursed practically all of it for the city's account. Under the statutes, he did not hold city funds as agent or servant of the city, but as an independent accounting officer. Held, that the receipt of the money by him was not such a receipt by the city as to charge it with liability.

Thus, for example, if an agent without authority borrows money and wrongfully appropriates it to his own use, the principal cannot be bound to restore it before he can repudiate the act. A rule which would practically make performance by the principal of an unauthorized contract a condition precedent to its disaffirmance, is obviously not a rule which furnishes much protection to him.

Moreover where what is received is current money, it must be received by the principal as the proceeds of some act of agency, and not in some other distinct capacity in which the principal would have the right to receive and retain it. Thus it has been held that where an agent, who is indebted to his principal, brings money to him and pays it, the principal acting in good faith, the latter is not bound to restore it when he later learns that it was the proceeds of some unauthorized act which the agent had assumed to do upon the principal's account. The reason assigned for this is the absolutely negotiable character of money and its freedom from "ear-marks" or evidences of trust.²¹

See also First Nat. Bank v. Oberne, 121 Ill. 25, where the principals were held only to the extent of the proceeds which actually came to their business.

So in Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199, it is said that, if liable at all, the principal could be held only for what he had received.

Where the money, through the agent's manipulations, has merely passed through the principal's account, there can not be deemed to be any benefit conferred. Fay v. Slaughter, 194 Ill. 157, 88 Am. St. R. 148, 56 L. R. A. 564 (in which the court refused to extend the doctrine of First Nat. Bank v. Oberne, supra).

²¹ Thacher v. Pray, 113 Mass. 291, 18 Am. Rep. 480; Penn. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 248, 29 Am. Dec. 543; Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 97 Am. Dec. 728; Sanborn v. First Nat. Bank, 115 Mo. App. 50;

Case v. Hammond Packing Co., 105 Mo. App. 168; Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199.

In Russ v. Hansen, 119 Iowa, 375, where the question was whether the principal was liable for a sum of money received by him from his agent Lund, it was said: "We think it must be conceded, under the authorities, that if plaintiff received this $3,000 from Lund as Lund's money, in payment of Lund's debts, such receipt would not be a ratification of any transaction of Lund's which was without authority, so as to bind the plaintiff thereby. Plaintiff would not be bound, when he discovered that this money was received through fraud or by reason of an unauthorized act, to return it. There was no trust attached to the money itself, for it was paid to Lund as Lund's own money [citing cases]. On the other hand, if plaintiff was chargeable with knowledge of the fact that this money was transmitted by Lund, as the result of some transaction by Lund as plaintiff's agent, then, although plaintiff had no knowledge at the time of the nature of the transaction, or that Lund had exceeded his authority, yet, when he

So if an agent obtains money, with which to pay his debt to his principal, by disposing of his principal's property as though it were his own, the principal before reclaiming his property is held not to be obliged to restore the money so paid to him.²²

§ 438. — Knowledge of the facts indispensable.—But here, as in other cases, it is indispensable that the principal should have had full knowledge of the material facts, or that he should have intentionally accepted the benefits without further inquiry than he chose to make. Otherwise, the receipt and retention of the benefits of the unauthorized act, is no ratification of it.²³

§ 439. — Acceptance and receipt must have been voluntary and confirmatory.—So, as has been stated, the acceptance and receipt of the benefits must, to work a ratification, have been voluntary, and must find their warrant in rights flowing from the act. For if the principal had no choice—if the benefits could not be separated from something to which he was in any event entitled,²⁴ or if his act was not confirmatory, as where he would have been entitled to the same benefit independently of the act in question, the acceptance and receipt under such circumstances would not constitute a ratification.²⁵ became aware that it was the result of an act in excess of authority, by which he was not willing to be bound, it was his duty to return the money to the party from whom it had been received by Lund."

²² Wycoff v. Davis, 127 Iowa, 399. The wrongful act of the agent in selling his principal's property, is not ratified by the receipt of the money for two reasons: It was not done as agent, and there was no knowledge.

²³ Bohart v. Oberne, 36 Kans. 284; Foote v. Cotting, 195 Mass. 55, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 693; Spooner v. Thompson, 48 Vt. 259; Eggleston v. Mason, 84 Iowa, 630; First Nat. Bank v. Foote, 12 Utah, 157; Fargo v. Cravens, 9 S. Dak. 646; Knapp v. Smith, 97 Wis. 111; Holm v. Bennett, 43 Neb. 808; Doll v. Hennessy Mercantile Co., 33 Mont. 80; Schutz v. Jordan, 32 Fed. 55; Kelley v. Newburyport Horse R. R. Co., 141 Mass. 496; Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.), 493; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R. 7 C. P. 43, and cases cited in preceding note.

²⁴ Ante, § 435. Thus there is no ratification where the owner of a building or a ship to which unauthorized repairs have been made, uses or sells the property, the repairs not being of a character to be removed and restored without substantial injury. Forman v. The Liddesdale, [1900] App. Cas. 190; Young v. Board of Education, 54 Minn. 385; Mills v. Beela (Tex. Civ. App.), 23 S. W. 910. So the use of a "skidway," built without authority, at a mill, where it was so located that its use was unavoidable in the proper use of the mill, is not necessarily a ratification. Ayer, etc., Co. v. Young, 90 Ark. 104.

See also Swayne v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 49 S. W. 518; Clark v. Clark, 59 Mo. App. 532; Humphrey v. Havens, 12 Minn. 298.

²⁵ Thus a person who takes and retains property of his own, to the possession of which he is entitled, will not thereby ratify an unauthorized agreement of an agent in procuring the property. Baldwin Fertilizer Co.

So, as between the principal and the agent, the fact that the principal performs, and receives performance under, a contract made without actual authority but within such apparent authority that he was obliged, so far as third persons were concerned, to carry it out, will not necessarily be such a ratification as will release the agent from liability to his principal for making the contract without authority.²⁶ And if the principal, e. g., an insurance company, performs in such a case, as by paying the amount of a policy upon which it was legally liable, though issued in violation of the agent's instructions, the principal is, as against the agent, entitled to have and retain the fruits of the other party's correlative performance, and may therefore demand the premium from the agent without ratifying his act.²⁷

§ 440. — Mere efforts to avoid loss, no ratification.—So, as between principal and agent, the mere effort of the principal, having knowledge of the agent's deviation from his instructions, to avoid loss thereby or to make the loss as small as possible, will not necessarily constitute such a ratification as will release the agent.²⁸ Thus where an agent for the collection and transmission of a sum of money, who was given specific instructions by his principal to remit it by express, purchased a check drawn by parties then in good standing and credit in New York and sent the same to his principal who forwarded it to New York for collection, but before it was so forwarded the drawers had become insolvent and the check was dishonored, it was held that the agent having violated his instructions in regard to the mode of sending the money was liable to the principal for the loss sustained, and that the sending of the check to New York for collection in ignorance of the drawers' insolvency and when the retention of it might constitute laches, was not an absolute ratification of the act of the agent in transmitting the money in that way.²⁹ So where a seller of goods instructed his agent to sell only to people of undoubted credit, and the agent sold goods to, and accepted notes from, people notoriously insolvent, the

v. Thompson, 106 Ga. 480. See also Crooker v. Appleton, 21 Me. 131; White v. Sanders, 32 Me. 188; Forman v. Liddesdale, [1900] App. Cas. 190.

²⁶ Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Rion (Tenn. Ch.), 62 S. W. 44.

²⁷ Continental Ins. Co. v. Clark, 126 Iowa, 274.

²⁸ Triggs v. Jones, 46 Minn. 277.

See also Brown v. Foster, 137 Mich. 35.

²⁹ Walker v. Walker, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 425.

But, under ordinary circumstances, the unconditional acceptance of such a check will constitute a ratification. Rathbun v. Citizens' Steamboat Co., 76 N. Y. 376, 32 Am. Rep. 321, distinguishing Walker v. Walker, supra principal was held not to have lost his claim against the agent, by suing upon the notes and attempting to realize something upon them.³⁰

§ 441. — Illustrations of general rule.—These general principles find almost countless illustrations in the decided cases, from which a few may be chosen to serve as examples of them all. Thus a principal who, with full knowledge of the facts, receives and appropriates to his own use without objection, the purchase price or rent of land or other property sold or rented by one assuming to act on his behalf as his agent, ratifies the act.³¹ The receipt and retention of the proceeds of an unauthorized levy with knowledge of the facts, is a ratification of the act;³² but the mere receipt of a portion of the money realized from an unauthorized sale by a sheriff, where the property was not subject to the writ and the party was entitled to it all, will not ratify the sale;³³ nor will the receipt of money ratify the sale where the principal would have the right to receive the money without ratifying the sale;³⁴ nor if the principal demand from the agent, money which the agent has misapplied, will such demand ratify the misapplication.³⁵ But where the owner of a judgment with knowledge of the facts retains the proceeds of an unauthorized assignment of it, he will be assumed to have ratified the assignment.³⁶ And so where the owner of a mortgage voluntarily accepted the proceeds of an unauthorized discharge of it, the discharge was held to be ratified.³⁷ And again, where the principal knowingly accepts a mortgage or other security taken ³⁰ Robinson Machine Works v. Vorse, 52 Iowa, 207.

³¹ Lindroth v. Litchfield, 27 Fed. Rep. 894; Reynolds v. Davison, 34 Md. 662; Abbott v. May, 50 Ala. 97; Snow v. Grace, 29 Ark. 131; Turner v. Wilcox, 54 Ga. 593; Seago v. Marten, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 308; Roby v. Cossitt, 78 Ill. 638; Warden v. Eichbaum, 3 Grant (Penn.) Cases, 42; Lyman v. Norwich University, 28 Vt. 560; Pierce v. O'Keefe, 11 Wis. 180; Robinson v. Bailey, 19 R. I. 464; Ripley v. Case, 86 Mich. 261; Deering & Co. v. Grundy Nat. Bank, 81 Iowa, 222; Auge v. Darlington, 185 Pa. 111; Kelly v. Carter, 55 Ark. 112.

Collecting a check with knowledge that it was the proceeds of a sale made by the agent, ratifies the sale. Nicholson v. Doney, 37 Ill. App. 531.

Allowing an agent to sell, on the principal's behalf, property purchased for him without authority, ratifies the purchase. Russell v. Waterloo Machine Co., 17 N. D. 248.

See also Walworth, etc., Bank v. Farmers, etc., Co., 16 Wis. 629; Powell v. Gossom, 18 B. Monroe (Ky.); 179; Baines v. Burbridge, 15 La. Ann. 628; Breithaupt v. Thurmond, 3 Rich. (S. C.) 216; Harris v. Simmerman, 81 Ill. 413.

³² Cole v. Edwards, 52 Neb. 711.

³³ Harris v. Miner, 28 Ill. 135.

³⁴ White v. Sanders, 32 Me. 188.

³⁵ Blevins v. Pope, 7 Ala. 371.

³⁶ Wallace v. Lawyer, 90 Ind. 499. And where a bank appropriates to its own use, bonds purchased by its cashier without authority, it cannot afterwards repudiate the cashier's act. Logan County Bank v. Townsend (Ky.), 3 S. W. 122.

³⁷ Tooker v. Sloan, 30 N. J. Eq. 394.

by an agent in pursuance of an arrangement made with a debtor, the arrangement so made will be deemed to be ratified;³⁸ and so the voluntary acceptance of the avails of a compromise made by an agent will ratify the compromise,³⁹ and the voluntary retention of a conveyance of lands which an agent has taken from a debtor in payment of a debt, will sanction such payment.⁴⁰ So where a principal shipped cotton to his broker with instructions not to sell at less than a certain price, and the broker sold for less than that rate and immediately notified his principal, it was held that the principal by drawing the proceeds of the sale without objection, ratified the act of the broker in selling at the smaller price.⁴¹ And where the instructions are to sell property for cash only, but the agent sells for part cash and part credit, the principal by knowingly receiving and retaining the cash payment ratifies the sale as made.⁴²

§ 442. — An insurance company which accepts, and issues a policy upon, an application taken by an unauthorized person, thereby makes that person its agent in procuring the application.⁴³ So the acts and representations of the agent of the insured in obtaining policies, are ratified where the insured, with knowledge, insists upon retaining and enforcing the policies.⁴⁴ A lease executed by an agent without authority is ratified where the principal for several years accepts and retains the rent, and allows the tenant to make repairs without dis-

³⁸ Keeler v. Salisbury, 33 N. Y. 648; Sokup v. Letellier, 123 Mich. 640; Hartley State Bank v. McCorkell, 91 Iowa, 660; Donovan Real Estate Co. v. Clark, 84 Mo. App. 163.

³⁹ Strasser v. Conklin, 54 Wis. 102; West v. Banigan, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 328; Fleischman v. Ver Does, 111 Iowa, 322; Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Hellekson, 13 N. Dak. 257; Warshawsky v. Bonewur, 130 N. Y. App. Div. 250.

Where the principal accepts and retains the proceeds of a check known to have been received by his agent in full settlement of a disputed claim, he ratifies the settlement, even though he informs the other party that he does not approve it and proposes to apply the proceeds of the check merely upon account. Stetson-Preston Co. v. Dodson (Tex. Civ. App.), 103 S. W. 685.

See also Fleischman & Co. v. Ver Does, 111 Iowa, 322.

⁴⁰ Miles v. Ogden, 54 Wis. 573.

⁴¹ Meyer v. Morgan, 51 Miss. 21, 24 Am. Rep. 617.

⁴² Horst v. Lightfoot, 103 Tex. 643, 132 S. W. 761. Where an agent was authorized to buy for cash and the principal received and used goods bought upon credit, the purchase on credit will be deemed to be ratified, unless the principal can show that he was without knowledge of the facts and will be prejudiced by being compelled to pay for them. Britain v. Westhall, 135 N. C. 492.

⁴³ Germania Ins. Co. v. Wingfield, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 455; Farmers', etc., Ins. Co. v. Wiard, 59 Neb. 451; Terry v. Provident Fund Society, 13 Ind. App. 1, 55 Am. St. R. 217.

⁴⁴ Davis Lumber Co. v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 95 Wis. 226, 70 N. W. 84; Samo v. Fire Ins. Co., 26 Up. Can. C. P. 405; Hughes v. Ins. Co., 40 Neb. 626.

sent.⁴⁵ Payment to an agent, not authorized to receive it, becomes effectual as payment to the principal upon the appropriation by him, with full knowledge of the facts, of the money so paid.⁴⁶

So where an agent made a loan without authority, but the principal for several years received the interest, it was held that the act was ratified;⁴⁷ and so where an agent, without authority, borrowed money and gave the principal's notes for it, but the latter with full knowledge received and used the proceeds, there was held to be ratification.⁴⁸ And where judgment creditors attended an unauthorized execution sale and bought a portion of the property, it was held that they had ratified the sale.⁴⁹

So where an agent had collected money without authority, but the principal took security from him for a portion of it, and made claim against his estate for the residue, it was held that the payment to him was ratified.⁵⁰ But where one without authority collected money, the fact that the principal tried to obtain the money by a draft upon the man who collected it, does not ratify his act in collecting and make the payment to him a good discharge.⁵¹

§ 443. — Where an agent sold his principal's property without authority and embezzled the proceeds, and the principal, with full knowledge of the facts, took from the agent something in satisfaction of the wrong, it was held that the principal had ratified the sale made by the agent, and could not afterwards pursue the property sold.⁵² But where a principal without full knowledge of the facts, took from an agent security for money collected by the agent from debtors of the principal, and wrongfully appropriated to his own use, it was held that this would not ratify the payments to the agent because done without full knowledge of the facts;⁵³ and for the same reason where one who was in the possession of the plaintiff's horse sold it without authority to the defendant, receiving in payment therefor a check which he in-

⁴⁵ Clark v. Hyatt, 118 N. Y. 563. To like effect: Burkhard v. Mitchell, 16 Colo. 376.

⁴⁶ Payne v. Hackney, 84 Minn. 195. To same effect: Ladenburg, etc., Co. v. Beal-Doyle Dry Goods Co., 83 Ark. 440.

⁴⁷ Angel v. Miller, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 679, 39 S. W. 1092.

⁴⁸ Bank of Lakin v. National Bank, 57 Kan. 183, 45 Pac. 587. So where an agent, authorized to give his principal's note, made the paper in form of a bill and the principal who had received the money, afterwards saw the paper, examined it, and made no objection to its form. Ward v. Williams, 26 Ill. 447, 79 Am. Dec. 385.

⁴⁹ Streeter v. Johnson, 23 Nev. 194.
⁵⁰ Bissell v. Dowling, 117 Mich. 646, 76 N. W. 100.

⁵¹ Missouri, etc., Ry. Co. v. Wright, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 458.

⁵² Ogden v. Marchand, 29 La. Ann. 61.

⁵³ Smith v. Kidd, 68 N. Y. 130, 23 Am. Rep. 157; Day v. Miller, 1 Neb. Unof. 107.

dorsed and gave to the plaintiff in payment of a debt he owed him, but did not inform him of its origin, it was held that the plaintiff by collecting the check, and applying the proceeds to the payment of the debt, without knowledge of the sale of the horse, had not ratified such sale.⁵⁴

And where the principal accepted from his agent who had violated his instructions, a transfer voluntarily made by the agent of his own property to secure the principal against loss, it was held that such acceptance did not constitute a ratification.⁵⁵

§ 444. — Other instances.—So where one, on whose account an agent has bought goods without authority, with full knowledge of the facts, accepts, uses and sells them, he will be deemed to have ratified the purchase and will be liable for the price.⁵⁶ In such a case the court said: "If one purchase goods for another without authority, and the person for whom they are purchased receives them and uses 'or sells them on his own account, after being informed that they were purchased for him, this is an implied ratification of the agency. And if, on receiving the goods, and being informed that they were purchased in his name, he merely informs the seller that the purchase was unauthorized, this is not enough. He should either restore the goods to the seller or, pay for them if he converts them to his own purpose.'" ⁵⁷

⁵⁴ Thacher v. Pray, 113 Mass. 291, 18 Am. Rep. 480. And to the same effect are Penn., etc., Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & John. (Md.) 248, 29 Am. Dec. 543; Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 79 Am. Dec. 728; Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199; Sanborn v. First Nat. Bank, 115 Mo. App. 50; Case v. Hammond Packing Co., 105 Mo. App. 168. See also Russ v. Hansen, 119 Iowa, 375. Compare Johnston v. Milwaukee Investment Co., 49 Neb. 68.

⁵⁵ Lazard v. Merchants' & Miners' Transp. Co., 78 Md. 1, 26 Atl. 897. Where the agent has made a sale upon unauthorized terms, the efforts of the principal to compromise and settle the matter with the third person, do not operate as a ratification of the agent's acts as between the principal and the agent. Brown v. Foster, 137 Mich. 35.

⁵⁶ Pike v. Douglass, 28 Ark. 59; McDowell v. McKinzie, 65 Ga. 630; Hastings v. Bangor House, 18 Me. 436; Moffitt-West Drug Co. v. Lyne- man, 10 Colo. App. 249; Smith v. Holbrook, 99 Ga. 256. See also Minich v. Darling, 8 Ind. App. 539.

⁵⁷ Pike v. Douglass, supra. See also Ketchum v. Verdell, 42 Ga. 534, where it was said by McKay, J., "The general rule, as I understand it, is that where one professes to act as agent of another, even if he has no authority at all, and as such agent obtains goods which in fact go to the use and benefit of the principal, the seller may at any time before the principal has settled with the pretended agent, notify the principal of the truth of the case and demand payment. If the principal accepts the property, knowing all the facts, that is a ratification of the agency; but even if he knows nothing of the facts, but accepts the property as sold him by the agent, yet if the agent was not in fact the true owner and the seller so notifies the purchaser before any settlement, the right of action in the seller exists."

But where an agent had purchased goods without authority and added them to his principal's stock, and the principal, upon discovering the fact, attempted to select such of the goods as remained unsold, for the purpose of returning them to the vendor, but was unable to identify them, it was held that his retention of the goods under such circumstances was no ratification of the agent's purchase.⁵⁸

§ 445. — And where one, to whom certain goods were sent by an agent's order on approval, claimed to be the owner of the goods at the time of an attempted levy upon them as the property of another, he was held to have ratified the agent's act and accepted the goods.⁵⁹ So where an agent exchanged a mule for a horse without authority, the principal's subsequent assertion of title to the horse was held to be a ratification of the trade.⁶⁰ So in a case involving the ratification of a loan made by a committee of an agricultural association, Brickell, C. J., said: "It is shown very fully that the association ratified and approved all the acts of the executive committee in this transaction, not only the mode adopted in borrowing the money but the execution of the mortgage. We do not mean that it was shown that there was assent to, and confirmation of the transaction expressed in words. That is not essential, for ratification is more often implied from the acts and conduct of parties having an election to avoid or confirm than found expressed in words. And it is implied, whenever the acts and conduct of the principal having full knowledge of the facts are inconsistent with any other supposition than that of previous authority or an intention to abide by the act though it was unauthorized. Here the association accepted all the benefits of the transaction, received and appropriated to its own uses the money obtained on the promissory notes and has acquiesced in all that was done by the executive committee, not even now objecting that it was unauthorized. A corporation has as full capacity as a natural person to ratify the unauthorized or defectively executed act of its agents and the ratification is the equivalent of a prior authority. Having received and retained the benefits of the transaction with full knowledge of all the facts, the association has ratified and confirmed it unless intentional fraud is shown for which there is neither room nor reason." ⁶¹

⁵⁸ Schutz v. Jordan, 32 Fed. 55. See also Knapp v. Smith, 97 Wis. 111.

⁵⁹ Brooks v. Fletcher, 56 Vt. 624.

⁶⁰ Jones v. Atkinson, 68 Ala. 167. See also Cochran v. Chitwood, 59 Ill. 53; Nichols-Shepard & Co. v. Shaffer, 63 Mich. 599.

⁶¹ Taylor v. A. & M. Association, 68

Ala. 229. And to the same effect are Maddux v. Bevan, 39 Md. 485; Perkins v. Boothby, 71 Me. 91, in which the principal accepted the benefit by accepting the agent's application of the borrowed money to payment of the principal's debts.

§ 446. IV. By bringing suit based on validity of agent's act.—One of the most unequivocal methods of showing ratification of an agent's act is the bringing of an action at law based upon the validity of such act.⁶² The bringing of such an action manifests very clearly a determination to abide by the act, to regard it as valid, to enforce its performance. If the voluntary acceptance of the benefits of the act will ordinarily work a ratification, as it has been seen to do, a fortiori will the endeavor by legal process to secure those benefits—to compel performance, accomplish that result.

The basing of a defense upon the act is, of course, equally within the spirit of the rule.⁶³

Here, as elsewhere, the principal must have knowledge of the facts, but it suffices for this purpose that he has such knowledge at any time before he demands judgment of performance.⁶⁴ A disclosure of the facts by the other party's pleadings⁶⁵ or evidence⁶⁶ may, it is held, be ⁶² Phillips Mfg. Co. v. Wild, 144 Ala. 545; Shoninger v. Peabody, 57 Conn. 42, 14 Am. St. R. 88; Curnane v. Scheidel, 70 Conn. 13; Bailey v. Pardridge, 134 Ill. 188; Pells v. Snell, 31 Ill. App. 158; Warder v. Cuthbert, 99 Iowa, 681; Aultman Threshing, etc., Co. v. Knoll, 71 Kan. 109; Garten v. Trobridge, 80 Kan. 720; Edgar v. Breck, 172 Mass. 581; City of Worcester v. Worcester St. Ry. Co., 194 Mass. 228; Johnston Harvester Co. v. Miller, 72 Mich. 265, 16 Am. St. R. 536; Leffel v. Piatt, 126 Mich. 443; Watson v. Southern Ins. Co. (Miss.), 21 So. 904; Alexander v. Wade, 106 Mo. App. 141; Shinn v. The Guyton Co., 109 Mo. App. 557; Daugherty v. Burgess, 118 Mo. App. 557; Beagles v. Robertson, 135 Mo. App. 306; Osborn v. Jordan, 52 Neb. 465; Tootle, etc., Co. v. Otis, 1 Neb. Unoff. 360; Anderson v. Scott, 70 N. H. 350; German American Bank v. Schwinger, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 393, aff'd 178 N. Y. 569; Wheeler & Wilson Co. v. Aughey, 144 Pa. 398, 27 Am. St. R. 638; Plano Mfg. Co. v. Millage, 14 S. Dak. 331; Pickle v. Muse, 88 Tenn. 380, 17 Am. St. R. 900, 7 L. R. A. 93; Arnold v. Ins. Co., 106 Tenn. 529; Whiting v.

Doughton, 31 Wash. 327; Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling, 136 Wis. 481; Park Bros. v. Kelly Axe Mfg. Co., 49 Fed. 618, 6 U. S. App. 26, 1 C. C. A. 395.

In Davis v. Severance, 49 Minn. 528, it is held that a mere precautionary action brought to hold matters in statu quo and until the facts could be determined was not necessarily a ratification.

⁶³ Edgar v. Breck, 172 Mass. 581; Tingley v. Boom Co., 5 Wash. 644.

⁶⁴ Shinn v. The Guyton Co., 109 Mo. App. 557.

⁶⁵ Thus in Edgar v. Breck, 172 Mass. 581, it is held that where the principal is apprised by the other party's declaration that an unauthorized warranty had been given by his agent, he ratified the act by pleading a set off for the price of the warranted article.

⁶⁶ A principal sued upon an unauthorized contract made by his agent may on the trial disaffirm the agent's act if at that time such act is first brought to his knowledge. Farmers' Bank of Elk Creek v. Farmers' Bank of Auburn, 49 Neb. 379.

enough, if sufficiently definite and certain,⁶⁷ to put him to an election either to repudiate or ratify.

Here, as elsewhere, also, if he ratifies, he must ratify in toto,—he must take the burdens with the benefits, and, by demanding performance to himself, he assumes responsibility for the instrumentalities,—the frauds, misrepresentations, promises and conditions—through which the act was induced, so far as they affect the enforceability of the contract upon which his action is founded.⁶⁸

§ 447. — Illustrations of this rule are numerous. Thus a demand made by an agent will be deemed to be ratified by the principal, if he brings an action founded upon such demand,⁶⁹ and ratification by a bank of its cashier's indorsement of a note is established by the fact that the bank prosecutes an action on the note in the name of the indorsee.⁷⁰ So if the principal appear in court and prosecute an action of attachment begun in his name by one assuming to act as his agent,

⁶⁷ In Owensboro Wagon Co. v. Wilson, 79 Kan. 633, where the principal was suing upon a note taken by an agent, and the defense was a special contemporaneous contract made by the agent to induce the giving of the note,—which contract the plaintiff contended was unauthorized,—the court said, that, if the plaintiff first learned of this contract upon the trial, "it was incumbent on the plaintiff either to abandon its claim so far as it was based upon the note and rely upon proving the account which was merged therein, or else take the chances of being able to disprove that the note was given in pursuance of the agreement alleged. In continuing to rely on the note, after being advised of the defendant's claim, the plaintiff must be deemed to have elected to pursue the latter course, and thereby to have waived the question of the agent's authority if in fact the note should be shown to have been the fruit of such agreement."

But in Shoninger v. Peabody, 59 Conn. 588, 14 Am. St. R. 88, where the principal was suing for the price of a piano sold by an agent to the defendant, and these two parties alone knew the terms of the sale, and the agent testified to one version while the defendant testified to a wholly different one, it was held that the plaintiff, by pressing his suit to judgment, had not necessarily thereby adopted the defendant's version. Said the court: "Knowledge of a fact is one thing; knowledge that one man claims the fact to exist, and another denies it, is another. The two things may be followed by very different legal consequences."

See also Peters v. Ballister, 3 Pick. 495; Dolvin v. American Harrow Co., 125 Ga. 699; Morris v. Butler, 138 Mo. App. 378.

⁶⁸ Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Aughey, 144 Pa. 398, 27 Am. St. R. 638; Anderson v. Scott, 70 N. H. 350; Edgar v. Breck, supra; Shoninger v. Peabody, 57 Conn. 42, 14 Am. St. R. 88; Johnston Harvester Co. v. Miller, 72 Mich. 265, 16 Am. St. R. 536; Eberts v. Selover, 44 Mich. 519, 38 Am. Rep. 278; Phillips Mfg. Co. v. Wild, 144 Ala. 545.

⁶⁹ Ham v. Boody, 20 N. H. 411, 51 Am. Dec. 235; Payne v. Smith, 12 N. H. 34; Town of Grafton v. Follansbee, 16 N. H. 450, 41 Am. Dec. 736.

⁷⁰ Corser v. Paul, 41 N. H. 24, 77 Am. Dec. 753.

he will be held to have ratified the act of such agent in signing his name to the attachment bond.⁷¹ And where a vendor who has been defrauded in a sale of his goods made by an agent, proceeds to judgment against the vendee after being fully apprised of the fraud, he ratifies the sale.⁷² And where an agent without authority had consigned his principal's goods for sale, and the principal brought an action against the agent for the price and value of the goods so consigned, it was held a prima facie ratification of the consignment,⁷³ and an action to enforce a contract made by an agent, is sufficient evidence of the agent's authority to make it.⁷⁴ And an action to recover, upon a note or otherwise, the price of land or goods sold by an agent, without authority, ratifies the sale,⁷⁵ and with it, in cases where such an agent would have authority to warrant, a warranty made by the agent as a part of the sale.⁷⁶ And bringing an action on a mortgage taken by an agent, ratifies his act in taking it.⁷⁷ So a principal's abandonment of a suit, upon a compromise of the cause of action by an agent ratifies the compromise.⁷⁸

§ 448. — Suing to enforce a stock subscription secured by an assumed agent ratifies his act, and imposes liability for false representations made by him in procuring the subscription.⁷⁹ An action to enforce notes taken by an assumed agent ratifies his act in taking them, and opens the door to a defense based upon his misrepresentations in obtaining them,⁸⁰ or charges the principal with knowledge which the agent possessed concerning their consideration.⁸¹ Suing to recover the price of goods, sold without authority or on unauthorized terms or conditions (instead of repudiating the sale and suing to recover the ⁷¹ Bank of Augusta v. Conrey, 28 Miss. 667; Dove v. Martin, 23 Miss. 588.

So of enforcement of an unauthorized confession of judgment. Tootle v. Otis, 1 Neb. Unoff. 360.

⁷² Lloyd v. Brewster, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 537; Bank of Beloit v. Beale, 34 N. Y. 473.

⁷³ Frank v. Jenkins, 22 Ohio St. 597.

⁷⁴ Dodge v. Lambert, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 570; Benson v. Liggett, 78 Ind. 452; Whiting v. Doughton, 31 Wash. 327 (where the suit was one for rescission but sought likewise to enforce a forfeiture clause). Daugherty v. Burgess, 118 Mo. App. 557. See also Alexander v. Wade, 106 Mo. App. 141.

⁷⁵ Bailey v. Pardridge, 134 Ill. 188; Plano Mfg. Co. v. Millage, 14 S. Dak. 331.

⁷⁶ Franklin v. Ezell, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 497; Cochran v. Chitwood, 59 Ill. 53; Edgar v. Breck, 172 Mass. 581.

⁷⁷ Partridge v. White, 59 Me. 564. And see Beidman v. Goodell, 56 Iowa, 592; Roberts v. Rumley, 58 Iowa, 301. So of a lease. Shinn v. Guyton Co., 109 Mo. App. 557.

⁷⁸ Hoit v. Cooper, 41 N. H. 111.

⁷⁹ Anderson v. Scott, 70 N. H. 350.

⁸⁰ Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Aughey, 144 Pa. 398, 27 Am. St. R. 638.

⁸¹ Johnston Harvester Co. v. Miller, 72 Mich. 265, 16 Am. St. R. 536.

goods), ratifies the sale and charges the principal with liability for the terms and conditions upon which the goods were sold.⁸² Suing to enforce a policy of insurance, obtained by an unauthorized agent, imposes liability upon the assured for the terms and conditions of the policy as though taken out by him in person.⁸³

Where a bank sues upon a bond, taken by its cashier in substitution for an earlier bond, it is held to have ratified the cashier's act in accepting the new one and cancelling and surrendering the first, and is thereafter precluded from making a claim upon the first one.⁸⁴

But though, by suing upon a check taken without authority the principal ratifies the taking of the check, he does not also thereby ratify the payment of its amount to such agent, since not even an agent authorized to receive checks in payment would have thereby authority to collect them.⁸⁵

§ 449. — Suits based on the invalidity of agent's acts, no ratification.—Where the action, instead of being based upon the validity of the agent's act is based upon its invalidity, there can ordinarily be found no evidence of ratification. Where the action is directly aimed at the disaffirmance of the act, the case, of course, is clear. But it has also been held that, where third persons have colluded with the agent to defraud the principal, the fact that the latter has brought an action against the agent to recover for his misconduct does not amount to a ratification of the act so as to release the third persons from liability, nor is the recovery against the agent necessarily a bar to the action against the third parties, since the causes of action are not necessarily the same.⁸⁷

§ 450. — Delay in suing in disaffirmance of the act.—If the principal has expressly repudiated an unauthorized act, mere delay in bringing a necessary suit to enforce his rights cannot, it is held, be construed into a ratification.⁸⁸

And where payment of a note had been made to an agent not authorized to receive it, the delay of the principal, who was ignorant of the payment, in suing upon the note, for any period short of that fixed by the statute of limitations, was held to be no ratification.⁸⁹

⁸² Shoninger v. Peabody, 57 Conn. 42, 14 Am. St. R. 88; Billings v. Mason, 80 Me. 496; Eberts v. Selover, 44 Mich. 519, 38 Am. Rep. 278.

⁸³ Arnold v. Ins. Co., 106 Tenn. 529. See also Watson v. Southern Ins. Co. (Miss.), 31 So. 904.

⁸⁴ German American Bank v.

Schwinger, 75 App. Div. 393, aff'd 178 N. Y. 569.

⁸⁵ Pickle v. Muse, 88 Tenn. 380, 17 Am. St. R. 900, 7 L. R. A. 93.

⁸⁷ Barnsdall v. O'Day, 67 C. C. A. 278, 134 Fed. 828.

⁸⁸ McClure v. Evertson, 82 Tenn. (14 Lea) 495.

⁸⁹ Holland v. Van Beil, 89 Ga. 223.

§ 451. V. By acquiescence.—Finally, the doing of the unauthorized act may be ratified, as it is frequently declared, by “acquiescence” in it. It has been already seen how, by his active steps of express approval, accepting benefits, suing to enforce, and the like, the principal may manifest his approval. The matters now to be dealt with have to do rather with his inaction,—his passivity, his quiescence, or, to use the word in question, his acquiescence.

§ 452. ——— What meant by acquiescence.—In dealing with the subject of acquiescence, a difficulty at once arises in determining what is meant by it. For, while it might be thought at first view that it is a word of well settled signification, an examination of the cases will indicate that it is often used with quite widely varying shades of meaning. It seems particularly difficult to keep it free from considerations of estoppel, although the two things are entirely distinguishable.

It will be of aid to keep constantly in mind what the situation is. An unauthorized act has been done, which does not bind the principal. What is needed is therefore something to make it valid, not something to make it invalid. In other words, what is needed is affirmance, not disaffirmance. By the hypothesis which brings the case to this point, it has not been actively affirmed. Has it been affirmed in any other way? That is a question of fact, upon which any competent evidence is admissible. What is said here is that it has been affirmed by acquiescence, and, since there is no evidence of active acquiescence, tacit acquiescence is referred to. This tacit acquiescence usually presents itself either as mere silence, or a failure to disaffirm, or as conduct inconsistent with disapproval. May an inference of affirmance be properly drawn from any of these? Or, taking them up severally, when the alleged principal learns of the unauthorized act, and merely keeps silent about it, neither actively assenting nor dissenting, may an inference of his assent be properly drawn? Putting it into other words, is the silence of the principal, or his failure to disaffirm, a fact from which, according to the ordinary conduct of men, an affirmance may be inferred?

§ 453. ——— Mere silence or failure to repudiate.—There is a popular notion,—finding expression in a familiar adage,—that silence gives consent. This, however, is true in law only to a very limited extent. No legal liability can result from silence alone, unless one owes a duty to speak.⁹⁰ On the other hand, it is a maxim of the law of es-

⁹⁰ See Royal Ins. Co. v. Beatty, 119 Pa. 6, 4 Am. St. R. 662; Whittemore v. Hamilton, 51 Conn. 153.

Compare Hobbs v. Massasoit Whip Co., 158 Mass. 194.

toppel that he who remains silent when in conscience he ought to speak, will be debarred from speaking when in conscience he ought to remain silent, and this rule is frequently invoked in determining whether or not an alleged principal has set the seal of his sanction upon a transaction assumed to have been done in his behalf. But estoppel is not now involved.

But even though silence may not be per se conclusive, and even though estoppel be for the time being excluded, it is entirely safe to say that silence or a failure to repudiate may often be evidence of an assent, more or less strong under the circumstances, from which, as a matter of fact, an inference of assent may be drawn.⁹¹ The question seems to be this: From the failure to dissent under the circumstances, would the ordinary intelligent man be justified in inferring that the principal assented? Like other similar questions, this would be for the jury, unless reasonable men could fairly draw only one inference from the facts, and in that case the court may decide it.

§ 454. — How differs from estoppel.—The question here, as has been pointed out, is not one of estoppel. Estoppel depends upon the fact that the other party has done, or refrained from doing, something to his prejudice in reasonable reliance upon the silence or failure to dissent; and such cases frequently arise. But here it is a matter of inferring facts from conduct, and the question is whether a reasonable man may fairly infer assent from the circumstances, and not whether the other party, in reasonable reliance upon the conduct, has changed his situation to his detriment.

It very frequently happens that both elements are present in a given case, and courts often unconsciously slip from one to the other and mingle them into an indistinguishable mass,—perfectly justifiably usu-

In Whittemore v. Hamilton, supra, it was said that the principal is bound by failure to dissent only where he has received a direct benefit from the act of the alleged agent, or where his silence appears to have prejudiced the other party. But in that case, the party who acted was not really an agent; he was a lender of money to whom a note and mortgage had been assigned as collateral security. He had released the security without the borrower's consent. It was held that, as between borrower and lender, mere silence of the borrower after knowledge did not amount to ratification. "If one holding property pledged to secure a debt should destroy it, or convert it to his own use, or give it away to another, whereby it becomes lost to the owner, does he ratify the act by mere neglect to give notice to the wrongdoer of his dissent? As well might the principle be applied to a trespass or any other tort."

⁹¹ See the excellent discussion in Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Cowell, 28 Pa. 329, 70 Am. Dec. 123.

ally, so far as the results in the particular case are concerned, but often disastrously to clear expression.

The distinction is the same as in the matter of the appointment of an agent,—there, the fact of appointment may be inferred from conduct, or there may be estoppel, resulting from conduct, to deny appointment.

§ 455. ——— Same subject.—This distinction is so clearly put in a case before the court of civil appeals of Texas⁹² as to justify a full quotation. Here the question was whether a bank had ratified the act of its cashier in a certain matter, and the trial court had instructed the jury that, if the other party immediately notified the bank of the act, and the bank did not within a reasonable time thereafter repudiate the act, the jury should find against the bank. Upon appeal the court, through James, C. J., said: "This charge is not correct, unless mere silence on the part of a principal for an unreasonable time, after knowledge of an unauthorized act of its agent, amounts to ratification of this act as a matter of law. There is no express ratification here, and that relied upon was an implied ratification. The very fact that it was a matter to be implied, there being no act in this case amounting per se to a ratification, would make it an issue that only the jury should decide, and then only in a case where the facts and circumstances in connection with such silence are such as would admit of a reasonable inference that the silence or inaction meant a ratification. Silence simply in itself is no evidence of anything; but the conditions under which it occurs, and accompanying it, may show it to be a ratification. We commend the expression of Mr. Justice Collard in Meyer v. Smith:⁹³ 'Mere delay in repudiating will not, in our opinion, have the effect of ratifying. It would be evidence, along with other facts, from which, if it should be unreasonable, the jury might infer that there was a ratification. The court should not instruct the jury to find a ratification in case of unreasonable delay after notice of the facts, but he should leave the jury free to act upon such fact, and to determine from all of the facts whether a ratification should be inferred.' We are not speaking now of an estoppel by conduct which proceeds upon other principles, and which we shall discuss hereafter. The rule is so obviously sound, particularly in a jurisdiction where inferences of fact ⁹² Iron City Nat. Bank v. Fifth Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.), 47 S. W. 533. This case was affirmed in 92 Tex. 436, but rather upon the ground there was evidence upon which the question of estoppel should have been submitted to the jury.

⁹³ Meyer v. Smith, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 37.

On the other hand, the St. Louis Court of Appeals seems to think that the question is always one of estoppel. St. Louis Gunning Adv. Co. v. Wanamaker, 115 Mo. App. 270.

are committed to the jury, that we deem citation of authorities on the subject unnecessary. The instruction that silence alone for an unreasonable time, was in law a ratification, was erroneous."

§ 456. — Elements of estoppel may be present.—Thus far the attempt has been to exclude the element of estoppel. Theoretically the distinction between an inference of approval in fact deduced from apparent acquiescence, and an estoppel to deny approval because of some special circumstances, is not difficult to make. The former is the inference which any reasonable man may fairly draw under the circumstances. The latter, however, is the inference which a particular reasonable man may fairly draw in view of the special facts which concern him. Suppose that, from such facts as those in question, there would, ordinarily, be no inference of approval drawn from the silence of the principal. If we then add to those facts, the further one that the other party, as the alleged principal knows, is about to change or is likely to change, his position in reliance upon the supposed authority, in such a way that he will suffer serious injury if that authority proves not to exist, is then the silence of the principal legally permissible if he expects to deny the authority? If it would not be permissible, do we not then say that the principal is estoppel to deny his approval?

In the ordinary case, perhaps, the other party will have parted, with whatever he is to part with in mere reliance upon the assumed authority, at the time he made the contract. For that loss, if any, the principal by the hypothesis is not responsible; but how about new or further changes of position later made, in reliance upon both the assumed authority and the principal's knowledge and failure to object?

In some cases, perhaps, the principal's knowledge of special circumstances may simply serve to accelerate the passage of the time within which it would be deemed necessary for him to act, if he proposes to repudiate the act.

In a large number of the cases, if not in a majority of them, there are present some elements of estoppel, as well as circumstances from which pure inferences of approval in fact may be drawn; and any conclusion will be likely to be one in which both elements are more or less inseparably mixed.⁹⁴ Courts and writers—sometimes carelessly, sometimes unavoidably,—pass in apparent unconsciousness from one field to the other. It is perhaps true, also, that our whole process of drawing inferences of fact springs from the same root as that from which estoppel springs. At any rate, it is entirely clear that, in the various ⁹⁴ See the discussion in Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150.

rules and statements of principle made respecting this matter of ratification by acquiescence, the element of estoppel is constantly found, and that it plays a large part in the actual determination of the cases.

In any case which must rest upon the theory of estoppel, there must, of course, as in other cases of estoppel, be shown the facts of special reliance and prejudice upon which that doctrine rests.

§ 457. — Other statements of the rule.—This subject is of so much importance as perhaps to warrant a somewhat fuller exposition of the different statements which judges have made in attempting to declare the rule which governs it. It cannot fail to be observed that estoppel rather than ratification is the key note in the first two.

Thus it was said by a distinguished judge, "We suppose acquiescence or tacit assent to mean the neglect to promptly and actively condemn the unauthorized act, and to seek judicial redress after the knowledge of the committal of it, whereby innocent third parties may have been led to put themselves in a position from which they cannot be taken without loss. It is the doctrine of equitable estoppel."⁹⁵

And by another, "The rule as to what amounts to ratification of an unauthorized act is elementary and may be safely stated thus: Where a person assumes in good faith to act as agent for another in any given transaction, but acts without authority, whether the relation of principal and agent does or does not exist between them, the person in whose behalf the act was done, upon being fully informed thereof, must within a reasonable time disaffirm such act, at least in cases where his silence might operate to the prejudice of innocent parties, or he will be held to have ratified such unauthorized act."⁹⁶

And again, "The correct rule seems to be that when the principal has full knowledge of the acts of his agent from which he receives a direct benefit he must dissent and give notice of his non-concurrence within a reasonable time, or his assent and ratification will be presumed. * * * It is true that mere knowledge, on the part of the principal, of an agent's unauthorized action, will not make silence or non-interference in all cases amount to ratification. But it would where the party dealing with the agent is misled or prejudiced, or where the usage of trade requires, or fair dealing demands, a prompt reply from the principal. In all such cases, the principal, if dissatisfied with the act of the agent and fully informed of what has been done, must express his dissatisfaction within a reasonable time."⁹⁷

⁹⁵ Folger, J., in Kent v. Quicksilver Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 137. cept as to the element of good faith, in Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich., at p. 157.

⁹⁶ Lyon, J., in Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431; cited with approval, ex-⁹⁷ Mobile & Montgomery Ry. Co. v.

§ 458. ——— Relations of the parties.—The situation of the parties may be significant in determining conclusions. Suppose the question arises between the other party and the principal. At the time the act was done, the other party knew he was dealing with a special agent, but took no steps to ascertain whether the proposed act was within the scope of the authority. Does the principal owe him a greater duty of protection than the third party owes to himself? Suppose that, at the time the act was done, the other party knew that it was at least doubtful whether the act was within the authority. Does that fact impose any duty upon him to ascertain? Suppose that, at the time the act was done, the other party knew that the act was unauthorized, but counted upon the possibility or the probability that the principal would ratify. How much protection is the principal bound to afford him in such a speculation?

Suppose next that the question arises between the agent and the principal. If the agent knew his act was unauthorized, or that it was in the face of positive instructions, is he in a favored situation to contend that the mere silence of his principal is an acquiescence?

Suppose again that the principal knows that the other party or the agent believes the act authorized, and is apparently relying confidently upon it. May not that fact be material in determining what inferences should be drawn from the principal's silence?

§ 459. Failure to dissent as between principal and agent.—While it has been said in a few cases that no inference of approval can be drawn from the principal's failure to notify his agent of his dissent from his unauthorized acts,⁹⁸ the general rule is undoubtedly to the contrary. It is, of course, not difficult to understand that an agent, who intentionally and wilfully does unauthorized acts, should not be permitted to impose upon his principal, for the agent's protection, a constant duty of repudiation so far as the agent is concerned. But, on the other hand, there are many cases,—where the agent is acting at a distance,—where the authority is more or less ambiguous,—where the agent is clothed with something of discretion,—where he is seeking bona fide to benefit the principal,—and the like, in which different considerations may apply, and the rule seems in general to be well settled that, when the agent advises the principal that he has done some act not warranted by his authority, the principal must repudiate it

Jay, 65 Ala. 113, modifying Powell's Admr. v. Henry, 27 Ala. 612.

⁹⁸ Thus in Lewin v. Dille, 17 Mo. 64, it is said that there is no duty upon the principal to notify the agent that he disapproves his breach of instructions. The agent must look to his instructions for his own safety and departs from them at his own risk.

within a reasonable time, or the agent will be justified in assuming that the principal assents.⁹⁹ Judge Story bases the rule upon commercial usage, and says that "if the principal, having received information by a letter from his agent of his acts touching the business of his principal, does not, within a reasonable time, express his dissent to the agent he is deemed to approve his acts and his silence amounts to a ratification of them."¹

§ 460. — Mere inaction on the part of the principal may not always be so potent evidence of approval in the case of the agent as in the case of the third person. The agent himself usually knows, what the third person usually does not, that his act was unauthorized; as between the principal and the agent it may sometimes be to the latter's advantage to let the matter lie open a little; he may urge the principal to wait; and he cannot complain of inaction "especially if such inaction or failure to immediately disaffirm was induced by the assurances or persuasion of the agent himself."²

After revoking an agent's authority, however, a principal is not bound, as between himself and the agent, to notify the latter of his dissent from acts done by such agent in pursuance of the original authority.³

§ 461. — As between the principal and the other party.— As between the principal and the other party, the rule is not so clear. If the principal has received some tangible benefit from the act which he retains, there is, as has been seen, ordinarily little difficulty.⁴ But if he has not, and the case is simply one of unauthorized action, known to the principal, and followed by mere silence on his part, is there ratification? For his own protection the other party is bound to ascertain the agent's authority: he has not done so. The alleged principal had done nothing to mislead him. Is the principal bound to inform him of that which he should have ascertained for himself? In one case⁵ it was said, "It is the duty of one trading with an agent who has only a limited and special authority, to make inquiry as to the extent of the

⁹⁹ Prince v. Clark, 1 B. & C. 186, 2 D. & R. 266; Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 69, 7 L. Ed. 606; Law v. Cross, 1 Black (U. S.), 533, 17 L. Ed. 185; Courcier v. Ritter, 4 Wash. C. C. 549, 6 Fed. Cas. 644; Norris v. Cook, 1 Curtis, 464, 18 Fed. Cas. 318; Richmond Mfg. Co. v. Starks, 4 Mason, 296, 20 Fed. Cas. 747; Cairnes v. Bleecker, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 300; Vianna v. Barclay, 3 Cow. (N. Y.)

281; Bray v. Gunn, 53 Ga. 144; Clay v. Spratt, 7 Bush (Ky.), 334; Bredin v. Dubarry, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 27; Halloway v. Milling Co., 77 Kans. 76; Allen v. McAllister, 39 Wash. 440.

¹ Story on Agency, § 258.

² Triggs v. Jones, 46 Minn. 277.

³ Kelly v. Phelps, 57 Wis. 425.

⁴ See ante, § 436.

⁵ White v. Langdon, 30 Vt. 599.

agent's authority; if he omits inquiry, he does so at his peril. It is not the duty of the principal, upon hearing of the sale by the agent [which was here the unauthorized act], to seek the purchaser and give him notice of his claim, and his omission to do so and his mere silence, are not ordinarily to be construed as a ratification of the sale. If special circumstances may be supposed to exist, which would make it the duty of the principal to give such notice, none such are proved in this case." It has been said that this case is not in accord with the weight of authority,⁶ and there are certainly many dicta to the contrary; but in the absence of the special circumstances referred to, so far as it holds that mere silence is not per se a ratification, it is believed to be sound.⁷ If the question is whether an inference of assent may be drawn from silence, the case does not deny it. If the other party has changed his situation to his detriment in reliance upon the principal's conduct, he may establish an estoppel.⁸

§ 462. — It is not to be denied that many cases state the obligation of the principal in a very positive way. It is sometimes said that the principal owes to the other party a "duty" to dissent, but this ⁶ By Mr. Greenough, editor of the ninth edition of Story on Agency, § 256, note.

⁷ This is well brought out in the recent case of Smith v. Fletcher, 75 Minn. 189. See also the rules quoted in the following section. There is also a good statement of the situation in Curry v. Hale, 15 W. Va. 867, 875. In Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103, it is said: "Silence of the alleged principal when fully advised of what has been done in his behalf, by one who attempts to act as his agent without authority, may be sufficient from which to infer a ratification of the unauthorized act (2 Greenl. Ev. § 67; King v. Rea, 13 Colo. 69); which, however, is not conclusive except the party affected by such silence has been misled or injured (King v. Rea, supra); so that it does not necessarily follow that one seeking to enforce a liability by ratification arising from silence, or a failure to repudiate an unauthorized act after knowledge thereof, must also show that by such silence he has been misled to his prejudice, although it is proper to do so, as silence of the alleged principal under such circumstances may of itself be sufficient to establish a ratification of such act. Union M. Co. v. Rocky Mt. Bank, 2 Colo. 248. Where, however, after knowledge of the unauthorized act comes to the alleged principal, the party affected by such act has an opportunity to improve his position; the alleged principal is bound to disapprove within a reasonable time after notice of such act, and a failure to do so is conclusive evidence of assent." To same effect: Meyer v. Smith, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 37; Iron City National Bank v. Fifth National Bank (Tex. Civ. App.), 47 S. W. 533 (affirmed on somewhat different grounds in 92 Tex. 436). See also Norden v. Duke, 120 App. Div. 1; Stiebel v. Haigney, 134 App. Div. 516; Ilfeld v. Ziegler, 40 Colo. 401.

⁸ See the discussions in Steffens v. Nelson, 94 Minn. 365; Ilfeld v. Ziegler, supra; Stiebel v. Haigney, supra; Mobile, etc., Ry. Co. v. Jay, 65 Ala. 113.

expression can scarcely be used in any strict legal sense. It can doubtless mean no more than that, if the principal does not dissent, he runs the risk of the inferences that may legally be drawn, or of the consequences which estoppel may impose, as the result of his inaction.

To that extent, however, the situation is very clear, and the cases are now exceedingly numerous which hold that the principal's failure to dissent after knowledge may, under the circumstances, justify the jury or other triers of the fact in inferring that what he has thus failed to repudiate he at least tacitly affirms, or, upon a showing of the proper facts, that he may be estopped to assert his dissent where the appearances of assent have reasonably misled the other party to his prejudice.⁹

Moreover, as has been pointed out, the facts may be such as to reasonably warrant but one inference, and then, as in other cases, the court may draw that inference without the aid of the jury.

§ 463. Principal must act within a reasonable time.—The time within which the principal must act in order to avoid the inference of assent cannot be determined by any hard and fast rule, though numerous attempts have been made to declare one. Many cases assert that the principal is bound to act "at once," "immediately," "promptly" or "as soon as he can" upon receiving knowledge of the act;¹⁰ but the better rule, and the one supported by the weight of authority and reason, is that which determines the matter by allowing a reasonable time in which to decide and which draws inferences only after its expira-

⁹ Among the more recent cases see Dover v. Pittsburg Oil Co., 143 Cal. 501; Owens Pottery Co. v. Turnbull Co., 75 Conn. 628; Whitley v. James, 121 Ga. 521; Eau Claire Canning Co. v. Western Brokerage Co., 213 Ill. 561; Henderson v. Beatty, 124 Iowa, 163; Hartwell v. Loveland, 78 Kan. 259; Wheeler v. Citizens' Bank, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 939; Hix v. Eastern S. S. Co., 107 Me. 357; Clippinger v. Starr, 130 Mich. 463; Lowe v. Benz, 107 Minn. 562; Russell v. Waterloo Thresh. M. Co., 17 N. Dak. 248; Minneapolis Thresh. Mach. Co. v. Humphrey, 27 Okla. 694; Reid v. Alaska Packing Co., 47 Oreg. 215; Standard Leather Co. v. Allemannia F. Ins. Co., 224 Pa. 186; Keyes v. Union Pac. Tea Co., 81 Vt. 420; Ankeny v. Young, 52 Wash. 235; Smith v. Collins, 91 C. C. A. 182, 165 Fed. 148.

¹⁰ Ward v. Williams, 26 Ill. 447, 79 Am. Dec. 385; Johnston v. Berry, 3 Ill. App. 256; Pitts v. Shubert, 11 La. 286, 30 Am. Dec. 718; Kehlor v. Kemble, 26 La. Ann. 713; Foster v. Rockwell, 104 Mass. 167; Harrod v. McDaniels, 126 Mass. 413; Crane v. Bedwell, 25 Miss. 507; Bredin v. Dubarry, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 27; Kelsey v. National Bank of Crawford Co., 69 Pa. 426; Williams v. Storm, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 203; Fort v. Coker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 579; Hart v. Dixon, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 336; Meister v. Cleveland Dryer Co., 11 Ill. App. 227; Manhattan Fire Ins. Co. v. Harlem, etc., Co., 26 N. Y. Misc. 394; Bement v. Armstrong (Tenn.), 39 S. W. 899.

tion.¹¹ What shall be deemed a reasonable time depends here, as in other cases, upon the situation of the parties and the facts and circumstances of the case.¹²

¹¹ Mobile, etc., Ry. Co. v. Jay, 65 Ala. 113; Central R. & B. Co. v. Cheatham, 85 Ala. 292, 7 Am. St. R. 48; Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat'l Bank, 2 Colo. 565, aff'd 96 U. S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648; Breed v. Central City Bank, 6 Colo. 235; King v. Rea, 13 Colo. 69; Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103; Bray v. Gunn, 53 Ga. 144; Booth v. Wiley, 102 Ill. 84; Connett v. Chicago, 114 Ill. 233; International Bank v. Ferris, 118 Ill. 465; Miller v. Stone Co., 1 Ill. App. 273; Terre Haute, etc., Ry. Co. v. Stockwell, 118 Ind. 98; Farwell v. Howard, 26 Iowa, 381; Alexander v. Jones, 64 Iowa, 207; Clay v. Spratt, 7 Bush (Ky.), 334; Givens v. Cord, 44 S. W. 665, 19 Ky. Law Rep. 1893; Oliver v. Johnson, 24 La. Ann. 460; Lafitte v. Godchaux, 35 La. Ann. 1161; Raymond v. Palmer, 41 La. Ann. 425, 17 Am. St. R. 398; Johnson v. Wingate, 29 Me. 404; Brigham v. Peters, 1 Gray (Mass.), 139; Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150; Dana v. Turley, 38 Minn. 106; Smith v. Fletcher, 75 Minn. 189; Meyer v. Morgan, 51 Miss. 21, 24 Am. Rep. 617; Swartz v. Duncan, 38 Neb. 782; Alexander v. Culbertson Irrigation Co., 61 Neb. 333; Wright v. Boynton, 37 N. H. 9, 72 Am. Dec. 319; Baldwin v. Howell (N. J.), 30 Atl. 423; Keim v. Lindley (N. J.), 30 Atl. 1063; Lyle v. Addicks, 62 N. J. Eq. 123; Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327; Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. 426; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Higginbotham v. May, 90 Va. 233; Lynch v. Richter, 10 Wash. 486; Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431; Cooper v. Schwartz, 40 Wis. 54; Parish v. Reeve, 63 Wis. 315; Hepburn v. Dunlop, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 179, 4 L. Ed. 65; Law v. Cross, 1 Black (U. S.), 533, 17 L. Ed. 185; Gold Mining Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640, 24 L. Ed. 648; Norris v. Cook, 1 Curt.

(U. S. C. C.) 464; Abbe v. Rood, 6 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 106; Lorie v. North Chicago City Ry. Co., 32 Fed. 270.

On the other hand, in Mallory v. Mallory Wheeler Co., 61 Conn. 131, it is said: "Ratification ordinarily requires some positive assertive act. In order that acquiescence alone should become ratification the delay must be so long continued that it can be accounted for only on the theory that there has been some affirmative act. Town of Derby v. Alling, 40 Conn. 410; Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R. 3 Eng. & Ir. App. 249." Compare, however, Owens Pottery Co. v. Turnbull Co., 75 Conn. 628.

¹² McDermid v. Cotton, 2 Ill. App. 297; Philadelphia, etc., R. R. Co. v. Cowell, 28 Penn. St. 329, 70 Am. Dec. 128; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611.

How information communicated.—The information may come from the agent (Foster v. Rockwell, 104 Mass. 167), or the other party.

Information from letter.—Though omitting to answer a written communication is in general no evidence of the truth of the facts therein stated. Commonwealth v. Eastman, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 189; Fearing v. Kimball, 4 Allen (Mass.), 125; Learned v. Tillotson, 97 N. Y. 1; Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Coumbe, 47 Mich. 358 (none of these being a case of agency); Irwin v. Buffalo Pitts Co., 39 Wash. 346; yet the information as to the acts of the assumed agent may be imparted to the principal by letter as well as by any other means. Foster v. Rockwell, 104 Mass. 167; Cooper v. Schwartz, 40 Wis. 54; Ruffner v. Hewitt, 7 W. Va. 585; Keim v. Lindley (N. J.), 30 Atl. 1063. See also Searing v. Butler, 69 Ill. 575; Ward v. Williams, 26 Ill. 447, 79 Am. Dec. 385; Kehlor

Where commercial matters or fluctuating values or sudden exigencies are involved hours or days may be as important as weeks or months might be in other cases.¹³

§ 464. Same rule applies to private corporations.—And, as has been seen, these rules apply as well to corporations within the scope of their corporate powers as to individuals.¹⁴

"It seems to be now well settled," says Chief Justice Shaw, "since the great multiplication of corporations, extending to almost all the concerns of business, that trading corporations, whose dealings embrace all transactions from the largest to the minutest and affect almost every individual in the community, are affected like private persons with obligations arising from implications of law, and from equitable duties which imply obligations; with constructive notice, implied assent, tacit acquiescence, ratifications from acts and from silence, and from their acting upon contracts made by those professing to be their agents; and generally by those legal and equitable considerations which affect the rights of natural persons."¹⁵

§ 465. — And to municipal and quasi-municipal corporations.—The same rules as to ratification by acquiescence or retention of benefits within the sphere in which they have power to act apply in general also to municipal and quasi-municipal corporations, although from their nature, a ratification by acquiescence is not so readily to be inferred as in the case of individuals or of private corporations.¹⁶

Liability by ratification, however, cannot be established by acquiescence or informal acts in the face of express statutory requirements

v. Kemble, 26 La. Ann. 713; Pittsburgh, etc., R. R. Co. v. Woolley, 12 Bush (Ky.), 451; Jennison v. Parker, 7 Mich. 355.

¹³ Halloway v. Arkansas City Milling Co., 77 Kan. 76.

¹⁴ Sheldon Hat Blocking Co. v. Eickemeyer Hat Blocking Co., 90 N. Y. 607; Kelsey v. National Bank of Crawford Co., 69 Penn. St. 426; Nutting v. Kings Co. Elev. Co., 21 App. Div. 72; Kirwin v. Wash. Match Co., 37 Wash. 285; Clement v. Young-McShea Amusement Co., 69 N. J. Eq. 347; German Sav. Bank v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 122 Iowa, 737; American Quarries Co. v. Lay, 37 Ind. App. 386.

And the same rule applies to an unincorporated association. Siff v. Forbes, 63 N. Y. Misc. 319.

¹⁵ Melledge v. Boston Iron Co., 5 Cush. (Mass.) 158, 51 Am. Dec. 59.

¹⁶ School District v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Chamberlain v. Dover, 13 Me. 466, 29 Am. Dec. 517; Davis v. School District, 24 Me. 349; White v. Sanders, 32 Me. 188; Fisher v. School District, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 494; Bliss v. Clark, 16 Gray (Mass.), 60; Johnson v. School Corp., 117 Iowa, 319; Matheney v. El Dorado, 82 Kan. 720, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 980; Forrest City v. Orgill, 87 Ark. 389; Roberts v. St. Marys, 78 Kan. 707; Chicago v. Nicholson, 130 Ill. App. 466; Colorado Springs v. Colorado City, 42 Colo. 75; Gallup v. Liberty Co., 57 Tex. Civ. App. 175.

that liability shall only be created in some express manner pointed out by the statute.¹⁷

§ 466. How when assumed agent is a mere stranger.—While it is abundantly settled that acquiescence may result in the ratification of the act of an agent, it has been much questioned whether the same result would follow if the person assuming to act for the other was a stranger. All of the authorities agree that the relations of the parties have much to do in determining whether or not there has been a ratification, but it is held by several of the courts that, when he who assumes to act for another is not one sustaining to him the relation of an agent but is a mere volunteer, no duty exists on the part of the other to repudiate the act on its being brought to his notice, and that nothing short of a positive affirmance will make it binding upon him. Thus it is said in an Illinois case, "In general where an agent is authorized to do an act and he transcends his authority, it is the duty of the principal to repudiate the act as soon as he is fully informed of what has been thus done in his name by the agent, else he will be bound by the act as having ratified it by implication: but where a stranger, in the name of another, does an unauthorized act, the latter need take no notice of it, although informed of the act thus done in his name, and he shall only be bound by an affirmative ratification."¹⁸ And this view is supported by eminent judges and text writers.¹⁹

§ 467. ——— The contrary view is also maintained by judges of great ability. Thus it is said by Woodward, J., "If the party to be charged has been accustomed to contract through the agency of the individual assuming to act for him, or has intrusted property in his keeping, or if he were a child or servant, partner or factor, the relation conjunctionis favor would make silence strong evidence of assent. On ¹⁷ Cook v. Cameron, 144 Mo. App. 137; Roemheld v. Chicago, 231 Ill. 467; Agawam National Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 503.

¹⁸ Ward v. Williams, 26 Ill. 447, 79 Am. Dec. 385, approved in Searing v. Butler, 69 Ill. 575.

¹⁹ Evans' Agency, 68; Livermore's Agency, §§ 255, 258; Duer, Vol. II, 151-154; Merritt v. Bissell, 155 N. Y. 396; Britt v. Gordon, 132 Iowa, 431.

In Robbins v. Blanding, 87 Minn. 246, it is said: "A failure to disavow the acts of a mere volunteer, who meddlingly assumes to act without authority as the agent of another, will not constitute a ratification. But where a person in good faith assumes to act as the agent of another but without authority in fact, in any particular transaction, the latter, upon being fully informed thereof, must, in cases where his silence might prejudice the assumed agent or innocent third parties, disavow the act within a reasonable time, or he will be held to have ratified it. As to such third persons it would seem that the element of good faith of the assumed agent is not essential."

the other hand, if there had been no former agency and no peculiarity whatever in the prior relations of the parties, silence,—a refusal to respond to mere impertinent interference,—would be very inconclusive but not an absolutely irrelevant circumstance. The man who will not speak when he sees his interests affected by another must be content to let a jury interpret his silence. It is a clear principle of equity that where a man stands by knowingly and suffers another person to do acts in his own name without any opposition or objection, he is presumed to have given authority to do those acts. * * * If mental assent may be inferred from circumstances, silence may indicate it as well as words or deeds. To say that silence is no evidence of it is to say that there can be no implied ratification of an unauthorized act—or at the least to tie up the possibility of ratification to the accident of prior relations. Neither reason nor authority justifies such a conclusion. A man who sees what has been done in his name and for his benefit, even by an intermeddler, has the same power to ratify and confirm it that he would have to make a similar contract for himself and if the power to ratify be conceded to him the fact of ratification must be provable by the ordinary means.”²⁰

§ 468. ——— The true rule.—Keeping in mind that the question in these cases is, not whether the silence is of itself a ratification, but whether it is any evidence from which, in connection with other facts, a ratification may be inferred, it is undoubtedly the better rule that while the relations of the parties are very significant they are not conclusive, and that even in the case of a mere stranger a ratification may be established by the same kind of evidence that is admissible in other cases, although the presumptions arising from acquiescence are much stronger in a case where an agency exists than in the case of a stranger.²¹

²⁰ Philadelphia, etc., R. R. Co. v. Cowell, 28 Penn. St. 329, 70 Am. Dec. 128.

²¹ Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 2 Col. 248; Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103; Ladd v. Hildebrandt, 27 Wis. 135, 9 Am. Rep. 445; Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431; Southern Ex. Co. v. Palmer, 48 Ga. 85; Ralphs v. Hensler, 97 Cal. 296; Williams v. Moore, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 402; Harrod v. McDaniels, 126 Mass. 413; Taylor v. Herron, 72 Kan. 652; Uniontown Grocery Co. v. Dawson, 68 W. Va. 332, 23 Ann. Cas. (1912 B.) 148; Robbins v. Blanding, 87 Minn.

246; Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen (Mass.), 447; Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150. See also Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531; Carson v. Cummings, 69 Mo. 325; Dierks Lumber Co. v. Coffman, 96 Ark. 505.

In Merritt v. Bissell, 155 N. Y. 396, 50 N. E. 280, it is said: “While it is the duty of a principal to disavow the unauthorized act of his agent within a reasonable time after it comes to his knowledge, or, otherwise, in some cases, he makes the act his own, still, where one who has assumed to act as an agent for another has no authority to do so but

§ 469. — Silence does not ratify if stranger acts in his own name.—Where, however, the stranger does not assume to act in the behalf of the alleged principal but in his own name and behalf, the silence of the alleged principal will not be evidence of a ratification of the stranger's act.²²

§ 470. — How when former agent continues to act.—Where the person acting is a former agent whose authority has been revoked, the principal who knows that he is still assuming to act must, it is held, repudiate the authority or his assent will be inferred.²³

§ 471. Acquiescence coupled with conduct inconsistent with disapproval.—Many of the cases present evidence, not only of mere failure to dissent, but also of that fact coupled with conduct inconsistent with disapproval, as where the principal, with knowledge of the facts, has not dissented, has found no fault, made no complaint and entered no protest. but, on the contrary, has tacitly accepted the situation, condition, obligation or restriction resulting from the act, and adjusted himself to it, acted upon it, entered upon its performance, and the like. These cases, from their infinite variety of facts, do not lend themselves readily to any precise rule. "It is sufficient to say that a ratification will be implied from the conduct of the person, in whose behalf another has assumed to act, clearly inconsistent with any intention other than a purpose to adopt such act as his own."²⁴

§ 472. Illustrations of ratification by acquiescence.—The cases in which this principle has been applied are very numerous, but a few of them are given here as illustrations of its nature and effect. Thus is a mere volunteer, a failure to disavow his acts will not amount to a ratification, unless under such circumstances as indicate an intention to do so."

As between the principal and the alleged agent who claims compensation for his act, it is said that the principal is not as to a mere stranger, bound to dissent. Kelly v. Phelps, 57 Wis. 425.

²² Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327; Garvey v. Jarvis, 46 N. Y. 310, 7 Am. Rep. 335.

²³ Quinn v. Dresbach, 75 Cal. 159, 7 Am. St. Rep. 138.

²⁴ Oberne v. Burke, 50 Neb. 764. To like effect: Creson v. Ward, 66 Ark. 209; Smith v. Schiele, 93 Cal. 144; Allin v. Williams, 97 Cal. 403;

Welch v. Brown, 46 Colo. 129; Curane v. Scheidel, 70 Conn. 13; Kaffer v. Walters, 9 Kan. App. 291; Gemberling v. Spaulding, 104 Mich. 217; Blakley v. Cochran, 117 Mich. 394; Clippinger v. Starr, 130 Mich. 463; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Flynn, 63 Minn. 475; Gillett v. Whiting, 141 N. Y. 71, 38 Am. St. Rep. 762; Williams v. Crosby Co., 118 N. C. 928; Fenn v. Dickey, 178 Pa. 258; Valley Glass Co. v. American Ins. Co., 197 Pa. 254; Brown v. Wilson, 45 S. Car. 519, 55 Am. St. Rep. 779; McCulloch, etc., Co. v. Whitefort, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 314; Roundy v. Erspamer, 112 Wis. 181; Johnson v. Weed, etc., Mfg. Co., 103 Wis. 291; Fintel v. Cook, 88 Wis. 485.

where one in the presence of the principal sold the goods of the principal as his agent without objection, the tacit consent of the principal was presumed.²⁵ And where a son without authority exchanged his father's horse for another with a near neighbor and the father, although he saw the neighbor frequently, kept the horse so acquired and used it as his own for about three months without expressing any dissent, it was held that a ratification of the exchange must be presumed.²⁶ And so where a son assuming to act for his father, but without authority, sold a half interest in his father's mowing and reaping machine, and for two years thereafter the father and the purchaser used and kept the machine in repair as joint owners, it was held that the father could not complain that the sale was unauthorized.²⁷ And so where a son who was left to manage his father's store was told not to buy goods of the plaintiff, but did so from time to time, and the father knew that the goods were being received and saw the boxes with the plaintiff's name on them but gave no notice and made no dissent, there was held to be clear evidence of ratification.²⁸ So where an agent without authority made a contract for the sale of land and notified his principal of the fact, saying that he would also send a deed for execution which he did some days later, and the principal made no objection, acknowledged the receipt of the papers and said that he would return them as soon as his attorney had examined them, it was held that there was such evidence of ratification as would sustain the sale as against a later repudiation.²⁹

§ 473. — Again, where a note had been indorsed without authority, but the principal afterwards wrote over the indorsement a waiver of demand and protest, it was held that he had sufficiently adopted the indorsement.³⁰ So, where an agent without authority sold the land of the principal to the knowledge of the latter, who made no objections for more than four years, during which time the purchaser had been occupying and improving the land, the principal was held to have acquiesced in the sale.³¹ So where a railroad company used and partly paid for a quantity of material purchased by one assuming to be ²⁵ Owsley v. Woolhopter, 14 Ga. 124; Gillinger v. Lake Shore Traffic Co., 67 Wis. 529.

²⁶ Hall v. Harper, 17 Ill. 82.

²⁷ Swartwout v. Evans, 37 Ill. 442.

²⁸ Roundy v. Erspamer, 112 Wis. 181.

²⁹ Dana v. Turlay, 38 Minn. 106. See also Stuart v. Mattern, 141 Mich.

686; Sleeper v. Murphy, 120 Iowa. 132.

³⁰ Allin v. Williams, 97 Cal. 403. So where the note had been altered without authority. Montgomery v. Crossthwait, 90 Ala. 553, 24 Am. St. Rep. 832, 12 L. R. A. 140.

³¹ Alexander v. Jones, 64 Iowa, 207.

its agent, the purchase was held to be ratified;³² and under like circumstances it was held that knowledge of the purchase on the part of the company would be presumed.³³ And where the president of a railroad company, without authority, made a sale of property belonging to the company, in part payment of a debt owed by it, and the fact of the sale was communicated to the board of directors and talked over publicly at one of their meetings, but they did nothing to disaffirm it, it was held to be ratified.³⁴ And where, after an accident, a conductor employed a physician to care for an injured person and both the conductor and the physician notified the general superintendent of such employment, but the company gave no notice of dissent, it was held that the employment was ratified.³⁵ And where an agent without authority procured work to be done, and the principal on receiving the bill objected to the amount of the charge but not to the work or the authority to procure it, it was held that ratification might be inferred.³⁶ So where the principal continues the prosecution of an action begun by an agent, his approval of the action and of the steps necessary to institute it, may be inferred.³⁷

Other cases involving the same principle are cited in the note.³⁸

§ 474. — But, on the other hand, ratification is not to be found without reason or presumed without cause. There must be confirmatory conduct, or at least conduct inconsistent with disapproval. Facts are not to be stretched, or ambiguous, inconclusive or independent acts made the basis of a ratification. Thus, where an unauthorized lease had been given, but the principal formally repudiated it as soon as he heard of it, the fact that he afterwards permitted the tenant to re-

³² Evans v. Chicago, etc., R. R. Co., 26 Ill. 189.

³³ Scott v. Middletown, etc., Ry., 86 N. Y. 200.

See, also, that knowledge by the corporation may be inferred from length of time and general notoriety. Central R. Co. v. Cheatham, 85 Ala. 292, 7 Am. St. Rep. 48; Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. 426.

³⁴ Walworth County Bank v. Farmers, etc., Co., 16 Wis. 629.

³⁵ Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Stockwell, 118 Ind. 98.

³⁶ Hill v. Coates, 34 (N. Y.) Misc. 535.

³⁷ Cook v. Buchanan, 86 Ga. 760.

³⁸ Schmidt v. Rankin, 193 Mo. 254;

Williams v. Merritt, 23 Ill. 623; Bogel v. Teutonia Bank, 28 La. Ann. 953; Matthews v. Fuller, 123 Mass. 446; Marshall v. Williams, 2 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 255; Hanks v. Drake, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 186; Maddux v. Bevan, 39 Md. 485; Farwell v. Howard, 26 Iowa, 381; Pittsburgh v. Woolley, 12 Bush (Ky.), 451; Lafitte v. Godchaux, 35 La. Ann. 1161; Meyer v. Morgan, 51 Miss. 21, 24 Am. Rep. 617; Hawkins v. Lange, 22 Minn. 557; Johnston v. Berry, 3 Ill. App. 256; Marsh v. Whitmore, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 178, 22 L. Ed. 482; Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 218; Law v. Cross, 1 Black (U. S.), 533, 17 L. Ed. 185.

main from month to month at the rate fixed by the lease, and accepted such rent, does not constitute a ratification of the lease.³⁹ And a railroad company will not be held to have ratified the unauthorized hiring, by one of its station agents, of a person to assist in the detection of a thief who had stolen property in the company's possession, merely by reason of the fact that the company's regular detectives made use of information, furnished by such person, which led to the detection and arrest of the thief and the recovery of the property.⁴⁰ And so, where the principal sent his agent to obtain a team and carriage from liveryman P, but the agent procured them from O, and on the way back the horses, while driven by the agent ran away and did injury, after which O attached the horses to another carriage and took them to the principal who used them, it was held that such use did not ratify the procuring of the first conveyance, so as to make the principal responsible to O for the injury done.⁴¹ And so where the foreman of a laundry, without authority, employed a physician to attend an employee injured in the laundry, it was held that the principal, who expressed a willingness to pay for the first visit but protested against further obligation, did not thereby ratify the employment so as to become liable for the whole.⁴² So where one, acting as agent without authority, ordered goods, upon the receipt of which the principal notified the seller of the agent's lack of authority, and her readiness to return the goods, a subsequent offer to take the goods at one-half of the price asked by the vendor will not be a ratification.⁴³ So where an agent sent to his principal the copy of a written contract, entered into by the agent without adequate authority, and the principal wrote a letter in reply, calling attention to terms in the contract that he did not understand, asking their meaning, and proposing that the agent endeavor to get better terms, it was held that this was not sufficient evidence of ratification.⁴⁴ So where an agent to make arrangements for the sale of his principal's goods had, without authority, undertaken to give a certain person the exclusive right of dealing in the principal's goods in a given territory, the fact that the principal afterwards recognized that person as one of an unlimited number having the right to sell goods in that territory, did not amount to a ratification of the unauthorized agreement

³⁹ Owens v. Swanton, 25 Wash. 112.

⁴⁰ Somerville v. Wabash R. Co., 109 Mich. 294.

⁴¹ Oglesby v. Smith, 38 Mo. App. 67.

⁴² Holmes v. McAllister, 123 Mich. 493, 48 L. R. A. 396.

⁴³ American Silk Label Mfg. Co. v. Wolf, 123 N. Y. Supp. 923.

⁴⁴ Larson v. Newman, 19 N. D. 153, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 849.

that he should have the exclusive right.⁴⁵ Similar cases are cited in the note.⁴⁶

§ 475. Retaining in employment as ratification.—Whether a master or principal, who retains in his employment a servant or agent who has committed an unauthorized act, thereby ratifies the act, especially where that act was a tort committed upon a third person, has been discussed in several cases. It is often said that such retention, with knowledge of the facts, is evidence of an approval of the act; but it is clear that the weight of it must, at best, vary greatly with the circumstances. The certainty of the facts, the nature of the offense, and the question whether disapproval may not be shown as well or better by some other means, should all be taken into account. Where there can be no doubt that the servant has done a serious wrong which would justify his immediate dismissal, his retention in employment, in the face of such a fact, may be very strong evidence of approval; but where the fact of the wrong is doubtful—where, for example, a previously trustworthy and competent servant plausibly denies that he was guilty of the wrong alleged—or points to justifying circumstances—to retain him in his employment until the matter can be properly investigated may be, not only no evidence of ratification, but simply, as was said in one case, “an act of courageous justice.”⁴⁷ And even where the servant was clearly in the wrong, it does not follow that the master, who has actively disapproved the act in other ways, necessarily expresses his approval by not discharging the servant,⁴⁸ only where the circumstances are such as to reasonably warrant an inference of approval, should the matter be left to the jury, and then under proper instructions from the court, to determine the extent of the approval indicated.⁴⁹

⁴⁵ White Sewing Machine Co. v. Hill, 136 N. C. 128.

⁴⁶ Chicago Cottage Organ Co. v. Stone (Ark. no opinion), 73 S. W. 392; Findlay v. Hildenbrand, 17 Idaho, 403, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 400; McGowan v. Treacy, 84 N. Y. Supp. 497; Hale v. Goodell, 49 Colo. 95; Thiel Detective Service Co. v. Seavey, 145 Mich. 674; Bromley v. Aday, 70 Ark. 351; Foss Investment Co. v. Ater, 49 Wash. 446; Craver v. House, 138 Mo. App. 251.

⁴⁷ Williams v. Pullman Car Co., 40 La. Ann. 87, 8 Am. St. Rep. 512.

⁴⁸ Deacon v. Greenfield, 141 Pa. 467.

⁴⁹ See Everingham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 148 Iowa, 662, Ann. Cas. 1912 C. 848; Kwiechen v. Holmes, etc., Co., 106 Minn. 148, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 255; Woodward v. Ragland, 5 App. Cas. D. C. 220; Smith v. Sibley Mfg. Co., 85 Ga. 333; Grattan v. Suedmeyer, 144 Mo. App. 719; Dillingham v. Russell, 73 Tex. 47, 15 Am. St. R. 753, 3 L. R. A. 634; Gulf, etc., Ry. Co. v. Reed, 80 Tex. 362, 26 Am. St. R. 749; International, etc., R. Co. v. McDonald, 75 Tex. 41; Robinson v. Superior, etc., R. Co., 94 Wis. 345, 59 Am. St. R. 897, 34 L. R. A. 205.

§ 476. Rule as to ratification by acquiescence applies only to principals.—The doctrine of ratification by acquiescence applies only to the principals in the transaction, and cannot therefore operate to effect a ratification upon the ground of the acquiescence of one of two joint agents in the act of his coagent in which the former ought to have joined in order to effectually exercise the power.⁵⁰

VI.

MANIFESTATION OF RATIFICATION.

§ 477. Manifestation of ratification necessary.—It is, of course, usually essential that the ratification be manifested in some way. Treating it merely as assent, the fact of assent must still usually be made manifest. A mere determination to approve, or a mere approval kept for ever concealed in the principal's breast, can have no legal effect. It must in some way appear, so as to be acted upon where action is necessary, and must at least be capable of being established by the ordinary means of proof.⁵¹ Where the other party is suing the

In Cobb v. Simon, 119 Wis. 597, 100 Am. St. R. 909, it is said: "Retention of a servant in his employment after notice to the principal of a tort committed by the servant is evidence of ratification of the act by the principal. Bass v. C. & N. W. Ry. Co., 42 Wis. 654, 24 Am. Rep. 437; Robinson v. Railway Co., supra. The information to the principal should be full and complete, in order to justify the conclusion of ratification on this ground. Patry v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 77 Wis. 218. It is not essential that the information should come from the plaintiff, but, however it comes, it should be more than mere idle rumor, and should be so convincing and persuasive as to convince the mind of an ordinarily prudent employer that the facts exist which call for the servant's discharge. Any other rule would necessitate the discharge of faithful employees whenever their conduct is assailed by irresponsible, unfounded gossip, and such a rule would be plainly unjust both to employer and employee. The question is generally one for the jury, in view of all the information which came to the employer."

But see the comments upon this in Kwiechen v. Holmes, etc., Co., and in Everingham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., supra, where it is said: "The fact that an employee is retained, after knowledge of a negligent act for which the master is already liable, is sometimes important as bearing upon the right to recover exemplary damages, and this is evidently all the Wisconsin court intended to hold in Cobb v. Simon."

⁵⁰ Penn v. Evans, 28 La. Ann. 576. See ante, § 198.

⁵¹ "A ratification, though it must be evidenced by external demonstrations, is merely an act of the mind. It is a volition or determination to abide by and adopt the act of another. The validity of a ratification, where no act of another is founded upon it, does not depend upon its being communicated." Bayley v. Bryant, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 198. See also Sheffield v. Ladue, 16 Minn. 388, 10 Am. Rep. 145.

principal, in reliance upon the alleged ratification, he must come prepared to establish the fact by legal evidence, which will usually be the words or conduct of the principal having a tendency to prove it. Where the mere fact of assent is to be proved, the other party may doubtless, if he is able, establish it even by the reluctant admission of the principal as a witness that he then approved it, without any outward act.

When the principal, in reliance upon his own ratification, is suing the other party, he also, of course, must show that he has ratified. Usually the mere commencement of suit is a sufficient manifestation.⁵² Where, however, he relies upon a prior act, it must be an act manifested. He could not, for example, rely upon a written document, kept constantly in his own possession, and never given legal efficacy by delivery.⁵³ And where his purpose is to require an act of performance by the other party, it would seem that notice of the ratification must be brought home in some authentic way to the latter.

§ 478. ——— To whom.—The persons to whom the ratification must be manifested are, of course, usually the parties involved in the transaction, or their agents for this purpose, though doubtless what is said or otherwise manifested to third persons may often be competent as evidence. Ratification by conduct will also often present different aspects than express ratification. In a well considered case of the latter sort before the Transvaal supreme court,⁵⁴ it was said by Innes, C. J., "The plaintiffs' case is that there has been an express ratification; and it seems to me, on principle, that such ratification must be addressed either to the agent or to the person with whom the agent had dealings. All other persons are outsiders, and communications addressed to them, with reference to the agent's conduct, are res inter alios acta."

VII.

PROOF OF THE RATIFICATION.

§ 479. Burden of proof.—Ratification is not a matter to be presumed; it must be proved. And the burden of proof rests upon him who alleges it.⁵⁵

⁵² See Warder, etc., Co. v. Cuthbert, 99 Iowa. 681; Bolton Partners v. Lambert, 41 Ch. Div. 295.

⁵³ See Dickinson v. Wright, 56 Mich. 42; Baldwin v. Schiappacasse, 109 Mich. 170.

⁵⁴ Reid v. Warner, [1907] Transv. L. R. 961.

⁵⁵ Moore v. Ensley, 112 Ala. 228; De Vaughn v. McLeroy, 82 Ga. 687; Davis v. Talbot, 137 Ind. 235; Servant v. McCampbell, 46 Colo. 292;

§ 480. Amount of proof—Liberal interpretation of facts.—No rule can be laid down by which to determine the amount of proof required in this, any more than in other similar cases. It has been said in several cases hereafter noted⁵⁶ that, as between the principal and agent, the conduct of the principal will be liberally interpreted in favor of ratification; and the rule has latterly been stated generally as applicable to all cases.⁵⁷ It is difficult to see any very satisfactory reason for such a rule in any case. As between the principal and third persons, the principal is under no obligation to ratify; there is no a priori reason why he should be considered more at fault than the other party who has trusted without discovering the agent's lack of authority; and it would seem that the case should be dealt with like any other. Judge Story has, indeed, said that "slight circumstances and small matters will sometimes suffice to raise a presumption of ratification," but that is no more true of ratification than of many other things.

§ 481. Court or jury.—Where written instruments of ratification are to be construed, the question is for the court. So, if the facts are undisputed and only one inference can reasonably be drawn from them, the question whether they constitute ratification or not, is one of law for the court; but where the facts are in dispute, or where the inferences to be deduced from them are such that men may reasonably differ concerning them, the question of ratification or not is for the jury.⁵⁸ This is especially true where ratification is sought to be implied from conduct, or deduced from acts of alleged acquiescence.

Dean v. Hipp, 16 Colo. App. 537; Brown v. Henry, 172 Mass. 559; Minter v. Cupp, 98 Mo. 26; Detroit, etc., Ry. Co. v. Hartz, 147 Mich. 354; Hopkins v. Clark, 7 N. Y. App. Div. 207 (aff'd 158 N. Y. 299); Sanford v. Fountain, 49 Misc. 301; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Lightfoot v. Horst (Tex. Civ. App.), 122 S. W. 606; Skirvin v. O'Brien, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1.

⁵⁶ See post, § 498.

⁵⁷ Carlson v. Stone-Wells Co., 40 Mont. 434; Hartlove v. Fait Co., 89 Md. 254.

In Washington Savings Bank v. Butchers, etc., Bank, 107 Mo. 133, 28 Am. St. R. 405, it is said on the authority of Morawetz on Corporations, that where acts done in behalf of a corporation are clearly beneficial to it, ratification may be inferred on slight evidence. Same: Davis v. Neuces Valley Irr. Co., 103 Tex. 243.

In Bement v. Armstrong (Tenn. Ch.), 39 S. W. 899; McLeod v. Morrison, 66 Wash. 683, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783; Triggs v. Jones, 46 Minn. 277; it is said that less evidence is required to establish ratification as between principal and third person than as between principal and agent; the rule is also not infrequently said to be precisely the opposite.

In Trustees, etc., v. Bowman, 136 N. Y. 521, it is said: "The proof of knowledge of the facts should be reasonably clear and certain, particularly in a case like this, where, so far as the record discloses no substantial harm has come to the defendant from the delay or the acts of the principal."

⁵⁸ Swartwout v. Evans, 37 Ill. 443;

Where the question is left to the jury, the court should properly instruct the jury as to what constitutes ratification, and what are the methods by which it may be effected.⁵⁹

VIII.

THE RESULTS OF RATIFICATION.

§ 482. What for this subdivision.—Having thus considered the preliminary questions, it remains to determine what are the results of a ratification made in conformity to the rules heretofore laid down. It is obvious that there are several parties whose rights and obligations may be affected by a ratification, and we shall consider the question,—

1. In general.
2. As between principal and agent.
3. As between the principal and the other party.
4. As between the agent and the other party.

1. In General.

§ 483. Usually equivalent to precedent authority.—By ratifying the unauthorized act the principal assumes and adopts it as his own, and as has been seen, this adoption extends to the whole of the act,—it goes back to its inception and continues to its legitimate end. Subject therefore to an exception to be immediately noticed, it is the universal rule that as against the principal the ratification is retroactive and equivalent to a prior authority,⁶⁰ or to use the language of a distinguished writer and judge, “No maxim is better settled in reason and Trustees v. McCormick, 41 Ill. 323; Marine Co. v. Carver, 42 Ill. 66; Paul v. Berry, 78 Ill. 158; Henderson v. Cummings, 44 Ill. 325; Pohl v. Davenport Malt Co., 46 Ill. App. 513; Stokes v. Mackay, 140 N. Y. 640; Murray v. Mayo, 157 Mass. 248; Hopkins v. Clark, 7 N. Y. App. Div. 207, (aff'd 158 N. Y. 299); Quale v. Hazel, 19 S. Dak. 483.

⁵⁹ Morrill v. McNeill, 74 Neb. 291.

⁶⁰ Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338, 5 L. Ed. 631; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 332, 21 L. Ed. 933; Despatch Line v. Belamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205, 37 Am. Dec. 203; Clealand v. Walker, 11 Ala. 1058, 46 Am. Dec. 238; McMahan v. McMahan, 13 Penn. St. 376, 53 Am. Dec. 481; Daughters of American Revolution v. Schenley, 204 Pa. 572; Pearsons v. McKibben, 5 Ind. 261, 61

Am. Dec. 85; Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 4 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 75, 43 Am. Dec. 470; Starks v. Sikes, 8 Gray (Mass.), 609, 69 Am. Dec. 270; Goss v. Stevens, 32 Minn. 472; United States Express Co. v. Rawson, 106 Ind. 215; Bronson v. Chappell, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 681, 20 L. Ed. 436; Lawrence v. Taylor, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 107; Lowry v. Harris, 12 Minn. 255; Hankins v. Baker, 46 N. Y. 666; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490; McIntyre v. Park, 11 Gray (Mass.), 102, 71 Am. Dec. 690; Louisville, etc., Ry. Co. v. McVay, 98 Ind. 391, 49 Am. Rep. 770; Cassidy v. Salline Co. Bank, 14 Okla. 532; Welker v. Appleman, 44 Ind. App. 699; Griffith v. Stewart, 31 App. D. C. 29; Hickox v. Fels, 86 Ill. App. 216; Garten v. Trobridge, 80 Kan. 720.

law than the maxim omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur, et mandato priori equiparatur; at all events where it does not prejudice the rights of strangers."⁶¹

"The ratification operates upon the act ratified precisely as though the authority to do the act had been previously given, except where the rights of third parties have intervened between the act and the ratification."⁶² And this rule applies as well to corporations as to individuals.⁶³

It has been seen also, that the principal cannot avail himself of the benefits of the act and repudiate its obligations.⁶⁴ Having with full knowledge of all the material facts ratified, either expressly or impliedly, the act assumed to be done in his behalf, he thenceforward stands responsible for the whole of it to the full extent to which the agent assumed to act, and he must abide by it whether the act be a contract or a tort,⁶⁵ and whether it results to his advantage or detriment.⁶⁶

§ 484. — Scope and duration.—Ratification, by its very nature, is naturally and normally retroactive. It does not ordinarily create agency or give authority for the future. It usually presents itself as a matter of the approval of some particular act or transaction already done or happened. It is, moreover, ordinarily confined to that particular past act only, and does not affect prior unauthorized acts not connected with that one;⁶⁷ but there would seem to be no reason why—granting sufficient knowledge—there may not, by the ratification of a particular act, be approval of prior acts naturally and usually connected with it, or why even subsequent acts closely following and naturally connected may not be included. There would seem also to be no reason why the ratification of even a single past act may not be so full and comprehensive in its scope as to amount either to a general

⁶¹ Story, J., in Fleckner v. Bank, supra.

⁶² Field, J., in Cook v. Tullis, supra.

⁶³ Planters' Bank v. Sharp, supra; Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., supra; Leggett v. N. J. Mfg. and Banking Co., 1 Saxt. Ch. (N. J.) 541, 23 Am. Dec. 728; Frankfort S. T. Co. v. Churchill, 6 T. B. Monroe (Ky.), 427, 17 Am. Dec. 159; Everett v. United States, 6 Port. (Ala.) 166, 30 Am. Dec. 584.

⁶⁴ Ante, § 410.

⁶⁵ Cooley on Torts, 127.

⁶⁶ Wood v. McCain, supra; Demp- sey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. R. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219.

⁶⁷ In Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199, it is said: "Although such ratification [here ratification of specific acts] is, as to the act specifically ratified, equivalent to a previous authority, it is not retroactive to the extent of binding the principal for other acts in excess of the authority of the agent, though the principal might have been bound for such other unauthorized acts, if they had been done under color of a previous authority actually given."

declaration of agency or at least to raise an estoppel as to the future. As has been already seen, inferences of authority may arise from the approval of acts already done, and estoppels may arise from apparent acquiescence in such acts.⁶⁸

Where an apparently general or continuing agency has been established in this way, it would, as in other cases, presumptively go on until notice of its termination.⁶⁹

It is, however, to be kept in mind, that ratification is merely confirmatory. It does not make a new contract, nor change the existing one in question. It must be taken as it exists, and if, for reasons other than lack of authority, the contract is not good, ratification will not help it.⁷⁰

§ 485. — May be so treated in pleading.—So completely is ratification regarded as equivalent to prior authority that it is generally held not necessary to expressly plead it as such: it may be shown under the general allegations that the act was done or the contract made for the principal or by his agent, and the like.⁷¹

§ 486. Cannot affect intervening rights of third persons.—Until ratification the principal has not been a party to the transaction. Although done in his name, the act has no binding force as to him until he sanctions it. And although in ordinary cases the ratification extends back to the beginning and operates upon all that has since been done, yet it is obviously just and reasonable that where prior to his ratification,—before he has given his sanction,—third persons have in good faith acquired such substantial rights or have been placed in such position in reference to the same transaction that they will be prejudiced by such retroactive effect, the ratification should not be allowed to overreach and defeat those rights. And such is the rule of law. The intervening rights of third persons cannot be defeated by the ratification. If prior to the ratification the principal has put it out of his ⁶⁸ "An unauthorized act may be made to operate by ratification as an estoppel upon the person in whose behalf it was done." Steffens v. Nelson, 94 Minn. 365.

⁶⁹ Hartjen v. Reubsamen, 19 Misc. 149.

⁷⁰ See Atlanta Buggy Co. v. Hess Spring and Axle Co., 124 Ga. 638, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 431.

⁷¹ Goetz v. Goldbaum (Cal.), 37 Pac. 646; Blood v. La Serena L. & W. Co., 113 Cal. 221; Smyth v. Lynch, 7 Colo. App. 383; Long v. Osborn, 91

Iowa, 160; Johnston v. Milwaukee, etc., Co., 49 Neb. 65, 68 N. W. 383.

Missouri.—In Lipscomb v. Talbott, 243 Mo. 1, 147 S. W. 798, it is said: "The rule seems to be, in this jurisdiction (whatever it may be generally), that if a party relies on ratification, he should tender such issue in his pleading," citing Wade v. Hardy, 75 Mo. at p. 399; Noble v. Blount, 77 Mo. p. 242; Loving Co. v. Cattle Co., 176 Mo. p. 353-354; McClanahan v. Payne, 86 Mo. App. p. 292.

power to perform the contract ratified, by conveying the subject-matter thereof to a third person who took the same in good faith,⁷² or if third parties have in good faith acquired an estate or interest in, or a lien or claim upon the subject-matter by attachment, garnishment, judgment or otherwise,⁷³ these rights cannot be cut off at the mere volition of the principal.⁷⁴ Nor will the principal by ratifying be permitted to impose substantial duties or obligations upon third persons which would not exist if ratification had not taken place.

⁷² McCracken v. City of San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Borderre v. Den, 106 Cal. 594 (attempt to ratify a prior lease, made by an agent, so as to cut off one given by the principal); McDonald v. McCoy, 121 Cal. 55; Cledenning v. Hawk, 10 N. Dak. 90.

⁷³ In Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612, it was held that, after a principal's creditor has served garnishment process upon the principal's debtor, the principal could not, by ratification of a previous unauthorized assignment of the claim, defeat the rights of the garnisheeing creditor. Norton v. Alabama Nat. Bank, 102 Ala. 420, and Dalton Buggy Co. v. Wood, 7 Ga. App. 477, are attachment cases of the same type.

In Taylor v. Robinson, 14 Cal. 396, an agent to collect, without authority received the debtor's goods in satisfaction of the principal's claim. It was held that, after the property had been levied upon as that of the debtor, the principal could not by ratification defeat the rights under the levy. Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio, 514, is a case of the same kind. See also Hartman Steel Co. v. Hoag, 104 Iowa, 269.

See the discussion of the question, not decided, as to who is entitled to avail himself of the rule, in Lindauer v. Meyberg, 27 Mo. App. 181.

Subsequent ratification by a married man, of an unauthorized conveyance of land while he was unmarried, cannot cut off wife's right of dower. Britt v. Gordon, 132 Iowa, 431.

⁷⁴ Fiske v. Holmes, 41 Me. 441 (in a suit upon an account, defendants could not upon the trial, by ratifying a previous unauthorized payment made on their behalf, so destroy the plaintiff's cause of action as to put costs upon him); Parmelee v. Simpson, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 81, 18 L. Ed. 542 (where a deed was executed and put upon record, in the absence and ignorance of the grantee, he could not ratify the delivery and the recording so as to hold the land free from a mortgage executed and recorded after the recording of the deed, but before ratification); Stoddard's case, 4 Ct. Cl. 511 (an agent in the south, to collect claims and settle up the business of a northern principal, made an unauthorized purchase of cotton with his principal's funds, but before any acts of ratification occurred, the civil war broke out and the goods were seized by the United States; ratification after that was too late; the United States stood in the position of a creditor with an intervening attachment); Cook v. Tullis, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 332, 21 L. Ed. 933 (suit by trustees in bankruptcy to recover a note and a mortgage which, without authority, the bankrupt had substituted for property belonging to the defendant in his hands. After the failure but before the adjudication of bankruptcy, the defendant had learned of and ratified the substitution. The recovery is denied upon the ground that, until the adjudication of bankruptcy, the insolvent is free to deal with his property, so long as he re-

No case has been discovered dealing with the rights of a mere heir or personal representative, but if all that the unratified act amounts to is a mere offer, it doubtless would not affect them.

What would be held in any of the cases above referred to under the English doctrine in Bolton Partners v. Lambert,⁷⁵ that there is some sort of a conditional contract created, seems not to have been discussed.

§ 487. — Defenses, conditions, rights of cancellation.—The doctrine of the preceding section has also been applied, in a number of cases, to prevent the loss by third persons, through the principal's ratification, of existing defenses against liability, conditions affecting liability, rights to escape liability, and the like. Thus, for example, where an agent has obtained a policy of insurance for his principal, and later, without the authority or knowledge of the principal, has assumed to surrender that policy and take another in its place,—the latter containing the usual provision that it should be void in case of undisclosed prior insurance—it has been held that, after a loss has occurred before the principal has consented to the surrender of the first policy, the principal cannot by the ratification of such surrender deprive the second company of its right to make the defense of other insurance.⁷⁶

§ 488. Law of what place governs.—Where the act is done or the contract is made at one place, while the act of ratification occurs at another, interesting questions arise as to the place whose law is finally to control. Where an agent does not assume to make a binding contract, but is known only to solicit orders or proposals which must go to his principal in another place for acceptance or approval,—as in the familiar case of the "commercial traveler"—the contract ordinarily is deemed to be made where the acceptance or approval is given.⁷⁷

But where the agent purports to make a present, binding contract, though without authority, and that contract is subsequently ratified, the logic of the doctrine of ratification requires that the contract be held good as of the time and place of its original negotiation. As said ceives a fair value for what he transfers, and that, until the adjudication, the trustees acquire no right to control any specific property).

⁷⁵ See post, § 576.

⁷⁶ See Johnson v. North British Ins. Co., 66 Ohio St. 6; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. McKenzie, 70 Ill. App. 615; Larsen v. Thuringia Am. Ins. Co., 108 Ill. App. 420, aff'd 208 Ill. 166.

⁷⁷ Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Tegler v. Shipman, 33 Iowa, 194, 11

Am. Rep. 118; Keiwert v. Meyer, 62 Ind. 587, 30 Am. Rep. 206; Clafin v. Meyer, 41 La. Ann. 1048; State Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Brinkley Stave & Heading Co., 61 Ark. 1, 54 Am. St. R. 191, 29 L. R. A. 712; De Bary v. Souer, 101 Fed. 425, 41 C. C. A. 417; Sar-becker v. State, 65 Wis. 171, 56 Am. Rep. 624. Compare Wilson v. Lewiston Mills Co., 150 N. Y. 314, 55 Am. St. R. 680; Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196.

in one instance, "In case of a contract made in a foreign country, by an agent without authority, which the principal at home afterwards ratifies, the contract is considered as made in that foreign country, because the ratification relates back tempore et loco, and is equivalent to an original authority."⁷⁸ Other courts, however, have said that the unauthorized contract, though in form complete, was, in effect, only an offer or proposal inoperative until the principal assented, and that therefore the contract was made where such assent was given.⁷⁹

§ 489. Ratification irrevocable—Changing repudiation to ratification.—As has been seen, the principal upon being fully informed of the unauthorized act of one assuming to be his agent has the right to elect whether he will ratify such act or not; but when he has once exercised this right the election is final. If therefore he adopts the act, even for a moment, it is said, he adopts it forever, and he will not be allowed, at least where the rights of other parties may be affected thereby, to revoke his ratification.⁸⁰

With respect of repudiation the rule seems to be somewhat different. Though the principal at first disapprove, he may, it is held, afterwards change his disapproval to an affirmance,⁸¹ though doubtless not where such a change would prejudice rights or actions based upon the previous rejection.⁸²

2. As Between Principal and Agent.

§ 490. In general.—The general result of a ratification has already been stated. It is now to be considered what special results ensue ⁷⁸ Dord v. Bonnafée, 6 La. Ann. 563, 54 Am. Dec. 573. To like effect: Golson v. Ebert, 52 Mo. 260; In re Insurance Co., 22 Fed. 109; Compare Findlay v. Hall, 12 Ohio, 610.

⁷⁹ Shuenfeldt v. Junkermann (Ct.), 20 Fed. 357. In In re Insurance Co., supra, it is said that the court in the Shuenfeldt case "strained the rule to uphold the contract and prevent the success of an unfair proceeding."

⁸⁰ Jones v. Atkinson, 68 Ala. 167; Whitfield v. Riddle, 78 Ala. 99; Smith v. Cologan, 2 T. R. 188n; Clarke v. Van Reimsdyk, 9 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 153; Hazelton v. Batchelder, 44 N. Y. 40; Brock v. Jones, 16 Tex. 461; Beall v. January, 62 Mo. 434; Sanders v. Peck, 87 Fed. 61, 30 C. C. A. 530; Hunter v. Cobe, 84 Minn. 187; Kirkpatrick v. Pease, 202 Mo. 471; Mutual Auto Accessories Co. v. Beard, 59 Misc. 174; Lutjeharms v. Smith, 76 Neb. 260.

⁸¹ Woodward v. Harlow, 28 Vt. 338; Neely v. Jones, 16 W. Va. 625, 37 Am. Rep. 794; Warder, etc., Co. v. Cuthbert, 99 Iowa, 681; Sloan v. Johnson, 20 Pa. Super. 643; Pickles v. Western Assur. Co., 40 Nova Scotia, 327.

⁸² See Warder, etc., Co. v. Cuthbert, supra. Where an agent without authority has sold land of which the purchaser takes possession and makes improvements, and the principal on being informed refuses to approve whereupon the buyer abandons the land, the principal cannot subsequently ratify and enforce the contract. Wilkinson v. Harwell, 13 Ala. 660.

affecting the mutual rights and obligations of the principal and the agent. It will readily be seen that these results are of great consequence to the agent. Whether he was an agent who had exceeded the authority conferred upon him, or whether he was a mere stranger with no semblance of authority at all, his acts were not binding upon the assumed principal. He had undertaken to act for another from whom he had no authority at all, or with authority insufficient to justify the act assumed to be done, and he would himself be liable either to the parties to whom he had failed to bind the principal, or to that principal for damages occasioned by exceeding the authority with which he was invested. From this dilemma, however, the ratification ordinarily relieves him. Thenceforward the principal assumes the responsibility of the transaction with all of its advantages and all of its burdens.

§ 491. General effect of ratification—Releases agent from liability to principal.—The general rule, between the principal and the agent, therefore is, that by such ratification the principal absolves the agent from all responsibility for loss or injury growing out of the unauthorized transaction,⁸³ and also, as will be seen, gives the principal the same claim to benefits, and to the agent the same right to compensation, reimbursement and indemnity, that they would respectively have had, if the act had been previously authorized.

§ 492. ——— Limitations.—While, as has been stated, it is ordinarily true that the ratification by the principal not only perfects the relations between the principal and the third person, but also releases the agent from liability to the principal, the latter consequence does not invariably follow. Thus, for example, it is possible that the principal may, as to third persons, be held to have ratified because of delay in disaffirmance, when that delay was not unnecessarily or unreasonably caused by his efforts to ascertain from his agent the real state of the case; his delay as pointed out in one case may have been "induced by the assurances or persuasion of the agent himself;"⁸⁴ the principal ⁸³ See Lunn v. Guthrie, 115 Iowa, 501; Wann v. Scullin, 235 Mo. 629; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Sabine, 6 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 393, Fed. Cas. No. 97; Osborne v. Durham, 157 N. Car. 262; Bray v. Gunn, 53 Ga. 144; Clay v. Spratt, 7 Bush (Ky.), 334; Ward v. Warfield, 3 La. Ann. 468; Flower v. Downs, 6 La. Ann. 538; Oliver v. Johnson, 24 La. Ann. 460; Towle v. Stevenson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 110; Cairnes v. Bleecker, 12 Johns. (N.

Y.) 300; Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513, 10 Am. Dec. 286; Vianna v. Barclay, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 281; Green v. Clark, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 497; Hazard v. Spears, 4 Keyes (N. Y.), 469; Hanks v. Drake, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 186; Woodward v. Suydam, 11 Ohio, 360; Pickett v. Pearsons, 17 Vt. 470; Courcier v. Ritter, 4 Wash. C. C. 549, Fed. Cas. No. 3,282.

⁸⁴ Thus in Triggs v. Jones, 46 Minn. 277, an agent had been given a deed may have relied, until it was too late, upon the untrue reports or representations of the agent; or the principal may, in reasonable endeavours to extricate himself from the dilemma in which the agent's unauthorized act has placed him, and to save himself and all parties from unnecessary loss, have done acts which, as to third persons, might be construed as ratification, but which it would be very unjust to construe as an approval of the act so far as the agent himself is concerned.⁸⁵

It is also possible, of course, that the principal may, at the express or implied request of the agent, have proceeded with the transaction so far as the other party is concerned, for the purpose of saving the agent from loss, and without waiving or intending to waive his claim against the agent. There may also be cases in which the principal, for the purpose of saving greater loss, has performed the contract with the other party, and in which, while the agent may not be liable to the principal, the agent should not be allowed to recover compensation or commissions for the unauthorized act.

§ 493. — So where the agent, in violation of instructions, has bound the principal to third parties, the fact that the principal performs or receives performance so far as the other party is concerned, is not such a ratification as will release the agent from his liability to the principal for his breach of duty.⁸⁶ And where the principal in such a to deliver only when a certain corporation should be organized and shares of stock in it delivered to the agent for the principal, but the agent made an immediate absolute delivery of the deed, the principal was allowed damages against the agent, although he had helped in the subsequent attempts to organize the corporation, and had failed to repudiate the transaction for so long a time that the court thought that, as to the grantee, he should have been held to a ratification, and that the property had already been mortgaged to a bona fide purchaser.

⁸⁵ See also ante, § 440.

In Brown v. Foster, 137 Mich. 35, in which an agent had made a sale of a machine upon the condition, not authorized by his principal, that the machine might be returned if the purchaser should not find it satisfactory, and the principal had upon the purchaser's complaint offered to substitute another machine, the principal was allowed to treat the agent's unauthorized delivery as a conversion and to recover the value of the machine from the agent.

See also Goodale v. Middaugh, 8 Colo. App. 223; White v. Sanders, 32 Me. 188; Pacific Vinegar, etc., Works v. Smith, 152 Cal. 507.

⁸⁶ In Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Rion (Tenn.), 62 S. W. 44, an agent who had been instructed to issue no policy upon a particular risk, did issue such a policy, and before the principal's letter in reply to the agent's report, ordering cancellation of the policy was received, the loss occurred. The principal settled with the insured and received the premium from the agent. The court said that this was not a ratification of the agent's act in disobeying instructions, that in as much as the agent case has performed to the other party as he was bound to do, the fact that he demands, or sues to recover, from the agent, who has received it, the fruit of the correlative performance of the other party, does not amount to a ratification or release the agent. It does not belong to the agent, giving it up does him no wrong, the other party is not entitled to it, it belongs to the principal, and his recovery of what is thus his own is no ratification of the original wrongful act of the agent which was the cause of the principal's unwarranted liability.⁸⁷

§ 494. — Methods of ratification.—With reference to the methods by which the principal may ratify, what has been said in the preceding subdivision, with reference to the methods of ratification in general, applies here as well as where the principal and the third person are involved. Thus, there may be express ratification, or implied ratification by taking the benefits of the act⁸⁸ or bringing suits to enforce it,⁸⁹ while the rule, which deduces a ratification from the principal's failure to dissent when informed of an unauthorized act, has often been thought to find its clearest exemplification in the cases in which the question arose between the principal and the agent.⁹⁰

§ 495. — Ratification of entire act.—Here also the general rule so fully discussed in the preceding subdivision applies that the principal cannot ratify a portion of an entire act and reject the resihad the power to bind the principal upon the contract, the principal was bound and his performance of the contract and claim to the benefits incident to it, concerned only the relation between the principal and the insured.

Where an agent is authorized to sell goods on credit but up to a certain amount only, and he sells and gives credit for more than that amount, taking the buyer's notes, the fact that the principal seeks to collect upon the notes, does not relieve the agent. Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works v. Smith, 152 Cal. 507.

Where an agent, having authority to lend money, lends it upon a prohibited kind of security, the mere fact that the principal recognizes it as a valid loan to the borrower, does not relieve the agent from liability if the money be lost by reason of the defective security. Bank of St. Mary's v. Calder, 3 Strob. (S. Car.) 403.

⁸⁷ In Continental Ins. Co. v. Clark, 126 Iowa, 274, an insurance agent had issued a policy at a rate of premium lower than the company allowed, and the loss occurred before the insurance company had been informed of the issuance of the policy. The company paid the claim made by the insured and demanded of the agent the premium which the insured had paid. The suit was against the agent by the company to recover for the loss which the company had suffered through the issuance of the policy, and it was held, that there was no ratification of the agent's wrongful conduct either in the demand for the premium or the fact that the premium was again claimed in the declaration.

⁸⁸ See ante, § 434.

⁸⁹ See ante, § 446.

⁹⁰ See ante, §§ 459, 460.

due.⁹¹ But even under this rule the approval of one unauthorized act does not necessarily carry with it the ratification of a further act, following after but not an inseparable consequence of the prior one. Thus where an agent without authority had collected money for his principal and applied it to his own use, it was held that an action by the principal against the agent to recover the money, while it might operate as a ratification of his collection of it, did not necessarily amount to an approval of his retention of it.⁹²

§ 496. — Knowledge of the facts.—Here, as in other cases, the ratification must have been made with full knowledge of all the material facts, or with the equivalent thereof within the rules already discussed.⁹³ If the agent has kept back or suppressed any such facts, the ratification of the principal made in ignorance of them is no defense to the agent.⁹⁴ And even if the agent communicate to his principal all the facts known to him at the time, but if afterwards it turns out that the facts so communicated were not the real facts of the case, the agent is not relieved by a ratification made under such a misapprehension,⁹⁵ although the facts and circumstances may have been innocently concealed or inadvertently misrepresented.⁹⁶ In such a case the assumed condition is not that claimed to have been ratified.

§ 497. — Agent's motives unimportant.—The motives of the agent in the transaction are of no importance. If he has deviated from his duty he becomes liable to his principal for such losses as are the direct and natural consequences of such deviation, whether his motives ⁹¹ See ante, § 410.

⁹² Schanz v. Martin, 37 Misc. 492. Same effect: Knowlton v. School City, 75 Ind. 103.

So in Bank of St. Mary's v. Calder, 3 Strob. (S. C.) 403, it is held that where an agent's power to lend money is clear, a recognition of the loan as between the principal and the borrower does not necessarily amount to a ratification of the agent's act in taking insufficient security.

The principal by suing the agent to secure moneys collected by him without authority does not ratify the act but on the contrary repudiates it. Holland Coffee Co. v. Johnson, 38 Misc. 187.

⁹³ See ante, § 393 et seq.

A principal who receives knowledge of facts indicating a breach of duty by his agent and who suspects him of it, while the transaction is still executory and he can then protect himself, will not be permitted to then proceed to consummate the transaction and sustain a loss, and afterward recover damages from the agent. Bartelson v. Vanderhoff, 96 Minn. 184 (quoting Thompson v. Libby, 36 Minn. 287; Ballard v. Nye, 138 Cal. 588).

⁹⁴ Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 69, and cases last cited; Bank of Owensboro v. Western Bank, 13 Bush (Ky.), 526, 26 Am. Rep. 211.

⁹⁵ Bank of Owensboro v. Western Bank, supra; Bank of Commerce v. Miller, 105 Ill. App. 224.

⁹⁶ Vincent v. Rather, 31 Tex. 77, 98 Am. Dec. 516.

were good or bad; and he is only released from such liability where the principal with full knowledge of all the material facts ratifies such departure from his duty.⁹⁷

§ 498. — Acts of ratification liberally construed.—The conduct of the principal will, it is often said, be liberally construed in favor of the agent in effecting a ratification, especially if the alleged agent was already an agent for some purpose and not a mere stranger.⁹⁸ On the other hand, as has been pointed out, it is often said that the rule is not so liberal in favor of the agent as in favor of third persons.⁹⁹ There is really no reason for liberality in either case. It should be merely a matter of making fair and reasonable inferences under the circumstances.

§ 499. — Ratification of appointment of subagent.—If the agent without authority has employed a subagent, the ratification will embrace the appointment and acts of the subagent.¹

§ 500. Gives agent claim against principal for compensation and reimbursement.—On the other hand, an unqualified ratification gives the agent in general the same rights against the principal which he would have had if the act had originally been authorized. The agent may therefore claim compensation for the performance of the act,² or demand reimbursement for outlays,³ in the same way and to the same extent as any duly authorized agent.

§ 501. Entitles principal to benefits as against agent.—And not only does the principal by ratifying assume liability to the agent, but the agent also is liable to the principal like an authorized agent. The ⁹⁷ Bank of Owensboro v. Western Bank, supra.

⁹⁸ Szymanski v. Plassan, 20 La. Ann. 90, 96 Am. Dec. 382; Flower v. Jones, 7 Martin (La.), N. S. 143; Johnson v. Carrere, 45 La. Ann. 847, 13 So. 195; Terril v. Flower, 6 Mart. (La.) O. S. 583; Codwise v. Hacker, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 526; Byrne v. Doughty, 13 Ga. 46; Plummer v. Knight, 156 Mo. App. 321. See also Carlson v. Stone, etc., Co., 40 Mont. 434; Hartlove v. Fait Co., 89 Md. 254.

⁹⁹ See ante, § 480.

¹ Eggleston v. Boardman, 37 Mich. 14, 20; Blantin v. Whitaker, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 313; Sheldon v. Sheldon, 3 Wis. 699; Hornbeck v. Gilmer, 110 La. 500; Bellinger v. Collins, 117 Iowa, 173; Nichols v. Berning, 37 Ind. App. 109.

² United States Mortgage Co. v. Henderson, 111 Ind. 24; Goss v. Stevens, 32 Minn. 472; Nesbitt v. Hesler, 49 Mo. 383; Gelatt v. Ridge, 117 Mo. 553, 38 Am. St. Rep. 683; Wilson v. Dame, 58 N. H. 392; Beagles v. Robertson, 135 Mo. App. 306.

Many other cases of the same sort will appear in the chapter upon Brokers, particularly real estate brokers.

³ Frixione v. Tagliaferro, 10 Moore P. C. 175 (where it is held that if the agent has incurred expenses in departing from his authority and the principal afterwards ratify such departure, the agent is entitled to be reimbursed for the expenses so incurred).

principal is therefore entitled to the benefits and profits of the transaction and to all of the advantages which would flow from an authorized performance, and can compel an accounting therefor from the agent.⁴

He may recover from the agent property or money received from the other party by virtue of the transaction ratified;⁵ and after ratification the agent may not return to the other party money or property so received: if he does so, he is liable for it to the principal.⁶

3. As Between Principal and the Other Party.

§ 502. In general.—The question of the effect of ratification as between the principal and the other party to the transaction involves two aspects: a. What are the rights of the other party against the principal based upon the ratification? b. What rights does the principal by his own ratification acquire against the other party to the transaction ratified? Each of these also may be considered from the standpoint of actions based upon contract or sounding in tort.

a. Other Party Against Principal.

§ 503. What considerations involved.—The aspect presented when the other party is seeking to enforce rights against the principal, based upon his ratification of an unauthorized act, is the typical one. In this field, the doctrine of ratification had its origin. Here it has full sway. The great majority of the cases upon the subject involve this form of it. Two general classes of cases are found: those involving some kind of liability in contract and those based upon tort.

§ 504. 1. In contract.—Where a contract has been made by one person in the name of another, of a kind that the latter might lawfully make himself and the only defect is the lack of authority on the part of the person acting, the subsequent ratification of that contract, while still in that condition, by the person on whose behalf it was made and who is fully apprised of the facts, operates to cure that defect and to establish the contract as his contract as though he had authorized it in ⁴ Starks v. Sikes, 8 Gray (Mass.), 609, 69 Am. Dec. 270; Hormann v. Sherin, 6 S. D. 82; Montgomery v. Pacific Coast Land Bureau, 94 Cal. 284, 28 Am. St. Rep. 122; Conant v. Riseborough, 139 Ill. 383; Roller v. man, 58 W. Va. 340; White v. Cooper, 3 Pa. St. 130; Walters v. Bray (Tex. Spilmore, 13 Wis. 26; Siers v. Wise-Civ. App.), 70 S. W. 443.

There can not be ratification unless the act was done as agent, but there may perhaps be a trust established. See Garvey v. Jarvis, 46 N. Y. 310, 7 Am. Rep. 335 (no ratification and no trust); Virginia Pochontas Coal Co. v. Lambert, 107 Va. 368, 122 Am. St. R. 860, 13 Ann. Cas. 277 (no ratification but trust).

⁵ Hormann v. Sherin, supra; Snow v. Carr, 61 Ala. 363, 22 Am. Rep. 3; Miltenberger v. Beacom, 9 Pa. St. 198.

⁶ Montgomery v. Pacific Coast Land Bureau, supra.

the first instance. From this time on, he is subject to all the obligations that pertain to the transaction in the same manner and to the same extent that he would be had the contract been made originally by him in person, or by his express authority. The other party therefore may demand and enforce on the part of the principal the full performance of the contract entered into by his agent.⁷ If the contract of the agent was tainted or procured by fraud, the principal by ratification assumes responsibility for the fraud.⁸ Statements or admissions made or knowledge possessed by the agent which would charge the principal if the agent had been previously authorized will charge him after the relation has been established by ratification.⁹ It is unnecessary to cite instances of this. What has been or may be hereafter said of the obligations of the principal, applies as well to one who became such by ratification as to one who was such by original agreement.

§ 505. — In order that these results shall ensue, however, it is essential, as has been seen, that the contract shall have been made on account of the person ratifying, and that he shall have had full knowledge of the facts.¹⁰ The attempted contract must also still continue, for there must be something to ratify; it must still be capable of performance on both sides, for clearly the other party cannot call upon the principal to perform when performance of his own correlative obligation has become impossible; and the attitude of the parties must have remained unchanged, for the principal cannot be compelled to assume relations to new parties to any greater extent than the contract originally contemplated.

§ 506. 2. In tort.—The doctrine of liability by ratification in tort cases is abundantly established. Indeed this seems to have been the earliest form of it. By whatever methods the act be adopted and approved in accordance with the rules already discussed, the principal ⁷ No attempt is here made to gather together the cases upon this subject. They will be found under every head in the preceding sections.

⁸ See National Life Ins. Co. v. Minch, 53 N. Y. 144; Elwell v. Chamberlin, 31 N. Y. 611; Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79; Lane v. Black, 21 W. Va. 617; and many other cases cited ante, § 411.

⁹ Lampkin v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Ga. 487; Haas v. Sternbach, 156 Ill. 44. Compare Smith v. Savings Bank, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 115.

¹⁰ Although the plaintiff may not be able to prove ratification with knowledge of a particular term of the contract, still if the law would otherwise supply a term he may recover upon that basis, e. g., although plaintiff cannot show ratification of a term fixing delivery of goods sold at a certain time, he may nevertheless recover for not delivering within a reasonable time. Langlands Foundry Co. v. Worthington Pumping Eng. Co., 22 Victoria L. R. 144.

becomes liable for the tort as though he had previously directed it.¹¹ And it is not always necessary that the approval shall look to the particular act. In the case of master and servant, for example, if the approval, with knowledge, establishes the relation, the master becomes responsible for any torts committed within its scope for which he would have been responsible had the relation been regularly created. As said in such a case,¹² "The ratification goes to the relation and establishes it ab initio. The relation existing, the master is responsible for torts which he has not ratified specifically just as he is for those which he has not commanded, and as he may be for those which he has expressly forbidden."

In the case of principal and agent, also, the principal who ratifies the act is not only, as has been seen, affected in the enforcement of the contract by the instrumentalities through which it was procured,¹³ but he also becomes personally liable for such of the frauds, misrepresentations and deceits of the agent, and for those only, which would, under similar circumstances and in like forms of action, impose liability upon the principal of a previously authorized agent.¹⁴

¹¹ Saunderson v. Baker, 2 W. Black. 832, 3 Wils. 309; Wilson v. Tumman, 6 M. & G. 236 (dictum); Buron v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167; Eastern Counties Railway Co. v. Broom, 6 Exchequer 314; Bishop v. Montague, Croke, Eliz. 824; Exum v. Brister, 35 Miss. 391; Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. R. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219; Gulf, etc., Ry. Co. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; Murray v. Lovejoy, 2 Clifford (U. S. C. C.), 191, s. c. 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 1, 18 L. Ed. 129.

¹² In Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. Rep. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219, a volunteer delivered coal which the plaintiff had ordered of the defendant, and broke a window in making the delivery. The defendant, with full knowledge of the accident, presented and collected a bill for the coal so delivered. In an action in tort to recover for the breaking of the glass it was held that the ratification accomplished through accepting the benefits of the unauthorized act established the relation of master and servant ab initio and made the defendant liable in tort as principal.

¹³ See ante, § 411.

¹⁴ It is true that statements apparently to the contrary are sometimes met. Thus Keefe v. Sholl, 181 Pa. 90, is sometimes cited as holding the contrary, but it in fact does not. It was an action of trespass for deceit which could be maintained in Pennsylvania against any principal only upon a showing of some participation or knowledge on the part of the latter, as the case of Freyer v. McCord, 165 Pa. 539, cited by the court, had previously held. In the case at bar, even if there were evidence of ratification, there was no evidence of knowledge of the misrepresentations, and therefore in accordance with the Pennsylvania doctrine the action could not be maintained.

Garrett Co. v. McComb, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 419, is also sometimes cited, but that case is easily distinguishable. It does not appear that the person who made the representations purported to act as agent,

Ratification in tort cases is a distinct gain to the other party, giving him a remedy against the principal while not depriving him of his remedy against the wrongdoer himself.¹⁵

§ 507. — Unique character of doctrine.—Although the doctrine of ratification is established in these cases, it is none the less unique and striking. As stated by Justice Holmes, in a case in Massachusetts already cited:¹⁶ "If we were contriving a new code to-day, we might hesitate to say that a man could make himself a party to a bare tort, in any case, merely by assenting to it after it had been committed. But we are not at liberty to refuse to carry out to its consequences any principle which we believe to have been part of the com-and if not there could be no ratification. Hamlin v. Sears, 82 N. Y. 327. But even if there could be ratification, the representations were held not to be such as would impose liability upon the principal of an authorized agent. Lansing v. Coleman, 58 Barb. 611; Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79.

Day v. Building Ass'n, 96 Va. 484, also sometimes cited is an inconclusive case apparently proceeding upon the same theory as Keefe v. Sholl, supra.

Libel.—In Penn. Iron Works v. Voght Mach. Co. (Ky.), 96 S. W. 551, where an agent in the course of his employment wrote a letter purposing to divert business from the plaintiff, a competitor, to the defendant, and in it made many libelous charges against the plaintiff, the defendant was held, by its acquiescence and its failure to repudiate the libelous terms of the letter, when it had full knowledge of them, to have ratified the publication, so as to be liable for them.

Slander.—In Lindsey v. St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co., 95 Ark. 534, it was held that the defendant railroad corporation was not liable for an alleged slander by a person whose general act was alleged to have been ratified, but with nothing to indicate approval of the particular slander, because under the rule adopted in that state (contrary to the rule prevailing in some others, see Rivers v. Yazoo, etc., Ry. Co., 90 Miss. 196, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 931; Empire Cream Separator Co. v. De Laval Dairy Co., 75 N. J. L. (46 Vroom) 207; Hypes v. Southern Ry. Co., 82 S. C. 315, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 873, 17 Ann. Cas. 620), a corporation cannot be held liable for slander "unless it authorized, approved or ratified the act of the agent in uttering the particular slander."

Usury.—In Nye v. Swan, 49 Minn. 431, where an agent authorized to buy lands with his principal's money had loaned the money without authority, and taken and delivered to his principal a deed of lands absolute in form but really intended as a security for the money loaned, it was held that though the principal, if he accepted the deed, must do so subject to the right to redeem, he did not thereby become responsible for the agent's unknown act of demanding usurious interest in the transaction. Had the agent made the loan with authority, the principal, it was said, would not have been liable for unauthorized and unknown usury. Jordan v. Humphrey, 31 Minn. 495. On this question, see post, Book IV, Chap. V.

¹⁵ See post, § 546.

¹⁶ Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 26 Am. St. R. 249, 13 L. R. A. 219, supra.

mon law, simply because the grounds of policy on which it must be justified seem to us to be hard to find, and probably to have belonged to a different state of society. It is hard to explain why a master is liable to the extent that he is for the negligent acts of one who at the time really is his servant, acting within the general scope of his employment. Probably master and servant are 'fained to be all one person' by a fiction which is an echo of the patria potestas and of the English frank pledge.¹⁷ Possibly the doctrine of ratification is another aspect of the same tradition. The requirement that the act should be done in the name of the ratifying party looks that way.¹⁸ The earliest instances of liability by way of ratification in the English law, so far as we have noticed, were where a man retained property acquired through the wrongful act of another.¹⁹ But in these cases the defendant's assent was treated as relating back to the original act, and at an early date the doctrine of relation was carried so far as to hold that, where a trespass would have been justified if it had been done by the authority by which it purported to have been done, a subsequent ratification might justify it also.²⁰ This decision is qualified in Fitzherbert's Abridgement²¹ and doubted in Brooke's Abridgement;²² but it has been followed or approved so continuously, and in so many later cases, that it would be hard to deny that the common law was as there stated by Chief Justice Gascoigne.²³

"If we assume that an alleged principal by adopting an act which was unlawful when done can make it lawful, it follows that he adopts it at his peril, and is liable if it should turn out that his previous command would not have justified the act. It never has been doubted that a man's subsequent agreement to a trespass done in his name and for his benefit amounts to a command so far as to make him answerable. The ratihabitio mandato comparatur of the Roman lawyers and the ¹⁷ Citing Byington v. Simpson, 134 Mass. 169, 170, 45 Am. Rep. 314; Fitz. Abr. Corone, pl. 428.

¹⁸ Citing New England Dredging Co. v. Rockport Granite Co., 149 Mass. 331, 382; Fuller & Trimwell's Case, 2 Leon. 215, 216; Sext. Dec. 5, 12, De Reg. Jur., Reg. 9; D. 43, 16, 1, § 14 gloss. See also cases next cited.

¹⁹ Citing Y. B. 30 Ed. I, 1, 128 (Rolls Ed.); 38 Lib. Ass. 223, pl. 9; s. c. 38 Ed. III, 18, Engettement de Garde. See Plowd. 8 ad. fin., 27, 31; Bract. fol. 158b, 159a, 171b; 12 Ed. IV, 9, pl. 23.

²⁰ Citing Y. B. 7 Hen. IV. 34, pl. 1.

²¹ Citing Fitz. Abr. Baylye, pl. 4.

²² Citing Bro. Abr. Trespass, pl. 86.

²³ Citing Godbolt, 109, 110, pl. 129; s. c. 2 Leon. 196, pl. 246; Hull v. Pickersgill, 1 Brod. & Bing. 282; Muskett v. Drummond, 10 B. & C. 153, 157; Buron v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167, 188; Secretary of State in Council of India v. Kamachee Boye Sahaba, 13 Moore, P. C. 22, 86; Cheetham v. Mayor of Manchester, L. R. 10 C. P. 249; Wiggins v. United States, 3 Ct. of Cl. 412.

earlier cases²⁴ has been changed to the dogma acqui paratur ever since the days of Lord Coke.²⁵ Doubts have been expressed, which we need not consider, whether this doctrine applied to the case of a bare personal tort.²⁶ If a man assaulted another in the street out of his own head, it would seem rather strong to say that, if he merely called himself my servant, and I afterwards assented, without more, our mere words would make me a party to the assault, although in such cases the Canon law excommunicated the principal if the assault was upon a clerk.²⁷ Perhaps the application of the doctrine would be avoided on the ground that the facts did not show an act done for the defendant's benefit.²⁸ As in other cases it has been on the ground that they did not amount to such a ratification as was necessary.²⁹ But the language generally used by judges and text-writers, and such decisions as we have been able to find, is broad enough to cover a case like the present when the ratification is established."³⁰

b. Principal Against the Other Party.

§ 508. What considerations involved.—Where, however, instead of the ordinary case wherein the third person is endeavoring to hold the principal on the ground of the latter's ratification of the act, the principal takes the initiative and attempts, by means of his own ratification, to build up and enforce affirmative rights against the other party, different considerations apply. Does the doctrine of ratification work both ways? May the principal avail himself of it for his benefit as well as the other party? It will be convenient to discuss this question

²⁴ Citing D. 46, 3, 12, § 14; D. 43, 16, 1, § 14; Y. B. 30 Ed. I, 128.

²⁵ Citing 4 Inst. 317. See Bro. Abr. Trespass, pl. 113; Co. Lit. 207a; Wingate's Maxims, 124; Com. Dig. Trespass, C. 1; Eastern Counties Railway v. Broom, 6 Exch. 314, 326, 327; and cases hereafter cited.

²⁶ Citing Adams v. Freeman, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 117, 118; Anderson and Warberton, JJ., in Bishop v. Montague, Cro. Eliz. 824.

²⁷ Citing Sext. Dec. 5, 11, 23.

²⁸ Citing Wilson v. Barker, 1 Nev. & Man. 409; s. c. 4 B. & Ad. 614 et seq.; Smith v. Lozo, 42 Mich. 6.

²⁹ Citing Tucker v. Jerriis, 75 Me. 184; Hyde v. Cooper, 26 Vt. 552.

³⁰ Citing Perley v. Georgetown, 7 Gray, 464; Bishop v. Montague, Cro.

Eliz. 824; Sanderson v. Baker, 2 Bl. 832; s. c. 3 Wils. 309; Barker v. Braham, 2 Bl. 866, 868; s. c. 3 Wils. 368; Badkin v. Powell, Cowper, 476, 479; Wilson v. Tumman, 6 Man. & G. 236, 242; Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834; Buron v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167, 188; Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 786, 799; Eastern Counties Railway v. Broom, 6 Exch. 314, 326, 327; Roe v. Birkhead, Lancashire & Cheshire Junction Railway, 7 Exch. 36, 41; Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686, 695; Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y. 219, 225, 78 Am. Dec. 137; Exum v. Brister, 35 Miss. 391; Galveston, etc., Ry. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; Murray v. Lovejoy, 2 Cliff, 191, 195; see Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 1, 9, 18 L. Ed. 129; Story on Agency, §§ 455, 456.

under the three heads of, (1) contracts, (2) torts, and (3) other acts creating rights or duties.

§ 509. I. In contract—May principal ratify and enforce unauthorized contract?—Where the contract made by an unauthorized agent involves mutual acts of performance, the other party who, in reliance upon the principal's ratification, has called upon the latter to perform or who has accepted performance from him, must also assume responsibility for the duties of performance which the contract imposes upon himself; and there can be no doubt that the principal who has thus performed or stands ready to perform in pursuance of such a demand, may require the other party to perform on his part.³¹

But where acts are to be done upon but one side only and that the other side, or where the acts first due are those of the other party, or where acts of performance are contemporaneously due,—may the assumed principal who deems the contract advantageous to himself voluntarily come forward, declare his approval, promise or tender performance on his side, as the contract may require and insist upon performance by the other party? If so, within what time and subject to what conditions?

§ 510. — Before the principal has acted, the matter stands in this condition: Here is what was intended to be and what purports to be, not an option or an offer, but a contract between parties. One of these parties—the principal—is not bound by it, or, at least, he may repudiate all liability.³² Is the other party bound? What is the consideration for his promises? Where is the mutuality? May he withdraw? If he is not then bound, may the principal approve the contract and, without any further act or assent on the part of the other, hold the latter to its performance? If the other party, before the principal has acted, discovers the lack of authority and expressly dissents, may he still be held if the principal is willing to ratify?

³¹ See Soames v. Spencer, 1 Dowl. & Ry. 22; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490; Andrews v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 596; 24 American Law Review, 580.

³² How when agent guarantees performance by the principal.—In Weiseger v. Wheeler (1861), 14 Wis. 101, it was held that, where the agent personally guaranteed that the alleged principal would perform the contract, the other party when sued by the principal cannot defend upon the ground of the agent's lack of authority. "The respondents," said Dixon, C. J., "are in no position to take advantage of an original want of power on the part of [the agents] to execute the agreement as agents of the appellants, if such want of power were shown. At the time of its execution [the agents] guaranteed its performance by the appellants as their principals, and upon that guaranty the respondents must be presumed to have acted."

Or, again, suppose that, before the principal has intervened, the other party and the agent have consented to undo what has been done; may the principal nevertheless ratify and enforce the contract?

These questions have recently aroused much interesting discussion³³ though the cases which are directly in point are comparatively few.

It will conduce to convenience to dispose of the question last suggested first.

§ 511. If agent and other party have previously consented to cancel the contract.—Before the principal has intervened to ratify the contract, may the agent and the other party consent to cancel it in such wise as to prevent subsequent ratification? If the contract were an authorized one, of course the agent could not cancel it, but it is as yet unauthorized. The agent here is usually an interested party. If he has made a contract without authority, he ordinarily incurs a personal liability. Suppose then that, having made a contract in good faith which he believed he had authority to make, he discovers that he had no such authority: may he go to the other party, explain the situation, and, with the latter's consent, undo what has been done at least so far as to release the agent? This question seems not to have been adjudicated, but there would seem to be no doubt that such a release could be given.

§ 512. — But may the agent and the other party by their consent release the latter from any future liability to the principal? Mr. Wharton has expressed the view, relying upon certain German authorities, that this may not be done.³⁴ But the English courts seem to hold that it may be. Thus where a former agent without authority had paid a debt for his former principal, but afterwards and before the latter had ratified it went to the latter's creditor and requested him to return the money, which he did, and then sued the principal, it was held that the latter could not by ratifying avail himself of the payment in defense.³⁵ "Prima facie" said Kelly, C. B., "we have here a ratification of the payment by the defendant's plea; but whether the payment was then capable of ratification depends on whether previously it was competent to the plaintiff and Southall [the agent], apart from the defendant, to cancel what had taken place between them. I am of opinion that it was competent to them to undo what they had done. The evidence shows that the plaintiff received the money in satisfaction under the mistaken idea that Southall had authority from the defendant to pay him. This was a mistake in fact, on discovering which he was, I think, entitled to return the money, and apply to his debtor for payment. If he had insisted on keeping it, the defendant might at any moment have repudiated the act of Southall, and Southall would then have been able to recover it from the plaintiff as money received for Southall's use. I am, therefore, of opinion that the plaintiff, who originally accepted this money under an entire misapprehension, was justified in returning it, the position of the parties not having been in the meantime in any way altered, and that the defendant's plea of payment fails."

³³ See, for example, note, 5 Am. St. R. 190; 24 American Law Review, 580; 25 American Law Review, 74; 9 Harvard Law Review 60; 35 American Law Review, 864.

³⁴ Wharton on Principal and Agent, § 77, citing Seuff. Archiv. XIV, pp. 210, 211; Windscheid, Pandektenrecht, § 74.

³⁵ Walter v. James, L. R., 6 Exch. 124.

So in a New York case it was held that a person who had voluntarily procured insurance for his own and another's benefit might, before the latter had ratified the act, cancel or surrender the policy. "So long as the option of the owner of the goods to adopt or reject the policy continues, so long must the absolute control of the agent over the policy remain."³⁶

§ 513. If the other party has attempted to withdraw from the contract.—May the other party, before ratification, withdraw from the contract? If it be a contract, he may break it but he can not withdraw from it. If it be not a contract, but an option or an offer, he may withdraw his offer at any time before its acceptance, at least where it was not under seal or given for a consideration. Where the other party thought it a contract, it is difficult to see how it can be regarded as a mere offer. If, on the other hand, he knew or believed that the agent had no authority to make the contract, and that ratification was therefore necessary, it would not be so difficult.

The discussion of this question, in view of the cases actually decided, is so interwoven with other aspects, that it seems desirable to postpone it for a little.

§ 514. If agent and other party have done nothing to cancel the contract.—Returning now to the other question, where no such act of the agent has intervened, what is the right of the principal to ratify and enforce the contract against the other party? Conceivably the other party in the meantime may have remained passive, or he may, before or after the principal's attempted ratification, have himself

³⁶ Stillwell v. Staples, 19 N. Y. 401.

In Mason v. Caldwell, 10 Ill. 196, 48 Am. Dec. 330, it is said: "If a person professing to act on behalf of another, but without authority, enters into a contract which, for the want of such authority, would render the professed agent personally liable, such contract may be adopted by the principal while it is still in force as between the professed agent and the other party." sought to escape the contract. So far as the adjudicated cases go upon this question, they represent three distinct views which will now be considered.³⁷

§ 515. — The Wisconsin cases.—The earliest cases involving this precise question arose in Wisconsin,³⁸ and that court has denied that ratification alone can in such a case suffice to charge the other party. Referring to the general principle that subsequent ratification

³⁷ This discussion, of course, presupposes that there is evidence of ratification sufficient in form. Thus, where ratification under seal is necessary, the principal could not succeed here if he could not show such a ratification. Neely v. Stevens, 138 Ga. 305.

³⁸ Dodge v. Hopkins, 14 Wis. 630, affirmed in Atlee v. Bartholomew, 69 Wis. 43, 5 Am. St. R. 103. Similar views were also expressed in Clews v. Jamieson, 89 Fed. 63 (but they were overruled in 182 U. S. at p. 483); and Cowan v. Curran, 216 Ill. 598. See also Wilkinson v. Heavenrich, 58 Mich. 574, 55 Am. Rep. 708; Wilkinson v. Harwell, 13 Ala. 660; Atlanta Buggy Co. v. Hess Spring & Axle Co., 124 Ga. 338, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 431.

In Dodge v. Hopkins, supra, a person assuming to act as plaintiff's agent, had, without authority, entered into a contract with defendant, by which defendant agreed to purchase of plaintiff certain real estate. Plaintiff seeking to enforce the contract, brought an action against the defendant to recover certain installments of the purchase price which defendant had refused to pay. Defendant resisted upon the ground that as the contract, owing to the agent's lack of authority, did not bind the plaintiff to sell, defendant was not bound to purchase. Dixon, C. J., said: "It is very clear, in the present condition of the case, that the plaintiff was not bound by the contract and that he was at liberty to repudiate it at any time before it had actually received his sanction. Was the defendant bound? And if he was not, could the plaintiff by his sole act of ratification, make the contract obligatory upon him? We answer both these questions in the negative. The covenants were mutual—those of the defendant for the payment of money being in consideration of that of the plaintiff for the conveyance of the lands. The intention of the parties was that they should be mutually bound—that each should execute the instrument so that the other could set it up as a binding contract against him, at law as well as in equity, from the moment of its execution. In such cases it is well settled both on principle and authority, that if either party neglects or refuses to bind himself, the instrument is void for want of mutuality, and the party who is not bound cannot avail himself of it as obligatory upon the other. Townsend v. Corning, 23 Wend. 435, and Same v. Hubbard, 4 Hill, 351, and cases there cited. * * *

"I am well aware that there are dicta and observations to be found in the books, which, if taken literally, would overthrow the doctrine of the cases to which I have referred. It is said in Lawrence v. Taylor, 5 Hill, 113, that 'such adoptive authority relates back to the time of the transaction, and is deemed in law the same to all purposes as if it had been given before.' And in Newton v. Bronson, 3 Kern. 594, (67 Am. Dec. 87), the court says: 'That a subsequent ratification is equally effectual as an original authority, is well settled.' * * *

is equivalent to a prior authority, the court declares it to be inaccurate as a rule of universal application. "The inaccuracy consists in not properly distinguishing between those cases where the subsequent act of ratification is put forth as the foundation of a right in favor of the party who has ratified, and those where it is made the basis of a demand against him. There is a broad and manifest difference between a case in which a party seeks to avail himself, by subsequent assent, of the unauthorized act of his own agent, in order to enforce a claim against a third person, and the case of a party acquiring an inchoate right against a principal by an unauthorized act of his agent to which validity is afterwards given by the assent or recognition of the principal. The principal in such a case may, by his subsequent assent, bind himself, but, if the contract be executory, he cannot bind the other party. The latter may, if he choose, avail himself of such assent against the principal, which if he does, the contract, by virtue of such mutual ratification, becomes mutually obligatory. There are many cases where the acts of parties, though unavailable for their own benefit, may be used against them."

§ 516. The English cases.—In 1889, the question came before the English court of appeal in Bolton Partners v. Lambert.³⁹ It appeared that the defendant had written to one Scratchley, who was managing director of an incorporated company, an offer to lease certain works belonging to that company. Scratchley replied that he would refer the offer to the directors. Before the directors met there was a meeting of "the work committee" of the directors of which Scratchley was a member and this committee voted to accept the offer. This committee however had no such power. Scratchley then wrote to the defendant saying that the directors had accepted his offer, and that the company's solicitor would prepare the papers. While correspondence over the form of the documents was pending, the defendant wrote withdrawing his offer, though not upon the ground of Scratchley's want of authority. Afterwards the board of directors met and formally

"Lawrence v. Taylor and Newton v. Bronson were both actions in which the adverse party claimed rights through the agency of individuals whose acts had been subsequently ratified. And the authorities cited in support of the proposition laid down in the last case (Weed v. Carpenter, 4 Wend. 219; Episcopal Society v. Episcopal Church, 1 Pick. 372; Corning v. Southland, 3 Hill, 552; Moss v. Rossie Lead Mining Co., 5 Id. 137; Clark v. Van Riemsdyk, 9 Cranch, 153, and Willinks v. Hollingsworth, 6 Wheat. 241, 5 L. Ed. 251), will, when examined, be found to have been cases where the subsequent assent was employed against the persons who had given it and taken the benefit of the contract."

³⁹ Bolton Partners v. Lambert, 41 Ch. Div. 295.

ratified Scratchley's letter of acceptance, and, the defendant refusing to go on, this action for specific performance was instituted. The defense was the lack of mutuality and the withdrawal of the offer before acceptance. Kekewich, J., granted the relief prayed for, saying: "The doctrine of ratification is this, that when a principal on whose behalf a contract has been made, though it may be made in the first instance without his authority, adopts it and ratifies it, then, whether the contract is one which is for his benefit and which he is enforcing, or which is sought to be enforced against him, the ratification is referred to the date of the original contract, and the contract becomes as from its inception as binding on him as if he had been originally a party."

§ 517. — The case went to the court of appeal, where the judgment was affirmed. Several opinions were written, but quotation from one will indicate the view of all.

Lopes, L. J., said: "If there had been no withdrawal of the offer this case would have been simple. The ratification by the plaintiffs would have related back to the time of the acceptance of the defendant's offer by Scratchley, and the plaintiffs would have adopted a contract made on their behalf. It is said that there was no contract which could be ratified, because Scratchley at the time he accepted the defendant's offer had no authority to act for the plaintiffs. Directly Scratchley on behalf, and in the name of the plaintiffs, accepted the defendant's offer, I think there was a contract made by Scratchley assuming to act for the plaintiffs, subject to proof by the plaintiffs that Scratchley had that authority. The plaintiffs subsequently did adopt the contract and thereby recognized the authority of their agent Scratchley. Directly they did so the doctrine of ratification applied and gave the same effect to the contract made by Scratchley as it would have had if Scratchley had been clothed with a precedent authority to make it. If Scratchley had acted under a precedent authority, the withdrawal of the offer by the defendant would have been inoperative, and it is equally inoperative where the plaintiffs have ratified and adopted the contract of the agent. To hold otherwise would be to deprive the doctrine of ratification of its retrospective effect. To use the words of Baron Martin in Brook v. Hook,⁴⁰ the ratification would not be 'dragged back as it were, and made equipollent to a prior command.'"

§ 518. — Bolton Partners v. Lambert has been affirmed in later cases⁴¹ in the same court, though one of the judges who concurred in ⁴⁰ Brook v. Hook, L. R. 6 Exch. 96.

⁴² Ch. D. 160. Same: Bosanquet's

⁴¹ See In re Portuguese Consolidated Copper Mines, Steele's Case,

Case, 45 Ch. D. 16; In re Tiedemann, [1899] 2 Q. B. 66.

it gave an explanation of it not to be reconciled with the opinions in the original case. Its doctrine that there may be ratification notwithstanding a previous attempt at withdrawal by the other party, has, however, been criticised by judges of lower courts,⁴² nevertheless bound by it, by magazine and text writers⁴³ and by Lord Justice Fry in a note added for that purpose to his treatise on Specific Performance.⁴⁴ As stated by the latter, "It seems to follow from it that the intervention of a mere stranger may prevent a person who has made an offer from withdrawing that offer until it be seen whether the person to whom it is made will ratify it or not, and consequently places that person in the difficult position of neither having a contract nor a right to withdraw an offer. An offer made to a principal may be withdrawn: an offer made to a person who professes to be an agent but is not, cannot be withdrawn; so that the person making the offer is worse off in the latter than the former case." "To hold him [the other party] bound with perhaps the market rising," says another writer,⁴⁵ "while the principal is free to ratify or reject, is to place him at an undeserved disadvantage."

The later cases have attached an obviously just limitation that the ratification must take place within a reasonable time, a matter here, as elsewhere depending upon the circumstances of each case.⁴⁶

§ 519. — Several American cases declare a contrary rule.— The rule that the principal can ratify even after the other party has attempted to withdraw is denied in several American cases. In one of the most recent,⁴⁷ one S., acting as agent for complainant, but without written authority, entered into a contract to sell land to defendant. "It needs no citation of authorities to show that this contract was void under the statute of frauds, and did not bind either complainant or defendant, until complainant had ratified the act in some manner which would take it out of the statute." Defendant tendered compliance but complainant insisted upon other terms to which defendant would not assent. After further negotiation, complainant declared that if the matter was not closed by a certain hour he "should call the deal off," to which the defendant replied, "If that is so, all right," and the parties separated. After this, complainant tendered a deed and signed a paper ratifying the act of S. and handed it to him. This document, however, ⁴² See per North, J., in Bosanquet's Case, supra. See also per Chitty, J., in Dibbins v. Dibbins, [1896] 2 Ch. 348.

⁴³ See 5 Law Quarterly Review, 441; 9 Harvard Law Review, 40.

⁴⁴ Appendix, Note A.

⁴⁵ 5 Law Quarterly Review, 441.

⁴⁶ See per Bowen, L. J., in Bosanquet's Case, supra.

⁴⁷ Baldwin v. Schiappacasse, 109 Mich. 170.

was never shown to the defendant, and, said the court, "of course, was not binding upon him."⁴⁸ The complainant then insisted that a sale had taken place and filed this bill to enforce a vendor's lien. The bill was dismissed. Said the court: "Until complainant had placed himself in such a position that defendant could enforce the contract against him, he was not in position to enforce it against the defendant. Until that was done, there was in fact no contract binding upon either party, and the defendant was at liberty to withdraw."⁴⁹ After such withdrawal, the complainant could not bind the defendant by any act of ratification. The paper executed by S. and the defendant was not a continuing offer to purchase, which might at any time be accepted by the complainant. It purported to express the terms of an agreement of sale, void because there was no written authority to make it, and incapable of being ratified after the refusal of the defendant to be bound by it."

§ 520. — In a case before the appellate court in Illinois⁵⁰ it appeared that the plaintiff had authorized one E., a broker, to buy oats, ⁴⁸ Citing Dickinson v. Wright, 56 Mich. 42.

⁴⁹ Citing Pom. Cont. § 166; Duvall v. Myers, 2 Md. Ch. 405; Bodine v. Glading, 21 Pa. 50, 59 Am. Dec. 749.

There is discussion of the question, but no decision, in Aetna Ins. Co. v. Stambaugh-Thompson Co., 76 Ohio St. 138, 118 Am. St. R. 834; and in Atlanta Buggy Co. v. Hess Spring & Axle Co., 124 Ga. 338, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 431, with full note in latter report.

There is quite elaborate discussion in Kline Bros. v. Royal Ins. Co., 192 Fed. 378, with a disapproval of Bolton Partners v. Lambert.

It is held, in Owen v. National Hatchet Co., 147 Iowa, 393, that after ratification by the principal the other party can not withdraw, though it is said that had he done so before "there would be fair room for the contention that no agreement had ever been perfected." No cases are cited. Breithaupt v. Thurmond, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 216, is to same effect.

In Cowan v. Curran, 217 Ill. 598, at pp. 610, 611; Dodge v. Hopkins, 14 Wis. 630, supra. and Atlee v. Bartholomew, 69 Wis. 43, 5 Am. St. R. 103, supra. are cited and followed with apparent approval. There is no reference in the case to the cases taking the contrary view. See also Brooks v. Cook, 141 Ala. 499.

Where the other party has once repudiated the contract on the ground of the lack of authority, he cannot afterwards take advantage of an alleged ratification by the principal without consenting to be also bound by it himself. Haldeman v. Chambers, 19 Tex. 1, 52.

⁵⁰ Gregg v. Wooliscroft, 52 Ill. App. 214.

Where an agent without authority sells lands to a purchaser who enters and makes improvements, and the principal on learning of the sale disapproves of it, whereupon the buyer abandons the land, the principal cannot afterward ratify and enforce the contract. Wilkinson v. Harwell, 13 Ala. 660.

not stating the grade and thereby, as the court held, authorizing only the purchase of the usual grade, No. 2. The broker contracted with defendant for the sale of "cool and sweet" oats, an inferior grade. The broker advised the plaintiff that he had bought of defendant "mixed oats" to arrive "cool and sweet," at a certain price. There was no such grade of oats as "mixed oats" and therefore, the court held, grade No. 2 must be inferred. Plaintiff then wrote directly to defendant confirming the purchase of "grade 2, mixed oats." Defendant immediately replied that he had not offered to sell oats of grade No. 2, and withdrew his offer of the "cool and sweet" oats. Plaintiff then wrote confirming the purchase of the oats as "cool and sweet," but defendant refused to recognize a contract or to deliver the oats. The action was for damages, and in the circuit court the plaintiff recovered, but this judgment was reversed on the defendant's appeal. "Before the appellee wrote the letter [of confirmation] he had received notice from E. and also from the appellant that the appellant had revoked his offer and cancelled any alleged sale. If the appellant offered to sell cool and sweet oats and E. accepted the offer for the appellee the acceptance was unauthorized, and not binding on the appellee until he adopted it, and in such case the appellant might lawfully withdraw the offer at any time before the appellee had accepted."

§ 521. — Other American cases also declare a rule contrary to that of the English cases although the facts are distinguishable. The most carefully considered of these is, perhaps, the Pennsylvania case of *McClintock v. South Penn Oil Co.*⁵¹ Here the plaintiff's husband, as her agent but without written authority, had entered into a contract to sell to defendant certain interests in land belonging to the plaintiff. Later written ratification was supplied, after which the defendant sought to repudiate. Said the court per Mitchell, J.: "If the agent had been properly authorized, the contract would have bound both parties in the first instance, and the settled rule is that ratification is equivalent in every way to plenary prior authority. The objection of want of mutuality is not good in many cases of dealing with an agent, for if he exceeds his authority, actual and apparent, his principal will not be bound, yet may ratify, and then the other party will be bound from the inception of the agreement. The aggregatio mentium of the parties need not commence simultaneously. It must co-exist; but there must be a period when the question of contract or no contract rests on the will of one party to accept or reject a proposition made, and this interval may be long or short. The offer, of course, may be revoked or withdrawn at any time prior to acceptance, but after acceptance it is too late. The contract is complete."

⁵¹ 146 Pa. 144, 28 Am. St. R. 785.

§ 522. — Rules compared—The weight of authority.—If a comparative statement of these various rules were attempted, it might be said that the Wisconsin cases deny the right of the principal to ratify in the absence of something showing the other party's present adherence to the contract; that the English courts admit a ratification within a reasonable time even though the other party has before the ratification attempted to withdraw; while the majority of American courts permit a ratification, within a reasonable time, if the other party has not previously signified his intention to withdraw, though not afterward.

Neither of these rules is entirely satisfactory. The Wisconsin rule seems to the writer fundamentally sound, though it perhaps gives too little effect to the growing doctrine of ratification. The English rule is certainly questionable for the reason already stated, among others, that it puts a person who makes an offer to an agent in a worse position than though he had made it directly to the principal. The other American rule ignores the consideration that the other party may be refraining from a withdrawal when he would be glad to withdraw, only because he supposes he is bound by a valid contract. Perhaps a sufficient answer to the last objection is that if the other party had used due care in the first instance to ascertain the agent's authority, he would not have made the contract; and that in most cases if he has been deceived by the agent as to the existence of his authority he has a remedy against the agent for any loss thereby sustained.

The latter American rule, however, seems open to fewest objections and is likely to prevail. It may, perhaps, be stated thus: Where one assuming to be agent but without authority has negotiated a contract for his alleged principal, the latter may ratify the act and enforce the contract against the other party where he so ratifies within a reasonable time and before the other party has signified his withdrawal from the negotiation, but not afterward.

The English courts would of course sustain the rule on its positive side, though they would carry it much further, and would deny the limitations.

The German Civil Code provides that "Before ratification of the contract the other party is entitled to revoke it, unless he knew of the absence of authority at the time when the contract was entered into." ⁵² ⁵² Section 178. The translation is that of Dr. Wang.

§ 523. — Applications of the rule.—Under the application of this rule, the principal may ratify and enforce contracts for the sale or purchase or leasing of real or personal property,⁵³ the furnishing of material,⁵⁴ the performance of labor, and the like.

§ 524. — Ratification by insured of insurance effected for his benefit.—Within the operation of the general rule also would come the case of the ratification by the insured after a loss of insurance effected for his benefit. That this might be done had been held by the English courts long before the difficult questions involved in Bolton Partners v. Lambert had presented themselves,⁵⁵ and this holding had been followed in the United States.⁵⁶ It is difficult to imagine a case wherein the fast and loose character of the principal's obligation, or his range of speculation whether to ratify or not, would seem to be more clearly illustrated. If no loss occurs he may ignore the contract and escape liability for the premium; if a loss happens, he may ratify and enforce the contract. As against the agent he may ratify even after payment.⁵⁷

The case is exceptional also in the fact that ratification after loss enables the principal to do by ratification what he could not then himself do directly, namely, insure lost property; and a strong effort was made some years ago in the English courts to induce a reconsideration of the cases holding that it may be done, but it was declared that these cases were much too strong and of too long standing to be overruled.⁵⁸

⁵³ McClintock v. South Penn Oil Co., 146 Pa. 144, 28 Am. St. R. 785; Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. Ed. 1183; Soames v. Spencer, 1 Dowl. & R. 32; Hammond v. Hannin, 21 Mich. 374, 4 Am. Rep. 490; Citizens' Gas Co. v. Wakefield, 161 Mass. 432, 3 L. R. A. 457.

⁵⁴ New England Monument Co. v. Johnson, 144 Pa. 61.

⁵⁵ Hagedorn v. Oliverson, 2 M. & S. 485; Routh v. Thompson, 13 East 274; Lucena v. Craufurd, 1 Taunt. 325; Williams v. North China Ins. Co., 1 C. P. Div. 757. See also Pickles v. Western Assur. Co., 40 Nov. Scotia 327.

In an article in 19 Green Bag 93, Mr. Frederick T. Case contends that the rule should be confined to the cases in which the person who effected the insurance was a part owner or other person with an interest in the property, so that a valid contract was closed before the loss, leaving open only the question to whom the loss is to be paid. But see 20 Harvard Law Review, 504.

⁵⁶ Finney v. Fairhaven Insurance Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 192, 38 Am. Dec. 397; Oliver v. Mutual Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Curtis, 277; Insurance Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509; Snow v. Carr, 61 Ala. 363, 32 Am. Rep. 3; Miltenberger v. Beacom, 9 Pa. St. 198; Watkins v. Durand, 1 Port. (Ala.) 251; Boutwell v. Globe, etc., Ins. Co., 193 N. Y. 323, s. c. 87 N. E. 1115.

⁵⁷ Snow v. Carr, supra; Miltenberger v. Beacom, supra.

⁵⁸ Williams v. North China Ins. Co., supra.

It is to be observed, however, that the case is not ordinarily so hard upon the insurance company as might, at first blush, appear to be the fact. In many of the cases, the premium had been already paid by the agent or he had made himself liable for it. In any case moreover in which the agent's liability had not been excluded, he would be liable for a breach of his implied warranty of authority if the principal did not ratify. What the company would lose in such a case would be the expected liability of the principal for the premiums.

In a late case in the United States circuit court, it was held that where the premium had not been paid and the agent was not liable for it, there could be no ratification after loss, although the principal then tendered the premium before the company repudiated the policy.⁵⁹

§ 525. — Limitations.—It has been said, however, that the principal's right of ratification in these cases is, where the assumed agent was a mere volunteer, subject to the latter's power to surrender and cancel the policy before ratification occurs.⁶⁰

And where it was expressly stipulated that a life insurance policy should not take effect until the advance premium thereon should be paid in the life time of the person whose life was insured, it was held that a payment of the premium in his life time by an unauthorized person could not be ratified by the administrator and beneficiary after his death.⁶¹

§ 526. — Defence based on ratification.—The principal may, of course, base a defence upon his own ratification as well as a cause of action. Thus where an insurance company, whose agent had inserted an unauthorized clause in a policy, had formally ratified the act and undertaken to perform accordingly, it was held that the other party could not afterwards repudiate the transaction on the ground that no contract had really been entered into and recover back the money he had paid upon the policy.⁶²

§ 527. II. In tort.—The application of the rule in tort cases must necessarily be limited because the cases wherein the principal will seek to enforce rights based upon his ratification of his agent's torts will be very rare. Injuries to rights acquired by ratification may often occur and give rise to action. Thus it has been held that where property acquired for the principal through the unauthorized act of his agent

⁵⁹ Kline Bros. v. Royal Ins. Co., 192 Fed. 378, reversed, on other points, 198 Fed. 468.

⁶⁰ Stillwell v. Staples, 19 N. Y. 401.

⁶¹ Whiting v. Massachusetts Mut.

L. Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 240, 37 Am. Rep. 317.

⁶² Andrews v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 596. See also Cook v. Tullis, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 332, 21 L. Ed. 933.

has been converted, the principal may ratify the act and sue for the conversion.⁶³ The bringing of the action is in itself, it was held, a sufficient ratification.

§ 528. III. Other acts creating rights or duties.—In addition to the acts resulting strictly in contract or constituting torts, there is a large class of acts upon which rights may be founded or duties imposed and to which the doctrine of ratification may be applicable. Examples may be suggested in such acts as assignments of causes of action, demands, entries, notices, and the like; and in a number of instances difficult questions will be found presented. The case of a notice to quit given by a person acting as agent but without authority, may be used as illustration. What is the tenant to do? If he vacates and the notice is not ratified, he will still be liable for the rent. If he remains and the notice may be ratified, he is remaining at his peril. Judge Story in his work on Agency⁶⁴ undertook to state a rule to govern these cases, saying that “where an act is beneficial to the principal and does not create an immediate right to have some other act or duty performed by the third person, but amounts simply to the assertion of a right on the part of the principal,” the rule giving ratification its retroactive effect is applicable; but where the act done by the unauthorized person “would, if authorized create a right to have some act or duty performed by a third person, so as to subject him to damages or losses for the non-performance of that act or duty, or would defeat a right or an estate already vested in the latter, there the subsequent ratification or adoption of the unauthorized act by the principal will not give validity to it so as to bind such third person to the consequences.” This rule has been criticised⁶⁵ and can not be regarded as entirely accurate, but it serves to illustrate some of the ideas which must determine the matter. A number of cases will throw further light upon it.

§ 529. — Actions—Ratification of unauthorized bringing.—The unauthorized bringing of an action may, it is held, be ratified by the person in whose name and on whose account it was brought so as to sustain the action from the beginning.⁶⁶

⁶³ Warder, etc., Co. v. Cuthbert, 99 Iowa, 681. See also Smith v. Savin, 69 Hun (N. Y.), 311, (aff'd 141 N. Y. 315).

⁶⁴ Story on Agency, §§ 246-247.

⁶⁵ Farmers' Loan & Tr. Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 83 Fed. 870; Wright on Principal and Agent, p. 75.

⁶⁶ Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686; Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526. But see Frye v. Calhoun, 14 Ill. 132.

Same rule applied to filing claims. Stearns v. Klug, 21 Victoria L. R. 164.

§ 530. ——— Assignment of cause of action.—So it has been held that the unauthorized assignment of a cause of action may be ratified after the commencement of the action so as to sustain it;⁶⁷ but other courts have denied that the defendant can, by ratification, be thus deprived of his defense that the plaintiff had not, when he sued, a complete cause of action,⁶⁸ and the weight of authority seems to be with them.

§ 531. ——— Adding parties to existing actions.—So it has been held that the doctrine of ratification can not be so applied as to authorize one to be made a party to a suit by amendment, when the ratification took place after the suit was instituted.⁶⁹

§ 532. ——— Attachment affidavit and bond.—In reliance upon the rule suggested by Judge Story, it has been held that authority for the making of the affidavit and bond in attachment must be perfect at the time the action is begun, and consequently an unauthorized making could not be made good by subsequent ratification;⁷⁰ but the contrary has also been held or assumed in several cases.⁷¹

§ 533. ——— Declaration of maturity to accelerate action.—So, where a bond and mortgage provided that, in case of certain defaults, the whole amount unpaid might be declared to be immediately due, it was held that such a declaration made without authority might, after suit brought in reliance upon it, be ratified with retroactive effect;⁷² but it may be difficult to reconcile this conclusion with certain of those referred to in the preceding section.

⁶⁷ Ancona v. Marks, supra; Persons v. McKibben, 5 Ind. 261, 61 Am. Dec. 85; Marr v. Plummer, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 73.

⁶⁸ Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 57 Cal. 12; Read v. Buffum, 79 Cal. 77, 12 Am. St. R. 131; Dingley v. McDonald, 124 Cal. 682; Graham v. Williams, 114 Ga. 716.

See also Fiske v. Holmes, 41 Me. 441; Powell v. Henry, 96 Ala. 412.

⁶⁹ Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271, 289. In this case Somerville, J., says: "It [the doctrine of ratification] cannot be applied so as to authorize one to be made a party defendant to a suit, by amendment, when the act creating his liability was done after the suit was instituted. All pleas setting up defenses to an action, have reference to the time when an action was commenced, excepting pleas to the further maintenance of the action, and pleas puis darrein continuance. If a defendant be not liable on the date when the suit is commenced, he can not be made liable at all in that action by any subsequent act of adoption or ratification. To create such retrospective liability, with its attendant costs and consequences, would be to pervert the doctrine of relation to an unjust and improper end."

⁷⁰ Grove v. Harvey, 12 Rob. (La.) 221.

⁷¹ Bank v. Conrey, 28 Miss. 667; Mandel v. Peet, 18 Ark. 236; Hutchinson v. Smith, 86 Mich. 145; Palmer v. Seligman, 77 Mich. 305.

⁷² Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co. (C. C.) 83 Fed. Rep. 870.

§ 534. ——— Demand of payment, delivery, etc.—On the other hand, a demand of payment, delivery of goods, and the like, must, it is held, in order to put the other party in default so as to sustain an action against him, be made by a person who has then authority to make the demand so that it may safely be complied with, and such a demand made by an unauthorized person will not sustain an action. A ratification of it by adopting it and basing an action upon it, is not enough.⁷³

§ 535. ——— Notice of abandonment.—So it was held that notice of abandonment, under a marine policy, could be made only by some one then authorized so that it might safely be relied upon, and it was said that a subsequent ratification would not avail.⁷⁴

§ 536. ——— Notice of dishonor.—Notice of dishonor of negotiable paper, also, must, it is held, be given by an authorized person; and the subsequent adoption of a notice given by an unauthorized person is not sufficient.⁷⁵

§ 537. ——— Notice to quit.—The requirement of present authority is applied also in the case of a notice to quit, and a subsequent assent on the part of a landlord will not, it is held, establish by relation an unauthorized notice to quit given by another as his agent. The tenant must act upon the notice at the time it is given, and the notice must, therefore, at that time, be such as he can act upon with security; otherwise the tenant would be subjected to the injustice of being left in doubt as to his action until the ratification or disavowal of the principal.⁷⁶

§ 538. ——— Options.—Again where an option is given to be exercised within a particular period, the other party is entitled to know absolutely within that period whether it is to be accepted, and a notice of acceptance given within the time fixed but by a person who has no

⁷³ Solomons v. Dawes, 1 Esp. 83; Coore v. Callaway, 1 Esp. 115; Coles v. Bell, 1 Camp. 478, note. See also Freeman v. Boynton, 7 Mass. 483.

In Sequin v. Peterson, 45 Vt. 255, 12 Am. Rep. 194, a demand by the wife for the return of money spent by her boy for pipes and tobacco was held to sustain a subsequent action by the father, though the court attached emphasis to the peculiar relation of the mother and to the fact that defendant had recognized her authority by returning a part.

⁷⁴ Per Crompton, J., in Jardine v. Leathley, 3 B. & S. 700.

⁷⁵ East v. Smith, 16 L. J. Q. B. 292; Brower v. Wooten, 4 N. Car. T. R. 70, 7 Am. Dec. 692.

⁷⁶ Pickard v. Perley, 45 N. H. 188, 86 Am. Dec. 153; Brahn v. Jersey City Forge Co., 38 N. J. L. 74; McCroskey v. Hamilton, 108 Ga. 640, 75 Am. St. R. 79; Right v. Cuttrel, 5 East, 491; Doe v. Walters, 10 B. & C. 625; Doe v. Goldwin, 2 Q. B. 143.

Contra, Roe v. Pierce, 2 Camp. 96; Goodtitle v. Woodward, 2 B. & Ald. 689.

authority cannot, it is held, be made good by ratification after the time has expired.⁷⁷

§ 539. ——— Stoppage in transit.—And so it has been decided that a notice of stoppage in transit given by a person without authority during the transit, cannot, after the transit is ended, be made good by ratification.⁷⁸

4. As Between Agent and the Other Party.

§ 540. In general.—It is ordinarily neither the purpose nor the function of the agent to create binding relations of any sort between himself and the third persons with whom he deals. On the contrary, it is usually his intention and his duty to create relations only between his principal and such third persons. There are, however, three classes of cases in which relations between the agent and the other party may arise. One is where, though fully authorized, the agent conceals the fact of his agency and deals as the ostensible principal. Here, of course, no question of ratification can arise because there is no lack of authority: there is merely a failure to disclose it. In these cases, as will be seen, the agent binds himself to the other party though the latter has his option of holding the undisclosed principal when discovered.⁷⁹

A second class of cases, somewhat like the first, is that in which an agent, though fully authorized and disclosing his principal, has yet seen fit to pledge his personal responsibility. Here, often it is true, as will be seen,⁸⁰ that the other party may, at his option, hold either the principal or the agent; sometimes the agent only.

The other class of cases is that wherein one has acted as agent without authority. He may do this in two forms: He may intend to act as agent but conceal that intention; or he may intend to act as agent and openly avow that fact and act and contract as agent. In the first form, as has been seen, there is much doubt whether the doctrine of ratification has any application.⁸¹ In the second case, the doctrine has full sway. Assuming that there may be ratification by the assumed principal, the question is, what is its effect as between the agent and the other party?

§ 541. ——— It is the general rule, as will be more fully seen hereafter, that when one assumes to act as agent of another but fails to ⁷⁷ Holland v. King, 6 C. B. 727; Dibbins v. Dibbins, [1896] 2 Ch. 348 (distinguishing Bolton Partners v. Lambert).

⁷⁸ Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 786.

⁷⁹ See post, Book IV, Chap. III.

⁸⁰ See post, Book IV, Chap. III.

⁸¹ See ante, § 387.

bind that other as assumed on account of a lack of authority, he will himself become personally liable to the party who relied upon his pretended authority for all losses and damages which he may sustain by reason of such failure.⁸² But now the act, ex hypothesi, is ratified, and the ordinary effect of such a ratification is, as has been seen, to go back to the beginning and cure all defects which flowed from the original absence of authority. It establishes authorized relations between the principal and the agent. It puts the relations between the principal and the other party, in the main, upon the same basis as though authority had originally been given. In the main, also, it does the same with the relations between the agent and the other party, though a distinction is to be observed between cases of contract and those of tort.

§ 542. Ratification releases agent on contract.—Where the contract has been made in the name and on behalf of the alleged principal, and the latter, with full knowledge of the facts, has ratified it, the contract then becomes in fact, so far as the rights of the other party are concerned, what at first it only assumed to be,—the contract of the principal. The other party has then what he contracted for,—the liability and responsibility of the principal; and he can obviously suffer no injury from the fact that the agent's act was originally unauthorized. The agent, therefore, drops out of sight. His identity is thereafter merged in that of the principal and he cannot personally call upon the other party for performance, nor can performance be demanded of him. He cannot sue in his own right, nor can he be rendered personally liable upon the ground of the failure of an assumed authority.⁸³

The fact that the principal subsequently fails to perform the contract on his part does not revive the liability of the agent.⁸⁴

⁸² See post, Book IV, Chap. III.

⁸³ See also East India Co. v. Hensley, 1 Esp. 112; Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114; Bowen v. Morris, 2 Taunt. 374; Hopkins v. Everly, 150 Pa. 117; Berger's Appeal, 96 Pa. 443; Lingenfelder v. Leschen, 134 Mo. 55; Sheffield v. Ladue, 16 Minn. 388, 10 Am. Rep. 145; Spittle v. Lavender, 2 Erod. & B. 452; Brong v. Spence, 56 Neb. 638.

In Billingsley v. Benfield, 87 Ark. 128, it was held that where an agent, without authority, had taken, from the maker of a note due his prinicipal, new notes in satisfaction of the old, and had falsely represented that he himself was the owner of the note being surrendered, subsequent ratification of the transaction by the principal made the transaction valid, and without injury to the third person so that this third person cannot in a suit upon the extension notes brought later by the man formerly agent avail himself of the agent's lack of authority or of his misrepresentations as a defense.

⁸⁴ Lingenfelder v. Leschen, supra.

If ratification by an undisclosed principal were permitted, different considerations would apply, since the other party could not have a new party to the contract forced upon him against his will.

§ 543. ——— Limitations — Ratification after suit brought — Change in conditions.—The rule, however, releasing the agent, "would," it is said, "not hold good, of course, in cases in which such suit for damages [against the agent] had been brought before ratification, nor in any case in which injury had resulted to plaintiff from defendant's act before ratification, or in which the effect of making the ratification thus relate back would be to put the plaintiff in a worse position than he would otherwise have been in, in consequence of such unauthorized act of defendant."⁸⁵ In such cases the agent would doubtless remain liable for the loss so sustained notwithstanding ratification.

§ 544. ——— Failure of the ratification.—So if, for any reason, the ratification fails, as where it is made in ignorance of material facts, there would seem to be no reason why the rights of the other party, who has done no more to release the agent than to attempt in good faith to realize what the agent had assumed to assure to him, should not thereupon be revived as against the agent.

§ 545. Ratification releases agent on justifiable trespass.—So where the agent has done an act without authority,—and for that reason a trespass,—but an act which might have been justified by the principal or one acting by his authority, the subsequent ratification by the principal will, in general, afford the agent the same protection as though it had been originally authorized.⁸⁶

§ 546. Otherwise in tort.—But where the act was one which the principal could not lawfully do or authorize, the case is different. Here while, by ratifying the tort committed by his agent the principal becomes liable therefor, this is an additional liability and not a substituted one. The agent still remains liable to third persons and satisfaction may be demanded either of the principal or of the agent or of both. It is no defence to one who is sued for committing a trespass to reply that he acted as the agent of another.⁸⁷

⁸⁵ Sheffield v. Ladue, 16 Minn. 338, 10 Am. Rep. 145.

Where there has really been ratification but the other party is misled by the principal into suing the agent, it is said that the agent cannot be held for the costs of that suit; but if the ratification takes place after suit began against the agent, the latter would be responsible for the costs. Sheffield v. Ladue, supra.

⁸⁶ Anonymous, 2 Leond. 196, pl. 246, s. c. Godbolt, 109, pl. 129; Hull v. Pickersgill, 1 Brod. & B. 282.

⁸⁷ Stephens v. Elwall, 4 M. & S. 259; Perminter v. Kelly, 18 Ala. 716, 54 Am. Dec. 177; Josselyn v. McAllister, 22 Mich. 300; Wright v.

In the case of a public agent, however, the rule is different. As stated in a leading English case, "If the Crown ratifies an act, the character of the act becomes altered, for the ratification does not give the party injured the double option of bringing his action against the agent who committed the trespass or the principal who ratified it, but a remedy against the Crown only (such as it is), and actually exempts from all liability the person who commits the trespass."⁸⁸

Eaton, 7 Wis. 595; Thorp v. Burling, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Richardson v. Kimball, 28 Me. 463; Burnap v. March, 13 Ill. 535; Judd v. Walker, 114 Mo. App. 128.

⁸⁸ Buron v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167. See also Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 13 Moore, P. C. 22; Cheetham v. Manchester, L. R. 10 C. P. 249; Wiggins v. United States, 3 Ct. Cl. 412.

CHAPTER VIII

OF THE TERMINATION OF THE RELATION

§ 547. Purpose of this chapter.

548. Variety of methods.

549. Classification adopted.

I. BY ACT OF THE PARTIES.

1. By Force of Their Original Agreement.

550, 551. a. By efflux of time.

552-554. b. By accomplishment of object.

555. Where object contemplated involved a series of acts.

556. Authority does not necessarily continue until object accomplished.

557. c. Termination in pursuance of a term in the contract.

2. By Their Subsequent Acts.

558. What here included.

A. Termination by Mutual Consent.

559. Authority so terminable.

B. Revocation by the Principal.

560. Rules different in public and in private agency.

1. Private Agency.

a. Power of Revocation.

561, 562. In general.

563. General rule—Authority revocable at any time.

564. — If not already executed.

565. Rule applies though authority called "exclusive" or "irrevocable."

566. Rule applies though principal may have agreed that authority should continue for a definite period.

567. Or though agent may have performed some service or incurred some expense.

568. Distinction between power to revoke and right to revoke—Between authority and contract of employment.

569. Exceptions—Authority not revocable.

570. 1. Authority "coupled with an interest."

571. — Variety of forms.

572. — American use of term.

573. — English use of term.

574. — Difference in results.

575. — Power irrevocable by death irrevocable by act of principal.

576. 2. Power given as security and therefore "coupled with an interest."

577. — Power forming part of a contract.

578. — Power given for a valuable consideration.

579, 580. 3. Authority "coupled with an obligation."

581. "Interest" of third person.

582. Provisions for agency in contracts with third persons.

583. "Interest" and authority from same source.

584. Express language as to revocability.

585. Illustrations—Sufficient interest—Powers given for security.

586. — What interest not sufficient—Instances.

587. — Bare powers.

588. New nomenclature needed.

589. — What may be the subject matter of power given as security.

590. — Necessary characteristics of such a power.

- 591. — Against whom power given as security enforceable.
- 592. Contracts of employment—When right to terminate exists — Employments at will.
- 593. — Employment on condition—"Satisfaction"—"Good cause."
- 594. — Termination for cause specified.
- 595. — Implied conditions.
- 596. Contract for definite time cannot be terminated without liability except for legal cause.
- 597. What amounts to contract for definite time.
- 598, 599. — Unilateral stipulations.
- 600. — Contrary views.
- 601. — Mutuality under statute of frauds.
- 602. Contract for a definite time implied from circumstances.
- 603. — Implications from yearly or periodical salary or accountings.
- 604. Stipulation for "permanent" employment.
- 605. Continuing under prior contract—Holding over.
- 606. Agency terminable for agent's incompetence.
- 607. Agency terminable for agent's disobedience, dishonesty, or other misconduct.
- 608. Agency terminable for agent's disloyalty.
- 609, 610. — Illustrations.
- 611. — Limitations — Waiver—Condonation.
- 612. Even though employed for definite time, agent may be discharged subject to liability for damages.

b. Manner of Revocation.

- 613. How authority may be revoked.
- 614. By sealed instrument.
- 615. Express revocation not required.

- 616. Revocation may be implied.
- 617. — Reducing rank, changing duties, etc.
- 618. — Acts not working a revocation.
- 619. — By disposing of subject matter.
- 620. — By dissolution of partnership or corporation.
- 621. — By severance of a joint interest.
- 622. — Subagent's authority terminated by termination of principal's authority.

c. Notice of Revocation.

- 623. Notice usually necessary.
- 624. 1. To the agent—When notice must be given to him.
- 625. — When notice not necessary.
- 626. — Constructive notice.
- 627. 2. To subagents—When notice must be given.
- 628. 3. To third persons—Where authority was general.
- 629-631. — Where authority was special.
- 632, 633. — Theory of necessity of notice.
- 634, 635. Notice how given—What sufficient.
- 636. When power of attorney recorded, revocation should be recorded.
- 637. Notice should be unequivocal.
- 638. How sufficiency determined.
- 639. Burden of proof as to notice.
- 2. Public Agency.
- 640. Statutory authority not revocable at will of principal.

C. Renunciation by Agent.

- 641. General rule—Agent may renounce at any time.
- 642. Enforcement of contract—Specific performance—Injunction to prevent breach.
- 643. — Injunction when services unique and damages not adequate.
- 644. — Mutuality.
- 645. Renunciation by mutual consent.

- 646. Abandonment may be treated as renunciation.
- 647. Agent may lawfully renounce if required to do illegal acts.
- 648. Agent's abandonment may be justified by principal's misconduct.
- 649. Notice of renunciation.

II. BY OPERATION OF LAW.

- 650. In general.

1. By Death of One of the Parties.

a. By Death of the principal.

- 651. In general.
- 652. General rule—Death of principal terminates agency.
- 653. — Even though not terminable by principal's act in his life time.
- 654. Consideration of this rule.
- 655. Authority not revocable by death when coupled with an interest.
- 656. — What constitutes such an interest.
- 657. — What meant by interest—Difficulty in applying rule.
- 658. — The real reason—That the agent may act in his own name.
- 659-661. What interest sufficient—Instances.
- 662, 663. What interest not sufficient—Instances.
- 664, 665. How when death unknown.
- 666, 667. — Instances.
- 668. Effect of principal's death on contract of employment.
- 669. Death of partner or joint owner dissolves agency.
- 670. Death of principal dissolves authority of substitute.

b. By Death of the Agent.

- 671. General rule—Death of agent terminates agency.
- 672. — Not when coupled with an interest.

- 673. When death of one of two agents terminates agency.
- 674. Dissolution of artificial person which was the agent.
- 675. Effect of agent's death on authority of substitute.

2. By Insanity of One of the Parties.

a. By Insanity of the Principal.

- 676. In general.
- 677. General rule.
- 678. — Ignorance of insanity.
- 679. When authority coupled with an interest.
- 680. What evidence of insanity required.

b. By Insanity of the Agent.

- 681. In general.
- 682. General rule — Terminates agency unless coupled with interest.
- 683. How when insanity unknown.
- 684. Insanity of one of two or more agents.
- 685. Effect on subagents.

3. By Bankruptcy of One of the Parties.

- 686. In general—Effect of bankruptcy.

a. Bankruptcy of Principal.

- 687. General rule—Bankruptcy of principal terminates agent's authority.
- 688. Mere insolvency not enough.
- 689. Authority not terminated when coupled with interest.
- 690. How when bankruptcy unknown.

b. Bankruptcy of the Agent.

- 691. General rule.

4. By Marriage.

- 692. a. Marriage of the principal.
- 693. b. Marriage of the agent.

5. By War.

694-696. In general—War between countries of principal and of agent terminates commercial agency.

6. By Destruction of Subject Matter.

697. Destruction of subject matter usually terminates agency.

7. By Termination of Principal's Interest in Subject Matter.

698. Usually terminates authority.

8. By Termination of Principal's Authority.

699. Principal's removal from office removes subordinates.

9. By Change in Law.

700. Change in law rendering prosecution of agency unlawful.

10. Notice of the Termination.

701-703. Notice not generally necessary when authority terminated by operation of law.

§ 547. Purpose of chapter.—Having heretofore considered in what manner and under what conditions the relation of principal and agent may be created, it now remains to be seen in what manner and under what conditions that relation may be terminated, and also to ascertain what results may follow from such termination.

§ 548. Variety of methods.—The termination of the authority may be effected by a variety of methods. Thus the agency may have been created to endure only for a limited period, and at the expiration of that period would come to a close by the mere efflux of time; or it may have been called into being for the express purpose of performing a single act or a series of acts, and these being performed the agency would be terminated by the accomplishment of that for which it was created. Again, under certain circumstances, the agency may be concluded by the act of the parties, as where the principal revokes or the agent renounces it. So subsequent events or changes in the condition or relation of the parties may render the continuance of the agency inconsistent or impossible, and it will be terminated by what is often termed the operation of law.

§ 549. Classification adopted.—For convenience of treatment the various methods of termination may be distributed under two main heads: I. By act of the parties. II. By operation of law. Termination by act of the parties may be by force either of, 1. Their original agreement, or 2. Their subsequent acts. Termination by original agreement arises when the parties at the time expressly or impliedly put a limitation upon its continuance, and it may be either by a. Expiration of time, b. Accomplishment of object, or c. Stipulation in the contract. Termination by the subsequent act of the parties may be either by a. Mutual consent, b. Revocation by the principal, or

c. Renunciation by the agent. Termination by "operation of law" occurs where some event happens, or some change occurs, which renders the further continuation of the relation impossible or impracticable, such as death, bankruptcy, marriage, war, and the like. Each of these methods will be separately considered.

I.

BY ACT OF THE PARTIES.

1. By Force of Their Original Agreement.

§ 550. a. By efflux of time.—Where the agency was originally created to endure during a given period or until the happening of a certain event, the expiration of that period and the happening of that event would respectively operate to terminate the agency.¹

Where the language used by the parties is express as to the length of time the agency is to continue, there can of course be no doubt as to its duration; but this result may also be reached where the period is not expressly fixed but must be determined by the facts and circumstances of the case.

Thus where a resident of Australia who was possessed of estates in England, executed a written power of attorney to a firm of English solicitors, in which he recited, "Whereas I am about to return to South Australia and am desirous of appointing attorneys to act for me during my absence from England in the care and management of the said estate * * * and generally to act for me in the management and dealings with any property belonging to me during my absence from England," and then proceeded by the operative part of the instrument to convey such a power, but without any limitations as to time, it was held that the recital controlled the general language used in the operative part of the instrument and limited the exercise of the powers of the attorneys to the period of the principal's absence from England.²

¹ Thus, for example, where an agent has power to do a certain act as, e. g. to sell land, if he can do so before a certain date, his power ceases upon the expiration of the time fixed. Rundle v. Cutting, 18 Colo. 337; Castner v. Richardson, 18 Colo. 496; Learned v. McCoy, 4 Ind. App. 238.

Where a mortgagor was permitted to remain in possession and make additions as the agent of the mortgagee it was held that his power expired when the debt was due. Herd v. Bank of Buffalo, 66 Mo. App. 643.

² Danby v. Coutts, L. R., 29 Ch. Div. 500.

§ 551. — So where an agreement creating an agency for the sale of machines, made no provisions as to the time of its continuance, but did provide that the agency should extend over a certain section of the country, and that the principal agreed to furnish to the agent "such number of machines as he may be able to sell as their agent, prior to October 1st, 1867," it was held in an action against the agent's sureties, that a fair and reasonable construction of the agreement created an agency only until the first day of October, 1867.³

§ 552. b. By accomplishment of object.—Where the agency was created for the purpose of performing some specific act or acts, it will be terminated by the accomplishment of the purpose which called it into being. Having fulfilled its mission, it is henceforth functus officio.

Thus is an Iowa case,⁴ the firm of A & B had been employed by one S to negotiate for him the purchase of some land. In the month of July they made the purchase and delivered to S the contract of sale, and S then gave them one-half of the purchase price for payment to the vendor, and paid them for their services. In August a deed for the land was sent to them and they delivered it to S, who then paid the balance of the purchase price. In October following, A bought the same land at a sale thereof for taxes, and subsequently brought an action to recover the land of the vendee of S, and it was attempted to defeat the action upon the ground that A & B were still the agents of S at the time A made the purchase at the tax sale. But the court said that upon these facts it was quite clear that the agency of the plaintiff, or of A & B, for the purchase of the land for S, terminated at the time they delivered to him the written contract for the conveyance of the land on receipt of one-half of the purchase money and the payment of their fee for the services performed. When this was accomplished, A & B had done all they had been employed to do. They had made the purchase as S had desired them to do, delivered to him the written contract sent to them for S, and had received the first payment as per agreement. This completed the services they had undertaken. S himself so regarded it, for when these things were done, he inquired how much they charged for their services, and, on being informed of the amount, he paid the same. They had performed the business for which the agency had been constituted, and by operation of law, the agency was terminated. This was in July. The purchase at the tax sale was not made until October of the same year. At that time they ³ Gundlach v. Fischer, 509 Ill. 172.

case of Walker v. Derby, 5 Bissell,

⁴ Moore v. Stone, 40 Iowa, 259. And a like ruling was made in the similar

134. See also Blackburn v. Scholes,
2 Camp. 343.

were as free to purchase the same as any other persons. Their agency no longer existed.⁵

§ 553. — So where an agent was employed to find a purchaser for land at a fixed price, which he did, it was held that thereupon his agency to the seller terminated, and he was at liberty to undertake the service of the purchaser in attending to the due execution of the conveyance.⁶ And an agent to sell after fully completing his undertaking, and after the title has passed and the price has been paid, is as competent to acquire title from the purchaser as any one else.⁷

So a power delegated to an agent to "fix and determine" a matter in which he has no power of his own outside of the agency, is expended when he has once acted upon it.⁸

Similarly, a power of attorney to confess judgment is ordinarily exhausted when the judgment is confessed, and will not sustain a second judgment.⁹

⁵ An agency to obtain a loan ceases when the money is received by the borrower, and all the requisite papers have been executed and delivered. Statements thereafter made by the former agent do not bind the principal. Atlanta Sav. Bank v. Spencer, 107 Ga. 629.

So where an agent acts for both parties in negotiating a contract for the sale of goods, the agency terminates when the contract is signed by the parties and notice to him, or correspondence with him, from one of the parties no longer binds the other. Groneweg & Schoentgen Co. v. Estes, 144 Mo. App. 418.

So the authority of an attorney by virtue of his retainer terminates when judgment is obtained. Butler v. Knight, L. R. 2 Ex. 109; Macbeath v. Ellis, 4 Bing. 578; Newkirk v. Stevens, 152 N. C. 498 (in which it was held that after judgment was obtained the attorney might deal with the former client concerning the land in suit and might act at arm's length); Haines v. Wilson, 85 S. C. 338 (in which it was held that a contract for the conduct of a suit was completed when judgment was recovered, and that further services in attending to the client's interests in bankruptcy proceedings against the judgment creditor were not covered by the contract).

So in Tobler v. Nevitt, 45 Colo. 231, 132 Am. St. R. 142, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 702, 16 Ann. Cas. 925, it was held that an attorney, employed to defend a suit which had been brought against his client, has no implied power to do anything looking beyond the judgment entered upon the trial, or in preparation for a possible appeal.

⁶ Short v. Millard, 68 Ill. 292. And after an agent to sell has completed his contract he cannot thereafter bind his principal to changes and modifications of the contract made with the vendee. Campbell v. Chase, 78 Kan. 593.

⁷ Board of Trustees v. Blair, 45 W. Va. 812. See also Walker v. Carrington, 74 Ill. 446; Robertson v. Chapman, 152 U. S. 673, 38 L. Ed. 592.

⁸ Douville v. Supervisors, 40 Mich. 585.

⁹ Bellevue Borough v. Hallett, 234 Pa. 191; Com. v. Massi, 225 Pa. 548; Manufacturers' etc., Bank v. Cowden, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 461. There is good discussion of this subject in 60 University of Pennsylvania Law Review, 724.

§ 554. — Again, where the object for which the agency was created is accomplished by other means before the agent has acted, there is nothing left for him to act upon, and his authority is therefore terminated. Thus where the inhabitants of a town authorized their treasurer to borrow money for the adjustment of a state tax, but the tax was adjusted in another way before the treasurer had acted, it was held that his authority to borrow money was thereby terminated.¹⁰ So where before one of two agents separately authorized to sell real estate had found a purchaser, the principal had effected a sale of the land to a purchaser produced by the other agent, it was held that the first agent's authority to sell was terminated by the sale.¹¹

§ 555. Where object contemplated involved a series of acts.—Where the end to be attained, or the object to be accomplished, requires continuous negotiations, or is an enterprise not fully ended by a single act, but requires a series of acts to complete it according to the intention of the parties and the usages of business under similar circumstances, the authority of the agent does not expire with the performance of one act, even though that act may be of prime importance.¹²

§ 556. Authority not necessarily continuing until object accomplished.—It does not necessarily follow that, because an authority would be terminated by the accomplishment of the object, it must in all cases continue until the object is accomplished. That it is to so continue until the object is attained, may be evident from the express terms of the appointment or from the surrounding circumstances,¹³ but, on the ¹⁰ Benoit v. Conway, 10 Allen (Mass.), 528.

¹¹ Ahern v. Baker, 34 Minn. 98.

¹² Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Closser, 126 Ind. 348, 22 Am. St. R. 593, 9 L. R. A. 754 [citing Pennsylvania Co. v. Nations, 111 Ind. 203; United States, etc., Co. v. Rawson, 106 Ind. 215; Wells v. Morrison, 91 Ind. 51; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Henly, 88 Ind. 535; Kirkstall, etc., Co. v. Furness R. Co., L. R. 9 Q. B. 468; Morse v. Connecticut, etc., R. Co., 6 Gray, 450; Lane v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 112 Mass. 455; Gott v. Dinsmore, 111 Mass. 45].

In McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457, a power to "sign any remonstrance or remonstrances against persons who may give notice of intention to apply for license to sell intoxicating liquors, and also to file and present" the same to the board of county commissioners, was held to be a continuing one, not confined to a single remonstrance or a single instance.

¹³ Formal powers of attorney to do a given act or to do acts of a class, may well be longer lived than informal ones, or than authority based merely upon circumstances which are subject to change. Thus in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Keegan, 185 Ill. 70, a recorded power of attorney to sell and convey land, executed five years before a conveyance made under it, was presumed to be still operative, the only inquiry made by the court being whether it could be presumed other hand, it may be equally clear that the authority is not to continue indefinitely merely because the accomplishment of the object is indefinitely delayed or postponed. Known changes in conditions or values may be significant and perhaps conclusive. The mere lapse of time may raise a presumption of termination, which may become conclusive where the period elapsed is so great that no reasonable man could fairly believe that the parties still intended the authority to continue. In some cases, it would be a question of reasonable time. The case of the real estate broker may be taken as an example. He has been "authorized" (though the term "authority" is here usually a misnomer: there is usually simply an offer of a commission if he finds a purchaser) to find a purchaser, and has been promised a commission if he does so. This would usually, like any other similar offer, expire after a reasonable time if the purchaser had not been found; and could not be held as necessarily enduring until he could find a purchaser.¹⁴

In many other cases also, it would be evident that, though not expressly so declared, the authority was only to be executed in case the object could be accomplished at once, or speedily, or concurrently with some other object.

§ 557. c. Termination in pursuance of term in the contract.—It is also entirely competent for the parties, at the time of creating the relation, to provide for its termination, automatically or otherwise, upon the happening of certain events; or to reserve to one or to either to have been terminated by a possible death of the principal within that time. It was held that no such presumption would arise; on the contrary the presumption would be that he was still living.

¹⁴See post, Book V, Chap. III, Real Estate Brokers. It is true that language more or less opposed is used in Hartford v. McGillicuddy, 103 Me. 224, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 431, 12 Ann. Cas. 1083, but while the conclusion in that case may be sound upon the facts, the present writer is obliged to dissent from certain of the views advanced by it. There a real estate broker was held to have earned his commission by making a sale ten years after the authority was conferred, but there was evidence of acts in the meantime which gave color to the idea of a continuing authority.

Compare Proudfoot v. Wightman, 78 Ill. 553, where three years had elapsed and the property had greatly increased in value. Hall v. Gambrill, 88 Fed. 909 (aff'd 92 Fed. 32), where six years had elapsed and the land had increased in value from $5 to $100 per acre, and, Wasweyler v. Martin, 78 Wis. 59, where more than nine months had intervened and the property had increased in value.

Compare Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Keegan, cited in preceding note.

In Dillon v. Macdonald, 21 New Zeal. L. R. 45, it is said by Stout, C. J., "If a considerable time elapsed, nothing being done in the meantime, after an agent is authorized to sell a property, I think it will be assumed that the agency had ceased," citing Breese v. Lindsay, 8 Victoria L. R. 232.

the right to terminate it, at particular times or at any time, for causes specified or for any cause, upon conditions or without them; and a termination in pursuance of such a provision will be effective, and will impose no liability upon the party exercising the right.¹⁵

2. By Their Subsequent Acts.

§ 558. What here included.—Termination of the authority may also be effected in many cases by the subsequent acts of the parties. This may be either the act of both, or termination by mutual consent, or it may be by virtue of the act of one of them only. When done by the principal, it is usually spoken of as revocation, and, when done by the agent, as renunciation.

A. Termination by Mutual Consent.

§ 559. Authority so terminable.—It will be seen hereafter that, in general, the authority may be revoked by the principal or renounced by the agent at any time; though it can not be so revoked where it is coupled with an interest, nor can it be revoked or renounced, without liability, in violation of an agreement that it should continue for a definite time not yet expired. But even though it may not be terminable by the act of one of the parties, it may, given the necessary conditions of form and consideration, be terminated through the subsequent release by the party in interest, or the agreement of both parties to rescind or cancel the contract between them.¹⁶ Notwithstanding any limitation or condition originally imposed, the same power that made the arrangement in the first instance can subsequently waive the condition or remove the limitation. So far as any authority depends upon the act of the parties (as distinguished from authority created by law), the law has no purpose to subserve which will require the continuance of the relation, when both parties desire and agree that it shall be terminated, and the rights of third persons are not impaired.

¹⁵ Barkley v. Olcutt, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 452; Karsner v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 12 Ohio C. C. 394; Doyle v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 25 Nov. Sec. 436; Burelson v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 86 Cal. 342; Ballard v.

Travellers' Ins. Co., 119 N. Car. 187; Oregon Mtg. Sav. Bank v. American Mortgage Co., 35 Fed. 22, 13 Sawyer, 260.

¹⁶ Binsse v. Ohl, 51 N. J. L. 47; Conrey v. Brandegee, 2 La. Ann. 132.

B. Revocation by the Principal.

§ 560. Rules different in public and in private agency.—Some-what different rules apply to revocation by the act of the principal in the case of a private agency, from those governing in the case of a public agency, and they will therefore be separately considered.

1. Private Agency.a. Power of Revocation.

§ 561. In general.—The authority existing in any given case may have been conferred under a variety of circumstances which may influence to some extent the time and method of its withdrawal. Thus, 1. The execution of the authority may have been undertaken wholly gratuitously by the agent, for the accommodation or convenience of the principal, and the question whether it shall be executed or not may be a matter of complete indifference to the agent. 2. It may be that, while, as before, the agent had no interest whatever in the thing to be accomplished or in the results to flow from the execution of the authority, he yet was to be paid for doing it, and is therefore anxious to execute the authority in order to earn the promised compensation. 3. It may be that while, as in the last case, the agent had no interest whatever in the thing to be accomplished, his authority to do it was coupled with, or was an incident of, a contract of employment by the principal for a definite time, which employment the agent is desirous of continuing in order to obtain the compensation agreed upon. 4. It may be that the authority was given as an incident to some right or interest, then acquired by the agent, in the property or thing concerning which the power is to be exercised, and that the continuance of the power is essential to enable the agent to protect or realize upon the right or interest so acquired. 5. It may be that the agent has been induced to do some act, or incur some obligation, in reliance upon the continuance of the power, and that such continuance is essential to enable him to avoid or indemnify himself against the risk or liability so incurred.

§ 562. ——— It will be observed that the interest of the agent in all these cases varies somewhat. In the first, he has no interest whatever in the continuance of the authority. In the second and third, he has an interest, not in the thing itself which is to be done or in the result to be accomplished, but merely in earning the compensation which was to be paid for doing it. In the fourth and fifth cases, the situation is different. Here the agent is interested not merely in earning compensation, but he has an interest or estate in the very thing itself concerning which the power is to be exercised, and its continuance is essential to protect his interest or shield him from liability.

In the first three cases, the principal alone has any real interest in having the authority executed. In the last two, the agent has such an interest. In the first three, the agent has an authority but no real interest in its execution. In the last two, he has an interest as well as an authority. The distinction will be found to be significant.

Cases falling within the first groups are much the more common. Such cases may indeed be called the ordinary ones, and the rule which governs them will be stated first. Thus—

§ 563. General rule—Authority is revocable at any time.—The authority of the agent to represent the principal depends ordinarily wholly upon the will and license of the latter. It is the act of the principal which creates the authority; it is for his benefit and to subserve his purposes, that it is called into being; and, unless there is some other element present, as, for example, that the agent has acquired with the authority an interest in the subject-matter, it is in the principal's interest alone that the authority is to be exercised. The agent, obviously, except in the instance mentioned, can have no right to insist upon a further execution of the authority if the principal himself desires it to terminate.¹⁷

It is the general rule of law, therefore, that the authority of the agent may be revoked by the principal at his will at any time, and with or without good reason therefor.¹⁸ Authority of this nature is often ¹⁷ See Clark v. Marsiglia, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 317, 43 Am. Dec. 670; State v. Walker, 88 Mo. 279; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171, 178; Lord v. Thomas, 64 N. Y. 107; Frith v. Frith, [1906] A. C. 254.

¹⁸ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589; Taylor v. Burns, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. Ed. 116; Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372; Cronin v. American Securities Co., 163 Ala. 533, 136 Am. St. R. 88; Hynson v. Noland, 14 Ark. 710; Posten v. Rasette, 5 Cal. 467; Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609; Brown v. Pforr, 38 Cal. 550; Mitchell v. Gray, 8 Cal. App. 423; Darrow v. St. George, 8 Colo. 592; Lowell v. Hessey, 46 Colo. 517; Briggs v. Chamberlain, 47 Colo. 382, 135 Am. St. R. 223; Linder v. Adams, 95 Ga. 668; Bonney v. Smith, 17 Ill. 531; Davis v. Fidelity Fire Ins. Co., 208 Ill. 375; Shiff v. Lesseps, 22 La. Ann. 185; Creager v. Link, 7 Md. 259; Attrill v. Patterson, 58 Md. 226; Cadigan v. Crabtree, 186 Mass. 7, 104 Am. St. R. 543, 66 L. R. A. 982; Smith v. Kimball, 193 Mass. 582; Loving Co. v. Cattle Co., 176 Mo. 330; Miller v. Wehrman, 81 Neb. 388; Hartshorne v. Thomas, 43 N. J. Eq. 419; Hutchins v. Hebbard, 34 N. Y. 24; Gardner v. Pierce, 131 App. Div. (N. Y.) 605; Oppenheimer v.

termed a bare or naked power; and it is but to restate the general rule in different form to say, as it is so often asserted, that a bare power is revocable at the will of the principal at any time.

This power to revoke exists when the state is the principal as well as when the principal is a private person.¹⁹

An alleged custom that an authority otherwise revocable shall be irrevocable is said to be unreasonable and void.²⁰

§ 564. — If not already executed.—Of course if the authority has been executed, or if the agent, in pursuance of it, has entered into contracts or created obligations binding upon the principal, the authority, though otherwise revocable, cannot be revoked so as to affect these acts already done. And if the agent, in pursuance of the authority, has incurred obligations or been put to expense, on the principal's account, the revocation would not affect his right to indemnity or reimbursement for what had thus been already done.²¹

Barnett, 131 App. Div. 614; Brookshire v. Vonnannon, 6 Ired. (N. C.) 231; Raleigh Trust Co. v. Adams, 145 N. C. 161; Wheeler v. Knaggs, 8 Ohio, 169; Simpson v. Carson, 11 Ore. 361; Coffin v. Landis, 46 Pa. 426; Frederick's Appeal, 52 Pa. 338, 91 Am. Dec. 159; Hartley's Appeal, 53 Pa. 212; Blackstone v. Buttermore, 53 Pa. 266; Kirk v. Hartman, 63 Pa. 97; Macfarren v. Gallinger, 210 Pa. 74; McMahon v. Burns, 216 Pa. 448; McCallum v. Grier, 86 S. C. 162, 138 Am. St. R. 1037; Newton v. Conness (Tex. Civ. App.), 106 S. W. 892; Arthur v. Porter (Tex. Civ. App.), 116 S. W. 127; s. c. 118 S. W. 611; Tucker v. Lawrence, 56 Vt. 467; Weekes v. Dale, 14 Victorian L. R. 159; Hinchey v. Keam, 20 New Zeal. L. R. 478. See also Brookfield v. Drury College, 139 Mo. App. 339.

¹⁹ State v. Walker, 88 Mo. 279; Missouri v. Walker, 125 U. S. 339, 31 L. Ed. 769; Lord v. Thomas, 64 N. Y. 107.

²⁰ Minis v. Nelson, 43 Fed. 777.

²¹ Where the agent, at the principal's direction to pay money in the agent's hands to a third person, has incurred an obligation to pay it to such person, the principal cannot revoke his authority to pay it out of those funds unless the principal indemnifies him against liability. Bristow v. Taylor, 2 Starkie, 50 (dictum); Hodgson v. Anderson, 3 B. & Cr. 842; Goodwin v. Bowden, 54 Me. 424.

So of credits extended before authority terminated. Gelpcke v. Quentell, 74 N. Y. 599.

So of payment of bets made on principal's account. Read v. Anderson, 10 Q. B. Div. 100, 13 Id. 779.

So of authority to buy property out of funds in the agent's hands, after he has bound himself for the purchase. Wiger v. Carr, 131 Wis. 584, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 650, 11 Ann. Cas. 998.

So there are cases in which, if the principal revokes the authority out of the proceeds of which the agent was to be paid, he must compensate the agent for what he has already done, if it be not a case in which, as is usually true of the real estate broker, the agent is to take his chances of reimbursement out of commissions if earned. McCray v. Pfost, 118 Mo. App. 672 (although the court uses wider language than this, it can mean no more); Royal Remedy Co. v. Gregory Grocer Co., 90

If the authority has been executed in part only, and the residue be severable, the authority as to such residue may be revoked as in other cases.

§ 565. Rule applies though authority called "exclusive" or "irrevocable."—The mere fact that an authority, which from its nature would otherwise be revocable at the will of the principal, is called "exclusive,"²² or "irrevocable,"²³ will not change the rule. It cannot be made irrevocable merely by calling it so, and unless given as security or coupled with an interest, in the sense to be hereinafter explained, such an authority may be terminated as in any other case. The fact, however, that the parties expressly declare a power "irrevocable," has some tendency to prove that they regarded it as one coupled with an interest or given as a security.²⁴

§ 566. Rule applies though principal may have agreed that agency should continue for a definite period.—And even the fact that the principal may have expressly agreed that the agency shall continue for a certain period will not prevent his revoking the authority before the expiration of that time, if not coupled with an interest or otherwise irrevocable as hereinafter explained; but he will be liable to the agent for the damages which the agent sustains on account of the revocation contrary to the agreement.²⁵

If, therefore, a declaration that the authority shall be "exclusive" or "irrevocable," as referred to in the preceding section, may be construed

Mo. App. 53; Lowell v. Hessey, 46 Colo. 517; Briggs v. Chamberlain, 47 Colo. 382, 135 Am. St. R. 223.

So where an agent to find a purchaser for land has fully performed, see post, Book V, Ch. III.

²² Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372; Woods v. Hart, 50 Neb. 497; Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327; Kolb v. Bennett Land Co., 74 Miss. 567. Contract to give an agent the "exclusive" agency in certain territory, does not prevent the principal from selling there (Golden Gate Packing Co. v. Farmers' Union, 55 Cal. 606), though he may be liable in damages if he does. Garfield v. Peerless Motor Car Co., 189 Mass. 395.

²³ Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372; Blackstone v. Buttermore, 53 Pa. 266; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296; McGregor v. Gardner, 14 Iowa, 326;

Walker v. Denison, 86 Ill. 142; Attrill v. Patterson, 58 Md. 226.

²⁴ Norton v. Whitehead, 84 Cal. 263, 18 Am. St. R. 172.

²⁵ This, of course, is what is meant in Milligan v. Owen, 123 Iowa, 285, though the court calls it an irrevocable authority. So, in Richardson v. McCleary, 16 Manitoba, 69; Park v. Frank, 75 Cal. 364; Alworth v. Seymour, 42 Minn. 526; Rowan v. Hull, 55 W. Va. 335; Novakovich v. Union Trust Co., 89 Ark. 412; Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327; Harrison v. Augerson, 115 Ill. App. 226; Johnson v. Buchanon, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 328. See also Standard Oil Co. v. Gilbert, 84 Ga. 714, 8 L. R. A. 410; Missouri v. Walker, 125 U. S. 339; Wilcox & G. Sew. Mach. Co. v. Ewing, 141 U. S. 627; Durkee v. Gunn, 41 Kan. 496, 13 Am. St. R. 300; Frith v. Frith, [1906] App. Cas. 254.

as an agreement not to revoke it during a definite period, it may still, subject to liability for damages, be revoked if not coupled with an interest or given as a security.²⁶

In the analogous case of the dissolution of a partnership by one partner in violation of an agreement that it should continue longer²⁷ it is said: "When one partner becomes dissatisfied, there is commonly no legal policy to be subserved by compelling a continuance of the relation, and the fact that a contract will be broken by the dissolution is no argument against the right to dissolve. Most contracts can be broken at pleasure, subject, however, to responsibility in damages. And that responsibility would exist in breaking a contract of partnership as in other cases."²⁸

The revocation in these cases is operative not only as to the agent, but as to third persons also who have notice of it. The fact that the revocation may be a breach of the contract between the principal and the agent, does not enable a third person to charge the principal upon a contract made with the agent after knowledge of the revocation of the agent's authority.²⁹

§ 567. Or though agent may have performed some service or incurred some expense.—The fact that the agent acting under a bare power, may have performed some service for which he is entitled to be ²⁶ Auerbach v. Internationale Gesellschaft, 177 Fed. 458.

²⁷ Per Cooley, C. J., in Solomon v. Kirkwood, 55 Mich. 256, citing Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513, 10 Am. Dec. 286; Mason v. Connell, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 381, and Slemmer's Appeal, 58 Pa. 155, 98 Am. Dec. 248. See also Karrick v. Hannaman, 168 U. S. 328, 42 L. Ed. 484.

²⁸ In the leading case of Clark v. Marsiglia, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 317, 43 Am. Dec. 670, it is said: "To hold that one who employs another to do a piece of work is bound to suffer it to be done at all events, would sometimes lead to great injustice. A man may hire another to labor for a year, and within the year his situation may be such as to render the work entirely useless to him. The party employed cannot persist in working, though he is entitled to the damages consequent upon his disappointment. So if one hires another to build a house, and subsequent events put it out of his power to pay for it, it is commendable in him to stop the work, and pay for what has been done and the damages sustained by the contractor. He may be under a necessity to change his residence; but upon the rule contended for, he would be obliged to have a house which he did not need and could not use. In all such cases, the just claims of the party employed are satisfied when he is fully compensated for his part performance, and indemnified for his loss in respect to the part left unexecuted; and to persist in accumulating a larger demand is not consistent with good faith towards the employer." See also Derby v. Johnson, 21 Vt. 17; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171; Lord v. Thomas, 64 N. Y. 107.

²⁹ Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327; Kilpatrick v. Wiley, 197 Mo. 123.

compensated, or incurred expense for which he may claim reimbursement, or subjected himself to a liability against which he may demand indemnity,—the authority not being given to him for the purpose of securing him in these cases—does not affect the revocability of the power. For all of these matters the agent would, where he was properly acting, and upon the principal's account, have a just claim against the principal;³⁰ but no one of them of itself gives the agent that sort of an "interest" or right to security, which in many cases operates to make a power irrevocable, within the rules hereafter to be considered.³¹

§ 568. Distinction between power and right to revoke—Between authority and contract of employment.—Distinction may be made in these cases between the power to revoke and the right to revoke; the principal always having the power to revoke but not having the right to do so in those cases wherein he has agreed not to exercise his power during a certain period. If, in the latter case, he does exercise his power he must respond in damages.³²

The same conclusion may also be reached in other cases by distinguishing between the authority and the contract of employment. The authority may be withdrawn at any moment, but the contract of employment can not be terminated in violation of its terms, without making the principal liable in damages.³³

§ 569. Exceptions—Authority not revocable.—In all of the cases thus far considered, the revocation of the authority has involved nothing more than that, and perhaps, also the breach of a contract of employment with its consequent loss of salary, fees or commissions. For the breach of such a contract, and its consequent loss of compensation, an ordinary action for damages affords an adequate legal remedy.

But while this is the ordinary situation, and revocability the ordinary rule, there may be cases in which the circumstances are such that the agent is something more than a mere agent, and the authority something more than a mere naked power to be exercised only for the principal's benefit,—cases in which it is clear that the agent has obtained something more than a mere contract, with its consequent right ³⁰ See Hallstead v. Perrigo, 87 Neb. 128; Lowell v. Hessey, 46 Colo. 517.

³¹ See post, §§ 585, 659.

³² See Alworth v. Seymour, 42 Minn. 526; Rowan v. Hull, 55 W. Va. 335; Novakovich v. Union Trust Co., 89 Ark. 412; Cloe v. Rogers, 31 Okla. 255, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 366.

³³ See Turner v. Sawdon, [1901] 2 K. B. 653. See also Toppin v. Healey, 11 Week. Rep'r, 466, where Willes, J., says, "You may revoke an authority, although you cannot revoke a contract."

to look simply to the personal responsibility of the principal for redress in case of breach, but has obtained security by virtue of a power to deal with specific property or interests for his protection—and in which, consequently, the revocation of the authority would cause a loss other than the mere loss of employment and its compensation—a loss not to be adequately remedied by a mere action for damages. In such cases, the rule of revocability should not apply.

These cases assume a variety of forms. Thus, 1. There are cases in which the agent has acquired some interest of his own in the execution of the authority, in addition to his mere interest in the contract of employment with its resulting gains—cases wherein it is often said he has a power “coupled with an interest.” 2. There may be cases in which the agent has been induced to assume a responsibility, or incur a liability, in reliance upon the continuance of the authority, under such circumstances that, if the authority be withdrawn, the agent will be exposed to personal loss or injury. 3. There may be cases in which the authority was created for the protection, not of the agent, but of some third person, under such circumstances that its revocation would impair the latter’s rights. 4. There may be cases of statutory powers which may be revoked only under the conditions prescribed by the statute. Each of these forms will be separately considered.

§ 570. 1. Authority “coupled with an interest.”—The cases most commonly arising, in which the authority is deemed irrevocable, are those in which the authority is said to be “coupled with an interest.” This expression is sometimes used to designate the whole class of irrevocable authorities, and sometimes to indicate but one species of such authorities. It is used somewhat differently in the English and in the American cases. By some of the latter, it has a different significance when applied to revocability by death than when revocation by the mere act of the principal is concerned. The question depends upon the meaning to be attached to the word “interest.”

The “interest” which the agent may have in the execution of the authority may be one of three kinds:—

1. That already referred to, namely, an interest, not in the thing concerning which the power is to be exercised, or in the results to flow from its exercise, but merely an interest in being permitted to exercise it in order to earn his commissions.

2. An interest, not amounting to a property or estate in the thing itself, but still an interest in the existence of the power or authority to act with reference to it, not for the purpose of earning a commission by the exercise of the power, but because the agent has parted with value, or incurred liability, or assumed obligations, at the principal's request or with his consent, looking to the exercise of the power as the means of reimbursement, indemnity or protection.

3. An interest or estate in the thing itself, concerning which the power is to be exercised, arising from an assignment, pledge or lien created by the principal, coupled with which is the power to deal with the thing itself in order to make the assignment, pledge or lien effectual.

§ 571. — Variety of forms.—Each of these three forms differs from the others. The first is the mere naked power, and is revocable at the will of the principal, as already seen, even though such revocation involves the breach of his agreement not to revoke it.

The second and third differ from each other only in the fact that, in the latter, the agent has an estate or interest in the subject matter of the power, while in the former his interest is rather in his right to exercise the power over the thing, in order to make it available for the security or protection contemplated.

The second and third forms might each be called a power coupled with an interest, and each has been so called, though the interest in the respective cases is of a different nature.

§ 572. — American use of term.—According to Chief Justice Marshall in the leading case of Hunt v. Rousmanier,³⁴ an interest of the second sort, though sufficient to make the power irrevocable by the mere act of the principal, is not such a "power coupled with an interest" as will survive his death. Nothing short of an interest of the third sort will, according to that view, suffice to prevent revocation by death. He says, in language often quoted and hereinafter more fully referred to, "Where a letter of attorney forms a part of a contract, and is a security for money, or for the performance of any act which is deemed valuable, it is generally made irrevocable in terms, or, if not so, is deemed irrevocable in law. * * * But does it retain its efficacy after his death? We think it does not. We think it well settled that a power of attorney, though irrevocable during the life of the party, becomes extinct by his death. * * * This general rule, that a power ceases with the life of the person giving it, admits of one exception. If a power be coupled with an 'interest,' it survives the person giving it, and may be executed after his death. As this proposition is laid down too positively in the books to be controverted, it becomes necessary to inquire what is meant by the expression, 'a power coupled with an interest?' Is it an interest in the subject on which the power is to be exercised, or is it an interest in that which is produced by the exercise of the power? We hold it to be clear, that the interest which can protect a power after the death of a person who creates it, must be an interest in the thing itself. In other words, the power must be engrafted on an estate in the thing."

§ 573. — English use of term.—On the other hand, using the same term to express a different sort of interest, Lord Ellenborough said: "A power coupled with an interest cannot be revoked by the person granting it; but it is necessarily revoked by his death;"⁸⁵ and in another case⁸⁶ it is said: "What is meant by an authority coupled with an interest being irrevocable is this—that where an agreement is entered into on a sufficient consideration, whereby an authority is given for the purpose of securing some benefit to the donee of the authority, such an authority is irrevocable." In still another case⁸⁷ Lord Kenyon said: "There is a difference in cases of powers of attorney; in general, they are revocable, from their nature, but there are these exceptions—where a power of attorney is part of a security for money, there it is not revocable; where a power of attorney was made to levy a fine, as part of a security, it was held not to be revocable: the principle is applicable to every case where a power of attorney is necessary to effectuate any security, such is not revocable."

§ 574. — Difference in results.—Chief Justice Marshall's definition leads to this classification: 1. Ordinary bare powers which are revocable by the principal at any time. 2. Powers forming "part of a any act which is deemed valuable." These are irrevocable by the act contract," given as "a security for money or for the performance of of the principal, but are revoked by his death. 3. "Powers coupled with an interest," which are not only not revocable by the act of the principal, but are also not revoked by his death.

The English courts, by applying the term "power coupled with an interest" to the second class, have not reserved any familiar phrase to designate the third, nor do they seem to have had much occasion to consider it. Notwithstanding this difference in nomenclature, there is very little difference in the actual results reached in the two countries.

§ 575. — Power irrevocable by death irrevocable by act of principal.—Not all of the American courts have followed the distinc-⁸⁵ In Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272.

⁸⁶ In re Hannan's Empress Gold Min. & Dev. Co., Carmichael's Case, [1896] 2 Ch. Div. 643, quoting from Clerk v. Laurie, 2 H. & N. 199.

⁸⁷ Walsh v. Whitcomb, 2 Esp. 565, quoted in Smart v. Sandars, 5 C. B. 895. See also Gausson v. Morton, 10 B. & C. 731.

tions made by Chief Justice Marshall, though that is clearly the tendency.³⁸ Without attempting at this stage, however, to reconcile differences in nomenclature, it is sufficient for the present purpose to observe that all courts, English and American, would agree in holding that an interest of the kind required by Chief Justice Marshall to preserve the power from revocation by death, would a fortiori render it irrevocable by the act of the principal.³⁹ What these powers are, will be considered in a later section to which the reader must be referred.⁴⁰

§ 576. 2. Power given as security and therefore "coupled with an interest."—It is clear, however, that there is a large class of cases in which the agent may have an "interest," less than an estate in the thing itself, which will render the power irrevocable by the act of the principal, even though it might not suffice to preserve it against his death. The "interest" here referred to is that of the second sort; it is more than a mere power, it is less than an estate in the subject matter of the authority. It exists where the agent has some other interest than merely to accomplish the principal's purpose and to earn the promised commission. A typical case is presented where the agent has advanced money, or incurred an obligation, for the principal, and the latter has given him some power,—for example, the power to sell certain property and pay himself out of the proceeds,—for his protection. The principal might have secured the agent by mortgage, or he might have delivered the property to him by way of pledge, in which case the agent would have acquired an estate or property as well as a power; but the principal has not done so: he has simply given a power by way of security. It is, however, more than a mere contract, for whose breach an action for damages may be maintained. The parties contemplated more than that: they intended a security. It is analogous to agreements to give security, which may be specifically enforced

³⁸ See Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86.

³⁹ See Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589; Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272; Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 205, 40 Am. Dec. 241; Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., supra; Gulf, etc., Co. v. Miller, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 609 (authority to collect a claim coupled with an assignment of an interest in it, not revocable by assignor).

⁴⁰ See post, §§ 655-663.

In Royal Society v. Campbell, 17 R. I. 402, 13 L. R. A. 601, as part of a family settlement, power was given to collect certain insurance moneys, put them into a common fund and pay out the fund in certain proportions. Held, that there was an equitable assignment of the insurance which made the power, to receive and pay out, one coupled with an interest, and it was therefore irrevocable by the act of grantor.

because a mere judgment for damages, against a party perhaps pecuniarily irresponsible, would afford no adequate relief. As against the principal, such a power is irrevocable, so long as the agent has need to rely upon it for his protection.⁴¹

§ 577. — Powers forming part of a contract.—In other cases the granting of the power is one of the conditions of a contract between the parties, and is designed as a security for one of them. In the language of Chief Justice Marshall, it “forms part of a contract and is a security for money or for the performance of any act which is deemed valuable,” and is irrevocable by the act of the principal for like reasons.⁴²

⁴¹ See the discussion in Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86, supra.

⁴² A contract with an “underwriter” to subscribe for shares in a proposed corporation, gave to the other party, the promoter, an “irrevocable” power to apply for the requisite number of shares in the name of the underwriter. Held, not to be revocable by the underwriter. Carmichael’s Case, In re Hannan’s Empress Gold Min. & Dev. Co., [1896] 2 Ch. Div. 643. See also Ottey v. Perth Licensing Justices, 9 West Australia. L. R. 39. The English court termed this “an authority coupled with an interest.” Chief Justice Marshall would have called it “a letter of attorney forming part of a contract,” or “a security for the performance of an act which is deemed valuable” but not “a power coupled with an interest.” He would, however, have agreed with the English court that it was irrevocable by the act of the principal. There is good discussion of the question in Natal Bank v. Natorp, [1908] Transvaal L. Rep. 1016, where it is held that the Roman-Dutch law and the English law agree. A, being indebted to B, in order to discharge the debt, executed to B, a power of attorney authorizing him to sell certain land belonging to A. Held that this, being an authority coupled with an interest, could not be revoked by A.

Gausson v. Morton, 10 B. & C. 731. Chief Justice Marshall would have called this a “letter of attorney given as a security for money,” but he would also have held it irrevocable by the act of A. A, being insolvent, gave to B, a creditor, a power of attorney to collect debts due A and apply the proceeds upon the debts due from A to B and other creditors. Held, irrevocable as “part of the security for the payment of the creditors.” Walsh v. Whitcomb, 2 Esp. 565.

In Smyth v. Craig, 3 Watts. & S. (Pa.) 14, a power given to a third person to fix the price of goods sold in discharge of a debt was, on the authority of Walsh v. Whitcomb, supra, compared by Chief Justice Gibson to “a power coupled with an interest in the execution of it,” and therefore held irrevocable.

In Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86, supra, a power to sell property to satisfy a claim for damages for trespass by the principal on the land of the agent, was held to be irrevocable if it should be found that “there was any valid consideration within the law applicable to executory contracts, to uphold the authority.”

In Raymond v. Squire, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 47, a debtor had agreed with his creditor that the latter should have the benefit, for his security, of a covenant running from a third person to the debtor; the debtor also executed to his creditor a power of attorney to sue upon and enforce the covenant in the name of the debtor. There was, however, no formal assignment of the covenant. Held that the agreement, plus the power of attorney, "was equivalent to a formal assignment, for the letter of attorney, being coupled with an interest, and given as a security, was not revocable."

§ 578. — Powers given for a valuable consideration.—It is not infrequently said that the power is irrevocable, if granted for a valuable consideration. It is, of course, so granted in the cases above mentioned. But something more than a valuable consideration is essential, for the granting of a bare power may be upon such a consideration.⁴³ The test is, whether the agent has some interest to be protected,—other than his mere employment, or the opportunity to exercise a power in order that, by doing so, he may earn the commission or other compensation which awaits its exercise,—and for the protection of which interest he has stipulated for the power, under such circumstances that an action to recover damages for its revocation would not afford him the contemplated remedy.

In DeForest v. Bates, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 394, an order to an agent to devote the principal's property to the payment of one of his creditors was held to amount "to an equitable assignment of the property founded upon a valuable consideration, therefore carrying with it an interest coupled with the power, and on that account not revocable."

In American Loan & Trust Co. v. Billings, 58 Minn. 187, it was held that a power of attorney executed by A, empowering B to sell and convey real and personal estate and pay the proceeds to C, to be applied in payment of a debt from A to C, existing or contemplated at the time of its execution, and executed and accepted as security for such debt, cannot be revoked by A.

In Montague v. McCarroll, 15 Utah, 318, a power of attorney, given for a small consideration, authorized the sale and conveyance of lands, and also expressly renounced and released to the agent all claim to the proceeds. Held, irrevocable.

So also the power of sale contained in a mortgage is said to be irrevocable by the act of the party even though revoked by death. Johnson v. Johnson, 27 S. Car. 309, 13 Am. St. R. 636; Wilkins v. McGehee, 86 Ga. 764. Equally so, a power to put a lien upon land—"to pass a bond over it." Natal Bank v. Natorp, [1908] Transvaal L. Rep. 1016. And so of a power of attorney to transfer stock given by way of security. Skinner v. Ft. Wayne, etc., R. Co., 58 Fed. 55.

And so of a power given by an inventor to an attorney to hold and control a patent for the benefit of those who had advanced money to pay for the expense of procuring it, who were also to pay the expenses of defending it, and were entitled to operate under it. Day v. Candee, 3 Fish. Pat. Cas. 9, 7 Fed. Cas. p. 220, No. 3,676. And so, of a power given by an insolvent firm to one who advanced money to it, to sell its property for reimbursement. Union Garment Co. v. Newburger, 124 La. 820.

⁴³ Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327. The mere fact that one pays a valuable consideration for appointment as a newspaper distributor or for a newspaper "route," does not make the appointment irrevocable. Staroske v. Pulitzer Pub. Co., 235 Mo. 67.

§ 579. 3. Authority "coupled with an obligation."—The case of the authority, given to secure the agent against some obligation assumed or liability incurred on the principal's account, referred to in the preceding section, has been sometimes termed, for the sake of the distinction, a "power coupled with an obligation," with the resulting rule that both "powers coupled with an interest" and "powers coupled with an obligation" are irrevocable. No objection can be raised to this nomenclature, if it contributes to the determination of the question, though if the distinctions suggested in the preceding sections, as to the nature of the interest which the agent may have in the continuance of the power, are sound, that interest does not depend upon whether the authority is given to enable him to enforce some affirmative right, or to protect him against an obligation assumed. In either event the authority would be irrevocable by the principal.⁴⁴

§ 580. ——— Where irrevocability is claimed, however, because of advances made, it must appear that the advances were made in reliance upon the power, and that the power was given as security for their repayment. The mere fact that advances were made by the agent to the principal, is not enough.⁴⁵

§ 581. "Interest" of third person.—In the cases thus far considered, the "interest" relied upon to sustain the power has been that of the agent himself. May a power conferred upon an agent, for the benefit of a third person, be revoked by the principal? In the ordi-

⁴⁴ Thus in Read v. Anderson, 10 Q. B. Div. 100, it is said by Hawkins, J.: "If a principal employs an agent to do a legal act, the doing of which may in the ordinary course of things put the agent under an absolute or contingent obligation to pay money to another, and at the same time gives him an authority if the obligation is incurred to discharge it at the principal's expense, the moment the agent on the faith of that authority does the act, and so incurs the liability, the authority ceases to be revocable." And in the same case on appeal, 13 Q. B. Div. 779, Brett, M. R., while differing as to the application of the rule, said: "If a principal employs an agent to perform an act, and if upon revocation of the authority the agent will be by law exposed to loss or suffering, the authority cannot be revoked." See also Seymour

v. Bridge, 14 Q. B. Div. 460. In Hess v. Rau, 95 N. Y. 359, the authority to protect against a liability assumed is termed an authority coupled with an interest. In Chapman v. Bates, 61 N. J. Eq. 658, 88 Am. St. Rep. 459, a power of attorney to vote upon and control stock for a definite time, in order to enable a great enterprise, e. g., the establishment of a union railway station, to be carried out, was held to be irrevocable after work had been begun and obligations incurred. In Wiger v. Carr, 131 Wis. 584, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 650, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 998, authority to collect the proceeds of a certificate of deposit to pay for stock purchased by the agent, was held irrevocable after the agent had bound himself by contract to purchase the stock.

⁴⁵ Smith v. Dare, 89 Md. 47.

nary case, involving mere agency, in which a principal has directed his agent to do some act for the benefit of a third person, as, for example, to pay money or deliver property to him, the agent himself, until he has, in pursuance of the direction, assumed some obligation to the third person, could usually have no such interest in the execution of the authority as would prevent the principal from revoking it.⁴⁶ If, however, before revocation, he had assumed such a liability, then, in accordance with the rules already considered, he would have an authority coupled either with an interest or an obligation, which would prevent revocation.⁴⁷ So far as the third person is concerned, his right to prevent revocation would depend upon a variety of circumstances. If the direction of the principal were wholly gratuitous and voluntary, the third person would usually be without remedy.⁴⁸ If the direction were part of a contract, and designed to secure a benefit to the third person, or, if it took the form of an express or implied trust for the benefit of such third person, it would ordinarily be beyond the principal's power to revoke.⁴⁹

§ 582. Provisions for agency in contracts with third persons.— Other cases will also readily suggest themselves where the authority is not for the protection of the agent at all, but of third persons. Thus provisions, made in a contract between the principal and third persons, ⁴⁶ See post, Book IV, Chap. III.

⁴⁷ See ante, §§ 579, 580.

⁴⁸ Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582; Acton v. Woodgate, 2 Myl. & K. 492; Simonton v. First Nat. Bank, 24 Minn. 216; Seaman v. Whitney, 24 Wend. 260, 35 Am. Dec. 618; Tiernan v. Jackson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 580, 8 L. Ed. 234. See Comley v. Dazian, 114 N. Y. 161.

⁴⁹ A power of attorney executed by A empowering B to sell and convey real and personal property and pay the proceeds to C, to be applied upon a debt from A to C then existing or contemplated, and given by A and accepted by C as security for such debt, cannot be revoked by A. American Loan & Trust Co. v. Billings, 58 Minn. 187. See also De Forest v. Bates, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 394; Pacific Coast Co. v. Anderson, 47 C. C. A. 106, 107 Fed. 973. S, being indebted to I, and G being indebted to S, the latter requested G to pay the amount to I, and G promised I to so pay it as soon as the amount was ascertained. Held, not revocable by the bankruptcy of S. Crowfoot v. Gurney, 9 Bing. 372. So, where the debtor directed his agent to pay to a creditor to which the agent assented. Walker v. Rostron, 9 M. & W. 411; Hodgson v. Anderson, 3 B. & C. 842; Goodwin v. Bowden, 54 Me. 424; Wood v. Kerkesslager, 225 Pa. 296.

Where money is paid by A to B to be applied by the latter pursuant to a binding contract between the parties, A cannot revoke the direction. Yates v. Hoppe, 9 Com. B. 541.

A power given to one person to "hold and control" a patent for the benefit of other persons who had advanced money to secure it and who had agreed to bear the expenses of defending it, is irrevocable by the grantor of the power. Day v. Cam-dee, 3 Fish. Pat. Cas. 9, 7 Fed. Cas. p. 230, No. 3,676.

that the latter may acquire rights, or discharge obligations, by notice or demand or delivery or payment to or of a designated agent, are common; and are as irrevocable as any other portion of the contract.

The essence of these provisions may sometimes be a particular place or time, rather than a particular person; so as to leave the principal free to substitute some other person as the agent by due notice, so long as he maintains a proper agent at the place or time agreed upon; but the personality of the particular agent named may be found to be essential, and in that event he could not be changed at the mere will of the principal.

§ 583. "Interest" and authority from same source.—Not only must the authority and the "interest" concur, but they must, it is held, emanate from the same source. Thus it has been held not to be enough that the interest is derived from one person while the authority is derived from another.⁵⁰

It would doubtless be otherwise if they could in some way be connected.

§ 584. Express language as to revocability.—It has already been seen that an express stipulation for irrevocability will not make a bare power irrevocable: its nature determines that. So where a power by reason of its nature is irrevocable, as in the cases just considered, express language to that effect, though often inserted, is not usually indispensable. As stated by Chief Justice Marshall, "Where a letter of attorney forms a part of a contract, and is a security for money, or for the performance of any act which is deemed valuable, it is generally made irrevocable in terms, or if not so, is deemed irrevocable in law."⁵¹ An express stipulation, however, would always be appropriate, and in a doubtful case might be conclusive.⁵²

On the other hand, an express stipulation that an authority, which would otherwise be deemed irrevocable, shall be revocable by the principal, would be effectual.⁵³

§ 585. Illustrations—Sufficient "interest"—Powers given for security.—In the following cases the agent has been held to have such ⁵⁰ Black v. Harsha, 7 Kan. App. 794. Here an authority, from the first mortgagee of chattels to the second mortgagee of the same chattels, to sell the chattels and apply the proceeds upon the mortgages, was held revocable by the first mortgagee. The authority of the second mortgagee came from the first mortgagee while his interest was derived from the mortgagor.

⁵¹ In Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589.

⁵² Calling the power "irrevocable" has some tendency to show that the parties regarded it as coupled with an interest. Norton v. Whitehead, 84 Cal. 263, 18 Am. St. R. 172.

⁵³ Oregon Bank v. American Mtg. Co., 35 Fed. 22.

an "interest" in the power as to render it, to the extent of the agent's interest, irrevocable at the will of the principal: Where the agent has authority to confess judgment as security for a debt⁵⁴ or to collect a debt and out of the proceeds to reimburse himself for advances made by him to the principal or for debts due him from the principal;⁵⁵ where the authority is given to the agent to sell real or personal property and apply the proceeds in payment of a debt due him from the principal;⁵⁶ where the authority is given for a valuable consideration or forms a part of a contract and is given as security for the performance of the contract;⁵⁷ where it is conferred to enable the agent, as for instance a factor, to reimburse himself for prior advances;⁵⁸ where it is given to indemnify a surety or indorser against loss;⁵⁹ and where in reliance upon it the agent has assumed responsibility or incurred an obligation on the principal's account.⁶⁰

Many other cases are cited in the note.⁶¹

Of course, in any of these cases in which the authority is given by way of security, the principal, upon paying the debt or reimbursing the agent, and the like, would be at liberty to revoke.

⁵⁴ First Nat. Bank v. Seass, 153 Ill. App. 122; Odes v. Woodward, 2 Ld. Raym. 849; Kindig v. March, 15 Ind. 248. But not a simple power not given by way of security to confess judgment for the benefit of a third person. Evans v. Fearn, 16 Ala. 689, 50 Am. Dec. 197.

⁵⁵ Marzion v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 522; Raymond v. Squire, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 47; Walsh v. Whitcomb, 2 Esp. 565.

⁵⁶ Gaussen v. Morton, 10 B. & C. 731; Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86; Denson v. Thurmond, 11 Ark. 586.

⁵⁷ E. g., a power given by an "underwriter" to a "promoter" to apply for shares in the name of the former. Carmichael's Case, In re Hannan's Empress, etc., Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 643.

In Ex parte Smither, 1 Deacon's Bank. Cas. 413, it was said by Sir G. Rose, J., "A power of attorney which is given for a valuable consideration would no doubt be irrevocable. But when the consideration fails, a court of equity would in all cases interfere for the relief of the party who might be legally bound by it." See also Sanborn v. Rodgers, 33 Fed. 851.

⁵⁸ Willingham v. Rushing, 105 Ga. 72; Brown v. McGran, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479, 10 L. Ed. 550; Davis v. Kobe, 36 Minn. 214, 1 Am. St. Rep. 663; Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Caine's Cas. (N. Y.) 1, 2 Am. Dec. 231.

For the English rule, see Smart v. Sanders, 5 C. B. 895; De Comas v. Prost, 3 Moore, P. C. N. S. 158.

⁵⁹ Hynson v. Noland, 14 Ark. 710; Hutchins v. Hebbard, 34 N. Y. 24.

⁶⁰ Read v. Anderson, 10 Q. B. Div. 100, 13 Id. 779; Hess v. Rau, 95 N. Y. 359; Chapman v. Bates, 61 N. J. Eq. 658, 88 Am. St. Rep. 459.

⁶¹ See cases cited § 577, ante. In a number of cases powers of attorney or "proxies," to vote upon stock for a given period, in order to secure persons who had incurred obligations in reliance thereon, or in order to carry out lawful contracts for the acquisition and control of property, have been held to be irrevocable by the act of the principal. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholas, 98 Ala. 92; Chapman v. Bates, 61 N. J. Eq. 658, 88

§ 586. ——— What “interest” not sufficient—Instances.—But a mere interest in the results or proceeds of the execution of the authority, as by way of compensation, is not enough.

Thus where one is given authority to sell the lands or other property or loan the money of another, and is to have a certain commission or share out of the proceeds for his services, the authority may be revoked at the will of the principal, even though in terms it was declared to be exclusive or irrevocable;⁶² and so where one is authorized to collect a debt and is to have a commission or a share of what he

Am. St. R. 459; Smith v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 115 Cal. 584, 56 Am. St. R. 119, 35 L. R. A. 309; Hey v. Dolphin, 92 Hun (N. Y.), 230; Boyer v. Nesbitt, 227 Pa. 398, 136 Am. St. R. 890.

Compare Harvey v. Linville Improvement Co., 118 N. C. 693, 54 Am. St. R. 749, 32 L. R. A. 265.

A power of attorney to sell land, upon which the agent, at the request of the principal, has made valuable improvements, and for which he is to reimburse himself out of the proceeds, is irrevocable by the act of the principal unless he otherwise reimburses the agent. Buffalo Land Co. v. Strong, 91 Minn. 84.

So of a power given to an agent, who has procured insurance for his principal and advanced the money for the premiums, to hold the policy and collect its proceeds or its surrender value, under given circumstances, in order to reimburse himself (Miller v. Home Ins. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 175); and a power given by a landlord to his tenant to sell crops in which the landlord had an interest in order to satisfy a debt which the landlord owed to the tenant (Big Four Coal Co. v. Wren, 115 Ill. App. 331); and a power, given by an insolvent firm to one who has advanced money to pay their debts, to sell the firm property for his reimbursement (Union Garment Co. v. Newburgher, 124 La. 819); and a power of attorney to assign wages to pay a debt where there is a subsisting employment (Cox v. Hughes, 10 Cal. App. 553).

A vessel was hired from the agent of the owner upon an agreement that the hirer, in addition to rent, should pay all expenses of navigation and give a bond to secure performance. Later it was agreed that in lieu of the bond, the agent should have the power to collect all freight money and disburse it as agreed. Held, irrevocable by the act of the hirer. The court said that it might be regarded as a power coupled with an interest, there being in effect at least an equitable assignment of the freight money. Pacific Coast Co. v. Anderson, 47 C. C. A. 106, 107 Fed. 973.

Where a bank, which had given credit upon a check that was later dishonored, had then received for collection a second check in order to reimburse itself, it was said that its authority to collect the second check was irrevocable. Citizens Bank v. Tessman, — Minn. —, 140 N. W. 178. The question, however, did not arise in any attempt to collect the check. The case contains a good discussion of irrevocable powers.

⁶² Taylor v. Burns, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. Ed. 116; Chambers v. Seay, 73 Ala. 372; Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609; Brown v. Pforr, 38 Cal. 550; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296; Schilling v. Moore, 33 Okla. —, 125 Pac. 487; Norton v. Sjolseth, 43 Wash. 327; Hartley's Appeal, 53 Penn. St. 212; Walker v. Denison, 86 Ill. 142; Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 550; Bonney v. Smith, 17 Ill. 531; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 175, 5 L.

collects for his services, the power is not coupled with a sufficient interest and is therefore revocable by the principal at will.⁶³ The interest in the commissions to be earned and in the moneys expended in endeavoring to carry out the agency, is not sufficient to prevent revocation. And so a mere power of attorney to confess judgment in favor of a third person not shown to have been executed on any consideration or to have been given as a security for any demands or to render a security effectual, is revocable at the will of the principal.⁶⁴

Of course, no interest can be acquired where to do so would violate the express provisions of the law.⁶⁵ And though there was an attempt to assign an interest with the power, yet if that interest was not assignable, the power would be a bare power and revocable at will.⁶⁶

§ 587. — Bare powers.—A fortiori, a bare power, not connected with any interest in the agent, may be revoked, without liability, at any time before its execution. Thus where a debtor, or one on his behalf, without consideration, deposits money with another to be paid to a creditor of the debtor, or to compromise an action against him, the relation of principal and agent arises between the debtor and the person with whom the money is so deposited. In such a case the money remains the property of the principal and he may revoke the

Ed. 589; Elwell v. Coon (N. J. Eq.), 46 Atl. 580; Darrow v. St. George, 8 Colo. 609; Simpson v. Carson, 11 Oregon, 361; Blackstone v. Buttermore, 53 Penn. St. 266; Oregon Bank v. American Mtg. Co., 35 Fed. 22.

The mere fact that the commissions are large, e. g. one half of the amount, does not change the rule. McMahan v. Burns, 216 Pa. 448; Walker v. Denison, 86 Ill. 142.

The same rule applies to an insurance agent who is simply interested in earning the commissions. Andrews v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 844, 70 S. W. 43. Even though the writing under which the agent claims contains terms which purport to "sell" him the property or an interest in it, yet if the whole transaction shows that he was merely an agent authorized to sell for a commission, his authority is revocable. Taylor v. Burns, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. Ed. 116, supra.

⁶³ Hartley's Appeal, 53 Pa. St. 212, 91 Am. Dec. 207; Flanagan v. Brown, 70 Cal. 254; Burke v. Priest, 50 Mo. App. 310; Stier v. Imperial Life Ins. Co., 58 Fed. 843.

Same rule applied where one was appointed by a state to prosecute claims against the U. S. government upon a commission. Missouri v. Walker, 125 U. S. 339, 31 L. Ed. 769. And where an insurance agent was authorized to collect premiums for a commission. Andrews v. Travelers Ins. Co., 24 Ky. L. Rep. 844, 70 S. W. 43.

⁶⁴ Evans v. Fearn, 16 Ala. 689, 50 Am. Dec. 197; Woodruff v. Dubuque, etc., R. R. Co., 30 Fed. 91.

⁶⁵ Thus a statute expressly provides that no transfer of land scrip issued to Indians shall be valid, this can not be defeated by the device of an irrevocable power of attorney to sell. Midway Co. v. Eaton, 183 U. S. 602, 46 L. Ed. 347. See also Strong v. Buffalo Land Co., 203 U. S. 582, 51 L. Ed. 327, affirming s. c., 91 Minn. 84.

⁶⁶ Flynn v. Butler, 189 Mass. 377 authority at any time until the agent has actually paid the money to the creditor, or has come under an obligation to him for it.⁶⁷ And any disposition of the money by the debtor, before such payment or credit, inconsistent with the appropriation first intended, as by an assignment for the benefit of creditors, will operate as a revocation.⁶⁸ So a deposit of stock with the officers of a corporation or others to enable it to be voted upon, is but a bare power and may be revoked at any time.⁶⁹

§ 588. New nomenclature needed.—It will be evident from the foregoing discussion, that a new nomenclature is needed, for the present one is sadly ambiguous. If the expression "power coupled with an interest" is to be retained and used here to designate powers not revocable by the act of the principal (even though they may be revoked by his death), as seems to be the English practice, the term "power coupled with an estate," or something equivalent to that, should be used for the sort which survive death, and which are yet to be considered. If, on the other hand, we are to adopt the prevailing American practice, and call these latter powers "powers coupled with an interest," we should apply some other name to the ones now being considered; and the expression "power given for security" will suffice, if emphasis be laid upon the fact that it is only a power, and not an estate or property which is so given, although such an estate or property might have been conveyed.

Thus we should have, as heretofore suggested, this classification:

1. Bare powers.
2. Powers given as security (either of the agent or of third persons).
3. Powers coupled with an interest.

Bare powers are always revocable, even though a breach of contract may thereby be involved.

Powers given as security may not be revoked by the act of the principal (unless he actually reimburses the party protected) though they would ordinarily be deemed revocable by his death—a point yet to be considered.

Powers coupled with an interest are irrevocable by the act of the principal or by his death or other disability.

§ 589. — What may be the subject matter of a power given as security.—The subject matters with which a power given as security may be concerned, as shown by the decided cases, are very numerous.

⁶⁷ See Seaman v. Whitney, 24 Wend. 260, 35 Am. Dec. 618; Howard College v. Pace, 15 Ga. 486; Phillips v. Howell, 60 Ga. 411; Simonton v. First National Bank, 24 Minn. 216.

⁶⁸ Simonton v. First National Bank, supra.

⁶⁹ Woodruff v. Dubuque, etc., R. R. Co., 30 Fed. 91.

Such a power may be one over choses in action and the various forms of personal property, or—given the requisites of form—over real estate, or it may be an authority to impose personal obligations upon the principal.⁷⁰

§ 590. — Necessary characteristics of such a power.—In order to make a power given by way of security effectual, it must, obviously, be conferred in definite and specific terms, and be to do some definite and specific act or acts. It need not be in writing, except where a statute requires it.⁷¹ It must be a power to do some act for the protection of the party interested, and not merely an employment of him to do the act for the employer's benefit, with merely a resulting benefit to the agent in the form of fees or commissions. It must also, in order to be directly enforceable, be to do such an act and under such circumstances as would enable a court of equity either to enforce it specifically or at least to enjoin interference with its performance.⁷²

§ 591. — Against whom power given as security enforceable.—The question as to the persons against whom a power given as security, and therefore irrevocable by the mere act of the principal, may be enforced, has thus far apparently been little considered by the courts. The true rule would seem to be that, so far as it concerns property, it is operative, not only against the principal, but also against any one succeeding to the property by the act of the principal,⁷³ and who is either a mere volunteer or a purchaser with notice.⁷⁴ So far as its exercise properly results in the creation of personal obligations against the principal, they would doubtless have the same effect upon those claiming through him, as though he had incurred the same obligations by his own personal act.

§ 592. Contracts of employment—When right to terminate exists—Employments at will.—Passing now beyond the question of the mere revocation of powers—and perhaps into a field not properly a ⁷⁰ See the cases referred to ante, §§ 576-8.

⁷¹ Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86. See also Wiger v. Carr, 131 Wis. 584, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 650, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 998.

⁷² See Frith v. Frith, [1906] App. Cas. 254, where it was held that even though the power might be deemed irrevocable, it was so inseparably bound up with a contract for personal services that a court of equity, not being able to enforce that, could not enforce the residue.

⁷³ See Day v. Candee, 3 Fish. Pat. Cas. 9, 7 Fed. Cas. p. 230, No. 3,676.

Compare Howes v. Ball, 7 B. & Cr. 481; commented upon in Sewell v. Burdick, 10 App. Cas. 74, 95. Not good as against bona fide purchaser of res without notice. Terwilliger v. Ontario, etc., R. Co., 149 N. Y. 86 (dictum).

⁷⁴ Clark v. Flint, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 231, 33 Am. Dec. 733.

part of agency, if strictly limited, at all—attention may be given to the matter of the termination of employments. As has been already seen, the conferring of authority may or may not be accompanied by a contract of employment. It also may or may not be accompanied by an agreement for continuance. With reference to “bare” powers, i. e., those not coupled with an interest or given as a security, it has been seen that even though there was an agreement not to revoke, the principal may nevertheless revoke, subject to liability for damages for the breach of the agreement. With reference to contracts of employment also, much the same situation exists. The employer may usually discharge his employee at pleasure, subject to damages if, in doing so, he breaks a contract of employment without legal justification.⁷⁵ There may have been no contract for a definite term, or, even if there were one, there may be legal excuse for breaking it, and in either of these events there would be no liability.

Speaking first of the former case, where there was no express or implied contract that the employment should continue for a definite time, it may ordinarily be terminated by either party at any time without liability. Such employments are deemed to be at will merely, and their termination violates no contract and involves no liability.⁷⁶

⁷⁵ This may, perhaps, be made more clear by an illustration.

1. I give to a real estate broker authority to sell my land and promise him a commission for so doing. This is merely an authority, and not a contract of hiring or employment. There is as yet no contract between us at all. I may revoke this authority at any time before performance without liability.

2. I give to a real estate broker authority to sell my land, promising him a commission if he does so, and I also, for a sufficient consideration, agree not to revoke his authority within six months. This is still merely an authority, with a contract that it shall not be revoked. I may nevertheless revoke the authority, but am liable for the breach of the contract.

3. I may hire a man for six months to act as my agent [or servant, according to some views] in such matters as I may direct him. I then say to him, I authorize you to sell my stocks or chattels. Here is a hiring or an employment for a definite time. I may revoke his authority to sell my stocks or chattels at pleasure, and incur no liability. But if I also discharge him from my employment, I violate my contract of hiring or employment, and must pay him damages.

⁷⁶ Willcox & Gibbs Co. v. Ewing, 141 U. S. 627; Kirk v. Hartman, 63 Pa. 97; Coffin v. Landis, 46 Pa. 426; Jacobs v. Warfield, 23 La. Ann. 395; Knox v. Parker, 2 Wash. 34; Sheahan v. National S. S. Co., 87 Fed. 167, 30 C. C. A. 593; Rees v. Pellow, 97 Fed. 167, 38 C. C. A. 94; Hoover v. Perkins Windmill Co., 41 Minn. 143; Brougham v. Paul, 138 Ill. App. 455; Brookfield v. Drury College, 139 Mo. App. 339; Blumenthal v. Bridges, 91 Ark. 212; Harrod v. Wineman, 146 Iowa, 718; Harrington v. Brockman Commission Co., 107 Mo. App. 418; Evans v. Gay (Tex. Civ. App.), 74

The law presumes that all general or indefinite employments are thus at will merely, and the burden of proving an employment for a definite time rests upon him who alleges it.⁷⁷ He must, of course, show a consideration as in other cases.

Where, on the other hand, there was an employment for a definite term, or an agreement that the agency should continue for a stated period, it can only be terminated without liability, either where there was some right reserved or condition attached to that effect, or where some event has occurred or default happened which will legally justify a termination of the contract.

§ 593. — Employment on condition—"Satisfaction"—"Good cause."—It is not uncommon to provide that the agency, or employment, although otherwise for a definite period, shall cease or may be terminated by either party upon the happening of a certain event or the arising of a certain contingency, and when the agency does so cease, or is so terminated, no liability attaches to either party. Thus it is competent to provide that the relation shall continue only so long as one or either of the parties is satisfied, and where such is the agreement, the dissatisfaction of the party to be satisfied, if it be bona fide, is a sufficient ground for terminating the relation without liability.⁷⁸

S. W. 575; Warden v. Hinds, 90 C. C. A. 449, 163 Fed. 201, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 529; Clarke v. Stevedoring Co., 163 Fed. 423; Currier v. Ritter Lumber Co., 150 N. C. 694, 134 Am. St. R. 955; Briggs v. Chamberlain, 47 Colo. 382, 135 Am. St. R. 223.

⁷⁷ Moore v. Security Trust Ins. Co., 93 C. C. A. 652, 168 Fed. 496, and other cases cited above.

⁷⁸ Tyler v. Ames, 6 Lansing (N. Y.) 280; Crawford v. Publishing Co., 163 N. Y. 404; Brown v. Retsof Min. Co., 129 App. Div. 368; Ginsberg v. Friedman, 146 N. Y. App. Div. 779; Adriance v. Rutherford, 57 Mich. 170; Sax v. Detroit, etc., Ry. Co., 125 Mich. 252, 84 Am. St. R. 572; Isbell v. Carriage Co., 170 Mich. 304; Hotchkiss v. Gretna Gin & Compress Co., 36 La. Ann. 517; Kendall v. West, 196 Ill. 221, 89 Am. St. R. 317; Karsner v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 12 Ohio C. C. 394; Beissel v. Vermillion Farmers' Elevator Co., 102 Minn. 229, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 403; Corgan v. Lee Coal Co., 218 Pa. 386, 11 Ann. Cas.

841, 120 Am. St. R. 891; Stewart & Co. v. Exum, 132 Ga. 422; MacKenzie v. Minis, 132 Ga. 323, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1003; Lieberman v. Weil, 141 Wis. 635.

But a dismissal in such a case, simply because his services were not needed, is a breach. Sax v. Detroit, etc., Ry. Co., supra; Atlanta Stove Works v. Hamilton, 83 Miss. 704. See also Hotchkiss v. Gretna Gin. & Compress Co., supra; and compare Crawford v. Pub. Co., 163 N. Y. 404.

It has been held, in a case in which in consideration of the release of a claim for injuries, an employe accepted an agreement for work so long as his services should be satisfactory, that the grounds of the dissatisfaction must be reasonable. Lake Erie & W. Ry. Co. v. Tierney, 29 Ohio C. 83 (aff'd without opinion, 75 Ohio St. 565); but see contra Sax v. Detroit, etc., Ry. Co., 125 Mich. 252, 84 Am. St. R. 572.

It has been suggested that in cases involving not commercial services,

A stipulation that the contract may be terminated by either party for "good cause," was held to justify a termination by either party for any cause which he in good faith deemed sufficient.⁷⁹

So a contract to give one employment so long as he does "faithful and honest work" has been held to be terminable at the will of either party.⁸⁰

§ 594. — Termination for causes specified.—So, of course, it is entirely competent for the parties to stipulate that the principal shall have the right to terminate the contract for certain causes, or upon giving notice of a certain sort; and a termination in pursuance of such a stipulation entails no liability. But the cause stipulated for must exist, and the notice required must be duly given.⁸¹ And where the parties have stipulated for the right to terminate for a certain cause, there is an implied exclusion of the right to terminate for any other cause which would not justify a termination in the absence of any stipulation.⁸²

But a contract fixing no term for its continuance, and therefore terminable at will, will not be rendered not so terminable by the mere but the peculiar personal "taste, fancy, satisfaction or judgment," the employer may discharge without assigning any reason, or stating his dissatisfaction, and that the court and jury will not go behind his action. Saxe v. Shubert Theatrical Co., 57 Misc. 620; Brown v. Retsof Min. Co., 127 App. Div. 368; Crawford v. Pub. Co., 163 N. Y. 404.

In Lieberman v. Weil, 141 Wis. 635, it was held that in cases at least of commercial service, the dissatisfaction must be real, whether it was reasonable or not, and that the question of bona fides might go to the jury.

Where the contract was for three years "or as long as he performs his duties in a successful or satisfactory manner," the court distinguished the cases first cited in this note, and held that the principal could not discharge merely because he was dissatisfied. Bridgeford v. Meagher, 144 Ky. 479.

⁷⁹ Cummer v. Butts, 40 Mich. 322, 29 Am. Rep. 530. The contract may make the employer the sole judge of performance. Allman v. Yukon Consol. Gold Fields Co., 7 Western L. Rep. 318, affirmed 8 id. 373.

The right to terminate "for cause" will not justify a purely arbitrary dismissal. Margulies v. Oppenheimer, 159 Ill. App. 520.

⁸⁰ Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Offutt, 99 Ky. 427, 59 Am. St. Rep. 467; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Harvey, 99 Ky. 157.

⁸¹ Johnson v. Pacific Bank Fixture Co., 59 Wash. 58; White Sewing Mach. Co. v. Shaddock, 79 Ark. 220. Where the principal may terminate if he desires to make a certain other arrangement that condition must actually exist in order to justify a termination. Fuller v. Downing, 120 App. Div. 36.

As to a custom requiring notice where none is stipulated for, see Joynson v. Hunt, 21 Times L. Rep. 692 (not allowed against a written contract apparently at will).

⁸² Newcomb v. Imperial Life Ins. Co., 51 Fed. 725. To same effect: Newhall v. Journal Printing Co., 165 Minn. 44, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 899.

insertion of provisions by which it may be terminated in certain events. Such provisions would not ordinarily be sufficiently indicative of an intention to agree that a contract, otherwise terminable at will, should be terminated only in the cases provided for; and they would ordinarily be deemed to be cumulative and inserted only out of abundant caution.⁸³

§ 595. — Implied conditions.—So there are certain implied conditions which enter into every contract of agency, for a violation of which the principal may rightfully terminate the contract. The most important of these are those which relate to the questions of the agent's ability to perform the appointed service, and the fidelity with which he employs the powers entrusted to him.

A full discussion of these conditions will be given in a later section.

§ 596. Contract for definite time cannot be terminated without liability except for legal cause.—Where the agent has been employed for a fixed period the agency cannot be rightfully terminated before the expiration of that period at the mere will of the principal, but only in accordance with some express or implied condition of its continuance. Any other termination of such an agency by the act of the principal will subject him to liability to the agent for the loss he has sustained thereby.⁸⁴ The principal will also be liable to the agent for his compensation up to the time of the wrongful revocation and for any liabilities and expenses which the agent has fairly and in good faith incurred on the principal's account in the execution of the authority before its revocation.⁸⁵

⁸³ Willcox & Gibbs Co. v. Ewing, 141 U. S. 627, 35 L. Ed. 882; Stier v. Imperial L. Ins. Co., 53 Fed. 843; Moore v. Security Trust Ins. Co., 93 C. C. A. 652, 168 Fed. 496.

⁸⁴ See post, Book IV, Ch. IV; Rand v. Cronkrite, 64 Ill. App. 208; Glover v. Henderson, 120 Mo. 367, 41 Am. St. Rep. 695; Rowan v. Hull, 55 W. Va. 335, 104 Am. St. R. 998.

A contract of employment for the "season," presumptively means the season known to the particular trade. (Bauer v. Goldman, 45 Colo. 163), and in the territory in which the agent is to operate. Wolfshelmer v. Frankel, 130 App. Div. 853.

Where one was employed "subject to the account of the Alliance Silk Mills remaining with" the employer, it was held that the employer was liable for a discharge before that account was withdrawn. Downes v. Poncet, 38 Misc. 799.

So where, in consideration of $10 paid by the agent to his principal, and of services rendered and to be rendered in the sale of a piece of land to a church, the principal agreed that the agency should continue until such time as the church could be brought to buy, the principal who gave notice of termination and himself closed the sale to the church, was held liable to pay to the agent the amount of commission agreed upon. Luhn v. Fordtran, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 148.

⁸⁵ See post, Book IV, Chap. IV.

§ 597. What amounts to contract for definite time.—To consider exhaustively the question of what is to be deemed a contract for a definite time, is not within the scope of the present discussion. In many cases the contract is express and clear. In others no serious difficulty is presented in determining the intention of the parties. Illustrations of interpretation are collected in the note.⁸⁶

§ 598. ——— Unilateral stipulations.—It is, however, in many cases, difficult to determine whether the parties have made a definite agreement for a fixed time or not. It is not indispensable that they should, in the first instance, be both bound for the same period. It may lawfully be made to rest with either party to determine, at his option, that the agreement shall be one for a certain time.⁸⁷ So it has been held that the appointment of an agent to do certain acts during a given period does not, of itself, amount to an agreement that he should be permitted to continue to act during that period.⁸⁸ Many other cases involving the same general question are referred to in the notes.

⁸⁶ In Mason v. New York Produce Exchange, 127 N. Y. App. Div. 282, an agreement in the following language: "You were appointed at a salary of $2,500 for the first year and * * * your remuneration for the second year and thereafter will be $3,000 per annum," was held to be a contract for an annual period, and was renewed on that basis by continuance in service.

In Dally v. Wheaton Co., 79 N. J. L. 574, an offer made in these terms: "We are willing on the above basis to start you in, say for three months, and see what you can do," was accepted. Held, employment was for the period stated, and not at will.

In Seago v. White, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 539, a contract reading: "I will work for you the first year for $1,000, etc.," was held to create a hiring for one year and not one terminable at will.

⁸⁷ Where the contract is for employment so long as the employee desires it, the term does not become fixed until he has exercised his option, and if he is discharged before doing so he cannot recover damages based upon a fixed period. "Perhaps the defendants could not, by abruptly breaking the contract, by discharging the plaintiff, deprive him of the right to exercise his option to fix a definite and reasonable period of service. But, though he might have exercised and declared his election even when he was notified of his discharge, * * * he does not appear to have done so." Bolles v. Sachs, 37 Minn. 315.

A contract to give another employment for whatever time the employee may desire to serve, entitles the employee to fix the period when he presents himself for work. But if he does not so fix it and is dismissed, he cannot recover damages based upon any particular period. East Line R. Co. v. Scott, 72 Tex. 70, 13 Am. St. R. 758 (see s. c. 75 Tex. 84); followed in Hickey v. Kiam (Tex. Civ. App.), 83 S. W. 716.

⁸⁸ Where an agent agreed to transport all the goods that might be "presented to him" for that purpose during one year, but the principal did not expressly agree to furnish any goods for transportation, held, that the agreement was binding upon the agent only, and that the principal might, at any time, refuse to fur-

§ 599. — So where the plaintiff agreed to serve the defendants "during the term of not exceeding three years," and not to be con-nish any goods, and thus, practically, terminate the agency during the year without liability. Burton v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 9 Exch. 507.

Where the owner of coal mines appointed agents for the sale of the coal at Liverpool for seven years, but did not agree to furnish them any coal to sell during that period, held, that the owner might sell his mines and terminate the agency even though the seven years had not expired, without liability to the agents. Rhodes v. Forwood, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 256.

See also Northey v. Trevillion, 7 Com'l Cas. 201. (But compare Turner v. Goldsmith, [1891] 1 Q. B. 544 cited in second section following wherein this case was distinguished.) See also Churchward v. The Queen, L. R. 1 Q. B. 173; Ex parte Maclure, L. R. 5 Ch. 737; Cowasjee Nanabhoy v. Lallbhoy Vullubhoy, L. R. 3 Ind. App. 200; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240.

So where it was agreed between A and B that A should manufacture cement for the use of B of a specified quality; that B should pay A a certain weekly sum for two years from the agreement, and another weekly sum for one year after, and should receive A into partnership in the business of manufacturing cement at the end of three years; and that A should instruct B in the art of manufacturing cement. Held, on action brought by A assigning as a breach of this agreement that B wrongfully discharged him, the plaintiff, from his service, and from manufacturing cement for the use of the defendant, and from any longer instructing the plaintiff in the art of manufacturing cement, before the expiration of two years from the agreement, that this agreement did not raise an implied contract of hiring and service for three years between the parties, and therefore the action was not maintainable. Aspdin v. Austin, 1 Dav. & M. 515; s. c. 5 Q. B. 671, s. c. 5 A. & E. 671.

So where it appeared that by indenture between defendant of the first part, J. D. son of plaintiff, of the second part, and plaintiff of third part, plaintiff, covenanted that his son should be assistant to the defendant, a dentist for five years, and do all such service as defendant should order to be performed in the way of his art; and that defendant, for the services to be done by the son, covenanted during the term, and in case the son should perform his part of the agreement, that he, defendant would pay the son a certain sum weekly during the term as compensation for the services aforesaid. That the son entered upon the service, and that he and the plaintiff performed their part of the agreement, and were ready and willing to continue such performance during the term. And the breach alleged was that defendant refused to permit the son to continue in the service and dismissed him. It was held there was no implied covenant by the defendant to retain the son in the service during the five years. Dunn v. Sayles, 1 Dav. & M. 579; s. c. 5 Q. B. 685, s. c. 5 A. & E. 685. [But some of the doctrines of Aspdin v. Austin, Dunn v. Sayles, and Williamson v. Taylor (cited in the following case), have been much criticised in the English courts, and they doubtless go no further than the precise point decided. See per Erle C. J., in McIntyre v. Belcher, 32 L. J. C. P. (N. S.) 254; Crompton J., in Worthington v. Sudlow, 31 L. J. Q. B. (N. S.) 131; L. Alverstone in Devonald v. Rosser, [1906] 2 K. B. 728.]

Where a traveling salesman, "in consideration of the sum of $2,100 for the year 1873, and $2,400 for the year 1874, to be paid in semi-monthly nected with any other persons in like business "during the continuance of this agreement;" while the defendants merely agreed to pay him a stated sum per week "during the said term," it was held that defendants could terminate the agreement within three years by giving reasonable notice.⁹⁰ Said the court: "There is no express agreement of the defendants to employ the plaintiff for three years, and no stipulation from which, in our judgment, such an agreement can be implied. The agreement appears to have been framed and adapted to secure to the defendants the right to the exclusive services of the plaintiff for such time, not extending beyond three years from its date, as he should perform such services and they should continue the business and require his services, paying him the stipulated compensation weekly, so long only as he should be employed by and faithfully serve them; but not to oblige them to continue the business, or to employ him therein, except at their own election, or to pay him any compensation after or monthly installments, agreed to devote his whole time and attention solely to the interests of" a certain firm, and entered into their service and continued until June 11, 1873, at which date the firm became bankrupt and suspended business, and the salesman was discharged, held, in an action brought by the salesman to recover damages for his discharge, that the contract contained no undertaking on the part of the firm to retain or continue him in their employ for any definite term and that hence he could not recover. Orr v. Ward, 73 Ill. 318 [citing Williamson v. Taylor, 5 A. & E. 175, and Aspdin v. Austin, supra]; Brougham v. Paul, supra.

An employment to sell "any or all" of a certain quantity of goods, the agent "to devote his entire time to the sale," and to have a commission "upon all sales made by him," was held since the agent had not bound himself to sell any or all of the goods, or to give his entire time for any specified period, to be an employment at will, and terminable by the principal at any time. Winslow v. Mayo, 123 App. Div. 758, aff'd without opinion, 195 N. Y. 551.

A contract for employment "for the sale of all the lumber that will or may be sawed" upon a certain named tract of land, is not a contract of employment to last until all the lumber is taken, but is rather "a provision as to what the agency is so long as it continues in force." Bradlee v. Southern Coast Lumber Co., 193 Mass. 378.

So an employment to prepare a tract of land for sale in lots and to secure purchasers, the compensation to be a commission upon sales made was held terminable at the instance of either party. Brougham v. Paul, 138 Ill. App. 455. But compare Glover v. Henderson, 120 Mo. 367, 41 Am. St. R. 695.

In Pellet v. Mfgs. Ins. Co., 43 C. C. A. 669, 104 Fed. 502, an insurance agent was denied recovery of prospective commissions as damages for the breach of a contract for a definite term, where the defendant company sold out its business in the agent's territory. To same effect: In re English Marine Ins. Co., 5 Ch. App. 737, where the employment ceased on account of the voluntary dissolution of the company.

⁹⁰ Harper v. Hassard, 113 Mass.

reasonable notice that they should no longer require his services. The case does not present the question whether the plaintiff had a similar right of election."

§ 600. — Contrary views.—But where one had been appointed general agent of a life insurance company for five years, but without any express agreement on the part of the company to employ him for any definite period, and the company, after the time had partly expired, became insolvent, abandoned the business and discharged the agent, a different conclusion was reached.⁹¹ In an action brought by the agent to recover damages for the discharge, it was argued on behalf of the defendant that by the terms of the contract sued on, the plaintiff was merely appointed agent for the company for five years, and as the company did not expressly bind itself to continue in business for that length of time, its inability to act and execute the whole stipulation on its part constituted no breach. But it was said in reply by the learned judge who rendered the opinion of the court: "It is true there was no positive and direct covenant, on the part of the company, to carry on the business for any definite time. But the plaintiff agreed to act exclusively for the company for the period of five years, and had he neglected or failed, he would have been liable in damages. If he was bound for that length of time, it necessarily follows that the company must also have been bound, for mutuality was essential to the validity of the agreement. It very frequently happens that contracts on their face and by their express terms appear to be obligatory on one party only; but in such cases if it be manifest that it was the intention of the parties, and the consideration upon which one party assumed an express obligation, that there should be a corresponding and correlative obligation on the other party, such corresponding and correlative obligation will be implied."⁹²

⁹¹ Lewis v. Atlas Mut. L. Ins. Co., 61 Mo. 534, 538. See also Glover v. Henderson, 120 Mo. 367, 41 Am. St. Rep. 695. And Macgregor v. Union Life Ins. Co., 57 C. C. A. 613, 121 Fed. 493, where the insurance company having sold out its business, was compelled to pay damages to an agent for loss of commissions for the balance of his term. That the principal's insolvency furnishes no excuse for a breach of the contract, see Vanuxem v. Bostwick (Penn.), 7 Atl. 598.

Where the contract declares that "it is mutually understood" that an employment is to be for five years, it is not lacking in mutuality because the agent did not expressly agree to serve for that time. Butterick Pub. Co. v. Whitcomb, 225 Ill. 605, 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1004.

⁹² Citing, Pordage v. Cole, 1 Wm. Saund. 319; Churchward v. The Queen, 6 B. & S. 807; Black v. Woodrow, 39 Md. 194.

In Turner v. Goldsmith, [1891] 1 Q. B. 544, there was an agreement in § 601. ——— Mutuality under Statute of Frauds.—Cases under this head frequently arise in which the Statute of Frauds becomes an important element. Thus in a case in Michigan⁹⁴ it appeared that the defendants had entered into a written contract with the plaintiff as follows:

"We promise and agree to pay Thomas Wilkinson wages or salary at the rate of $3,500 a year for three years from the second day of October, 1882, in consideration of his working for us that length of time as cutter in our merchant tailoring department in the city of East Saginaw, Michigan. Payments to be made as earned, in such sums and at such times as he may desire.

"Dated October 14, 1882.

"HEAVENRICH BROS. & Co."

writing to employ the plaintiff as traveling salesman or agent "upon the terms and subject to the stipulations and conditions hereinafter contained." Among these terms and conditions were the following: "(1) The agency shall be deemed to have commenced on the 31st day of January, 1887, and shall be determinable either by the company or the said A. S. Turner at the end of five years" by written notice. (2) Turner agreed to do his utmost to obtain orders for all goods "manufactured or sold" by the company of which they should furnish him samples for that purpose. (5) Turner agreed not to sell goods except those "manufactured or sold" by the company. (8) The company was to pay him a commission on all goods sold. Two years later the company's factory was destroyed by fire and the company did not resume business or continue plaintiff's employment. He sued to recover damages for the breach of the contract. The company contended that the agreement was (like that in Rhodes v. Forwood cited in the preceding section) only that he should solicit orders for such goods only as they gave him samples, but that they did not agree to supply him with any such samples. But it was held, distinguishing Rhodes v. Forwood, that there was a binding contract to employ plaintiff for five years.

Compare Northey v. Trevillion, 7 Com'l Cas. 201.

⁹⁴ Wilkinson v. Heavenrich, 58 Mich. 574, 55 Am. Rep. 708. The court said: "The conflict of authority upon questions of the kind raised upon this record is truly bewildering, and the cases are incapable of being reconciled with each other; a large and respectable class holding that a contract which the Statute of Frauds declares shall not be valid unless in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith, need only to be signed by the party defendant in the suit, and that it is no objection to maintaining such suit and recovering upon such contract, that the other party did not also sign and was not bound by its terms. 2 Kent's Com. 510; 2 Stark. Ev. 614; Smith's Appeal, 69 Penn. St. 480; Tripp v. Bishop, 56 Penn. St. 424; Perkins v. Hadsell, 50 Ill. 217; Old Colony R. R. Corp. v. Evans, 6 Gray (Mass.), 31, 66 Am. Dec. 394; Williams v. Robinson, 73 Me. 186, 40 Am. Rep. 352. See also Mason v. Decker, 72 N. Y. 595, 28 Am. Rep. 190; Justice v. Lang, 42 N. Y. 493, 1 Am. Rep. 576; Shirley v. Shirley, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 452; Douglass v. Spears, 2 N.

Plaintiff alleged that he entered upon and continued in the employment under the contract until on or about July 5, 1884, when he was discharged without cause and against his protest. On July 8, he wrote to defendants, saying: "I hereby protest against your attempt to cancel our contract. I hold your written agreement for a three years' term of service, from October 2d, 1882. That contract I am ready and willing to perform on my part, and I hereby offer to continue, and request you to furnish me employment under the terms of that agreement."

& McC. (S. C.) 207; 10 Am. Dec. 588; Morin v. Martz, 13 Minn. 191; Anderson v. Harold, 10 Ohio, 399; Bars-tow v. Gray, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 409; Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 175; Lay-thorp v. Bryant, 2 Bing. N. C. 735; Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 Bos. & Pul. 238. Another and equally respectable class of jurists hold that unless the party bringing the action is bound by the contract, neither is bound because of the want of mutuality. Lees v. Whitcomb, 3 C. & P. 289; Sykes v. Dixon, 9 Ad. & El. 693, 36 Eng. Com. L. 366; Krohn v. Bantz, 68 Ind. 277; Stiles v. McClelland, 6 Col. 89; and as bearing upon the question, Hall v. Soule, 11 Mich. 496; Scott v. Bush, 26 Mich. 418; Liddle v. Needham, 39 Mich. 147; McDonald v. Bewick, 51 Mich. 79. See also, Corbitt v. Salem Gaslight Co., 6 Oreg. 405, 25 Am. Rep. 541 and note.

I shall not attempt a reconciliation where reconciliation is impossible; but as the question is new in this state, the court is left to adopt such view as appears to rest upon principle. It is a general principle in the law of contracts, but not without exception, that an agreement entered into between parties competent to contract, in order to be binding, must be mutual; and this is especially so when the consideration consists of mutual promises. In such cases, if it appears that one party never was bound on his part to do the act which forms the consideration for the promise of the other, the agreement is void for want of mutuality. Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 241; Dorsey v. Packwood, 12 How. (U. S.) 126, 13 L. Ed. 921; Ewins v. Gordon, 49 N. H. 444; Hod-desdon Gas Co. v. Haselwood, 6 C. B. (N. S.) 239; Souch v. Strawbridge, 2 M. G. & S. 808; Callis v. Bothamly, 7 Wk. Rep. 87; Sykes v. Dixon, 9 Ad. & El. 693; Addison, Cont. § 18; Parsons, Cont. 449; Utica, etc., R. Co. v. Brinckerhoff, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 139; Lester v. Jewett, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 502. Such was the case here. The consideration consisted of mutual promises of the parties, not to be performed within a year from the making thereof. The defendants' promise was in writing, and signed by them; but the plaintiff's promise does not appear in the writing signed by the defendants, nor was any note or memorandum made and signed by him promising to labor for defendants three years or any length of time. Plaintiff was never bound by the agreement. There never was, then, any consideration to support defendants' promises. The agreement was void for want of mutuality. The plaintiff was under no legal obligation to work for defendants a moment longer than he chose, and the defendants were under none to keep him in their employment. The plaintiff could neither revive nor make a contract with defendants after he was discharged by them, without their consent and concurrence. The letter written after he was discharged was of no avail."

In an action brought to recover damages for the discharge, it was held that as the plaintiff had not also signed the contract, it was not binding as to him under the Statute of Frauds; and that as he was not bound to stay three years, there was no mutuality in the agreement and that hence the defendants were not bound.

The weight of authority, however, seems to be against the view taken by the court in this case as to the necessity of the signing by both parties.⁹⁵

§ 602. Contract for a definite time implied from circumstances.—But a contract to retain the agent for a definite time may be implied, although not clearly expressed, where from the facts and circumstances surrounding the case, such appears to have been the intention of the parties.⁹⁶ Whether it was so or not is usually a question of fact for the jury.⁹⁷

Thus in a leading case where it appeared that the plaintiff had entered into a contract with a joint stock company whereby he agreed that from a certain date he would act as the attorney and solicitor of the company for a salary of 100*l.* a year, and the company on its part agreed to retain and employ him as such attorney and solicitor on the terms aforesaid, it was held, although no time for the continuance of the relation was agreed upon, that it must be construed to be a retainer ⁹⁵ See Wood on the Statute of Frauds, § 405, and cases cited.

⁹⁶ In Luce v. San Diego Land Co. (Cal.), 37 Pac. 390, plaintiffs wrote: "An annual salary of $5,000 is the least sum for which we ought to take upon ourselves the labor and responsibilities incident to continuing our position as general attorneys for the company." Defendant replied: "On and after March 1st, until a change be made, their names shall appear on the pay roll at the rate of $416.66 per mo." Later the plaintiffs stated orally that their offer contemplated a yearly hiring and not a monthly one. The defendant's agent answered: "We would no more employ you by the month than you would be employed by it." Held, a contract for one year with salary payable monthly.

In Chamberlain v. Detroit Stove Works, 103 Mich. 124, the plaintiff, who had worked for the defendant company a number of years at an annual salary, was elected director and secretary in January, 1886. He continued to perform same services, but at an increased salary. He was re-elected each year until 1892, when another person was chosen in his place. In May, 1892, he was discharged. The jury found that the employment was for an annual period and continued distinct from his offices in the corporation. Held, that the character of the hiring was properly left to the jury, and that their determination was not improper.

⁹⁷ See cases cited in following notes: Tallon v. Grand Portage Copper Min. Co., 55 Mich. 147; McCullough Iron Co. v. Carpenter, 67 Md. 554; Tatterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56; Davis v. Ames Mfg. Co., 177 Mass. 54.

for at least one year.⁹⁸ So where an offer of employment as superintendent of ships was made by a letter stating that the wages would be one hundred dollars per month, "and if you give me satisfaction at the end of the first year, I will increase your salary accordingly," it was held that this was a contract for a yearly hiring.⁹⁹ So a letter engaging a person as a hotel manager at a salary of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, and showing upon its face that the engagement contemplated his giving up another situation and removing, with his family, several hundred miles to a hotel, and there undertaking, besides the duties of a manager, those of secretary and treasurer of the hotel company, was held to import an engagement for at least a year.¹

§ 603. — Yearly or other periodical salary—Yearly accountings.—The mere fixing of the salary by the year, month or other interval is not, according to many cases, enough to make the employment one for such interval, unless the nature of the undertaking or the surrounding circumstances indicate—as they may undoubtedly do—that such was the evident intent of the parties.² Other cases, how-

⁹⁸ Emmens v. Elderton, 13 Com. B. 495. An appointment of an attorney "at a salary of $1,000 per year payable quarterly," and an acceptance "upon the terms offered" constitute a hiring for at least one year. Horn v. Western Land Association, 22 Minn. 233. See Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309.

⁹⁹ Norton v. Cowell, 65 Md. 359, 57 Am. Rep. 331. See also Tallon v. Grand Portage Copper Min. Co., supra.

¹ Smith v. Theobald, 86 Ky. 141. See also Franklin Mining Co. v. Harris, 24 Mich. 115, where there was held to be evidence of an employment for a year; but cf. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Roberson, 3 Colo. 142, where under quite similar facts there was held not to be. See also Bauer v. Goldman, 45 Colo. 163.

² Palmer v. Marquette Rolling Mill Co., 32 Mich. 274; Franklin Mining Co. v. Harris, 24 Mich. 115; De Briar v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 450; Tatterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56; McCullough Iron Co. v. Carpenter, 67 Md. 554; Orr v. Ward, 73 Ill. 318; Haney v. Caldwell, 35 Ark. 156; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131;

Weidman v. United Cigar Stores Co., 223 Pa. 160, 132 Am. St. R. 727; Watson v. Gugino, 204 N. Y. 535, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1090; Currier v. Ritter Lumber Co., 150 N. C. 694, 134 Am. St. R. 955; Bauer v. Goldman, 45 Colo. 163; Martin v. Ins. Co., 148 N. Y. 117; Finger v. Brewing Co., 13 Mo. App. 310; Evans v. Ry. Co., 24 Mo. App. 365.

Same: Central South African Ry. v. Cooke, [1904] Transv. L. R. 531.

So in Edwards v. Seaboard, etc., R. Co., 121 N. C. 490, it was held that a letter stating "you have been appointed general storekeeper * * * to take effect July 15th. Your salary will be $1,800 a year," did not constitute an employment for a year.

So in The Pokanoket, 84 C. C. A. 49, 156 Fed. 241, where, upon the employment of a marine engineer, it was agreed that his wages were to be $50 a month, it was held that there was no hiring by the month.

Thus in Frank v. Manhattan Maternity & Dispensary, 107 N. Y. Supp. 404, it was said, "It is too well settled in this state to require extended citation that a hiring at so much a day, week, month or year, ever, declare it to be enough, even in the absence of such circumstances.³

Neither is the fact that in a contract, not fixing a definite time, there are stipulations for yearly accountings. "These provisions," said the court, "upon which the plaintiff relies as showing an agreement to continue the business from year to year, we think amount to no more than agreements for yearly accountings so long as the relation established by the contract shall continue."⁴

§ 604. Stipulation for "permanent" employment.—A contract for "permanent" employment is not necessarily one for a fixed and definite period. That ordinarily is "permanently" established which is designed to continue generally without present expectation of change.⁵ Not more than that can usually be claimed for a "permanent" employment. It cannot ordinarily be interpreted as meaning an employment for life or for any fixed or certain period, but only an employment that no time being specified, is an indefinite hiring and no presumption attaches that it was for a day even, but only at the rate fixed for whatever time the party may serve.' Martin v. Insurance Co., 148 N. Y. 117, 121; Wood, Master and Servant, § 136; Baker v. Appleton & Co., 107 App. Div. 358, aff'd 187 N. Y. 548; Outerbridge v. Campbell, 87 App. Div. 597; Fisher v. Sanchez & Hays Co., 44 App. Div. 629. Where a contract of hiring is general or indefinite in its terms, it is prima facie a hiring at will, and the burden rests upon the servant to prove that the hiring is for a definite term. Hotchkiss v. Godkin, 63 App. Div. 468."

³ In Maynard v. Royal Worcester Corset Co., 200 Mass. 1, the court says that "the weight of authority is that this circumstance alone, [namely, "a hiring at so much a year, where no time is specified"] in the absence of any other consideration impairing its weight, will sustain a finding that there was a hiring for that period." Not all the cases cited, however, sustain the proposition, though several of them do. This seems to be the settled rule in England. Emmens v. Elderton, 4 H. L. C. 624; Buckingham v. Surrey & Hants Canal Co., 46 L. T. R. (N. S.) 885; Foxall v. International Land Credit Co., 16 L. T. R. (N. S.) 637. And in Canada: Armstrong v. Tyndall Quarry Co., 20 Manitoba, 254. This seems to be the rule in some American states. Beach v. Mullin, 34 N. J. L. 343; Young v. Lewis, 9 Tex. 73; Horn v. Western Land Ass'n, 22 Minn. 233; Kelly v. Carthage Wheel Co., 62 Ohio St. 598; Jones v. Vestry of Trinity Parish, 19 Fed. 59; Magarahan v. Wright, 83 Ga. 773; Odom v. Bush, 125 Ga. 184. See also Kellogg v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 94 Wis. 554; Cronemillar v. Duluth, etc., Co., 134 Wis. 248, and Kirk v. Hartman, 63 Pa. St. 97.

⁴ Hoover v. Perkins Windmill Co., 41 Minn. 143.

⁵ See as to "permanent" location or establishment of buildings or institutions. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. City of Marshall, 136 U. S. 393, 34 L. Ed. 385; Newton v. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. Ed. 710; Mead v. Ballard, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 290, 19 L. Ed. 190; Harris v. Shaw, 13 Ill. 456; Bentley v. Smith, 3 Ga. App. 242.

shall continue indefinitely and until one party or the other shall desire, for some good reason, to change it.⁶

Under exceptional circumstances, however, it may be clear that something more was intended; and a contract, made as part of a settlement of a claim for personal injuries, to give the employee injured "steady and permanent" employment, has been construed as meaning that the latter should be employed as long as he was able, ready and willing to perform such services as the other party, a railroad company, might have for him to perform.⁷

Even though a contract for permanent employment exists, it may be terminated, without liability, for any misconduct, and the like, which would justify the discharge of a servant employed for a fixed term.⁸

⁶ Bentley v. Smith, 3 Ga. App. 242, 59 S. E. 720. An employment as "permanent attorney" means merely a general as distinguished from an occasional or special employment. Elderton v. Emmens, 4 Com. B. 479. An employment as the "permanent" attorney of a corporation cannot be deemed to be for the life of the corporation or of the attorney, and is satisfied by a year's employment. Sullivan v. Detroit, etc., Ry. Co., 135 Mich. 661, 106 Am. St. R. 403, 64 L. R. A. 673. An appointment as the "permanent" rector of a church is not an employment for life but only until either party "upon fair and equitable terms and after reasonable notice" desires to terminate it. Perry v. Wheeler, 12 Bush (Ky.), 541. An agreement by an employer that the employment shall be permanent so long as the employee desires to make it so, in consideration of the employee using his best efforts to extend the business, does not mean that the employment is for life or any fixed period but only that it is to continue indefinitely and until one or the other should wish for some good reason to sever the relation. Lord v. Goldberg, 81 Cal. 596, 22 Pac. 1126, 15 Am. St. R. 82. Under a contract to give "permanent employment" as long as the employee wishes it and his services are satisfactory, he must announce how long he wishes it to continue, when he enters upon the employment. Hickey v. Kiam (Tex. Civ. App.), 83 S. W. 716.

In Carnig v. Carr, 167 Mass. 544, 57 Am. St. R. 488, 35 L. R. A. 512, a contract for permanent employment was held to be not for life, but so long as the employer had work of that sort to be done and the employee could do it satisfactorily. The question was suggested but not decided in Orient Ins. Co. v. Kemp, 29 Ill. App. 232.

⁷ Pennsylvania Co. v. Dolan, 6 Ind. App. 109, 51 Am. St. R. 289 (a case of settlement for personal injuries in consideration of "steady and permanent" employment).

To same effect: Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cox, 145 Ky. 667. In this case the court said: "In many of the cases where contracts of this sort have been sustained, the contract was to give employment until some event happened, as, for instance, as long as the servant may be able to do the work (Smith v. St. Paul R. Co., 60 Minn. 330), or until he gets well, or so long as the servant lives, or the employer is in business. Pierce v. Tenn. Coal Co., 173 U. S. 1, 43 L. Ed. 591; Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. v. Rule 106 Ky. 455; Nortonville Coal Co. v. Sisk, 145 Ky. 55." See also Harrington v. Kansas City Cable Co., 60 Mo. App. 223.

⁸ Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Cox, supra.

§ 605. Continuing under prior contract—Holding over.—A person who has been previously employed by the month, year or other fixed interval, and who is permitted without any new arrangement to continue in the employment after the period limited by the original employment has expired, will, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention, be presumed to be employed until the close of the current interval and upon the same terms.⁹

This, however, is merely a presumption, and gives way before evidence that such a continuation was not intended.¹⁰

§ 606. Agency terminable for agent's incompetence.—As will be seen hereafter, there is an implied covenant on the part of every agent that he possesses and will exercise in the execution of his undertaking, a reasonable degree of skill, knowledge and ability. If, therefore, the agent, though employed for a definite period, proves not to possess that reasonable degree of skill, or, if possessing it, he neglects or refuses to exercise it, the principal may properly terminate his authority therefor without liability for a breach of the contract.¹¹ A fortiori would this be true where the covenant for competency was express instead of implied. Any other rule would, as can readily be seen, place

⁹ Standard Oil Co. v. Gilbert, 84 Ga. 714, 8 L. R. A. 410; Adams v. Fitzpatrick, 125 N. Y. 124 (citing many other New York cases). Dougllass v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 118 N. Y. 484, 7 L. R. A. 822, 23 N. E. 806; Vail v. Jersey Falls Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; Grover & B. Sew. M. Co. v. Bulkley, 48 Ill. 189; Moline Plow Co. v. Booth, 17 Ill. App. 574; Kelly v. Carthage Wheel Co., 62 Ohio St. 598; Sines v. Superintendents of the Poor, 58 Mich. 503; Tallon v. Mining Co., 55 Mich. 147; Tatterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56; Alba v. Moriarty, 36 La. Ann. 680; Lalande v. Aldrich, 41 La. Ann. 307; McCullough Iron Co. v. Carpenter, 67 Md. 554, 11 Atl. Rep. 176; Weise v. Milwaukee County Supervisors, 51 Wis. 564; New Hampshire Iron Co. v. Richardson, 5 N. H. 294; Wallace v. Floyd, 29 Pa. St. 184, 72 Am. Dec. 620; Ranck v. Albright, 36 Pa. St. 367; Nicholson v. Patchin, 5 Cal. 474; Capron v. Strout, 11 Nev. 304; Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309; Mansfield v. Scott, 1 Cl. & Fin. 319; Bullock v.

The Wimmerra, etc., Co., 5 Vict. L. R. 362.

¹⁰ A travelling salesman, employed by the year, became by accident incapable of completing his year. Two months afterward he came back, worked a little about the store, "dunned" several of his former customers, but did not resume his former duties as traveler. Held, not enough to justify the presumption that the parties had assented to an arrangement for another term of the same length at the same salary. O'Connor v. Briggs, 182 Mass. 387.

¹¹ Peterson v. Drew, 2 Alaska, 560; Franklin v. Lilly Lumber Co., 66 W. Va. 164; Rosbach v. Sackett Co., 134 App. Div. 130; United Oil Co. v. Grey, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 10; Alleroft v. Adams, 38 Can. S. C. 365. The principal does not necessarily lose his right because he does not immediately discharge the agent upon discovering his incompetency. Rosbach v. Sackett Co., supra. See also United Oil Co. v. Grey, supra.

the principal at the mercy of an incompetent agent, and compel him to suffer, perhaps for a long period, a constant and increasing loss and injury from the inefficiency of an agent who had impliedly, if not expressly, warranted himself to be competent.

If, however, at the time of the employment, the principal knew of the agent's incompetence, he could not discharge him on that ground, unless, at least, the incompetence were greater than the principal knew or had reasonable grounds to suppose. If a man knowingly chooses incompetent agents, he has no reason to complain if he receives incompetent service.

Brief periods of incompetency caused by illness or accident would not be within the rule; but if continued for an unreasonable period, and certainly if permanent, would justify a termination.¹²

§ 607. Agency may be terminated for agent's disobedience, dishonesty or other misconduct.—It is also an implied condition in every contract of agency, that the agent will not wilfully disobey or disregard the reasonable and lawful instructions of his principal; that he will not willingly permit to suffer his principal's interests committed to his care; that he will be honest and faithful, and will exercise reasonable care and diligence in the performance of his duties; and that he will not intentionally violate the established principles of morality or the laws of the land.¹³

If, therefore, the agent, though employed for a definite time violates this condition, the principal may discharge him therefor without incurring liability on account of such discharge.¹⁴

This rule is indispensable for the protection of the principal. The agency is created by him for the furtherance of his interests. It is his will that is to be executed, his object that is to be accomplished. Within reasonable and lawful limits, he has, and of necessity must have, the right to determine the time, the methods and the means to be employed. He has a right to have the business performed in his own way, if it be a ¹² Spindel v. Cooper, 46 N. Y. Misc. 569; Gaynor v. Jones, 104 N. Y. App. Div. 35; Johnson v. Walker, 155 Mass. 253, 31 Am. St. R. 550; Pous-sard v. Spiers, 1 Q. B. Div. 410; Dartmouth Ferry Co. v. Marks, 34 Can. S. C. 366; Storey v. Fulham Steel Works, 24 Times L. R. 89; Myers v. Sieradski, [1910] Transv. L. R. 869.

¹³ Callo v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518; Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208; Bixby v. Parsons, 49 Conn. 483, 44 Am. Rep. 246; Parker v. Farlinger, 122 Ga. 315.

Where an agent has been guilty of misconduct which justifies his discharge, the fact that he was guilty of no actual wrong intention is immaterial. Kelmar v. Souden, 2 N. S. Wales St. R. 348.

¹⁴ Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. Bayfield, 37 Mich. 205; Dieringer v. Meyer, 42 Wis. 311, 24 Am. Dec. 415; Henderson v. Hydraulic Works, 9 Phila. (Penn.) 100; Urquhart v. Scottish Am. Mtg. Co., 85 Minn. 69, 88 N. W. 264.

lawful way, although the agent may think or know that there is a very much better way; and if the agent is not willing to conform to the principal's desires, he should decline the agency.

Neither can the principal be required to retain or employ an agent who is devoid of moral principles, or who is guilty of criminal acts or practices.¹⁵

§ 608. Agency terminable for agent's disloyalty.—As has already been seen, a principal, who has not, with full knowledge of the facts, consented to receive something less, is entitled to have and is obliged to retain only a disinterested and loyal agent. If, therefore, he discovers that the agent had or has acquired an adverse interest; or was then in or has since entered the employment of the adverse party; or if the agent attempts to become himself the adverse party; or seeks to use his authority for his own benefit, or to acquire for himself the rights which he ought to acquire for his principal; or is seeking to undermine his principal; or is carrying on a rival business in violation of his duty; or is receiving bribes or commissions from the adverse party; and the like, the principal may not only revoke the authority, but he may, even though there was a contract of employment, discharge the agent without liability.¹⁶ The agent, moreover, usually forfeits all right to compensation, and the contracts with him, and generally those with the other party, are ordinarily rescindable at the principal's option.

¹⁵ See Kelly Plow Co. v. London, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 125 S. W. 974 (a general sales agent was justifiably discharged when it was learned that he had falsely represented to the company the amount of his salary in a prior position, and that he had collected damages from a railroad by fraud. A retention in service for some time after the discovery of these facts was held not to be a condonation); Gould v. Magnolia Metal Co., 207 Ill. 172 (a salesman was rightfully discharged for associating with immoral women; his conduct was deemed generally injurious to the interests of his employer); Moynahan v. Interstate Mining Co., 31 Wash. 417 (plaintiff was discharged among other things for associating with immoral women; an instruction to the jury that plaintiff's immorality was immaterial unless it prevented a performance of his duties under the contract, held error). Other cases are cited post. §§ 609, 610.

¹⁶ Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. Div. 339; Puritas Laundry Co. v. Green, 15 Cal. App. 654; Bilz v. Powell, 50 Colo. 482, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 847; Adams Exp. Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; Randall v. Peerless Motor Car Co., 212 Mass. 352; Wade v. Barr Dry Goods Co., 155 Mo. App. 405; Case v. Jennings, 17 Tex. 661; Dieringer v. Meyer, 42 Wis. 311, 24 Am. Rep. 415 (distinguished where the agent was merely planning to enter a rival business after his term expired, Myers v. Sullivan, 166 Mich. 193); Flemmer v. Ainsworth, [1910] Transvaal L. R. 81; Angehrn v. Federal Cold Storage Co., [1908] Transv. L. R. 761; Federal Cold Storage Co. v. Angehrn, [1910] Transv.

No previous notice can ordinarily be necessary to the agent that the principal will not be bound by such unknown dealings; nor can it ordinarily be required to third persons who know of the disloyalty, and, a fortiori, where they are conniving at it and seeking to profit by it.

Such disloyalty may, of course, be condoned, with full knowledge of the facts;¹⁷ but condonation will not be found from the mere fact of retention in the service, where the agent was all of the time insisting upon his innocence, and thereby inducing his principal to believe in it.¹⁸

§ 609. — Illustrations.—In accordance with these principles it has been held that where an agent with power to sell property, ran off with it and, having sold it, embezzled the proceeds, such fraudulent conduct of itself operated to terminate the agent's authority,¹⁹ and so where an insurance agent wrongfully appropriated and converted to his own use, the money of his principal which came into his hands by reason of his employment, it was held that he might lawfully be discharged therefor.²⁰

So it is well settled that if an agent who has contracted his entire time to his principal, without the consent of his principal, engage in an employment or business for himself or another, he may be lawfully discharged before the expiration of the agreed term of service.²¹ So he may be, also, if having undertaken to devote his energies and interests to the principal's affairs, he engages in business which may tend to injure his principal's trade or business. This is so because it is the duty of the agent not only to give his time and attention to his principal's business, but, by all lawful means at his command, to protect and advance his principal's interests. When the agent engages in a business which brings him into direct competition with his principal,

L. R. 1347, s. c. on appeal, 80 L. J. Rep. P. C. 1; Langhorne v. Bennett, 3 Victorian L. R. 108.

The cases frequently speak as though the disloyalty of the agent ipso facto operates to terminate the agency. E. g., Cotton v. Rand, 93 Tex. 7, 22; Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 115 C. C. A. 140, 195 Fed. 188.

¹⁷ Casady v. Carraher, 119 Iowa, 500.

¹⁸ Federal Cold Storage Co. v. Angehrn, supra; Federal Cold Storage Co. v. Angehrn, 80 L. J. Rep. Priv. C. 1.

¹⁹ Case v. Jennings, 17 Tex. 661. So where the agent conspires with others to defraud the principal. Cotton v. Rand, 93 Tex. 7. See also Phillips v. Foxall, L. R. 7 Q. B. 666.

²⁰ Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hal-loway, 51 Conn. 311, 50 Am. Rep. 20.

²¹ In Atlantic Compress Co. v. Young, 118 Ga. 868, held that where contract called for the agent's entire time, his failure to give it all warranted his discharge, and that any question whether outside work interfered with the employer's business or not, was an improper issue to go to the jury. See also Glaser v. National Alumni, 97 N. Y. Supp. 984; Hughes v. Toledo Scale Co., 112 Mo. App. 91.

the tendency is to injure or endanger, not to protect and promote, the interests of the latter. And it makes no difference in such a case that the agent gives his whole time and services to the business of his principal; his interest in the other business, though actually conducted by agents of his own, is hostile to his principal's interests.²²

§ 610. — Further illustrations.—So where a clerk and traveling agent, employed by the year, assaulted his principal's maid servant with intent to ravish her, it was held that this was a good cause for his dismissal without notice, and that he was not entitled to recover wages for the time he had served.²³ This decision was based upon the ground that the agent by his misconduct had broken the implied agreement which formed part of the contract of hiring and gave the principal the right to rescind it. So where an agent seduced the minor daughter of his principal, it was held that this was a good cause for his discharge and that the principal might recoup against the agent's claim for wages, the damages sustained by the seduction.²⁴

So if the agent proves to be wilfully or habitually disobedient or disregardful of his principal's reasonable instructions or directions;²⁵

²² Dieringer v. Meyer, 42 Wis. 311, 24 Am. Rep. 415 [citing Singer v. McCormick, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 265; Jaffray v. King, 34 Md. 217; Adams Express Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; Lacy v. Osbaldiston, 8 C. & P. 80; Read v. Dunsmore, 9 C. & P. 588; Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; Gardner v. McCutcheon, 4 Beav. 534; Ridgway v. Market Co., 3 Ad. & E. 171; Amor v. Fearon, 9 Ad. & E. 548; Horton v. McMurtry, 5 Hurl. & N. 667].

Thus where it appeared that a traveling salesman who had contracted his entire time to his employer, had been secretly taking orders for another firm, it was held that this would justify his discharge though employed for a fixed term. Orr v. Ward, 73 Ill. 318 [citing Ridgway v. Market Co., supra; Spotswood v. Barrow, 5 W. H. & G. 110].

In Day v. American Machinist Press, 86 N. Y. App. Div. 613, the fact that the plaintiff had taken steps to procure a copyright and had talked of the possibility of starting a rival business, was held not such disloyalty as would justify a dismissal. So merely planning to enter a rival business after his term expires is not enough. Myers v. Sullivan, 166 Mich. 193. See other cases cited in preceding section.

²³ Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208.

²⁴ Bixby v. Parsons, 49 Conn. 483, 44 Am. Rep. 246; Wood v. Barker, 12 Western L. Reporter, 225.

A female performer in a circus who is guilty of such immoral conduct as to scandalize and demoralize the whole company, may be rightfully dismissed. Drayton v. Reid, 5 Daly (N. Y.), 442. So may a man servant who openly boasts of his improper familiarity with women. Denham v. Patrick, 20 Ont. L. R. 347.

²⁵ Jerome v. Queen City Cycle Co., 163 N. Y. 351; Peniston v. Huber Co., 196 Pa. 580; Forsyth v. McKinney, 56 Hun (N. Y.), 1; Ford v. Danks, 16 La. Ann. 119; Edwards v. Levy, 2 Fost. & Fin. 94; Callo v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518. Where an agent wilfully sells his principal's goods for less than the fixed price or so conducts himself as to drive away his principal's customers, the principal is justified in discharging him. New-or if he proves to be an habitual drunkard, or if he becomes a drunkard to such an extent as to incapacitate him for the performance of his undertaking,²⁶ he may properly be discharged. And so if he becomes a gambler upon the stock exchange.²⁷

Further illustrations will be given in the note.²⁸ man v. Reagan, 65 Ga. 512. See also a striking illustration in Von Heyne v. Tompkins, 89 Minn. 77, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 524.

In Costet v. Jeantet, 108 N. Y. App. Div. 201, where it was expressly agreed that the employee should perform a particular service, it was held improper to submit to the jury the question whether a command to do the same was reasonable. In Lindner v. Brewing Co., 131 Mo. App. 680, it was held that a refusal by superintendent to go into the bottling department until the foreman apologized to him was such disobedience as would authorize a discharge. In the following cases a failure to make reports as requested was held to justify a discharge. Macfarren v. Gallinger, 210 Pa. 74; Kenner v. Southwestern Oil Co., 113 La. 80; Armstrong v. Ins. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 112 S. W. 327. In Russell v. Inman, 79 N. Y. App. Div. 227, an employee's persistence in signing his own name to firm correspondence was held to warrant his discharge.

Where a question of reasonableness in a command is in doubt, it is for the jury to determine under all the facts of the case. In Smith v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 115 N. Y. Supp. 204, a written contract of general employment was made in New York; the plaintiff was ordered to go to Philadelphia and refused. On question of reasonableness of the order, held that the jury could hear parol evidence in regard to a custom in the defendant's business of transferring its agents. In Development Co. v. King, 88 C. C. A. 255, 161 Fed. 91, 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 812, R was employed "to devote all his time * * * to service of the company and to the performance of such labors as the officers may direct." Prior to his contract R had been president of defendant company. R refused to obey an order to go to a remote part of Mexico and examine land, alleging it to be an unreasonable command. Held, that reasonableness was a question for the jury, and that the motive behind the command was immaterial provided the command itself was reasonable.

²⁶ McCormick v. Demary, 10 Neb. 515; Physioc v. Shea, 75 Ga. 466; Nolan v. Thompson, 11 Daly (N. Y.), 314; Bass Furnace Co. v. Glasscock, 82 Ala. 452, 60 Am. Rep. 748; Atkinson v. Heine, 134 N. Y. App. Div. 406; Mowbray v. Gould, 83 N. Y. App. Div. 225.

²⁷ Pearce v. Foster, 17 Q. B. Div. 536.

²⁸ In the following cases the facts were held to support a finding that the agent's misconduct warranted his dismissal. Standidge v. Lynde, 120 Ill. App. 418 (an attorney's clerk left his briefs one Saturday afternoon to play base ball); Wieselthier v. Cohen, 116 N. Y. Supp. 559 (the employee took and kept patterns belonging to his master); Highland Buggy Co. v. Parker, 27 Oh. Cir. Ct. 115 (a salesman sold below the prices fixed); Wright v. Lake, 48 Wash. 469 (negligence in twice allowing a team to run away); Alexander v. Potts, 151 Ill. App. 587 (disrespectful language to fellow employees and to customers); Shields v. Carson, 102 Ill. App. 38 (refusal of a salesman to return samples on request); Hutchinson v. Washburn, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 367 (overcharging in an expense account); Parks v. Tolman, 113 Mo. App. 14 (employer bargained

§ 611. — Limitations—Waiver—Condonation.—But it is not for every slight offense, or for every default causing no serious injury, that the agent is to be discharged. The question of the sufficiency of the reason in such a case is ordinarily one of fact and law to be determined from all the facts and circumstances of each particular transaction. The disobedience of the agent ought to be such as to show such a spirit of insubordination or of reckless and careless disregard for proper instructions as reasonably to indicate that he could not be relied upon for faithful and efficient service.²⁹

Where the principal undertakes to discharge because of specific acts of misconduct, he must, it is held, act with reasonable promptness after their discovery; otherwise he will be deemed to have waived or condoned them.³⁰ On the other hand, where the principal undertakes for services of an unmarried woman as stenographer. Regardless of reasons for the condition, marriage and concealment thereof was grounds for dismissal); McGeorge v. Ross, 5 Territories L. R. 116 (employee circulated false reports concerning the principal); Bonsquet v. Nellis, 35 Que. S. C. 209 (the employee slandered the master); Gourmany v. Manitoba Club, 1 West. L. R. 175 (club steward appropriated club supplies to his own use); Thomson v. Raworth, [1910] Transv. L. R. 782; Youngash v. Saskatchewan Engine Co., 16 West. L. R. 268; Walker v. John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co., — N. J. L. —, 79 Atl. 354; Thomas v. Houston, etc., Co., 146 Ky. 156 (wilful disobedience to orders).

²⁹ Shaver v. Ingham, 58 Mich. 649, 55 Am. Rep. 712.

Compare Jerome v. Cycle Co., supra. A single act of disobedience was held sufficient in Connell v. Gisborne Times Co., 28 New Zeal. L. R. 299; a single act of serious negligence in Baster v. London Printing Works, [1899] 1 Q. B. 901. There is no fixed standard by which the question may be decided in every case. It must often be left to the jury with proper instructions. Clouston v. Corry, [1906] App. Cas. 122. Of with Vidalia v. Mathews, 1 Ga. App. 56, where it is said that absence from employment may or may not justify a discharge. It is to be determined by considering the contract, the nature of the business and the effect upon the employer's interests.

Same: Brown v. Sessell, [1908] Transv. L. R. 1137.

In the following cases, the grounds for discharge were held insufficient. Porter v. Murphy, 7 Ind. Ter. 395 (M was retained as attorney by the Creek Nation; although his services were satisfactory, he was released because he was mentioned disparagingly in a report made by federal agents); Wood v. Ravenscroft, 135 Iowa, 346 (misrepresentations as to amount of salary paid by him to an assistant); Burt v. Catlin, 175 N. Y. 486 (fighting with a fellow servant which the jury found justifiable in view of the provocation); Beaucage v. Winnipeg Stone Co., 14 West. L. R. 575 (a single act of negligence which could be compensated by damages); Williams v. Hammond, 16 Manitoba, 369 (a single instance of disrespectful language provoked by the employer's conduct).

³⁰ In Batchelder v. Standard Elevator Co., 227 Pa. 201, 19 Ann. Cas. 875, it was held that intoxication was condoned by retention for a year thereafter; and likewise an act of misconduct in using his employer's time in outside service was condoned to discharge, not because of specific acts of misconduct, but because of an inherent want of capacity or integrity, of which various acts of misconduct were evidence, it is held that this doctrine of condonation by mere delay is not applicable.³¹

§ 612. Even though employed for definite time, agent may be discharged subject to liability for damages.—It must also be kept in mind that even though there is an employment for a definite time, and no right to terminate it exists, such employment may in fact be terminated and the employee discharged before the expiration of that time, subject to the employer's liability to pay damages for the wrongful discharge. Mere employments do not, as has been seen, come within the rules governing irrevocable authority,³² and, as will be seen hereafter, courts of equity do not ordinarily undertake to specifically enforce contracts of personal service or to enjoin their violation by the parties.³³

b. Manner of Revocation.

§ 613. How the authority may be revoked.—Passing now to the question of how the authority, when revocable by the principal, may be revoked, it may be observed that the means by which the authority may be revoked are as various as the methods by which it may be conferred. It may be done by a solemn instrument under seal, or by a writing not under seal, or by a public and formal announcement or proclamation, or by a simple and private declaration. It may also be inferred from circumstances.

The precise mode to be adopted in any given case, or the mode which, having been adopted, shall be deemed sufficient in such case, is to be determined largely by considering the object with which an authority is revoked. A revocation is not effected by the mere operation by lapse of one month before objection. In Reynolds v. Hart, 42 Colo. 150, the employee quit work for nine days; he resumed it with his employer's knowledge, and was discharged two days thereafter. The dereliction was held to have been condoned. And see Fitzpatrick Ginning Co. v. McLaney, 153 Ala. 586, 127 Am. St. R. 71.

³¹ Kelly Plow Co. v. London (Tex. Civ. App.), 125 S. W. 974. In Glasgow v. Hood (Tenn. Ch. App.), 57 S. W. 162, the business manager of a girls' seminary was discharged for incompetency. The court said: "The fact that the employer bears with the incompetency or irregularities of such employee for a time, or for years, even, does not estop him from discharging such employee for such incompetency if it continues."

To same effect is United Oil Co. v. Gray, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 10.

³² See ante, § 566. Frith v. Frith, [1906] App. Cas. 254.

³³ See post, §§ 642-644.

of the principal's will. That will must be expressed, and its expression must be brought to the attention of those whom it is desired to affect. This leads to the necessity of giving notice of the revocation, a question hereafter to be considered. It will be evident, too, that the mode adopted for accomplishing the revocation must not only be co-extensive with the degree to which by length of time or widespread operations or publicity of appointment, the knowledge of the authority has been disseminated, but that it must also be adapted to the particular means by which such dissemination was effected.

It is to be kept in mind, also, that the question now is as to the method and not as to the effect of revocation,—how, for example, the authority may be terminated and not whether such a termination is a breach of contract which will entitle the agent to damages.

§ 614. By sealed instrument.—It is very customary to revoke a power of attorney under seal by an instrument executed with the same degree of solemnity, and the statutes of many states provide for giving constructive notice of the revocation of a recorded power of attorney by recording the instrument of revocation in the same office with the power. But a revocation under seal is not necessary even where the authority was conferred by deed. A parol revocation will suffice,³⁴ and particularly so when the seal upon the power to be revoked was superfluous, not being required by the nature of the act to be performed.³⁵

§ 615. Express revocation not required.—Neither is it necessary that the revocation, in absence of a statute requiring it, should be in writing, or should be couched in any formal phrase. It is not necessary that the word “revoke,” or other similar words, should be used.³⁶ A request to resign may amount to a revocation or discharge. Thus ³⁴ Brookshire v. Brookshire, 8 Ired. (N. C.) Law, 74, 47 Am. Dec. 341; Copeland v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 198.

Recording revocation.—As to the necessity of recording the revocation, see post, § 636.

³⁵ Brookshire v. Brookshire, supra.

³⁶ Jones v. Graham, etc., Transp. Co., 51 Mich. 539. Notice to an agent that he would “better let it go,” is sufficient to revoke his authority to make a proposed purchase. First Nat. Bank v. Hall, 8 Mont. 341, 20 Pac. 638; or that the principal's wife will not sign a deed and therefore that the agent might just as well take the property off the market. Lacey v. Thomas, 164 Fed. 623.

Any language by which an employee is notified that his services are no longer required is sufficient to constitute a discharge from an employment. Ryan v. Mayor, 154 N. Y. 328; Signon v. Goldstone, 116 App. Div. 490. Refusing to accept the services except upon conditions violative of the contract is enough, Curtis v. Lehmann, 115 La. 40; or permitting only different and inferior work to be done, Wolf Cigar Stores v. Kramer, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 411.

the words "I am very sorry to have to ask you to resign your position" in a letter from a principal to his agent were held by the court to be a civil form but none the less a peremptory discharge of the agent, and that he rightly treated it as such.³⁷ So the demand by the principal of the return of a written power under which the agent was acting, and its surrender or withdrawal without any explanatory words or further instructions, amount to a revocation of the power.³⁸ On the other hand, a request to resign under circumstances showing that the employer desired a resignation but did not mean to force it, was held not to be a discharge.³⁹

§ 616. Revocation may be implied.—So a revocation may be implied from the circumstances of the case, as where something has been done or has happened which makes the further continuance of the authority inconsistent or incompatible with the present situation of affairs. Thus if the powers conferred upon one agent are subsequently given to another, it will, in general, operate as a revocation of the authority of the first, as where a power is given to an agent to sell the interest of a principal in a vessel and the principal afterwards confers the same power upon the first agent jointly with another.⁴⁰

³⁷ Jones v. Graham, etc., Transp. Co., supra.

³⁸ Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423.

An unequivocal notice of revocation will be effective even though it may inadvertently ascribe the wrong date to the power or even refer to one which was not the one executed. Switzer v. Switzer, 57 N. J. Eq. 421.

³⁹ Reiter v. Standard Scale Co., 141 Ill. App. 427. A voluntary resignation accepted terminates the employment by mutual consent without liability on either side. New York L. Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 150.

But where the employer wrote telling the employee in substance that his services were no longer required, saying that he presumed that the employee would prefer to retire by resignation and suggested that he send one and saying "It is hereby understood that the same is accepted," it was held not a voluntary resignation but a discharge. Cumberland, etc., R. Co. v. Slack, 45 Md.

161. In Wharton v. Christie, 53 N. J. L. 607, the court stood seven to six upon the question whether a resignation was voluntary or forced.

In Merrill v. Wakefield Rattan Co., 1 App. Div. 118, the employer requested a resignation and it was given unconditionally. It was held not a discharge, "Possibly, probably even, a refusal to resign would have been followed by a dismissal; but still there was no compulsion."

A mere complaint that the employee's services are very unsatisfactory is not per se a discharge. Caldwell Milling Co. v. Snively, 78 Kan. 556.

⁴⁰ Copeland v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Schafer's Estate, 39 Pa. Super. 384. So where property is put into the hands of an agent with instructions to make certain disposition of it, this authority will be revoked by subsequent directions to deliver the property to some one else. Keyl v. Westerhaus, 42 Mo. App. 49.

So a revocation will be implied if the agent is afterwards authorized to deal with the subject-matter in an entirely different capacity, as where an agent authorized to sell land is subsequently made trustee to hold it for the benefit of a third person.⁴¹ And so, where the principal subsequently authorizes an act inconsistent with the execution of the first power, as where having given authority to dismiss a suit he subsequently gives another authorizing its continuance.⁴²

§ 617. — Reducing rank, changing duties, etc.—So a revocation or discharge may be implied where the principal substantially reduces the rank, radically changes the nature of the duties, or insists upon the performance of materially greater or more onerous services, as compared with the rank, duties or services contemplated by the original contract of employment.⁴³ Not so, however, where the change is immaterial, casual, or such as may fairly be deemed to have been within the terms of the employment.⁴⁴

§ 618. — Acts not working a revocation.—But an employment by written contract to do a specified thing is not necessarily revoked by a subsequent general employment to attend to all the principal's business; ⁴⁵ nor is a power of attorney executed by a widow and heirs at law of a decedent empowering the agent to complete an engagement entered into by the decedent, necessarily revoked by a subsequent grant of administration to the widow; ⁴⁶ nor will a second power given to one of two previously appointed agents necessarily revoke the authority of the other, where the second appointment confers no new or additional authority in reference to the subject-matter of the agency; ⁴⁷ nor will an authority given by a principal to an agent to collect a sum of money, be necessarily revoked by the mere authorization of another agent to receive the same sum.⁴⁸

So where the present holder of a note allowed the former owner to continue to receive payments thereon from the maker as they fell due, ⁴¹ Chenault v. Quisenberry (Ky.), 56 S. W. 410, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 79, 57 S. W. 234. But authority to sell land is not necessarily terminated by the fact that the principal has given the agent an option to buy it himself. Lipscomb v. Cole, 81 Mo. App. 53.

⁴² Aiken v. Taylor (Tenn. Ch.), 62 S. W. 200.

⁴³ See Marx v. Miller, 134 Ala. 347; Cooper v. Stronge, 111 Minn. 177, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1011, 20 Ann. Cas. 663; Kramer v. Wolf Cigar Stores Co., 99 Tex. 597; Loos v. Walter

Brewing Co., 145 Wis. 1, 140 Am. St. R. 1052.

⁴⁴ See Excelsior Needle Co. v. Smith, 61 Conn. 56; Lathrop v. Printing Co. (R. I.), 30 Atl. 964; Wright v. Graves Land Co., 100 Wis. 269.

⁴⁵ Smith v. Lane, 101 Ind. 449.

⁴⁶ Jones v. Commercial Bank, 78 Ky. 413.

⁴⁷ Cushman v. Glover, 11 Ill. 600, 52 Am. Dec. 461.

⁴⁸ Davol v. Quimby, 11 Allen (Mass.), 203.

the authority of the maker to make further payments in the same way is not revoked merely by putting the note in a bank for collection, as the authority so given and exercised was entirely independent of the possession of the note.⁴⁹

§ 619. — By disposing of subject-matter.—Where the principal, before the execution of the authority by the agent disposes of the subject-matter upon which the authority was to operate, an intention to revoke the power will ordinarily be implied. Thus if a principal authorizes an agent to sell his real estate,⁵⁰ or his interest in a patent,⁵¹ but before the agent has found a purchaser the principal sells the same himself, there is nothing left to support the agency and—questions of notice not being involved—revocation will be implied.⁵² In one such case, the court said: "That act [the sale by the principal], of itself stripped her agent of all power to make another contract in derogation of that entered into by his principal. The agent could have no greater authority than the principal, and the latter having disposed of the subject-matter of the agency, the power of the agent to act any further in the premises was at once ended."⁵³

§ 620. — By dissolution of partnership or corporation.—So where a firm⁵⁴ or corporation⁵⁵ which has appointed an agent, is subsequently dissolved, the dissolution will ordinarily operate as a revocation of the power (though it does not usually terminate the contract of employment);⁵⁶ but a mere change in the name of the firm, where the new firm is composed of the same members as the old does not operate

⁴⁹ Enright v. Beaumont, 68 Vt. 249.

⁵⁰ Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 548; Ahern v. Baker, 34 Minn. 98; Mott v. Ferguson, 92 Minn. 201; White v. Benton, 121 Iowa, 354; Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423; Hallstead v. Perrigo, 87 Neb. 128; Frazier v. Cox (Ky.), 125 S. W. 148; Lowell v. Hesse, 46 Colo. 517; Wallace v. Figone, 107 Mo. App. 362. As to the necessity of notice of the sale, see post, under head of Notice.

⁵¹ Walker v. Denison, 86 Ill. 142. (This was called a termination "by operation of law," but it was not that in any proper sense. The agent knew of the sale, and the action was to get back from the agent's wife property which had been conveyed to her by the persons to whom the agent had undertaken to sell.)

⁵² Bissell v. Terry, 69 Ill. 184. (Here all parties knew of the sale.) Same where for example he sells a judgment which his attorney would otherwise have authority to enforce and collect. Caldwell v. Bigger, 76 Kan. 49.

⁵³ Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423, supra.

⁵⁴ Schlater v. Winpenny, 75 Penn. St. 321; Whitworth v. Ballard, 56 Ind. 279; Meyer v. Atkins, 29 La. Ann. 586; Vaccaro v. Toof, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 194.

⁵⁵ Salton v. New Beeston Cycle Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 43.

⁵⁶ Brace v. Calder, [1895] 2 Q. B. 253; Tiffin Glass Co. v. Stoehr, 54 Ohio St. 157; Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones, 129 Mich. 664; Kinsman v. Fisk, 37 N. Y. App. Div. 443; Spader v. Mfg. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 18. But see Louch-

to revoke an agency conferred upon it, the identity remaining the same.⁵⁷

§ 621. — By severance of a joint interest.—Upon similar grounds, it is held that where two or more principals jointly appoint an agent for the transaction of some business in which they are jointly interested, a severance of this joint interest will operate to revoke the agency.⁵⁸

§ 622. — Subagent's authority terminated by termination of authority of principal agent.—The termination of the authority of an agent terminates also the authority of subagents who derive their authority from him, and this is true even though he may have been expressly authorized to appoint them if they were appointed as his agents.⁵⁹

c. Notice of Revocation.

§ 623. Notice usually necessary.—In order to render the termination of the authority by the act of the principal effectual, notice of it must, as a general rule, be given to those parties who are to be affected by it; and these parties are, usually, the agent himself, and those persons who from knowledge of his authority or from previous dealings with him, would be likely to deal with him in good faith in ignorance of the termination and upon the strength of the previous authority. It is necessary therefore to consider when notice of termination of the agent's authority must be given (1) to the agent, (2) in some cases to subagents, and (3) to third persons.

§ 624. 1. To the agent—When notice must be given to him.—Notice of the termination of the agent's authority by the act of the principal must, in general, be given by the principal to the agent, and, in general, the revocation will not, as between the principal and the agent, become operative against the agent until such notice is given to him.⁶⁰ In some cases, indeed, as in those in which revocation can not heim v. Printing Co., 12 Pa. Super. 55; People v. Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 174; Lenoir v. Linville Impr. Co., 126 N. C. 922.

⁵⁷ Billingsley v. Dawson, 27 Iowa, 210.

⁵⁸ Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ind. 206.

⁵⁹ Union Casualty Co. v. Gray, 52 C. C. A. 224, 114 Fed. 422.

⁶⁰ Weile v. United States, 7 Ct. of Cl. 535 (notice to third person only held not enough); Jones v. Hodgkins, 61 Me. 480 (commission agent not liable in trover for selling goods after intended revocation but before notice); Best v. Gunther, 125 Wis. 518, 110 Am. St. R. 851, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 577; Spinks v. Georgia Granite Co., 114 La. 1044.

Where the parties had stipulated for "immediate notice" to the agent, it was held that this meant notice within a reasonable time, taking all the circumstances into account, and well be manifested by conduct, a notice of revocation seems to be the only method open for the accomplishment of the object. Where the authority terminates by mere lapse of time, or upon the accomplishment of the object, or upon any other fixed or certain event, notice, of course, is unnecessary, as the agent knows these things as well as the principal; but the agent can not be presumed to know, until in some manner he has been notified, of the uncertain and unforeseen act of the principal in terminating the authority by his own act, and before it would otherwise have terminated. Hence, notice in some form must be given to the agent. If it be given by letter, it takes effect from the time the agent receives the letter, and not from the time of its mailing.⁶¹ But after revocation of the agent's authority, the principal is not bound, as between himself and the agent, to notify the latter of his dissent from acts which the agent thereafter assumes to do by virtue of the original authority.⁶²

§ 625. — When notice to agent not required.—There can, of course, however, be no necessity of formally notifying the agent of facts which he already knows.⁶³ He may, perhaps, know them before the principal does, or know them better than anyone else. There can be no necessity of notifying him of the happening of events, which like death and bankruptcy, operate ipso facto to terminate an agency.⁶⁴ Neither can there be any necessity of notifying him of events which by the express or implied terms of his employment he can be said to have assumed the risk of knowing. Thus it has been held in many cases—questionably, it is believed, unless it can be put upon the ground of an implied term in the employment⁶⁵—that a real estate broker's authority to sell is terminated, ipso facto and without notice, by a sale made by the principal in person, or through another broker.⁶⁶ that the jury were to determine whether this requirement had been satisfied. Tuffree v. Binford, 130 Iowa, 532.

⁶¹ Robertson v. Cloud, 47 Miss. 208; Sayre v. Wilson, 86 Ala. 151. A notice sent to and received at the right place takes effect on such receipt, though the agent by reason of absence did not see it till later, if the sender was ignorant of his absence. Rees v. Pellow, 38 C. C. A. 94, 97 Fed. 167.

A notice given to the agent through another agent of the principal authorized to give it, is sufficient. Freeland v. Hughes, 109 Ill. App. 73.

⁶² Kelly v. Phelps, 57 Wis. 425.

⁶³ Palms v. Howard, 129 Ky. 668.

⁶⁴ See post, §§ 701-3.

⁶⁵ See post, Book V, Chap. III, Real Estate Brokers.

⁶⁶ Ahern v. Baker, 34 Minn. 98; White v. Benton, 121 Iowa, 354; Hallstead v. Perrigo, 87 Neb. 128; Wallace v. Figone, 107 Mo. App. 362; Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423; Teal v. McKnight, 110 La. 256; Smith v. Fowler, 57 Tex. Civ. App. 356; Frazier v. Cox (Ky.), 125 S. W. 148; Mott v. Ferguson, 92 Minn. 201.

Contra: Woodall v. Foster, 91 Tenn. 195, especially where there is a pro-

§ 626. — Constructive notice.—It has also been held that the registry of a deed, made by the principal upon such a sale, is constructive notice to the agent under a statute which provides that recording shall be, "notice to all persons of the existence of such deed."⁶⁷ This would seem to be doubtful except for such a statute.

§ 627. 2. To subagents—When notice must be given to subagent. Where the subagent derives his authority solely from the agent, no notice is required to be given by the principal to the subagent of the revocation of the agent's authority; but where the subagent was appointed by and with the authority of the principal, he is, as has been seen, the agent of the principal, and notice should be given to him of the revocation of his authority.⁶⁸

§ 628. 3. To third persons—Where authority was general.—With respect of third persons, a distinction is made between the case in which the authority was a "general" or apparently continuing one, and the case in which the authority was "special" or confined to the doing of some specific act, and therefore ordinarily exhausted when that act is done. Where a general authority is once shown to have existed, it may be presumed to continue until it is shown to have been revoked,⁶⁹ and persons who have dealt with the agent as such, or who have had knowledge of his authority and are therefore likely to deal with him, may very properly expect that if the authority be withdrawn, reasonable and timely notice of that fact will be given and they may therefore lawfully presume, in the absence of such notice, that the authority still continues.

General rule.—It is therefore the general rule that the acts of a former general agent within the scope of his original authority will, notwithstanding its revocation, continue to bind the former principal to those parties to whom the agent has been thus accredited and who deal with him in good faith in reliance upon his former authority, until due notice of its revocation⁷⁰ has been given in the manner required vision requiring notice. Reams v. Wilson, 147 N. Car. 304.

⁶⁷ Donnan v. Adams, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 615.

⁶⁸ Story on Agency, § 469.

⁶⁹ Insurance Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84, 24 L. Ed. 652; McNeilly v. Insurance Co., 66 N. Y. 23.

⁷⁰ Wheeler v. McGuire, 86 Ala. 398, 2 L. R. A. 808; Stockton Ice Co. v. Argonaut Land Co. (Cal.), 56 Pac. 885; Bourke v. Van Keuren, 20 Colo. 95; Fellows v. Hartford, etc., Co., 38 Conn. 197; Feldmann v. Shea, 6

Idaho, 717; Diversy v. Kellogg, 44 Ill. 114; Murphy v. Ottenheimer, 84 Ill. 39; Meyer v. Hehner, 96 Ill. 400; Meeker v. Mannia, 162 Ill. 203; Longworth v. Conwell, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 469; Ulrich v. McCormick, 66 Ind. 243; North Chicago, etc., Mill Co. v.

It is true that some of these cases arose between the principal and third persons only, though the language used is general. For further discussion, see Real Estate Brokers in the chapter on Brokers.

by the law for the class of persons to which they belong. But this rule has no application where the act done is beyond the scope of the agent's former authority, and particularly so where the act is in excess of the power which the agent himself claimed to possess.⁷¹

Notice would not be necessary of the revocation of the authority of a subagent, unless he was so appointed with the principal's consent as to make him the principal's agent.⁷²

§ 629. — Where authority was special.—Where, however, the authority was special or limited to the performance of a single act, a different rule applies. As has been seen, an authority created for the performance of a specific act exhausts itself in the accomplishment of the purpose for which it was created. No such presumption of continuity can arise from the existence of authority for the performance of a single act, as naturally arises from the existence of authority for a continuous course of dealing.

General rule.—It is therefore the general rule that no notice is required to be given to third persons of the termination of the authority of a special agent after the special authority has been executed.⁷³

This rule must, however, be subject to the considerations already considered in an earlier chapter.⁷⁴ It is possible that even a special Hyland, 94 Ind. 448; Springfield, etc., Co. v. Kennedy, 7 Ind. App. 502; Baudouine v. Grimes, 64 Iowa, 370; Hancock v. Byrne, 5 Dana (Ky.), 513; Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Ky. L. R. 988, 107 S. W. 322; Girard v. Hirsch, 6 La. Ann. 651; Harris v. Cuddy, 21 La. Ann. 388; Maxey Mfg. Co. v. Burnham, 89 Me. 538, 56 Am. St. R. 436; Packer v. Hinckley Locomotive Works, 122 Mass. 484; Wright v. Herrick, 128 Mass. 240; Planters' Bank v. Cameron, 3 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 609; Lamothe v. St. Louis, etc., Co., 17 Mo. 204; Beard v. Kirk, 11 N. H. 397; Capen v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Dutch. (N. Y.) 67, 64 Am. Dec. 412; McNeilly v. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 23; Claflin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301; Barkley v. Rensselaer, etc., Co., 71 N. Y. 205; Munn v. Commission Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 44; Marsh v. Gilbert, 4 Thomp. & Cook (N. Y.), 259; Marshall v. Reading F. Ins. Co., 78 Hun (N. Y.), 83, aff'd 149 N. Y. 617; Rice v. Isham, 4 Abb. App. (N. Y.) 37; Clover Condensed Milk Co. v.

Cushman, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 108; Stevens v. Schroeder, 40 N. Y. App. Div. 590; Vogel v. Weissmann, 23 N. Y. Misc. 256; Lynch v. Rabe, 28 N. Y. Misc. 215; Braswell v. American L. Ins. Co., 75 N. C. 8; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Stambaugh-Thompson Co., 76 Ohio, 138, 118 Am. St. R. 834; Tier v. Lampson, 35 Vt. 179, 82 Am. Dec. 634; Hatch v. Coddington, 95 U. S. 48, 24 L. Ed. 339; Insurance Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84, 24 L. Ed. 653; Johnson v. Christian, 128 U. S. 374, 32 L. Ed. 412.

Termination by lapse of time.—Where authority of a general agent terminates by lapse of time for its continuance, principal must give notice to those who did not know of the limit fixed. Willis v. Joyce, 27 Times L. R. 388, 16 Com'l Cas. 190.

⁷¹ Baudouine v. Grimes, 64 Iowa, 370.

⁷² See ante, §§ 622, 627; post, § 675.

⁷³ Watts v. Kavanagh, 35 Vt. 34; Strachan v. Muxlow, 24 Wis. 21.

⁷⁴ See ante, § 262.

agency may be accompanied by such generality in its creation or its recognition as to reasonably warrant an inference of its continuing character.

§ 630. — Where, however, the principal seeks to revoke the authority before its execution, different considerations apply. Such a case stands practically upon the same footing as any other. If the special agent has been accredited to a particular person, that person should ordinarily be notified: if the principal knows that negotiations have been begun with a particular person, the same requirement would ordinarily exist; in other cases, the principal must doubtless do whatever he reasonably should, if any thing, to prevent third persons who are charged with the duty of protecting themselves, in dealing with agents, from being misled by acting upon a power withdrawn.⁷⁵

Third persons are not, in this case, entitled to the same consideration as in the case of the so called general agency. The situation presupposes the absence of a habit or course of dealing, and there is nothing ordinarily to qualify the general rule that those who deal with an alleged agent must look to his authority.

§ 631. — Moreover, as there may be express, there may also doubtless be implied conditions read into the authority even so far as third persons are concerned. Thus it is held that a third person contracting for the purchase of land through an agent acquires no rights against the principal if the latter has previously sold the land in person or through another agent even though the third person and the agent were both ignorant of the fact.⁷⁶ In a leading case,⁷⁷ the court said: "This is a case of special agency, and there is nothing in the case going to show that the defendant [the principal] would be estopped from setting up a revocation of the agency prior to the sale by Fairchild [the agent]. A revocation may be shown by the death of the principal, the destruction of the subject-matter, or the determination of his estate by a sale, as well as by express notice. The defendant had a right to employ several agents, and the act of one in making a sale would preclude the others without notice, unless the nature of ⁷⁵ "Where it appears that a person has been constituted a special agent to do a particular thing, and his authority to do this particular thing has been revoked before he acts in the matter, the principal will not be bound by a subsequent performance of the act, where the principal has not held the agent out as having the authority notwithstanding the revocation, and has not subsequently ratified the act." Florida Central R. Co. v. Ashmore, 43 Fla. 272.

⁷⁶ Ahern v. Baker, 34 Minn. 98; Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423.

⁷⁷ Ahern v. Baker, supra.

his contract with them required it. In dealing with the agent the plaintiff took the risk of the revocation of his agency."

The collocation here, as though they were of equal rank, of the death of the principal, the destruction of the subject-matter, perhaps by a vis major, and a sale by the act of the principal, is certainly questionable. If the case is sound it would seem that the true ground must be either the one first suggested by the court that, the authority having been revoked by the sale, before the third person knew of the former authority, there was nothing to estop the principal from setting up the prior revocation against him, or, as suggested in the last clause of the quotation, that in all dealings with a mere real estate broker there is an implied condition that all negotiations through him are subject to the contingency of a prior sale, either by the principal in person or through another broker.

It will be observed also in this case that no notice had been given to the agent.

§ 632. ——— Theory of necessity of notice.—Revocation or other termination of authority is usually a matter of intention and fact, rather than a matter of form. Notice to third persons is not per se an indispensable part of it. The necessity of notice to them arises from the doctrine of estoppel. The principal for his own purposes has conferred authority and done something to cause it to appear. He wishes and intends that it shall be relied and acted upon. Otherwise, it would be of no avail. He now does or has done something by which or upon which he desires and intends the authority to terminate. If, however, notwithstanding this, what he did or caused respecting the creation of the authority is likely to lead reasonable men, ignorant of the change of fact or intention, reasonably to conclude that the authority still continues and to act upon that conclusion in such wise as to prejudice them if the conclusion be unfounded, he owes them a duty to take reasonable precautions to prevent that prejudice to them. If no such prejudice can arise, he owes no such duty.

§ 633. ——— Stated in a different form, after the authority of the agent has in fact terminated, the former principal can not be bound by his acts, unless the person seeking to bind him can work an estoppel against him which will prevent the principal from showing the fact of the termination. What are the elements of such an estoppel? 1. A representation. 2. A reasonable reliance upon it. In order to work an estoppel, then, the principal must have made some representation, by word or conduct, which reasonably led the other party to conclude that an authority once created by the principal still existed at the time in question; and the other party must have acted upon that representation in such wise that he will now be prejudiced if it be not true. What was the representation in question? Was it the representation of authority in the agent to do a single act, or at a particular time only? If so, it warrants no inference of authority for other acts or at other times. Was it a representation of an exclusive authority to do the act, or did it leave it open for the principal to do the act in person or to authorize it to be done by some other agent also? Was the authority created so long ago that no reasonable man could properly infer that it still existed, or was it so recent that a reasonable man would properly conclude that it must be still in force? Was it apparently a general and continuing power which may fairly be deemed still operative? Was it, perhaps, a representation so made to the particular person that he might fairly conclude that it was to continue until he was notified to the contrary? In order to support an estoppel, the representation must have been of an authority which in the fair judgment of a reasonable man was still operative at the time in question.

§ 634. Notice—How given—What sufficient.—What shall be deemed sufficient notice in any case, and how it shall be given, are questions concerning which it is impossible to lay down any general rule, which shall be both comprehensive and precise. It is evident that these questions must be largely determined by the facts and circumstances of each particular case. The end to be aimed at must be a method reasonably adapted to reach the classes of persons entitled to receive notice.

The case is often said to be analogous to that of the dissolution of a partnership, and to be governed by the same rules.⁷⁸ To all persons who have had actual dealings with the agent, involving the giving of credit in reliance upon the existence of the authority,⁷⁹ actual notice must be given,⁸⁰ or such knowledge of the fact must be brought home to them as would be sufficient to put an ordinarily prudent man upon inquiry.⁸¹ To persons who have had no such actual dealings, notice ⁷⁸ Clafin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301, 305; Lynch v. Rabe, 28 Misc. 215; Stevens v. Schroeder, 40 App. Div. 590.

⁷⁹ In partnership, those only are entitled to actual notice, under the head of former dealers or customers who have given credit to the firm. Vernon v. Manhattan Co., 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; Clapp v. Rogers, 12 N. Y. 283; Austin v. Holland, 69 N. Y.

571, 25 Am. Rep. 246; Askew v. Silman, 95 Ga. 678; Merritt v. Williams, 17 Kan. 287.

⁸⁰ Clafin v. Lenheim, supra; Lynch v. Rabe, supra; Stevens v. Schroeder, supra; Braswell v. American L. Ins. Co., 75 N. C. 8; Fellows v. Hartford, etc., Co., 38 Conn. 197.

⁸¹ See Williams v. Birbeck, Hoffman (N. Y.), Ch. 359. Notice that the principal has appointed some one may be given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation in the place in which the business is carried on.⁸² Notice by publication is sufficient even to those who have had dealings with the agent if it can be shown that they actually received it; otherwise not.⁸³

§ 635. — The notice need not, of course, be in any particular form, but it must be clear and unequivocal; it need not come directly from the principal, but it must at least come through an apparently authentic channel, so as to fairly put the other party on inquiry.⁸⁴

Where notice by publication or other similar means is all that the law requires it is, of course, immaterial that the party now claiming did not in fact know of the revocation. He is bound to know that the authority may be so revoked and must govern himself accordingly.⁸⁵

§ 636. When evidence of agency recorded, revocation should be recorded.—It is a common provision of the statutes of the various else to do the act, where authority to two would be inconsistent, would be enough (Clark v. Mullenix, 11 Ind. 532); but mere knowledge that the principal's store has burned is not necessarily enough (Clafin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301); nor is a notice stamped upon the face of a notice to pay a life insurance premium to "remit direct to the home office" conclusive. McNeilly v. Continental Life Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 23.

⁸² Notice by publication is by no means a sine qua non. It is a method prima facie sufficient, but there may be no newspaper available, or the only one available may be of such limited circulation or otherwise so peculiar as not to make its use a reasonable method.

⁸³ See Haynes v. Carter, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 7, 27 Am. Rep. 747; Rose v. Coffield, 53 Md. 18, 36 Am. Rep. 389; Robinson v. Floyd, 159 Pa. 165; Union Bank v. Lumber Co., 70 W. Va. 558, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 663.

⁸⁴ Plaintiff being dissatisfied with the conduct of his agent C, instructed D to act in the settlement of a certain matter with defendant. D went to defendant, showed him his authority to represent plaintiff and notified defendant to settle with him and not with C. Nevertheless defendant settled with C. Held, not binding on plaintiff. Johnson v. Youngs, 82 Wis. 107.

C, in Montana, had been buying wool for H of Chicago. Having an opportunity to buy a quantity at a certain price, C telegraphed H, saying that otherwise the wool would "go Boston" and "give your opinion quick." H telegraphed back "No money in it; better let it go to Boston." Nevertheless C bought it at a slight reduction from price named and drew on H for the price. Plaintiff a Montana bank bought the draft. In an action to recover of H held, that C's authority to buy was revoked by the telegram of H. First Nat. Bank v. Hall, 8 Mont. 341.

Notice given by another agent of the principal authorized to give it, is sufficient. Freeland v. Hughes, 109 Ill. App. 73.

Notice that the principal has done some act which works a revocation, is enough. Faraday Coal Co. v. Owens, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 243, 80 S. W. 1171.

Where the authority of the agent is revoked within the presence and hearing of the other party, no further or formal notice need be given to the latter. Byrne v. Realty Co., 120 N. Y. App. Div. 692.

⁸⁵ See Shuey v. United States, 92 U. S. 73, 23 L. Ed. 697.

states, that powers of attorney or other instruments conferring authority upon the agent to deal with the principal's real estate, shall or may be recorded in the proper recording office of the county or district in which the land is situated.⁸⁶ These statutes commonly provide also that any instrument revoking such a power shall or may be recorded in the same office, and make such recording in either case constructive notice of the facts which the record discloses. Where such statutes prevail, the recording of a revocation of the agent's authority is notice to all who may subsequently have occasion to deal with him;⁸⁷ and where the statute is imperative, the revocation cannot be given effect in any other way, unless by express notice.⁸⁸

§ 637. Notice of revocation should be unequivocal.—But whatever may be the form adopted, the notice should be unequivocal and not leave the parties in doubt as to the principal's intentions. Any ambiguity or uncertainty in such a case should be construed most strongly against the principal, in whose power it lay to prevent such a result.

As was said by a distinguished judge in a case involving the revocation of an express power to draw bills, "Nothing could be more inconsistent with that candor and good faith which ought to mark the transactions of mercantile men, than to favor the revocation of an explicit contract on the construction of a correspondence nowhere avowing that object. It was in the defendant's power to have revoked his assumption, at any time prior to its execution; but it was incumbent on him to have done so avowedly, and in language that could not be charged with equivocation."⁸⁹

⁸⁶ See Williams v. Birbeck, 1 Hoff. N. Y. Ch. 359.

The statute of Michigan, for example, provides that "No letter of attorney or other instrument so recorded, shall be deemed to be revoked by any act of the party by whom it was executed, unless the instrument containing such revocation be also recorded in the same office in which the instrument containing the power was recorded." How. Stats., § 5692.

⁸⁷ Arnold v. Stevenson, 2 Nev. 234. But in Best v. Gunther, 125 Wis. 518, 110 Am. St. R. 551, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 577, it is held that under a statute similar to that above quoted, a power of attorney is not required to be recorded, and that though it be recorded, a recorded revocation is not constructively notice of that fact. A provision that a revocation shall not be operative in a given case unless recorded is held not equivalent to a declaration that it shall be operative if recorded.

⁸⁸ Gratz v. Land, etc., Imp. Co., 82 Fed. 341, 53 U. S. App. 499, 27 C. C. A. 305, 40 L. R. A. 393.

⁸⁹ Johnson, J., in Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101, 143, 4 L. Ed. 343. See also Hatch v. Coddington, 95 U. S. 48, 56, 24 L. Ed. 339; Clafin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301; McNeilly v. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 23.

§ 638. How sufficiency of notice determined.—Where the circumstances are controverted, or where notice is sought to be inferred as a fact from circumstances, and more than one inference can reasonably be drawn from the facts, the question is for the jury;⁹⁰ they must determine as a question of fact whether the party claiming against the principal did or did not have notice of revocation; and if there be some evidence of this fact, it must be submitted to the jury. Where, however, the facts are undisputed, and the only question is whether they amount to constructive notice, or are sufficient to put the party upon inquiry, the question is not for the jury, but for the court.⁹¹

§ 639. Burden of proof as to notice.—Where authority has existed, but the principal claims that it was revoked and proper notice given, the burden of proof is upon the principal to establish it.⁹²

2. Public Agency.

§ 640. Statutory agency not revocable at will of principal.—Where the state requires the creation and maintenance of an agency to subserve some purpose in which its citizens may have an interest, the authority of an agent appointed in pursuance of such a requirement cannot be revoked at the mere will of the principal, unless for the appointment of another in his place, while the exigency continues against which the statute was intended to provide.⁹³

Thus where a statute required any foreign insurance company doing business within the state, to appoint an agent within the state upon whom process against the company might be served, it was held that the company having appointed such an agent, could only revoke his authority upon the appointment of another. Said the court: "Taking into consideration its evident purpose, and its utter futility if a company appointing an agent to receive service could by any act, known only to the agent and itself, withdraw his powers, it must be held that this appointment was irrevocable, unless the revocation might be made ⁹⁰ Perrine v. Jermyn, 163 Pa. 497; Grauley v. Jermyn, 163 Pa. 501.

⁹¹ Claffin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301.

⁹² Perrine v. Jermyn, 163 Pa. 497; Grauley v. Jermyn, 163 Pa. 501; Foddrill v. Dooley, 131 Ga. 790.

⁹³ See, in the case of insurance companies required to appoint an agent to receive service of process. Gibson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 144 Mass. 81; Michael v. Mutual Ins. Co., 10 La. Ann. 737; Groel v. United Electric Co., 69 N. J. Eq. 397; Per-

vanger v. Union Casualty Co., 81 Miss. 32; Magoffin v. Mutual Reserve F. L. Ass'n, 87 Minn. 260, 94 Am. St. R. 699; Woodward v. Mutual Reserve F. L. Ass'n, 178 N. Y. 485, 102 Am. St. R. 519; Biggs v. Mutual Reserve F. L. Ass'n, 128 N. C. 5.

But there may be revocation so far as non-residents are concerned. Hunter v. Mutual Reserve L. Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 136, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 677, 6 Ann. Cas. 291, aff'd 218 U. S. 573, 54 L. Ed. 1155, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 686.

by the appointment, duly notified upon the records, of a new agent, who should be competent to receive service of process in regard to any controversies arising upon contracts previously entered into.”⁹⁴

C. Renunciation by the Agent.

§ 641. General rule—Agent may renounce at any time.—It has already been seen that agency depends usually upon the assent of both parties. It has been seen also that the principal may, in general, withdraw his assent at any time, subject to liability in damages in case he does so in violation of his agreement. Substantially correlative is the situation of the agent. He may, in general, renounce his agency at any time. His power to do this, in the sense that his further performance will not be specifically enforced, is co-extensive with the principal's power to revoke; but his right to do so, is, like the principal's right to revoke, limited by his contracts in the premises. Where the agency is indefinite in duration the agent may, upon giving reasonable notice, sever the relation at any stage without liability to the principal,⁹⁵ and will be entitled to compensation and reimbursement for his services and expenses up to that time.⁹⁶ Where, however, the agency was created for a definite period, or the accomplishment of a particular result was undertaken for a valuable consideration, the agent who renounces before the expiration of that period, or before ⁹⁴ Gibson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., supra.

⁹⁵ Barrows v. Cushway, 37 Mich. 481; United States v. Jarvis, Davies, 274, 2 Ware, 278, 26 Fed. Cas. 587; Owensboro Wagon Co. v. Hall, 143 Ala. 177; Security Trust Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349. See also Coffin v. Landis, 46 Pa. St. 426.

In Owensboro Wagon Co. v. Hall, supra, contract created an agency to sell for no definite period, but gave the principal a right after twelve months to treat the agent as a purchaser of the merchandise unsold, held, that a sale by the agent of his business and notification thereof, before the expiration of twelve months, was a renunciation of the agency and did not obligate the agent to answer as a purchaser of the unsold wares.

Notice of renunciation.—It is not essential in the ordinary case that there shall be any formal or particular notice of an intention to renounce. A stipulation in the contract may make it necessary, or custom may require it. But even though the agency is at will and the agent may renounce it without liability, there are many cases wherein reasonable notice of the intention to renounce is necessary. Thus, an agent having the custody of property would not be justified under many circumstances in summarily abandoning it without reasonable notice; a locomotive engineer would not be justified in leaving his engine in a dangerous position having given no notice which would enable the company to provide other means of caring for the property and protecting the lives entrusted to it; a teamster would not be justified in abandoning his team upon the highway without reasonable notice; and the like. See Toledo, etc., R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 746. 19 L. R. A. 395.

⁹⁶ See post, Book IV, Chap. IV.

the performance of his undertaking, will be liable to his principal for the damages he may sustain thereby.⁹⁷

§ 642. Enforcement of contract—Specific performance—Injunction to prevent breach.—The action for damages, as suggested in the last section, is, moreover, ordinarily the only remedy for the breach of the contract, for it is well settled, as a general rule, that courts will not undertake to enforce the specific performance of contracts for personal service, or interfere by injunction to prevent their breach.⁹⁸ In a leading case before the United States court of appeals it was said by Mr. Justice Harlan, "The rule, we think, is without exception that equity will not compel the actual, affirmative performance by an employe of merely personal services, any more than it will compel an employer to retain in his personal service one who, no matter for what cause, is not acceptable to him for service of that character. The right of an employe, engaged to perform personal service, to quit that service rests upon the same basis as the right of his employer to discharge him from further personal service. If the quitting in the one case, or the discharging in the other, is in violation of the contract between the parties, the one injured by the breach has his action for ⁹⁷ United States v. Jarvis, supra; Coffin v. Landis, supra; Cannon Coal Co. v. Taggart, 1 Colo. App. 60; White v. Smith, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 5, aff'd 54 N. Y. 322.

Implied covenants for continuance.—An undertaking upon the part of the agent to serve for a particular time may, of course, like the correlative undertaking of the principal to employ him for a definite time (see ante, § 600), be implied from the facts and circumstances of the case. But it is not likely to be implied. "The doctrine of implied covenants is in a sense an equitable doctrine, and is enforced upon the broad principle that the law implies a covenant in the agreement where it is clear that if the attention of the party had been called to it he would have expressly agreed." In Security Trust Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349, 109 N. W. 125, the court refused to infer an agreement upon the part of the agent to serve at least until the business could be successfully established.

⁹⁸ See Fry on Specific Performance (4th Eng. Ed.), §§ 110-115.

By agent against principal.—Brett v. East India, etc., Co., 2 H. & M. 404; Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 30 L. J. Ch. 409; Bertram v. Ball, 27 Sol. Jour. 39; Alworth v. Seymour, 42 Minn. 526; Coburn v. Cedar Valley Co., 25 Fed. 791; Thomas v. Supervisors, 56 Ill. 351; Bronk v. Riley, 50 Hun (N. Y.), 489; Healy v. Allen, 38 La. Ann. 867; Healey v. Dillon, 39 La. Ann. 503, 2 So. 49; Elwell v. Coon (N. J. Eq.), 46 Atl. 580.

By principal against agent.—Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 730, 19 L. R. A. 387; Same v. Same, 54 Fed. 746, 19 L. R. A. 395; Arthur v. Oakes, 63 Fed. 310, 11 C. C. A. 209, 25 L. R. A. 414; Rogers Mfg. Co. v. Rogers, 58 Com. 356, 18 Am. St. Rep. 278, 7 L. R. A. 779; Cort v. Lassard, 18 Or. 221, 17 Am. St. Rep. 726, 6 L. R. A. 653.

See Columbia College of Music v. Tunberg, 64 Wash. 19.

damages; and a court of equity will not, indirectly or negatively, by means of an injunction restraining the violation of the contract, compel the affirmative performance from day to day or the affirmative acceptance of merely personal services. Relief of that sort has always been regarded as impracticable."⁹⁹

§ 643. — Injunction where services unique and damages not adequate.—There may, however, be cases wherein, by reason of the peculiar circumstances, the remedy by the award of damages will not be adequate and the party will suffer irreparable loss if no other remedy be afforded. Ordinary services are presumptively always in the market and the person who has been deprived of the particular ones to which he was entitled may presumptively, with the damages awarded, make himself whole by engaging others. Where, however, the services stipulated for were unique, individual, peculiar, not capable of being adequately replaced, and the difficulty of estimating the actual loss which the employer will suffer is great, a different rule ought to be applied. In such cases it is now well settled that, while a court will not undertake to compel specific performance, it may, certainly where the contract contains negative covenants not to be employed by others,¹ and, by the weight of American authority, at least, even without them if the fair construction of the contract implies such covenants,² interfere by injunction to prevent the party employed from serving another in violation of his agreement with the complainant.

§ 644. — Mutuality.—Whether the court will even negatively interfere—that is, by injunction though not by an affirmative ⁹⁹ Arthur v. Oakes, supra.

¹ Lumley v. Wagner, 1 DeGex, M. & G. 604; Whitwood Chemical Co. v. Hardman, [1891] 2 Ch. 416; Daly v. Smith, 49 How. Pr. 150, 6 J. & Sp. 158; Philadelphia Ball Club v. Lajoie, 202 Pa. 210, 90 Am. St. 627, 58 L. R. A. 227; Canary v. Russell, 9 N. Y. Misc. 558; McCaull v. Braham (Russell), 21 Blatchf. 278, 16 Fed. 37; Duff v. Russell, 14 N. Y. Supp. 134 (aff'd 133 N. Y. 678); Fredricks v. Mayer, 13 How. Pr. 566.

In England, not without the negative covenant. Whitwood Chemical Co. v. Hardman, supra.

But the prohibition must not be unreasonable, as a prohibition upon being employed in any other business for a term of ten years. Ehrman v. Bartholomew, [1898] 1 Ch. 671.

The principle of Lumley v. Wagner, ought not to be applied to any covenant which though negative in form is affirmative in substance. Davis v. Foreman, [1894] 3 Ch. 654.

Where the parties have fixed liquidated damages for the breach of the contract, injunction will not issue. Hahn v. Concordia Society, 42 Md. 460.

² Daly v. Smith, 49 How. Pr. 150, 6 J. & Sp. 158; Duff v. Russell, 14 N. Y. Supp. 134 (affirmed without opinion 133 N. Y. 678); Pratt v. Montegriffo, 10 N. Y. Supp. 903; Keith v. Kellermann, 169 Fed. 196; Cort v. Lassard, 18 Or. 221, 17 Am. St. Rep. 726, 6 L. R. A. 653. See also McCaull v. Braham, 16 Fed. 37, and note.

decree of specific performance,—where the obligations of the contract are not “mutual,” as, for example, where the employer who is seeking to enforce the contract has himself the right to terminate it either at pleasure or upon the happening of certain events, has been much disputed.³ It is urged on the one hand that the remedy of specific performance or injunction to restrain breach, is not a matter of strict right but of sound discretion, and that it is unreasonable and unfair to restrain the defendant from accepting other employment where the employer may later, and possibly when the employee cannot find other employment, discharge him by virtue of the right reserved.⁴ It is replied on the other hand that the court is but simply enforcing the contract as the parties made it; that if there are any such inequalities they are such as the parties themselves created; and that, if the contract is not on the whole inequitable, the mere fact that the employee has not reserved as efficient a remedy against the employer as he has given the employer against himself is no reason why the contract should not be enforced according to its terms so long as it remains in force.⁵ The weight of authority seems to be with the latter view.

§ 645. Renunciation by mutual consent.—Even though there was a contract by which the agent undertook to act for a definite time not

³ See an article by Professor Ames in 3 Columbia Law Review, 1, 10; a note by Professor Lawson, in 54 Central Law Journal, 446, 451; and a note presumptively by Mr. A. C. Freeman in 90 Am. St. Rep. 634, 651.

⁴ Brooklyn Baseball Club v. McGuire (U. S. C. C., Pa.), 116 Fed. 782 [relying upon Rutland Marble Co. v. Ripley, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 339, 19 L. Ed. 955; citing Sturgis v. Galindo, 59 Cal. 28, 43 Am. Rep. 239, and Rust v. Conrad, 47 Mich. 449, 41 Am. Rep. 720; distinguishing Franklin Telegraph Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 36 L. Ed. 776; and disapproving Singer Sew. Mach. Co. v. Union Button Hole Co., Holmes, 253, Fed. Cas. No. 12,904]; American Baseball Co. v. Harper (C. C. St. Louis), 54 Cent. L. Jour. 449; Philadelphia Ball Club v. Hallman, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 57; Harrisburg Baseball Club v. Athletic Ass'n, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 337; but these Pennsylvania cases must be regarded as overruled by Philadelphia Ball Club v. Lajoie, cited in the following note.

Professor Lawson and Mr. Freeman in their notes above referred to approve this view; Professor Ames apparently approves the other.

⁵ Singer Sew. Mach. Co. v. Union Button Hole Co., Holmes, 253, Fed. Cas. No. 12,904; Philadelphia Ball Club v. Lajoie, 202 Pa. 210, 90 Am. St. Rep. 627, 58 L. R. A. 227, 54 Cent. L. Jour. 446 [disapproving Rust v. Conrad, cited in preceding note, approving Singer Sew. Mach. Co., supra, and regarding Rutland Marble Co. v. Ripley, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 339, 19 L. Ed. 955, as modified by Franklin Tel. Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 36 L. Ed. 776]. See also Keith v. Kellermann, 169 Fed. 196.

Professor Ames (3 Columbia L. Rev. 10, 11), also disapproves of Rust v. Conrad, and approves Singer Sew. Mach. Co. v. Union Button Hole Co., supra, and Philadelphia Ball Club v. Lajoie, supra.

yet expired, the agent may renounce or the contract may be terminated without liability by the mutual consent of both parties.⁶

§ 646. Abandonment may be treated as renunciation.—If the agent abandon the agency he may not complain if the principal treats this as a renunciation, and appoints another in his stead. Thus where an agent in Philadelphia wrote to his principal in New York that he had decided to give up the business and requested him to come or to send some one to take charge of it, it was held that the principal might treat this as an abandonment and appoint a new agent.⁷ So where an agent was arrested upon a criminal charge and kept in jail for two weeks during the busiest part of the season, it was held that the principal might lawfully treat the employment as abandoned, although it subsequently proved that the imprisonment was unauthorized.⁸

§ 647. Agent may lawfully renounce if required to do unlawful act.—If the principal requires of the agent the performance of an illegal or immoral act, the agent may lawfully renounce his agency. As is said by a learned judge: "Honeste vivere is a part of the law of principal and agent."⁹

§ 648. Agent's abandonment may be justified by principal's misconduct or default.—The agent's abandonment of his employment, even though for a definite time, may also be justified by the principal's misconduct or default. Thus, the repudiation by the principal of essential obligations on his own part, as, for example, his refusal to pay the agent his compensation, will justify abandonment by the agent.¹⁰

⁶ Conrey v. Brandegge, 2 La. Ann. 132. In New York Life Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 150, held, a voluntary resignation, if accepted, terminates the relation. In Messerrio v. Atchinson, etc., Ry. Co., 50 N. Y. Misc. 317, the plaintiff was hired indefinitely as an expert workman; he was found incompetent and was given another job; held, his acceptance of this terminated the first contract. In Blum v. Nebraska Creamery Co., 82 Neb. 110, held, a resignation must be accepted according to the conditions therein.

⁷ Stoddart v. Key, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 137.

⁸ Leopold v. Salkey, 89 Ill. 412, 31 Am. Rep. 93.

A real estate broker who, with the consent of the owner, turns the property over to another agent for sale, and thereafter does nothing toward a sale, will be deemed to have abandoned the agency. Munson v. Mabon, 135 Iowa, 335. See also Jackson v. Parrish, 157 Ala. 584, where a letter written by a broker to his principal abandoning the undertaking was held operative from the time of mailing it.

⁹ Conrey v. Brandegge, 2 La. Ann. 132.

¹⁰ Duffield v. Michaels, 97 Fed. 825. An absolute refusal or failure to pay the agent what he is entitled to under the contract will justify an abandonment. Dunn v. Crichfield, 214 Ill. 292; Tait Mfg. Co. v. Tinsman, 138 Ill. App. 76; Tilton v. Gates Land Co., 140 Wis. 197; Dore v. Glenn Rock Spring Co., 147 Wis. 158.

And so of course will brutal and inexcusable language,¹¹ or physical violence,¹² by the principal toward the agent.

§ 649. Notice of renunciation.—Notice of the renunciation must in general be given by the agent to the principal in all cases in which such notice is material for the protection of the principal's interests and he is not otherwise advised of it;¹³ and as against the principal the renunciation will be operative from the time the principal receives such notice of it.¹⁴ The principal must also for his own protection give notice to third persons of the termination of the authority by renunciation in the same manner as where the authority is revoked.¹⁵

Notice may also in some cases be required from the agent to third persons where his change of attitude may affect his relations to them.

II.

BY OPERATION OF LAW.

§ 650. In general.—But the intentional act of the parties does not furnish the only means by which the relation of principal and agent may be dissolved. Such changes in the condition, capacity and surroundings of the parties, or in the subject-matter may occur as to render the further continuance of the relation inconsistent or impossible, and the agency will thereupon be terminated or dissolved. Such a termination, to distinguish it from termination by the mere act of the parties, is often called termination by operation of law.

Thus one or both parties to the relation may die, or become insane, or bankrupt. War may interrupt the commercial transactions between citizens of different states or countries, or the subject-matter of the agency may cease to exist or the authority become impossible or unlawful to be performed. Each of these contingencies it is important to consider.

1. By Death of One of the Parties.

a. By the Death of the Principal.

§ 651. In general.—The relation of principal and agent necessarily presupposes at least two existing and competent parties,—one ¹¹ Cody v. Raynaud, 1 Colo. 272.

¹² Bishop v. Ranney, 59 Vt. 316;
Erickson v. Sorby, 90 Minn. 327;
Horn v. Luntz, 125 N. Y. Supp. 786.

¹³ Ante, § 641, note.

¹⁴ A letter abandoning the agency is, as to the agent, operative from the time of mailing it. Jackson v. Parrish, 157 Ala. 584.

¹⁵ Capen v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 25 N. J. L. 67, 64 Am. Dec. 412.

competent to act for himself and in his own behalf, but preferring for reasons of convenience or otherwise to delegate this power to another; the other likewise competent, ordinarily, though not necessarily, to act for himself, but undertaking for the time being to assume a representative character and to act in the name and for the benefit of the person represented;—one supplying authority, the other exercising it. The situation presupposes a principal capable of doing the act at the time it is done, and who, upon the doctrine of qui facit per alium facit per se, does in law then perform it.

By the death of either of these parties, therefore, it is obvious that the relation must ordinarily be terminated. If the principal dies, there is thenceforward no one to be represented; no one in whose name the agent can act; no one from whom the supply of power can continue to flow, and unless there is something in the nature of the authority by which it can survive a severance from its source, it must perish with it.

§ 652. General rule—Death of principal terminates agency.—It is therefore the general rule that the authority of an agent, not coupled with an interest, is instantly terminated by the death of the principal, even though it may have been irrevocable in his life-time; and that any attempted execution of the authority after that event is not binding upon the heirs or representatives of the deceased principal.¹⁶

¹⁶ Boone v. Clarke, 3 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 389, Fed. Cas. No. 1,641; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589; Scruggs v. Driver, 31 Ala. 274; Saltmarsh v. Smith, 32 Ala. 404; Travers v. Crane, 15 Cal. 12; Ferris v. Irving, 28 Cal. 645; In re Kilborn, 5 Cal. App. 161; In re McPhee's Estate, 156 Cal. 335; Dieter v. Kiser, 158 Cal. 259; McGriff v. Porter, 5 Fla. 373; Dallam v. Sanchez, 56 Fla. 779; Wellborn v. Weaver, 17 Ga. 267, 63 Am. Dec. 235; Anderson v. Goodwin, 125 Ga. 663; Turnan v. Temke, 84 Ill. 286; Mecartney v. Carbine's Estate, 108 Ill. App. 282; Wallace v. Bozarth, 223 Ill. 339; Lancaster v. Springer, 239 Ill. 472; Trubey v. Pease, 240 Ill. 513; Johnson v. Wilcox, 25 Ind. 182; Lewis v. Kerr, 17 Iowa, 73; Darr v. Darr, 59 Iowa, 81; Condon v. Barnum (Iowa), 106 N. W. 514; Campbell v. Faxon, 73 Kan. 675, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1002;

Holmes v. Murdock, 125 La. 916; Harper v. Little, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 14, 11 Am. Dec. 25; Staples v. Bradbury, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 181, 23 Am. Dec. 494; Merry v. Lynch, 68 Me. 94; Tyson v. George's Creek Coal Co., 115 Md. 564; Marlett v. Jackman, 3 Allen (Mass.), 287; Lincoln v. Emerson, 108 Mass. 87; Mills v. Smith, 193 Mass. 11, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 865; Courser v. Jackson, 159 Mich. 119; Weaver v. Richards, 144 Mich. 395; Clayton v. Merrett, 52 Miss. 353; State v. Riley, 219 Mo. 667; Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. Woodson, 110 Mo. App. 208; Gale v. Tappan, 12 N. H. 145, 37 Am. Dec. 194; Wilson v. Edmonds, 24 N. H. 517; In re Bense, 68 Misc. 70; Oatman v. Watrous, 120 App. Div. 66; Lalor v. Tooker, 130 App. Div. 11; People v. Bellando, 137 App. Div. 777, 199 N. Y. 533; In re Robbins, 61 Misc. 114; Doe v. Smith, 1 Jones (46 N. C.), 135, 59 Am. Dec. 581; Brown

The authority being thus terminated by the act of God, the agent can ordinarily maintain no claim for damages thereby, although he had been employed for a fixed term which had not yet expired.¹⁷

Of course where the authority has been fully executed before the principal's death, that event cannot affect the rights of the other party. So if before the principal's death, the authority has been executed in part, his death cannot operate as a revocation of the executed portion,¹⁸ nor, it is held, if the authority be entire, of that which yet remains unexecuted.¹⁹

This general rule, that the death of the principal terminates authority, so far as it is applied to a mere power to do something for the benefit of the principal, even though the agent was to be compensated for his services,—to what is sometimes called a "bare" or "naked" power, is generally recognized and followed in the United States, though a few states make an exception, as will be seen, where the fact of the death was unknown.²⁰

Aside from that, the only exception is said to be "the case of a naked power or authority given by one by his last will to his executors to sell his estate for the payment of debts, etc., in which case the authority is expressly given to be executed after his death, and the act may be done in the name of the executors, and not in the name of the testator."²¹

§ 653. — Even though not terminable by principal's act in his life time.—Moreover, even though the authority may have been more than a mere "bare" or "naked" power, and arose to the rank of a power which might be irrevocable by the act of the principal in his

v. Skotland, 12 N. D. 445; Moore v. Weston, 13 N. D. 574; Easton v. Ellis, 1 Handy (Ohio), 70; McDonald v. Black, 20 Ohio, 185, 55 Am. Dec. 448; Casto v. Murray, 47 Or. 57; Cassiday v. McKenzie, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 282, 39 Am. Dec. 76; Frederick's Appeal, 52 Pa. 338, 91 Am. Dec. 159; Jenkins v. Atkins, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 294, 34 Am. Dec. 648; Primm v. Stewart, 7 Tex. 178; Cleveland v. Williams, 29 Tex. 204, 94 Am. Dec. 274; Williams v. Armistead, 41 Tex. Civ. App. 35; Skirvin v. O'Brien, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1; Wall v. Lubbock, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 405; Michigan Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30 Vt. 11; Davis v. Windsor Savings Bank, 46 Vt. 728; Wells v.

Foss, 81 Vt. 15; Huston v. Cantril, 11 Leigh (Va.), 136; Legan v. Dishman, Barr. 2 Va. Col. Dec. 254; Gilmore v. Casualty Co., 58 Wash. 203.

¹⁷ As to this, see post, § 668.

As to the effect of the death of a partner or other joint principal, see post, § 669.

¹⁸ Frederick's Appeal, 52 Pa. 338, 91 Am. Dec. 159.

¹⁹ Garrett v. Trabue, 82 Ala. 227, where goods ordered the day before the principal's death, were shipped in pursuance of the order on the day after his death but in ignorance of it.

²⁰ See post, § 664.

²¹ Thompson, J., in McGriff v. Porter, 5 Fla. 373.

life time, e. g., a power given by way of security considered in an earlier section, it is still said that, unless "coupled with an interest" in the sense to be hereafter considered, it is nevertheless terminated by the principal's death.²² Although given as a security or conferred "for a valuable consideration," it is still only an authority over the subject-matter and not an estate or interest in it. While death will not revoke an estate, it does revoke an authority, is the contention.

§ 654. Consideration of rule.—While this doctrine seems firmly fixed by the authorities, it is certainly questionable if it be sound as an invariable rule. Its application often not only disappoints expectations but produces hardship,²³ as it did in the famous case in which Chief Justice Marshall first formulated it in the United States.²⁴ The person who loses by it has given a valuable consideration for the power, while the persons who benefit by it are either general creditors who are not purchasers for value, or heirs or distributees who are mere donees. A contract made by the decedent in his life time may be enforced in many cases after his decease. Why not a power for which a valuable consideration has been given? Where the exercise of the power would result in creating new obligations, there may be serious difficulties; but where the only act contemplated is to deal with property, or to receive payment, and the like, the objections seem largely ²² Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589; McGriff v. Porter, 5 Fla. 373; Huston v. Cantril, 11 Leigh (Va.), 142; Hunt v. Ennis, 2 Mason, 244, 12 Fed. Cas. p. 913; and other cases cited post, § 662.

²³ Thus in Huston v. Cantril, supra, Stanard, J., while recognizing it as sound law, said: "I apply it with the more reluctance, seeing that by it the creditor will be deprived of a security which he and the court below, and one at least of the defendants, supposed to exist."

²⁴ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589. (In the circuit court, 2 Mason, 244, 12 Fed. Cas. 913). A clearer case of the disappointment of reasonable expectations would be difficult to imagine. Rousmanier applied to Hunt for a loan, and offered a bill of sale or mortgage on certain vessels to secure the same. The loan was made and notes given. On advice of the attorney, it was agreed by the parties that Rousmanier should execute to Hunt a power of attorney to sell the vessels if default were made on the notes. This step was taken in preference to the execution of a mortgage security, in order that certain shipping inconveniences be avoided. Rousmanier died insolvent, having made only a small payment on the notes. Hunt took possession of the vessels in pursuance of his power of attorney to sell, and now brings a bill in equity to compel the administrators of Rousmanier to join in the sale. To the bill disclosing these facts a demurrer was filed, and Marshall, C. J., held that the power of attorney, given as it was by way of security, was irrevocable by Rousmanier during his life-time, but that it could not operate after his death. An amended bill for the correction of the instrument also failed. Hunt v. Rousmanier, 1 Pet. (26 U. S.) 1, 7 L. Ed. 27.

if not wholly technical. The contract as such, that the power may be exercised (where no purely personal considerations were involved) would be binding upon the estate if those who represented it refused to permit the power to be exercised, and damages might be recovered for its breach, but, in any case in which the question would be important, the estate would be insolvent, and damages for its breach would be a wholly inadequate remedy. What is needed is specific performance of the legal and binding agreement, given for a valuable consideration, respecting a specific chattel or chose in action or a specific act, in a case in which damages for the breach of the agreement would be inadequate. Although there seems to be no case directly in point, there are certainly analogies which are suggestive.²⁵

If it should be held that, by the contract and the power, an equitable estate or interest in the subject-matter was created, then there are authorities²⁶ (whether really consistent with Hunt v. Rousmanier or not),²⁷ which would hold the power to be one coupled with an interest, and therefore irrevocable by the grantor's death.

§ 655. Authority not revocable by death when coupled with an interest.—Notwithstanding the general rule that the death of the principal operates per se to terminate authority, there is, as has already been suggested, a well settled, though not always clearly defined, exception to it, based upon the fact that in the given case the agent is not simply an agent—perhaps properly speaking not an agent at all—but a person having some interest of his own in the subject-matter of the agency for the protection of which an authority like the one conferred which shall survive the death of the principal is an essential incident. This situation is commonly described, in the United States at least, as the case of an agent having “an authority coupled with an interest,” and the general rule of law is that where the authority of the agent is so “coupled with an interest in the subject-matter of the agency,” it is not terminated by the death of the principal, and a subsequent execution of it by the agent will be good.²⁸

²⁵ See Cowles v. Whitman, 10 Conn. 121, 25 Am. Dec. 60; Parker v. Garrison, 61 Ill. 250; Triebert v. Burgess, 11 Md. 452; Gottschalk v. Stein, 69 Md. 51; Clark v. Flint, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 231, 33 Am. Dec. 733; Peer v. Kean, 14 Mich. 354; Furman v. Clark, 11 N. J. Eq. 306; Cutting v. Dana, 25 N. J. Eq. 265.

See also the discussion on equitable liens in Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, at p. 664.

²⁶ See Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1, 20, 7 Am. Dec. 513 (affirmed 14 Johns. 527); Shepard v. McNail, 122 Mo. App. 418; Pacific Coast Co. v. Anderson, 47 C. C. A. 106, 107 Fed. 973; Keys' Estate, 137 Pa. 565, 21 Am. St. R. 896; Farmers' Bank v. Kansas City Pub. Co., 3 Dillon, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 4,652.

²⁷ See post, § 657.

²⁸ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589; Merry v.

§ 656. ——— What constitutes such an interest.—The difficulty in defining what is meant by the expression “a power coupled with an interest,” and the difference in usage of the English and the American courts, have already been somewhat discussed.²⁹ In the present connection, however, there is substantial harmony among the American courts in their statements of the rule. The interest, it is said, which will preserve the power from termination by the principal’s death must, in general terms, be an interest in the thing itself which is the subject-matter of the agency and the power must be capable of execution in the name of the agent. A mere power to be executed in the name of the principal, though it may perhaps be irrevocable by the principal in his life-time, is, nevertheless, terminated by his death. But as is said by Chief Justice Marshall in the leading case³⁰ already referred to, “This general rule, that a power ceases with the life of the person giving it, admits of one exception. If a power be coupled with an ‘interest’ it survives the person giving it and may be executed after his death. As this proposition is laid down too positively in the books to be controverted, it becomes necessary to inquire what is meant by the expression ‘a power coupled with an interest?’ Is it an interest in the subject on which the power is to be exercised, or is it an interest in that which is produced by the exercise of the power? We hold it to be clear that the interest which can protect a power after the death of a person who creates it, must be an interest in the thing itself. In other words, the power must be engrafted on an estate in the thing.

“The words themselves would seem to import this meaning. ‘A power coupled with an interest’ is a power which accompanies or is connected with an interest. The power and the interest are united in the same person. But if we are to understand by the word ‘interest’ an interest in that which is to be produced by the exercise of the power, then they are never united. The power to produce the interest must be exercised, and by its exercise is extinguished. The power ceases when the interest commences, and therefore cannot, in accurate law language, be said to be ‘coupled’ with it.

“But the substantial basis of the opinion of the court on this point is found in the legal reason of the principle. The interest or title in the thing being vested in the person who gives the power, remains in

Lynch, 68 Me. 94; Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Caines’ Cases (N. Y.) 1, 2 Am. Dec. 281; Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 205, 40 Am. Dec. 241; Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 1; Houghtal-ing v. Marvin, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 412; Dixon v. Dixon, 85 Kan. 379.

²⁹ Ante, §§ 572, 573.

³⁰ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589.

him, unless it be conveyed with the power, and can pass out of him only by a regular act in his own name. The act of the substitute, therefore, which in such a case is the act of the principal, to be legally effectual, must be in his name, and must be such an act as the principal himself would be capable of performing, and which would be valid if performed by him. Such a power necessarily ceases with the life of the person making it. But if the interest or estate passes with the power, and vests in the person by whom the power is to be exercised, such person acts in his own name. The estate being in him, passes from him by a conveyance in his own name. He is no longer a substitute acting in the place and name of another, but he is a principal acting in his own name in pursuance of powers which limit his estate. The legal reason which limits the power to the life of the person giving it, exists no longer; and the rule ceases with the reason on which it is founded."

Again it is said by a learned judge, "A power is simply collateral and without interest, or a naked power, when to a mere stranger, authority is given to dispose of an interest in which he had not before; nor has by the instrument creating the power, any estate whatsoever; but when the power is given to a person who derives under the instrument creating the power or otherwise, a present or future interest in the property, the subject on which the power is to act, it is then a power coupled with an interest."³¹

§ 657. — What meant by interest—Difficulty of applying rule.—The test suggested by Chief Justice Marshall, of the necessity of an estate or interest, is not easy to apply. If the grantee of the power has such an estate or interest as is required, what is the necessity of the annexed power? Why may not the grantee of the estate or interest deal with it because he is the owner or holder of it without reference to the power? Take the case of a pledge of property with a power of sale, for example. The law would give a power of sale even though none had been expressly conferred. The power given by the pledgor might, however, be more advantageous (as by waiving demand and notice), than that which the law alone would give. A power of sale attached to a mere common law lien—a mere right of detention—would also be a distinct advantage.

Where the interest transferred does not embrace the entire property in the thing, some questions may arise. What estate or interest may the grantee of the power transfer? Apparently such as may be necessary to make the power effectual—that is to say, if it is necessary to deal with the entire property in order to protect the interest, the grantee of the power may do that, being accountable for any surplus.

³¹ Thompson, J., in McGriff v. Porter, 5 Fla. 373, 379.

It is sometimes said that the “interest” or “estate” must be a legal one, but that does not seem every where to be regarded as essential. An equitable estate has been held sufficient in many cases,³² though it is not easy to see how a purely equitable interest can suffice to preserve the power to convey the legal estate. Certainly the holder of the equitable interest can not convey the legal title in his own name.

It is also sometimes said that the “interest” and the “power” must be created by the same instrument;³³ but no good reason appears for that position, and there are cases in which the power was held irrevocable though this supposed requirement was not satisfied.³⁴

§ 658. — The real reason—That the agent may act in his own name.—But the substantial ground and the real reason of the rule, as it is stated by Chief Justice Marshall, are found not merely in the fact that the agent has an interest or estate, but in the fact that he has such an estate or interest that he may execute the power in his own name and right and as his own act.³⁵ As stated by Chief Justice Marshall, “If the interest or estate passes with the power, and vests in the person by whom the power is to be exercised, such person acts in his own name. The estate being in him, passes from him by a conveyance in his own name. He is no longer a substitute acting in the place and name of another, but he is a principal acting in his own name in pursuance of powers which limit his estate.”

While the present conception continues, this requirement must probably be deemed an indispensable part of it.

§ 659. What interest sufficient—Instances.—Cases in which the power has been held to be one coupled with an interest are numerous, ³² In Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 1, 20, 7 Am. Dec. 513 (affirmed 14 Johns. 527); it is said: “It is not necessary that the interest coupled with the power should be a legal interest. An equitable estate is sufficient, and is regarded in this court as the real interest.” See also Shepard v. McNaill, 122 Mo. App. 418; Pacific Coast Co. v. Anderson, 47 C. A. 106, 107 Fed. 973; Keys’ Estate, 137 Pa. 565, 21 Am. St. R. 896; Farmers & Drovers Bank v. Kansas City Pub. Co., 3 Dillon, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 4,652.

³³ As for example, per Hooker, J., in Weaver v. Richards, 144 Mich. 395, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 855.

³⁴ As for example, Babrowsky v. Grand Lodge, 129 N. Y. App. Div. 695; Keys’ Estate, 137 Pa. 565, 21 Am. St. R. 896.

³⁵ See the opinion of Story, J., at the Circuit in the same case of Hunt v. Rousmanier’s Adm’rs (Hunt v. Ennis, et al. Adm’r), 2 Mason, 244, 12 Fed. Cas. p. 913; Sulphur Mines v. Thompson, 93 Va. 293.

though it may not be easy in all of them to square the holding with the rules laid down by Chief Justice Marshall. Thus, where a debtor delivered property to his surety with power to sell the property to pay the debt or reimburse himself in case he paid it, it was held that the pledge and the authority constituted a power coupled with an interest within Chief Justice Marshall's definition and was therefore not revoked by the grantor's death.³⁶ So where there was an assignment of a cause of action upon which suit was pending, by way of security, with power to settle the suit and apply the proceeds upon the debt secured, the same ruling was made.³⁷ So, also, where leases were assigned as security with power to collect the rents and apply in payment of the debt secured.³⁸

For similar reasons, the transferee of shares of stock with power to transfer them upon the books of the corporation has a power coupled with an interest not revoked by the death of the transferrer before transfer on the books.³⁹

So the power of sale conferred by a mortgagor upon the mortgagee is almost universally held to be one coupled with an interest and, therefore, not revoked by the mortgagor's death.⁴⁰

³⁶ Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 205, 40 Am. Dec. 241. See also Merry v. Lynch, 68 Me. 94, where there was authority to sell goods, pay certain debts to third persons, then debts due the donee, and turn over balance to donor.

³⁷ Hilliard v. Beattie, 67 N. H. 571. See also Morgan v. Gibson, 42 Mo. App. 234.

³⁸ Stevens v. Sessa, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 547.

³⁹ Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 1; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486; United States v. Cutts, 1 Sumn. 133, 25 Fed. Cas. 745; Fisher v. New York, etc., Co. (Pa.), 31 Wk. N. Cas. 502.

Much the same doctrine was applied to a transfer of land scrip with a power to locate land under it. Rogers v. Iron Co., 104 Minn. 198.

⁴⁰ Conners v. Holland, 113 Mass. 50; Varnum v. Meserve, 8 Allen (Mass.), 158; Berry v. Skinner, 30 Md. 567; Beatie v. Butler, 21 Mo. 313; White v. Stephens, 77 Mo. 452; Bradley v. Chester Valley R. R. Co., 36

Penn. St. 141; Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Caines' Cas. (N. Y.) 1, 2 Am. Dec. 281; Wilson v. Troup, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 195, 14 Am. Dec. 458; Hodges v. Gill, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 378; Wilburn v. Spofford, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 698; Hudgins v. Morrow, 47 Ark. 515; More v. Calkins, 95 Cal. 435, 29 Am. St. R. 128; Carter v. Slocomb, 122 N. C. 475, 65 Am. St. R. 714; Grandin v. Emmons, 10 N. D. 223, 88 Am. St. R. 684, 54 L. R. A. 610; Sulphur Mines Co. v. Thompson, 93 Va. 293; Muth v. Goddard, 28 Mont. 237, 98 Am. St. R. 553.

Contra, the mortgage being only a security. Johnson v. Johnson, 27 S. C. 309, 13 Am. St. R. 636; Wilkins v. McGehee, 86 Ga. 764.

In Texas, see Robertson v. Paul, 16 Tex. 472; McLane v. Paschal, 47 Tex. 365; Rogers v. Watson, 81 Tex. 400; Whitmire v. May, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 244; Texas Loan Agency v. Dingee, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 118.

Where P mortgages land to X to secure the debt of A and in the mortgage provides that X and A may extend the time of payment by certain

§ 660. — So, again, where one who was entitled to “enter” or locate government land, in consideration that another would perform the labor, make the proof and pay the expense, gave him a deed of an interest and an “irrevocable” power of attorney to act in the grantor’s name and to sell the land and divide the proceeds, it was held that by virtue of the deed the agent acquired a present interest to which the authority was coupled, and that this authority was not revoked by the grantor’s death.⁴¹

And, so, where a debtor, in order to secure his creditor, expressly assigned a claim to him and gave him an “irrevocable” power of attorney to collect it, it was held that the power was not terminated by the grantor’s death.⁴²

So where an attorney was authorized to prosecute a claim for a share of the proceeds and was given express power to compromise, it was held that he had a power coupled with an interest which was not revoked by the principal’s death.⁴³ But it is difficult to sustain this conclusion unless it be thought that the contract gave the attorney an interest in the claim as well as a power over it. Where such an interest is assigned, the power to collect is held irrevocable.⁴⁴

So a power given in a conveyance to one of an estate for life to dis-prescribed methods, this is held to be a power coupled with an interest and not revoked by the death of P. Benneson v. Savage, 130 Ill. 352. Where a landowner and his tenant unite in a mortgage, an agreement that the lessee may arrange for an extension of time and that the mortgage shall still stand as a security is an agreement coupled with an interest and not revoked by the owner’s death. Prussing v. Lancaster, 234 Ill. 462.

⁴¹ Hennessee v. Johnson, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 530.

⁴² Norton v. Whitehead, 84 Cal. 263, 18 Am. St. R. 172. See also Shepard v. McNail, 122 Mo. App. 418; Crowley v. McCambridge, 154 Ill. App. 135.

⁴³ Jeffries v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 110 U. S. 305, 28 L. Ed. 156.

⁴⁴ Gulf, etc., Ry. Co. v. Miller, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 609; American Loan & Trust Co. v. Billings, 58 Minn. 187.

Where one advances money to another upon an agreement that the lender shall be entitled to collect insurance money and reimburse himself out of the same, a formal power to receive the money given in pursuance of the agreement is held to be coupled with an interest and irrevocable. The transaction was said to be “a virtual assignment of the fund.” Babrowsky v. Grand Lodge, 129 App. Div. 695.

In Keys’ Estate, 137 Pa. 565, 21 Am. St. R. 896, a letter accompanying a power of attorney in which letter the writer indicated a purpose that the person to whom it was sent should collect a certain sum of money and out of it pay himself a debt which the writer owed him, was held to be at least an equitable assignment of the claim and thus to create an interest which would preserve the power. See also Stover v. Eycleshimer, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 84, s. c. 3 Keys, 620.

pose of the fee by will, has been held to be irrevocable by the death of the grantor, as a power coupled with an estate.⁴⁵

If, under an authority valid, though revocable by death, the donee, in pursuance of the authority, and in the life-time of the donor, takes possession of the chattel or thing to which the authority applies, the authority would thereafter doubtless be deemed to be one coupled with an interest, and therefore irrevocable by death.

§ 661. — Usually the power and the interest are vested in the same person, but that is not indispensable. A power given to one to be exercised for the benefit of another who has an interest, is irrevocable.⁴⁶ Usually this takes the form of an express trust, though the form is not material. The power of sale under a deed of trust is therefore not revocable by the death of the grantor.⁴⁷

So the indorsement and delivery for the purpose of collection of a promissory note passes the legal title in trust, and the agent may sue upon it in his own name after the death of the principal.⁴⁸

§ 662. What interest not sufficient—Instances.—Illustrations of what is not a sufficient interest to preserve the power from revocation by death are also numerous. Thus a power of attorney not containing any words of conveyance or assignment but a simple authority to sell and convey, although given as collateral security for the payment of certain notes executed by the principal to the attorney and authorizing him to sell the property named in case of default and reimburse himself, is not a mortgage but a bare power and is terminated by the death of the principal before execution;⁴⁹ so where to secure the loan of money the borrower executed an instrument in writing, authorizing the lender, upon default in payment, to enter upon the premises of the borrower and take away certain slaves therein specified, and to sell and dispose of them and out of the proceeds of the sale to reimburse himself for the loan and all expenses, and to return the surplus, if

⁴⁵ Dixon v. Dixon, 85 Kan. 379. The court said: "A power of attorney authorizing another to act for the one granting the power, must not be confused with a power vesting an absolute authority in another to act for himself."

⁴⁶ Durbrow v. Eppens, 65 N. J. L. 10 (where the power given by each associate in a "Lloyd's" Insurance association to the managers to pay out of a common fund contributed to by each the losses upon which all were liable, was held not revocable by the death of one); American Loan & Trust Co. v. Billings, 58 Minn. 187.

⁴⁷ See the cases under power of sale in mortgages in the preceding section.

⁴⁸ Moore v. Hall, 48 Mich. 143; Boyd v. Corbitt, 37 Mich. 52.

⁴⁹ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174, 5 L. Ed. 589. The court later refused to reform the instrument. Hunt v. Rousmanier, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 1, 7 L. Ed. 27.

any, to the borrower, the same ruling was made;⁵⁰ and again where a principal debtor gave his surety a written power of attorney authorizing him to sell certain lands to pay the debt, but the surety did not exercise the power during the grantor's life-time, it was held that the authority was utterly dissolved by the latter's death.⁵¹ So a power given by a debtor to his creditor authorizing him to collect a debt, due to the debtor, and to apply it on his claim, but containing no conveyance or assignment of the debt;⁵² and a power given by a debtor to a bank to apply his deposits to the payment of his notes held by the bank and to do so before maturity if the bank so desired, but making no assignment of the fund,⁵³ is terminated by the debtor's death.

§ 663. — A fortiori, is the power revoked by death where the authority conveyed is a mere power, or where the only interest is that in compensation to be gained from the proceeds of the sale of property or the collection of a debt.⁵⁴

Of the former class, an authority to occupy land as an agent;⁵⁵ a power to sell a chattel;⁵⁶ or to sell and convey land;⁵⁷ an authority by a landlord to his tenant to make repairs;⁵⁸ a power of attorney to demand payment of a note,⁵⁹ or to receive notice of its dishonor;⁶⁰ a power of attorney to procure a patent,⁶¹ an authority to carry on one's ⁵⁰ McGriff v. Porter, 5 Fla. 373.

⁵¹ Huston v. Cantril, 11 Leigh (Va.), 142.

⁵² Houghtaling v. Marvin, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 412. See also Garber v. Myers, 32 Ill. App. 175.

⁵³ Gardner v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Mont. 149, 10 L. R. A. 45.

⁵⁴ Harper v. Little, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 14, 11 Am. Dec. 25; Saltmarsh v. Smith, 32 Ala. 404; Travers v. Crane, 15 Cal. 12; Ferris v. Irving, 28 Cal. 645; Coney v. Sanders, 28 Ga. 511; Lewis v. Kerr, 17 Iowa, 73; Primm v. Stewart, 7 Tex. 178; Wainwright v. Massenburg, 129 N. Car. 46; Fisher v. Trust Co., 138 N. Car. 90; Weaver v. Richards, 144 Mich. 395, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 855; Schilling v. Moore, — Okla. —, 125 Pac. 487.

⁵⁵ Lincoln v. Emerson, 108 Mass. 87.

⁵⁶ McDonald v. Black, 20 Ohio, 185; Brown v. Cushman, 173 Mass. 368; In re Kern's Estate, 176 Pa. 373.

⁵⁷ Pacific Bank v. Hannah, 90 Fed.

72, 59 U. S. App. 457, 32 C. C. A. 522; Tuttle v. Green, 5 Ariz. 179; Connor v. Parsons (Tex.), 30 S. W. 83; Fisher v. Trust Co., 138 N. Car. 90; Gilmer v. Veatch (Tex. Civ. App.), 121 S. W. 545; Kent v. Cecil (Tex. Civ. App.), 25 S. W. 715.

The case of Shepard v. McNail, 122 Mo. App. 418, is apparently contra, unless it is to be sustained upon the ground, stated by the court, that the effect of the arrangement was to convey an equitable estate in the accounts. The citations of the first edition of this work are to sections dealing with irrevocability by the act of the principal, and not to irrevocability by death.

⁵⁸ Wilson v. Edmonds, 24 N. H. 517.

⁵⁹ Gale v. Tappan, 12 N. H. 145, 37 Am. Dec. 194.

⁶⁰ Bank of Washington v. Peirson, 2 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 685.

⁶¹ Eagleston Mfg. Co. v. West Mfg. Co., 18 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 223.

business during his disability,⁶² to deliver property to complete a gift,⁶³ to renew a note,⁶⁴ to draw money from the principal's funds in bank for the principal's use,⁶⁵ or to collect rents,⁶⁶ or to borrow money and mortgage land as security for its repayment,⁶⁷ are examples, and expire with the life of him who granted them.

§ 664. How when death unknown.—When the authority has thus been dissolved by the death of the principal, all subsequent attempts to execute it, or to act by virtue of it, even though made in good faith and in ignorance of the fact of the death, are ineffectual to bind the estate of the principal. Where the authority is one which must be executed in the name of the principal, as by executing deeds, this rule is unquestioned⁶⁸ but where the act is one which, while it is done for the principal, is not expressly required to be done in his name, it has been criticised and even denied by some text-writers and judges.⁶⁹ Even in the latter case, however, the rule is supported by an undoubted preponderance of authority.⁷⁰

By the civil law, the act of an agent done in good faith in ignorance of the death of the principal, is binding upon his representatives. There the death does not necessarily and ipso facto operate as a dissolution of the agency, but the agency, as in the case of an express revocation, determines only from the time of notice.⁷¹ But by the common law, the rule is different, as has been seen, and the death, except in cases coupled with an interest, works an instantaneous dis-

⁶² Krumdick v. White, 92 Cal. 143. See also Triplett v. Woodward, 98 Va. 187.

⁶³ Duckworth v. Orr, 126 N. Car. 674.

⁶⁴ Home Nat. Bank v. Waterman, 134 Ill. 461.

⁶⁵ Hoffman v. Savings Institution, 109 (N. Y.) App. Div. 24.

⁶⁶ Farmers Loan & Tr. Co. v. Wilson, 139 N. Y. 284, 36 Am. St. R. 696.

⁶⁷ Brown v. Skotland, 12 N. D. 445.

⁶⁸ Harper v. Little, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 14, 11 Am. Dec. 25; Travers v. Crane, 15 Cal. 12; Ferris v. Irving, 28 Cal. 645; Coney v. Sanders, 28 Ga. 511; Lewis v. Kerr, 17 Iowa, 73.

⁶⁹ Story on Agency, § 495; Wharton on Agency, § 102; Cassiday v. McKenzie, 4 W. & S. (Penn.) 282, 39 Am. Dec. 76; Dick v. Page, 17 Mo. 234; Ish v. Crane, 8 Ohio St. 520, s. c. 13

Id. 574; Deweese v. Muff, 57 Neb. 17, 73 Am. St. R. 488, 42 L. R. A. 789; Meinhardt v. Newman, 71 Neb. 532.

⁷⁰ Long v. Thayer, 150 U. S. 520, 37 L. Ed. 1167; Weber v. Bridgman, 113 N. Y. 600; Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Wilson, 139 N. Y. 284, 36 Am. St. 696; Hoffman v. Savings Institution, 109 (N. Y.) App. Div. 24; Clayton v. Merrett, 52 Miss. 353; Galt v. Gallo-way, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 331; Cleveland v. Williams, 29 Tex. 204, 94 Am. Dec. 274; Michigan Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30 Vt. 11; Davis v. Windsor Savings Bank, 46 Vt. 728; Jenkins v. Atkins, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 294, 34 Am. Dec. 648; Rigs v. Cage, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 350, 37 Am. Dec. 559.

⁷¹ Inst. 3, 27, 10; Digest, 17, 1, 6; 1 Domat b. 1, Tit. 15, § 4.

solution of the relation. Some tendency has been manifested to apply the rule of the civil law in certain cases as being more consonant with reason and justice. Thus in Cassiday v. McKenzie,⁷² it was held that the payment made by an agent after the death of the principal, but in ignorance of it, was good. So in Dick v. Page,⁷³ the deposit of collaterals made by an agent as security for advances made after the principal's death, but all the parties being in ignorance of it, was held to be valid as against the executor of the principal, and the same principle was enforced in Ish v. Crane.⁷⁴

§ 665. — But these cases have not been followed by other courts, and it is said of them by a learned judge, that "in as far at least as they announce the doctrine under discussion they are exceptional. The Pennsylvania case is believed to stand almost if not quite alone, in announcing the principle in its broadest scope. The overwhelming weight of authority is to the effect that the death of the principal operates as an instantaneous revocation of the agency where it is a naked power unaccompanied with an interest, and every act of the agent thereafter performed is null so far as the estate of the principal is concerned. This rule frequently operates very unjustly and produces very great hardships. A party dealing with an insolvent agent, upon the faith of his well known authority from a wealthy and distant principal, is suddenly confronted with the fact that the authority had ceased by the death of the principal, one day or perhaps one hour before his transactions occurred. Impressed with the hardship of such a case, the civil law adopts the rule contended for in the case at bar and renders valid a contract executed or a payment made under such circumstances," but he goes on to say that "however great the injustice produced in particular cases, undoubtedly the common law rule is that death revokes the agency and nullifies all acts thereafter performed. This doctrine rests upon the obvious principle that as a dead man can do no act for himself, so no man can do an act for him. When, therefore, the agent undertakes to act in his name, he is acting for a being not in existence. To hold his act valid is not to bind the dead man but his heirs and representatives, who are thus held liable for the acts of one whom they never appointed and whom perhaps they would be unwilling to trust. Whether a system of jurisprudence which would accomplish this result would be found in the long run ⁷² Supra. The Nebraska cases cited supra were of this sort.

⁷³ Supra.

⁷⁴ Supra. See McClaskey v. Barr, 50 Fed. 712.

less productive of injustice than our present rule may well be doubted. At all events we are satisfied that such is not the law."⁷⁵

§ 666. — Instances.—In accordance with the rule of the common law, therefore, it has been held that a payment made to an agent after the death of his principal, though the party paying did so in good faith and without notice of the death of the principal, was not sufficient, and that the administrator of the principal was entitled to recover it;⁷⁶ that the discount in good faith and without notice of the principal's death, of a note put into circulation by an agent after that event, conferred no right against the estate of the principal;⁷⁷ that the sale of real estate by an agent after the death of his principal, but in ignorance of it, was not binding upon the estate,⁷⁸ and hence not upon the purchaser;⁷⁹ that the act of an agent in separating, measuring and delivering, after the death of his principal, a quantity of corn that had been bargained by the principal in his life time, but the title to which, by want of such separating, measuring and delivering, had not passed to the other party, was not good against the principal's estate;⁸⁰ that an agent's power to buy goods for his principal ceases with his death, and that the seller could not recover against the administrators of the principal's estate, though the fact of the death was unknown both to the seller and the agent.⁸¹

§ 667. — But where an agent, authorized to buy goods, sent an order for them by mail on the day before the principal died, to a non-resident merchant with whom he had a general arrangement to supply goods on such orders, and the merchant filled the order within a reasonable time in ignorance of the principal's death, it was held that the contract was binding as of the day on which the order was deposited in the mail, and that the principal's estate was bound, notwithstanding the order was not received by the merchant until after the death of the principal.⁸²

⁷⁵ Chalmers, J., in Clayton v. Merrett, 52 Miss. 353, supra.

⁷⁶ Davis v. Windsor Savings Bank, 46 Vt. 728; Clayton v. Merrett, 52 Miss. 353; Long v. Thayer, 150 U. S. 520, 37 L. Ed. 1167; Weber v. Bridgmen, 113 N. Y. 600; Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Wilson, 139 N. Y. 284, 36 Am. St. 696. (See the arguments contra, in Deweese v. Muff, 57 Neb. 17, 73 Am. St. R. 488, 42 L. R. A. 789.)

So, of a power to draw money from a savings bank. Hoffman v. Union

Dime Savings Institution, 109 App. Div. 24.

⁷⁷ Michigan Ins. Co. v. Leavenworth, 30 Vt. 11.

⁷⁸ Jenkins v. Atkins, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 294, 34 Am. Dec. 648.

⁷⁹ Lewis v. Kerr, 17 Iowa, 73.

⁸⁰ Cleveland v. Williams, 29 Tex. 204, 94 Am. Dec. 274.

⁸¹ Rigs v. Cage, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 350, 37 Am. Dec. 559.

⁸² Garrett v. Trabue, 82 Ala. 227; Hatchett v. Molton, 76 Ala. 410; Davis v. Davis, 93 Ala. 173.

§ 668. Effect of principal's death upon contract of employment.—

Where, however, the transaction is more than the mere creation of a power, and amounts to a mutual and binding contract of employment for a definite time or the performance of a specific act, the effect of the principal's death upon the continuance of the contract depends upon a variety of considerations. Most contracts for personal services so evidently involve personal considerations and are so clearly dependent upon the continuance of the lives of the parties, as to be fairly subject, where no express provision is made, to the implied condition that the death of the principal or master as well as that of the agent or servant shall terminate the contract without liability.⁸³

But, on the other hand, there may be contracts of employment which involve no such considerations, and contemplate merely the accomplishment of certain objects which are not dependent upon the life of the principal. Here the contract liability may survive even though the power to act may not; the contract may impose upon the representatives of the principal the obligation to renew or recognize the authority or to permit it to be exercised; and damages for the breach of the contract may be recovered against the representatives of the deceased principal if, being in a situation to permit the performance of the contract, they refuse so to recognize it.⁸⁴

⁸³ Yerrington v. Greene, 7 R. I. 589, 84 Am. Dec. 578. Plaintiff contracted to work on M's farm as a farm laborer for a year and entered upon performance in March. In July M died, leaving a will by which the use of the farm for life and all the personal property on the farm was given to M's wife. Plaintiff knew of the will and continued without any new arrangement, to work on the farm under the direction of the widow, until the close of the year. He sued the executrix to recover for the whole year's service. Held, that upon the death of M the contract was terminated and that his estate was not liable for the services after his death. Lacy v. Getman, 119 N. Y. 109, 16 Am. St. R. 806, 6 L. R. A. 728. To same effect: Farrow v. Wilson, L. R. 4 C. P. 744.

See also Marvel v. Phillips, 162 Mass. 399, 44 Am. St. R. 370, 26 L. R. A. 416.

⁸⁴ Dumont v. Heighton, — Ariz.

—, 123 Pac. 306. In Grapel v. Hodges, 112 N. Y. 419, it appeared that C & Son were the holders of a certain "Alabama claim." They made a contract with K, by which K was to undertake the collection of the claim, paying all costs, for a share of the proceeds which he "and his legal representatives or assigns" might retain. As part of the contract, C & Son made K their agent to "ask, demand and receive," to "take all lawful ways and means to collect," etc., and gave him, and "his legal representatives and assigns, full power and authority to do and perform all and every act whatsoever necessary and requisite to be done," etc. K proceeded with the enterprise, and presented the claim, with the evidence. The claim was rejected by the Geneva tribunal, but Congress passed an act providing for the allowance of such claims and K prepared to present the claim before the tribunal established by this act.

§ 669. Death of partner or joint owner dissolves agency.—The death of one partner ordinarily operates to dissolve the partnership, and the partnership being dissolved, the authority of an agent appointed by the firm thereupon ceases, where the authority is not coupled with an interest.⁸⁵ The same effect would also ordinarily follow from the death of one of two joint owners, their joint interest being thereby severed.⁸⁶

C died early in the proceeding and the son, the surviving partner, also died before the act of Congress was passed. K tendered to the administrator his services under the contract to prosecute the claim before the new tribunal, but the administrator refused to permit him to proceed, and employed another attorney who presented the claim, which was allowed and paid. The referee found that K duly performed so far as he was permitted, and was ready to perform the residue, but that the administrator refused to permit him to perform. Held, that K was entitled to damages for not being permitted to perform. It was urged that K's power was revoked by the dissolution of the firm of C & Son, by the death of C, and by the death of the surviving partner. "But," said the court, "the paper signed by the parties was something more than a power of attorney. That was granted as incidental to a complete contract for services to be rendered on one side and compensation to be paid on the other. * * * They [C & Son] employed K to effect that object [the collection of their claim]. Their contract was with him, his assigns and representatives, and it provided that for service in that direction, rendered and to be rendered, K should receive twenty-five per cent. of the sum ultimately recovered. He entered upon the service. * * * The surviving partner of C & Co. had died but his death did not dissolve the contract. On one side, by its terms, it ran to those who might in the end represent K, and, on the other, beyond the death of C, if that occurred before the recovery was reached, for its terminus was a recovery or a final abandonment of the claim. By his services, K had acquired an interest in the enterprise contemplated by the contract, and a right to continue its prosecution to reach and procure the compensation agreed. * * * The ownership of the claim remained to the end in C & Co. and their representatives. The latter could, as they did, refuse to make K their attorney and so prevent him from fully performing his contract. But he tendered that full performance, and a recovery having been had, he is entitled to the stipulated reward, less the further expense incurred in making the final collection."

See also Wylie v. Coxe, 56 U. S. (15 How.) 415, 14 L. Ed. 753; Morgan v. Gibson, 42 Mo. App. 234; Price v. Haeberle, 25 Mo. App. 201.

⁸⁵ See ante, § 620; McNaughton v. Moore, 1 Hayw. (N. C.) 189. See Bank of New York v. Vanderhorst, 32 N. Y. 553, where it was held that an authorized agent of a firm who continues to draw firm funds from a bank and apply them to firm uses after the death of one partner, both he and the bank being ignorant of the death, acts within the scope of his authority and his acts bind the firm.

⁸⁶ See ante, § 621; Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ind. 206. But not where the power was jointly and severally conferred. Wilson v. Stewart, 5 Penn. L. Jour. Rep. 450.

But while the authority is revoked, the question of the effect of the death upon the contract of employment is not so clear.

It has been held that the death of one of two partners does not relieve the firm of liability to an agent who has been engaged for a definite period,⁸⁷ but a contrary result has also been reached,⁸⁸ and it would seem that the former holding could be sustained only where the firm is not in fact dissolved, but goes on with the business substantially as before.⁸⁹

§ 670. Death of principal dissolves authority of substitute.—The death of the principal not only dissolves the authority of the agent within the limits referred to, but also, so far as his acts might affect the principal, that of a substitute or subagent appointed by the agent, whether appointed with the consent and authority of the principal or not.⁹⁰

b. By Death of the Agent.

§ 671. General rule—Death of agent terminates agency.—Upon the death of the agent invested with a mere power, the agency is terminated. There is then no one to exercise the derivative authority which must of course cease to flow. If the agent were one selected for his skill, judgment or discretion, this furnishes an additional reason why the authority should be held not to descend to the personal representatives of the agent, with whom the principal may be unacquainted and to whom he might be unwilling to confide the power.⁹¹

Where an agent holds property simply as agent his agency is terminated by his death, and the property will not pass to his personal representative.⁹²

⁸⁷ Fereira v. Sayres, 5 Watts & Serg. (Penn.) 210, 40 Am. Dec. 496.

⁸⁸ Tasker v. Shepherd, 6 H. & N. 575; Burnet v. Hope, 9 Ont. Rep. 10; Hoey v. MacEwan, 5 Sc. Ct. Sess. (3d ser.) 814 (but compare Brace v. Calder, [1895] 2 Q. B. 253); Griggs v. Swift, 82 Ga. 392, 14 Am. St. Rep. 176, 5 L. R. A. 405; Greenburg v. Early, 30 Abb. N. Cas. 300.

⁸⁹ As in Hughes v. Gross, 166 Mass. 61, 55 Am. St. Rep. 375, 32 L. R. A. 620.

A dissolution of the partnership not by death but by the voluntary retirement of a partner does not terminate the contract so as to exempt from liability. Brace v. Calder, [1895] 2 Q. B. 253.

⁹⁰ Peries v. Aycinena, 3 W. & Serg. (Penn.) 64, 79.

⁹¹ Gage v. Allison, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 495, 2 Am. Dec. 682; Merrick's Estate, 8 Watts & Serg. (Penn.) 402; Adrian v. Rutherford, 57 Mich. 170; Kimmell v. Powers, 19 Okla. 339; Love v. Peel, 79 Ark. 366; Bristol Savings Bank v. Holley, 77 Conn. 225; Tyson v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., 115 Md. 564.

⁹² Tyson v. George's Creek Coal Co., supra.

§ 672. — Not when coupled with an interest.—Where, however, the agent has acquired with the power an estate or interest in the thing which is the subject of the agency, his death will not necessarily operate to defeat it. Thus the power of sale conferred upon a mortgagee is not revoked by his death, but may be exercised by his representatives or assigns.⁹³

§ 673. When death of one of two agents terminates agency.—As has been seen, a power confided to two or more private agents must ordinarily be exercised by all of them jointly; the death of one of them therefore, where the authority is joint, renders the further execution of the agency as contemplated impossible, and it is therefore terminated.⁹⁴ Where however the agency is joint and several, or a several execution is otherwise authorized, the death of one agent does not terminate it.⁹⁵

Even in the case of joint agents, moreover, since the rule requiring joint execution is based upon the presumed intention of the principal, the rule will not apply if, after the death of one, the principal recognizes the continued existence of the agency of the survivor.⁹⁶

A power coupled with an estate in several or a power in trust to several, would however not ordinarily be terminated by the death of one.⁹⁷

§ 674. Dissolution of artificial person which was the agent.—Where, instead of a natural person, an artificial person is constituted the agent, as in the case of a corporation, the legal "death" or dissolution of that artificial person, would ordinarily terminate the agency. The same result has been held to follow where a partnership had been appointed the agent and the partnership was dissolved.⁹⁸

§ 675. Effect on substitute.—Where the agent has appointed a substitute or subagent without direct authority, and for his own convenience merely, the death of the agent annuls the authority of the subagent or substitute,⁹⁹ and this rule also applies even though the agent was expressly given the right of substitution.¹ Where, how-

⁹³ Collins v. Hopkins, 7 Iowa, 463; Harnickell v. Orndorff, 35 Md. 341; Merrin v. Lewis, 90 Ill. 505; Lewis v. Wells, 50 Ala. 198.

⁹⁴ Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 57 Ill. 180; Martine v. International L. Ins. Society, 53 N. Y. 339, 13 Am. Rep. 529; Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ins. 206.

⁹⁵ See Wilson v. Stewart, 5 Penn. L. J. Rep. 450; Douglass v. Baker, 79 Tex. 499.

⁹⁶ Davidson v. Provost, 35 Ill. App. 126.

⁹⁷ See In re Bacon, 76 L. J. Ch. 213.

⁹⁸ Larson v. Newman, 19 N. D. 153.

⁹⁹ Jackson Ins. Co. v. Partee, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 296.

¹ Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. v. Mohr, 83 Penn. St. 228, 24 Am. Rep. 161; Watt v. Watt, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 371; Peries v. Aycinena, 3 Watts & ever, the subagent, though appointed by the agent, derives his authority directly from the principal, it will not be affected by the death of the agent.²

2. By Insanity of One of the Parties.

a. By Insanity of the Principal.

§ 676. In general.—The act of every agent exercising a bare power or authority necessarily presupposes, as has been seen, the existence of a principal competent to perform the same act himself in his own behalf. It is his will that is being carried out through the medium of the agent. If for any reason, therefore, the principal becomes incapable of acting and exercising an intelligent will in regard to the transaction, it is evident that an essential element in the relation is lacking, and while that element remains absent, the further exercise of the relation must be suspended.

§ 677. General rule.—It is the general rule, therefore, that the after-occurring insanity of the principal, or his incapacity to exercise any volition upon the subject by reason of an entire loss of mental power, operates as a revocation or suspension for the time being, of the authority of an agent acting under a bare power.³ “If, on the recovery of the principal,” it is said, “he manifests no will to terminate the authority, it may be considered as a mere suspension, and his assent to acts done during the suspension may be inferred from his forbearing to express dissent when they come to his knowledge.”⁴

The insanity here referred to, of course means something more than mere mental weakness or delusions respecting particular matters. It must be either general dementia or at least such unsoundness as renders the principal incapable of acting with reference to those matters to which the authority relates.⁵

Serg. (Penn.) 79. See also Union Casualty Co. v. Gray, 52 C. C. A. 224, 114 Fed. 422.

² Smith v. White, 5 Dana (Ky.), 376.

³ Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156, 160; Matthiesson, etc., Co. v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 536; Hill v. Day, 34 N. J. Eq. 150; Bunce v. Gallagher, 5 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 481; Drew v. Nunn, 4 Q. B. Div. 661; Renfro v.

City of Waco (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 766; Spencer v. Reynolds, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 249.

Cases of attorney and client.—Yonge v. Toynbee, [1910] 1 K. B. 215; Joost v. Racher, 148 Ill. App. 548; McKenna v. McArdle, 191 Mass. 96; Chase v. Chase, 163 Ind. 178.

⁴ Davis v. Lane, supra.

⁵ Drew v. Nunn, supra; Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308.

§ 678. ——— Ignorance of insanity.—But this general rule is subject to the exception ordinarily made in dealing with an insane person, that when third persons in good faith, relying upon an apparent authority and in ignorance of the principal's insanity have given a consideration of value, they will be protected, where the contract is fully executed, was fair and reasonable, and the parties cannot be restored to their original situation.⁶ "The liability of the lunatic in such cases is upheld, not on the ground of the contract, but on the fact that the lunatic has received and enjoyed an actual benefit from the contract."⁷ And where the principal while sane has expressly accredited an agent to the third person, the latter, it has been held, will be protected in continuing to supply goods to the agent until he has notice of the insanity.⁸

§ 679. When authority coupled with an interest.—And where the authority of the agent is given by way of security, etc., as previously explained, or is coupled with such an estate or interest that he may exercise it in his own name, the after-occurring insanity of the principal will not affect it.⁹ Thus a mortgagee's power of sale is not revoked by the after-occurring insanity of the mortgagor,¹⁰ or a power of attorney to confess judgment given as part of the security for money loaned.¹¹

Whether the same principle is applicable to those authorities which, as has been seen, are not revocable during the principal's life though they may be revoked by his death, seems not to have been determined, though it has been suggested, and it is thought rightly, that such powers also would be preserved.¹²

§ 680. What evidence of insanity sufficient.—A judicial determination of insanity, after regular proceedings, is usually deemed evidence to all the world,¹³ and it has been held that the insanity of the principal must be established as a fact by an inquisition before it would revoke the agency.¹⁴ This view is approved by Chancellor Kent¹⁵ in

⁶ Matthiesson v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 536; Merritt v. Merritt, 43 N. Y. App. Div. 68; Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156; Drew v. Nunn, 4 Q. B. Div. 661.

⁷ Matthiesson v. McMahon, supra.

⁸ Drew v. Nunn, supra. Cf. Yonge v. Toynbee, supra.

⁹ Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156; Matthiesson v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 536; Hill v. Day, 34 N. J. Eq. 150.

¹⁰ Berry v. Skinner, 30 Md. 567; Van Meter v. Darrah, 115 Mo. 153; Bevin v. Powell, 83 Mo. 365; Lund- berg v. Davidson, 72 Minn. 49, 42 L. R. A. 103; Laughlin v. Hibben, 129 Ind. 5.

¹¹ Spencer v. Reynolds, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 249.

¹² Davis v. Lane, supra.

¹³ See Hughes v. Jones, 116 N. Y. 67, 15 Am. St. R. 386, 5 L. R. A. 637; Joost v. Racher, 148 Ill. App. 548.

¹⁴ Wallis v. Manhattan Co., 2 Hall (N. Y.), 495.

¹⁵ II Kent's Com. 645.

his Commentaries, but, as is declared by the court in New Jersey,¹⁶ it is believed that "the weight of authority, as well as sound reasoning, leads to the conclusion that the after-occurring insanity of the principal operates, per se, as a revocation or suspension of the agency, except in cases where a consideration has previously been advanced in the transaction which was the subject-matter of the agency so that the power became coupled with an interest, or where a consideration of value is given by a third person, trusting to an apparent authority in ignorance of the principal's incapacity." The mere fact that a guardian has been appointed over the principal as an insane person is not sufficient without proof that the insanity was of such a character as disqualified him from making a valid contract.¹⁷ Nor the mere fact that one has gone to a hospital or asylum for the care or cure of the insane.¹⁸

b. By Insanity of the Agent.

§ 681. In general.—The proper exercise of the authority conferred implies in every case the exercise of more or less intelligence upon the part of the agent, and the subsequent loss of that intelligence by the agent renders the proper performance of his duty thereafter impossible. This is especially true where the agent was selected for his mental capacity or endowments, as in the case of an attorney, architect or author.

§ 682. General rule—Terminates agency unless coupled with an interest.—The after-occurring insanity of the agent to such a degree as to incapacitate him from further execution of the agency, operates as a dissolution, or suspension for the time being, of his authority in all cases, unless he has with it an estate or interest in the thing which is the subject-matter of the agency.¹⁹ Mere partial derangement or monomania would not necessarily have that effect, unless the mania related to the subject-matter of the agency, or destroyed the agent's capacity for its proper execution.

¹⁶ Matthiesson v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 536. See also Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156; Bunce v. Gallagher, 5 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 481.

¹⁷ Motley v. Head, 43 Vt. 633.

¹⁸ See Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308; McKenna v. McArdle, 191 Mass. 96.

¹⁹ See Corson v. Lewis, 77 Neb. 446, where an attorney became temporarily insane and his office was closed. Held, to annul the contract of employment.

But master was held liable for tort of an insane servant, acting within the course of his employment. Chesapeake, etc., Ry. Co. v. Francisco, 149 Ky. 307.

§ 683. How when insanity unknown.—Executed dealings had by third persons with the agent in good faith and in ignorance of his insanity, could not be affected by it, where no advantage had been taken of it and the parties could not be restored to their original situation.

§ 684. Insanity of one of two or more agents.—For the same reason that the death of one of two or more joint agents operates to dissolve the agency, the insanity of one of two or more joint agents has the same effect.²⁰ If, however, the agency was joint and several, it may be executed by the others.

§ 685. Effect on subagents.—The termination of the agent's authority would also bring to an end the authority of the substitutes and subagents who derived their powers from him. But if the subagent was appointed with the authority of the principal, and the authority of the subagent was capable of an independent execution, the insanity of the agent would not necessarily operate to dissolve the subagent's authority.

3. By Bankruptcy of One of the Parties.

§ 686. In general — Effect of bankruptcy.—Bankruptcy, in its legal effect, differs obviously and radically from death or insanity. It does not result in civil death or work a general legal incapacity. It simply operates with reference to the bankrupt and his then estate, and the claims of his then creditors. He is entirely free to engage in new business and make new contracts either in person or through an agent.

a. Bankruptcy of Principal.

§ 687. General rule—Bankruptcy of principal terminates agent's authority.—The legal bankruptcy of the principal or his general assignment for the benefit of creditors operates to revoke the authority of the agent for the transaction of the principal's business affected by the bankruptcy or assignment. By this event the principal's control and management of his affairs so affected is divested and confided to the assignee or trustee for the benefit of his creditors, who is thereupon entitled to collect and possess the bankrupt's credits and property, and the subject-matter of the agency passes under his control.²¹

²⁰ Salisbury v. Brisbane, 61 N. Y. 617; Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ind. 206.

²¹ Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541; Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowper, 251; Parker v. Smith, 16 East, 382; Wilson v. Harris, 21 Mont. 374.

Where the agent, in pursuance of a previous direction of his principal, does an act which is in itself an act of bankruptcy, his authority does not terminate until the act is done, and then it is too late to question it. Ex parte Helder, 24 Ch. Div. 339.

The bankruptcy, however, would not terminate an authority respecting matters not affected by it, or for the performance of acts which the bankrupt might still perform.²² § 688. Mere insolvency not enough.—The mere insolvency, or inability of the principal to pay his debts when due, would not have this effect. It only results from the operation of the law when, either voluntarily or involuntarily, the principal surrenders and the law assumes the control of his affairs.

Particular situations may undoubtedly arise, in which continued solvency on the part of the principal may expressly or by implication be a condition to the continuance of the authority. And the insolvency of the principal may justify the agent in refusing to continue; but these are not the questions here involved.

§ 689. Agent's authority not dissolved when coupled with an interest.—Where however the authority of the agent is given by way of security, or is "coupled with an interest," the bankruptcy of the principal will not dissolve it.²³ Thus the power of sale conferred upon a mortgagee is not revoked by the mortgagor's bankruptcy.²⁴

§ 690. How when bankruptcy unknown.—Where after the act of bankruptcy but before adjudication, the agent deals by virtue of the power with third persons who are ignorant of the bankruptcy, and who with good faith part with value upon the strength of the agent's authority, their rights—not acquired in violation of the terms of the statute—will ordinarily be protected.²⁵

b. Bankruptcy of the Agent.

§ 691. General rule.—The bankruptcy of a business agent, as for example, an agent appointed to sell merchandise,²⁶ or to receive payment of money due his principal,²⁷ operates as a revocation of his authority, but not where his authority is merely to do some formal act, ²² See Dixon v. Ewart, 3 Meriv. 322.

²³ Power of attorney to sell given as adjunct to a pledge is not terminated by bankruptcy. Renshaw v. Creditors, 40 La. Ann. 37; Dickinson v. Central Nat. Bank, 129 Mass. 279, 37 Am. Rep. 351.

So where authority to a bank to collect was deemed coupled with an equitable assignment of the debt. Farmers' Bank v. Kansas City Pub. Co., 3 Dillon, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 4,652.

Same effect: Clark v. Iron Co., 26 C. C. A. 423, 81 Fed. 310.

²⁴ Hall v. Bliss, 118 Mass. 554, 19 Am. Rep. 476.

²⁵ Ex parte Snowball, L. R. 7 Ch. App. 534, 548; Elliott v. Turquand, 7 App. Cas. 79.

²⁶ Audenried v. Betteley, 8 Allen (Mass.), 302; Scott v. Surman, Willes (K. B.), 400; Hudson v. Granger, 5 Barn. & Ald. 27.

²⁷ Hudson v. Granger, supra.

as the execution of a deed in the name of his principal, or the carrying out of some existing trust which is incumbent upon him.²⁸

The mere insolvency of the agent would not of itself terminate an authority, but a known or notorious condition of insolvency might very well be deemed to terminate many sorts of authority, especially those involving trust and credit in financial affairs.²⁹ It would doubtless be good ground for the termination of definite contracts of employment in any case in which keeping his credit good might fairly be regarded as an implied term.

4. By Marriage.

§ 692. a. Marriage of principal.—The marriage of the principal will, in certain cases, operate to revoke a power previously given, that is to say, where the execution of the power will defeat or impair rights acquired by the marriage.

Thus where a man gave a power of attorney to another to sell his homestead, but before a sale was effected the principal married, it was held that the marriage operated as a revocation of the power. By the marriage the wife acquired interests in the property of which she could only be divested with her consent, evidenced by her joining in the deed, or in the power of attorney by virtue of which the deed was executed.³⁰ The rule would not apply, however, where the execution of the power would not defeat or impair the rights acquired by the wife, as, for example, where an executory contract for the sale of land may be executed by the husband which would leave the wife's dower rights unimpaired.³¹

So, at the common law, the subsequent marriage of a feme sole operated to revoke a power of attorney previously given by her where its execution would defeat the rights acquired by the husband, and the same rule would still apply wherever the modern married women's acts have not clothed her with full capacity to deal as sole with reference to the interests in question, or where, under the law, the husband acquires an immediate interest in the property by the marriage.³²

A power given by way of security, or a power coupled with an in-

²⁸ Dixon v. Ewart, 3 Mer. 322; Hudson v. Granger, supra.

²⁹ See McLeod v. Despain, 49 Oreg. 536, 124 Am. St. R. 1066, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276.

³⁰ Henderson v. Ford, 46 Tex. 637.

³¹ Joseph v. Fisher, 122 Ind. 399.

³² Judson v. Sierra, 22 Tex. 365; Brown v. Miller, 46 Mo. App. 1; Wamble v. Foote, 2 Dak. 1; Gilmer v. Veatch, 56 Tex. Civ. App. 511.

terest, however, like the power of sale contained in a valid mortgage, would not be revoked by the marriage of the grantor.³³

§ 693. b. Marriage of agent.—The marriage of the agent is not usually an event which, in itself, can affect the continuance of the agency. There may be express stipulations for an unmarried agent, and there may be cases, especially where the agent is a woman, in which the legal subordination of the agent's will to that of the principal may be inconsistent with rights or powers acquired by the other party to the marriage. It is easier, however, to imagine cases in which the marriage of the agent, and especially again a female agent, would be likely to lead to situations justifying a termination of the relation than it is to foresee cases in which the marriage renders the continuance of the relation legally impossible.³⁴

5. By War.

§ 694. In general—War between countries of principal and of agent terminates commercial agency.—Every kind of trading, or commercial dealing, or intercourse, whether by transmission of money or goods, or of orders for the delivery of either, between two countries at war, directly or indirectly, or through the intervention of third persons or partnerships, or by contracts in any form looking to or involving such transmission are prohibited.³⁵

It results, therefore, that war between the state or country of the principal and that of the agent, as a general rule, renders further prosecution of the agency for such purposes unlawful and operates to dissolve the relation.

Many other cases, than those involving war between the respective countries of the principal and the agent, can easily be imagined in which the breaking out of war would affect agency. Thus, a war in their common country, or a war in the country in which the authority ³³ A power of attorney to confess judgment has been put on the same ground. Eneri v. Clark, 2 Pa. St. 234, 44 Am. Dec. 191.

³⁴ See Edgecomb v. Buckhout, 140 N. Y. 332, 28 L. R. A. 816, where it was held that the mere fact that a woman, engaged while single as housekeeper for an unmarried man, proposed to marry did not justify her discharge where it appeared that she promised and her proposed husband was willing that she should continue to render the same services as formerly and where there had been in fact no failure to render the same service.

³⁵ Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 42 L. Ed. 658; Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, 1 Am. Rep. 142; Woolsey, International Law, § 117; Montgomery v. United States, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 395, 400, 21 L. Ed. 97.

was to be exercised, may easily create such changes in the possibility, desirability or risk of performance as necessarily to suspend, if not to terminate, the prosecution of the enterprise contemplated before the war occurred.

The case of war between their respective countries, however, is the one which has chiefly been considered, and to which most of the judicial utterances have applied.

§ 695. — It is said by a learned judge:³⁶ “That war suspends all commercial intercourse between the citizens of two belligerent countries or states, except so far as may be allowed by the sovereign authority, has been so often asserted and explained in this court within the last fifteen years, that any further discussion of that proposition would be out of place. As a consequence of this fundamental proposition it must follow that no active business can be maintained either personally or by correspondence or through an agent, by the citizens of one belligerent with the citizens of the other. The only exception to the rule recognized in the books, if we lay out of view contracts for ransom and other matters of absolute necessity, is that of allowing the payment of debts to an agent of an alien enemy, where such agent resides in the same state with the debtor. But this indulgence is subject to restrictions. In the first place it must not be done with the view of transmitting the funds to the principal during the continuance of the war, though if so transmitted without the debtor’s connivance, he will not be responsible for it.

“In the next place, in order to the subsistence of the agency during the war, it must have the assent of the parties thereto,—the principal and the agent. As war suspends all intercourse between them, preventing any instructions, supervision, or knowledge of what takes place on the one part, and any report or application for advice on the other, this relation necessarily ceases on the breaking out of hostilities even for the limited purpose before mentioned, unless continued by the mutual assent of the parties. It is not compulsory; nor can it be made so on either side, to subserve the ends of third parties. If the agent continues to act as such, and his so acting is subsequently ratified by the principal, or if the principal’s assent is evinced by any other circumstances, then third parties may safely pay money for the use of the principal into the agent’s hands; but not otherwise. It is not enough that there was an agency prior to the war. It would be contrary to reason that a man without his consent should continue to be bound by the acts of one whose relations to him have undergone such a fundamental alteration as that produced by a war between the two countries to which they respectively belong: with whom he can have no correspondence, to whom he can communicate no instructions, and over whom he can exercise no control. It would be equally unreasonable that the agent should be compelled to continue in the service of one whom the law of nations declares to be his public enemy. If the agent has property of the principal in his possession or control, good faith and fidelity to his trust will require him to keep it safely during the war and to restore it faithfully at its close. This is all. * * *

³⁶ Bradley, J., in Insurance Co. v. Davis, 95 U. S. 425, 24 L. Ed. 453.

"What particular circumstances will be sufficient to show the consent of one person that another shall act as his agent to receive payment of debts in an enemy's country during war may sometimes be difficult to determine. Emerigon says that if a foreigner is forced to depart from one country in consequence of a declaration of war with his own, he may leave a power of attorney to a friend to collect his debts and even to sue for them.³⁷ But though a power of attorney, to collect debts, given under such circumstances, might be valid, it is generally conceded that a power of attorney cannot be given during the existence of war by a citizen of one of the belligerent countries resident therein, to a citizen or resident of the other; for that would be holding intercourse with the enemy which is forbidden. Perhaps it may be assumed that an agent ante bellum, who continues to act as such during the war in the receipt of money or property on behalf of his principal where it is the manifest interest of the latter that he should do so, as in the collection of rents and other debts, the assent of the principal will be presumed unless the contrary be shown; but that where it is against his interests, or would impose upon him some new obligations or burdens, his assent will not be presumed, but must be proved, either by his subsequent ratification or in some other manner. In some way, however, it must appear that the alleged agent assumed to act as such and that the alleged principal consented to his so acting."³⁸

³⁷ Traite des Assurances, Vol. 1, 567.

³⁸ Upon this question see also New York L. Ins. Co. v. Statham, 93 U. S. 24, 23 L. Ed. 789; Ward v. Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 447, 19 L. Ed. 207; Brown v. Hiatts, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 177, 21 L. Ed. 128; Fretz v. Stover, 22 Id. 198, 22 L. Ed. 769. The decisions in the state courts do not seem to be altogether harmonious.

See Shelby v. Offutt, 51 Miss. 128; Darling v. Lewis, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 125; Howell v. Gordon, 40 Ga. 302; Robinson v. Life Ass'n Co., 42 N. Y. 54, 1 Am. Rep. 490; Sands v. Life Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 626, 10 Am. Rep. 535; Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Warrick, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 614, 3 Am. Rep. 218; Jones v. Harris, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 98; Blackwell v. Willard, 65 N. C. 555, 6 Am. Rep. 749.

§ 696. — In a later case³⁹ before the same court, it is said: "It is entirely plain, as we think, that the mere fact of the breaking out of a war does not necessarily and as a matter of law revoke every agency. Whether it is revoked or not depends upon the circumstances surrounding the case and the nature and character of the agency." "Where it is obviously and plainly against the interest of the principal that the agency should continue, or where its continuance would impose some new obligation or burden, the assent of the principal to the continuance of the agency after the war broke out, will not be presumed but must be proved, either by his subsequent ratification or in some other manner. And on the other hand, where it is the manifest interest of the principal that the agency, constituted before the war, should continue, the assent of the principal will be presumed. Or, if the agent continues to act as such, and his so acting is subsequently ratified by the principal, then those acts are just as valid and binding upon the principal as if no war had intervened."

In this case it was held that a power of attorney, executed in one of the northern states before the civil war by a married woman then residing there, was not revoked by the fact that, when the war broke out, she and her husband removed to one of the southern states, where he entered the confederate service and where she resided until the close of the war. So a power of sale contained in a mortgage of lands was not revoked by the war.⁴⁰

6. By Destruction of Subject-matter.

§ 697. Destruction of subject-matter usually terminates agency respecting it.—Where the authority is created to be exercised upon or respecting some particular subject-matter, whose continued existence is essential to the exercise of the authority, the subsequent destruction of that subject-matter must ordinarily operate to terminate the authority. Thus, for example, it is held that the destruction of a house by fire will terminate an authority to sell it.⁴¹

³⁹ Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 42 L. Ed. 658.

⁴⁰ University v. Finch, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 106, 21 L. Ed. 818.

⁴¹ Cox v. Bowling, 54 Mo. App. 289. (Here all parties seem to have known of the fire.)

So where an attorney was employed to protect and obtain supposed interests of his client in land, his authority is terminated when it is discovered that his client has no interest. Palms v. Howard, 129 Ky. 668.

Whether the principal would incur any liability for so terminating, if the destruction were by his act, is a question not now involved.

7. By Termination of Principal's Interest in Subject-matter.

§ 698. Termination of principal's interest usually terminates authority.—It must also be true, as a general rule, that the termination or extinguishment of the principal's interest in the subject-matter, over or concerning which the authority is to be exercised, must operate to terminate the authority.⁴² Reference has already been made to this, where the termination of the principal's interest results from his disposing of such subject-matter or of his estate or interest therein.⁴³

8. By Termination of Principal's Authority.

§ 699. Principal's removal from office removes subordinates.—Where the principal's power of appointing agents is derived from his occupying an office or position of a fiduciary character, his ceasing to longer occupy the position operates to determine the authority of those also who were his subordinates in the performance of the trust.⁴⁴

9. By Change in Law.

§ 700. Change in law rendering prosecution of agency unlawful.—Although it were lawful when created, a subsequent change in the law which makes the execution of the authority or the further prosecution of the agency unlawful, must usually operate to terminate it.⁴⁵

10. Notice of the Termination.

§ 701. Notice generally not necessary where authority terminated by operation of law.—It is, in general, true that notice is not required to be given of the termination of authority by operation of law, in order to prevent future acts which shall be binding upon those who succeed in law to the principal's rights. The reason commonly given ⁴² See Foster v. Bookwalter, 152 N. Y. 166; Kelly v. Brennan, 55 N. J. Eq. 423.

⁴³ See ante, § 619.

⁴⁴ Livermore on Agency, § 307.

⁴⁵ See Justice v. Lairy, 19 Ind. App. 272, 65 Am. St. R. 405 (a partnership case).

for this is, that the event which works the termination is either in itself of a public nature, or is so associated with acts tending to publicity, that it may fairly be assumed that everybody will know of it. Termination by the breaking out of war between the country of the principal and that of the agent, would furnish a typical illustration. The same principle is also said to apply to termination by death, which usually involves elements of publicity; and by bankruptcy;⁴⁶ marriage, perhaps;⁴⁷ judicial determination of insanity; and the like.

§ 702. — The true reason in these latter cases may well be practical necessity; but another reason may doubtless be found elsewhere for certain of them. The case likely to present itself is not whether the agent can continue to bind the principal but whether his acts, done after the happening of the alleged terminating event, can bind his estate in the hands of those who succeed by law to the interests of the former principal—in the case of death, whether the heirs or representatives are affected; in the case of insanity, whether the estate is affected; and the like. Assuming that the liability of the principal who has not given notice is based upon the doctrines of estoppel, it will be evident that there is here no room for their application. The person who created the authority is not responsible for its termination. The persons sought to be estopped neither created the agency nor terminated it; they have done no acts upon which the persons asserting estoppel could rely; they have done nothing to mislead but have simply succeeded to rights with which the law clothes them; they may have had no knowledge or means of knowledge of the existence of the authority; they have succeeded to property, not to personal relations.

§ 703. — If the question were whether in case of marriage or bankruptcy the principal himself might continue to be bound, different considerations would apply. As to him, it might well be in certain cases that the event did not dissolve the authority, however ⁴⁶ Notice of the dissolution of a partnership by bankruptcy, is held not to be necessary. Eustis v. Bolles, 146 Mass. 413, 4 Am. St. R. 327.

But an assignment for the benefit of creditors is held not to be an event of which all persons are bound to take notice. Kuser v. Wright, 52 N. J. Eq. 825.

⁴⁷ In Little v. Hazlett, 197 Pa. 591, it was held by the court below that marriage of a woman terminates a partnership by operation of law without notice. The judgment below was affirmed by a per curiam opinion without discussion of this question. In Henderson v. Ford, 46 Tex. 627, the marriage of a man was said to terminate an authority to sell a homestead, but, although the grantee did not know of the marriage at the time of the purchase, he did know of it before he accepted the deed and paid the price.

much it might be held inoperative against those who had acquired rights by the event. It would be conceivable, for example, that a wholesale dealer might give such authority to his travelling salesman to bind him by executory contracts of sale that he would continue to be personally bound after his bankruptcy even though no damages for the breach of such a contract could be allowed out of the estate in the hands of the assignee. Marriage, at common law, of a male principal would not affect his status as would the marriage of a female principal, and the marriage of the latter, under modern statutes, might have a very narrow effect upon existing agencies created by her.

OF THE AUTHORITY CONFERRED; ITS NATURE AND EFFECT

CHAPTER I

OF THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE AUTHORITY IN GENERAL

§ 704. Purpose of Book II.

705. Scope of the questions involved.

706. Distinctions based upon nature and extent of authority.

I. EXPRESS AND IMPLIED AUTHORITY.

707. Where authority is express—
Effect of limitations.

708. Where authority is implied.

II. THE ELEMENTS OF AUTHORITY.

709. Authority an attribute of character bestowed by principal.

710, 711. Limitations — Apparent authority cannot be limited by secret instructions.

712. Distinctions between authority and power.

713. What constitutes authority.

714. Elements of authority—I. Authority intentionally and directly conferred.

715. — II. Incidental authority—
Ordinary and necessary acts.

716. — III. Authority conferred by custom or usage.

717. — IV. The customs of the particular business, or an established course of dealing in it.

718, 719. — V. Authority by necessity or special emergency.

720, 721. — VI. Apparent authority.

722-726. — VII. Liability by estoppel.

727. VIII. Liability by ratification.

728, 729. — Recapitulation.

730. The province of "instructions."

731-735. — What constitute instructions.

III. UNIVERSAL, GENERAL AND SPECIAL AGENTS.

736. In general.

737. General and special agents.

738. — Distinctions sometimes made.

739. — The true distinction.

740. General agency not unlimited.

741. General agent binds principal only within scope of his authority.

742. Special agent's authority must be strictly pursued.

IV. ASCERTAINING THE EXISTENCE OF THE AUTHORITY.

743. Persons dealing with an agent must ascertain his authority.

744. — What is meant by this.

745. — What such person is bound to ascertain.

746. — Not an unfair rule.

747, 748. — Other theories.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 749. — The dilemma of choosing between two innocent persons. 750. — Through whom must authority be ascertained. 751. Persons dealing with agent must act in good faith. 752. Must exercise reasonable prudence. 753. — Notice of limitations. 754. — Notice of adverse interests. | 755. — Effect of principal's negligence. 756. Must ascertain whether necessary conditions exist. 757, 758. — Agent's representations as to his authority not to be relied upon. 759, 760. — Facts peculiarly within agent's knowledge. 761. — Fixed pecuniary limits. 762. — Corporate agents. 763. Authority of public agents must be ascertained. |
|---|--|

§ 704. Purpose of Book II.—It has been seen in earlier chapters how the relation of principal and agent may be created and how it may be terminated. The purpose of creating the agency is to confer authority upon the agent,—to clothe him to a greater or less extent, and for a shorter or longer period, with a portion of that power with which nature and the laws of society have invested the principal. For the time being, and in some capacity, the principal has another self, who, by his will and act, is invested with the power to speak and do with like effect as if he himself should speak or do.

It will be very evident that to those persons who may have occasion to deal with the principal through this other self, the question of how fully, how certainly and for how long a time, he has invested the latter with his own personality, becomes exceedingly important. And not only this, but these matters being ascertained, it is no less important to determine whether any given act assumed to be done by virtue thereof, is, in reality, within the fullness, the certainty and the term of the investment.

It will be equally evident that these are questions not always easy of solution, not only because men are notoriously careless and indefinite in their words and acts, but because even if, in a given case, a power has been conferred in terms the most express and definite, the questions may still arise whether the express words embrace the act assumed to be done by virtue of them; whether the mode of doing has been that contemplated by the language used; whether subsequent changes in the circumstances of the parties, or the condition of the subject-matter have warranted any departure from that mode; whether in consideration of the nature of the act to be done, or the time and place of doing it, custom or necessity have added to, or subtracted from, the powers originally conferred.

It is the purpose of Book II to ascertain the principles upon which the solution of these questions rests.

§ 705. Scope of the questions involved.—It will be evident, also, upon reflection, that these questions can not well be considered in the abstract. It may indeed seem at first thought that the authority of an agent will always be a fixed and definite quantity, and that there must be certain rules which may invariably be applied to determine its existence and to measure its scope and extent. Further consideration, however, will show this to be an error. Authority, at least in the practical sense in which it is here dealt with, is an exceedingly concrete matter, it has very little abstract value, it is a variable quantity, it is affected by relations, it may present one aspect to one person and a different one to another person, it can not be separated from its environment. It will be evident, therefore, that we must consider not only its relation to persons, but the relation of persons to it. We must consider their duty to ascertain its existence, to interpret it properly, and to apply it correctly to the affairs in question.

§ 706. Distinctions based upon nature and extent of authority.—In doing this, aid may perhaps be derived from certain of the familiar distinctions based upon the nature and extent of the authority. Thus it is common to say that in its nature the authority may be express or implied; and, as to its extent, that it may be either universal, general or special. It is certain that distinguishable ideas underlie these classifications, however much there may be difference of opinion as to their importance.

I.

EXPRESS AND IMPLIED AUTHORITY.

§ 707. Where authority is express—Effect of limitations.—It has been seen in another place how the creation of an authority may be either express or implied, and nothing more need now be said upon that particular subject. But in determining the scope of the authority the question whether it is express or implied becomes important.

If the grant be an express one, the extent of the authority conferred, and the time, place and manner of its exercise may be expected to be clearly defined. And to the degree to which this is done, the limits fixed are necessarily conclusive upon all parties who have or are charged with notice of them.¹ So, to the extent to which the grant is

¹ Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Brown v. Johnson, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 398, 51 Am. Dec. 118; Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531; Chaffe v. Stubbs, 37 La. Ann. 656; Rust v. Eaton, 24 Fed. 830; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281, 62 Am. Dec. 648; Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45 Am. Dec. 96; Wood Mow. & Reap. Machine Co. v. Crow, 70 Iowa, 340; Siebold v. Davis, 67 Iowa, 560; Bohart v. Oberne, 36 Kan. 284.

express it is exclusive of every other main authority,² for while usage and necessity may often determine the mode in which the authority is to be exercised, they cannot operate to change the essential character of the authority conferred.³

Duty to observe extent.—Parties dealing with an agent known by them to be acting only under an express grant, whether the authority conferred be general or special, are bound to take notice of the nature and extent of the authority conferred. They must be regarded as dealing with that grant before them, and are bound at their peril to notice the limitations thereto prescribed either by its own terms or by construction of law.⁴

Where written authority exists.—So, where the act assumed to be done by the agent is one for which the authority is required by law to be conferred by a written instrument or by a writing under seal, the parties dealing with him must take notice of that fact, and they will be bound by any limitations or restrictions contained therein, although they have not had actual knowledge of them.⁵

The fact that the agent signs "per power of attorney,"⁶ or, perhaps, merely "per procuration"⁷ and the like, is ordinarily sufficient to put the party dealing with him upon inquiry.

² "No authority will be implied from an express authority. Whatever powers are strictly necessary to the effectual exercise of the express powers will be conceded to the agent by implication." Jackson v. National Bank, 92 Tenn. 154, 36 Am. St. R. 81, 18 L. R. A. 663.

³ Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. of L. 802, reversing the same case in L. R. 7 C. P. 84.

⁴ Mt. Morris Bank v. Gorham, 169 Mass. 519; Ferguson v. Davis 118 N. C. 946; Reeves v. Corrigan, 3 N. Dak. 415; Gorham v. Felker, 102 Ga. 260; Wells v. Mich. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 41 W. Va. 131; Dyer v. Duffy, 39 W. Va. 148, 24 L. R. A. 339; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281, 62 Am. Dec. 648; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666, 19 L. Ed. 169; Whiteside v. United States, 93 U. S. 247, 23 L. Ed. 882; Lewis v. Commissioners, 12 Kan. 186; Craycraft v. Selvage, 10 Bush (Ky.), 696; Dozier v. Freeman, 47 Miss. 647; Baxter v. Lamont, 60 Ill. 237; Cruzan v. Smith, 41 Ind. 288; Blackwell v. Ketcham, 53 Ind. 184; Silliman v. Fredericksburg, etc., R. R. Co., 27 Gratt. (Va.) 119; Snow v. Warner, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 132, 43 Am. Dec. 417.

See also per Moulton, L. J., in Smith v. Prosser, [1907] 2 K. B. 735.

⁵ Mt. Morris Bank v. Gorham, 169 Mass. 519; Peabody v. Hoard, 46 Ill. 242; Weise's Appeal, 72 Penn. St. 351; National Iron Armor Co. v. Bruner, 19 N. J. Eq. 331; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Miller v. Wehrman, 81 Neb. 388; Thompson v. Green River Power Co., 154 N. Car. 13.

⁶ Mt. Morris Bank v. Gorham, supra.

⁷ So declared in Alexander v. Mackenzie, 6 C. B. 766; Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278.

But in Smith v. McGuire, 3 H. & N. 554, it is said by Pollock, C. B.: "The expression 'per procuration' does not always necessarily mean that the act is done under procuration. All that it in reality means is § 708. Where authority is implied.—The same general principles apply so far as possible where the authority is implied, though from the nature of the case the limits of an implied authority cannot be defined so sharply as where the authority is express. As has been seen in another place, authority is constantly implied from the words and conduct of the parties or from the circumstances of the case. Even here, however, the authority so implied is not without limits; it cannot exceed the necessary and legitimate effect of the facts from which it is so inferred, the facts must be given their natural and appropriate significance, and when the authority is inferred from the recognition or adoption of acts of a certain sort, its scope must be limited to the performance of like acts under like circumstances.⁸

this: 'I am an agent not having any authority of my own.'

The Negotiable Instruments Act provides that "A signature by 'procuration' operates as notice that the agent has but a limited authority to sign, and the principal is bound only in case the agent in so signing acted within the actual limits of his authority." Section 21.

⁸ See Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66, where Mitchell, J., says: "It is true that agency may be proved from the habit and course of dealing between the parties; that is, if one has usually or frequently employed another to do certain acts for him, or has usually ratified such acts when done by him, such person becomes his implied agent to do such acts; as, for example, the case of the manager of a plantation in buying supplies for it, or the superintendent of a sawmill in making contracts for putting in logs for the use of the mill, which are the cases cited by respondent. It is also true, as was said in Wilcox v. Railroad Co., 24 Minn. 269 (which involved the question of the authority of the person to whom goods were delivered to receive them), a single act of an assumed agent, and a single recognition of it, may be of so unequivocal and of so positive and comprehensive a character as to place the authority of the agent to do similar acts for the principal beyond question. It is also true that the performance of subsequent as well as prior acts, authorized or ratified by the principal, may be evidence of agency, where the acts are of a similar kind, and related to a continuous series of acts embracing the time of the act in controversy, as indicating a general habit and course of dealing; as for example, the acts of the president of a railroad company in making drafts in the name of the company, which were honored by it, which was the case of Olcott v. Railroad Co., 27 N. Y. 546, 84 Am. Dec. 298, cited by counsel. But we think the books will be searched in vain for a case where it was ever held that authority to negotiate for the sale of property to one person at one time on certain terms, the transfer to be made by the principal in person, was evidence of authority to sell and transfer the same property at some former time to another person on different terms." See also McAlpin v. Cassidy, 17 Tex. 449; Gordon v. Loan & Tr. Co., 6 N. Dak. 454; Gregory v. Loose, 19 Wash. 599; Hallady v. Underwood, 90 Ill. App. 130; Rusby v. Scarlett, 5 Esp. 76; Baines v. Ewing, L. R. 1 Exch. 320; Day v. Boyd, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 458; Cooley v. Willard, 34 Ill. 68, 85 Am. Dec. 296; Johnson v. Wingate, 29 Me. 404; Washington Bank v. Lewis, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 24.

And so, as has been elsewhere noticed, the authority, if implied at all, can only be implied from facts. It is not to be created by mere presumption, nor by any abstract considerations, however potent, that it would be expedient or proper or convenient that the authority should exist.⁹ The facts, moreover, must be those for which the principal is responsible. The authority if it exists at all must find its source in the act or acquiescence of the principal, either expressed or implied. If such a source cannot be shown, the authority cannot exist.¹⁰

II.

THE ELEMENTS OF AUTHORITY.

§ 709. Authority an attribute of character bestowed by the principal.—By the creation of the agency, the principal bestows upon the agent a certain character. For some purpose, during some time and to some extent, the agent is to be the alter ego,—the other self, of the principal. This purpose, time and extent are determined by the principal to suit the needs or objects which he has in view, and which the agent is expected to accomplish. These, however, are matters in which third persons have no part; they are considered and determined by the principal alone. What third persons are interested in, is, not the secret processes of the principal's mind, but the visible result of those processes,—the character in which the agent is held out by the principal to those who may have occasion or opportunity to deal with him. This character is a tangible, discernible thing, and, so far as third persons are concerned, must be held to be the authorized, as it is the only, expression and evidence from which the principal intends that they shall determine his purposes and objects. They must conclude, and have a right to conclude, that the principal intends the agent to have and exercise those powers, and those only, which naturally and properly belong to the character in which he holds him out.¹¹

Authority cannot usually be inferred from the authorization or adoption of a single act (Green v. Hinkley, 52 Iowa, 633, and other cases cited ante, § 262); but it may be if the adoption is sufficiently comprehensive and positive (Wilcox v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 24 Minn. 269, and other cases cited ante, § 262).

No inference of authority to sign a contract can properly be drawn from the fact that the alleged agent had on two occasions drawn up and signed contracts dictated by the principal. Fadner v. Hibler, 26 Ill. App. 639.

⁹ Bickford v. Menier, 107 N. Y. 490.

¹⁰ Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655.

¹¹ Cited and approved: Harrison v. Kansas City Ry. Co., 50 Mo. App. 332.

The authority of an agent in any given case, therefore, is an attribute of the character bestowed upon him in that case by the principal. Thus if the principal has by his express act, or as the logical and legal result of his words or conduct, impressed upon the agent the character of one authorized to act or speak for him in a given capacity, authority so to speak and act, follows as a necessary attribute of the character, and the principal having conferred the character will not be heard to assert, as against third persons who have relied thereon in good faith, that he did not intend to impose so much authority, or that he had given the agent express instructions not to exercise it.¹² The latter question is one to be settled between the agent and himself. It rested with the principal to determine in the first instance what character he would impart, but having made the determination and imparted the character, he must be held to have intended also the usual and legal attributes of that character.

§ 710. Limitations—"Apparent authority" not to be limited by secret instructions.—It is not to be inferred, however, that third persons have the right to attribute to the agent any authority they please, and by so doing bind the principal. It is lawful for the principal to confer as much or as little authority as he sees fit. He may impose all such lawful restrictions and limitations upon it as he thinks desirable, and these restrictions and limitations will be as binding and conclusive upon third persons who know of them, or who are charged with notice of them under the rules hereafter discussed, as they are upon the agent, provided the principal has done nothing to waive or nullify them.¹³ But on the other hand, as will be seen, instructions or limitations which are not disclosed cannot be permitted to affect an authority apparently unlimited and attended by no circumstances which, according to the ordinary habits and experiences of mankind, would suggest the possibility of such limitations.

The criterion in this case, as in others, is the character bestowed by the principal. He may not hold the agent out in the character of one having a general or special authority, and bind third persons who have relied thereon in good faith, by secret limitations and restrictions upon the agent's authority which are inconsistent with the character bestowed. Although the agent violates his instructions or exceeds the limits set to his authority, he will yet bind his principal to such third persons, if his acts are within the scope of the authority which the principal has caused or permitted him to appear to possess.¹⁴ But if the agent be not held out as one possessing other than the limited and restricted authority, then the instructions and the authority may coincide.

¹² Cited and approved: Hibbard v. Peek, 75 Wis. 619; Austrian v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343, 34 Am. St. R. 350.

¹³ See Van Santvoord v. Smith, 79 Minn. 316; American Lead Pencil Co. v. Wolfe, 30 Fla. 360, citing and approving text.

§ 711. — Rather anomalously, as it would seem, it is held that these rules apply as strongly where the principal was undisclosed at the time of the transaction as where he was disclosed,¹⁵—a matter

¹⁴ Munn v. Commission Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 44, 8 Am. Dec. 219; Rossiter v. Rossiter, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 494, 24 Am. Dec. 62; Walker v. Skipwith, Meigs (Tenn.), 502, 33 Am. Dec. 161; Commercial Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348, 34 Am. Dec. 317; Topham v. Roche, 2 Hill (S. C.), 307, 27 Am. Dec. 387; Lobdell v. Baker, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 193, 35 Am. Dec. 358; Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45 Am. Dec. 96; Bentley v. Doggett, 51 Wis. 224, 37 Am. Rep. 827; Merchants' Bank v. Central Bank, 1 Ga. 418, 44 Am. Dec. 665; Williams v. Getty, 31 Penn. St. 461, 72 Am. Dec. 757; Lister v. Allen, 31 Md. 543, 100 Am. Dec. 78; Carmichael v. Buck, 10 Rich. (S. C.) L. 332, 70 Am. Dec. 226; Butler v. Maples, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 766, 19 L. Ed. 822; Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222, 20 L. Ed. 617; Paine v. Tillinghast, 52 Conn. 532; Abbott v. Rose, 62 Me. 194, 16 Am. Rep. 427; Home Life Ins. Co. v. Pierce, 75 Ill. 426; Murphy v. Southern Life Ins. Co., 3 Baxter (Tenn.), 440, 27 Am. Rep. 761; Cruzan v. Smith, 41 Ind. 288; Bell v. Offutt, 10 Bush (Ky.), 632; Cosgrove v. Ogden, 49 N. Y. 255, 10 Am. Rep. 361; Morton v. Scull, 23 Ark. 289; Furnas v. Frankman, 6 Neb. 429; Willard v. Buckingham, 36 Conn. 395; Golding v. Merchant, 43 Ala. 705; Adams Express Co. v. Schlessinger, 75 Penn. St. 246; Palmer v. Cheney, 35 Iowa, 281; Williams v. Mitchell, 17 Mass. 98; Odiorne v. Maxcy, 13 Mass. 178; Hough v. Doyle, 4 Rawle (Penn.), 291; Shelhamer v. Thomas, 7 Serg.

& R. (Penn.) 106; Wilcox v. Routh, 9 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 476; Howry v. Eppinger, 34 Mich. 29; Davenport v. Peoria, etc., Ins. Co., 17 Iowa, 276; Kane v. Barstow, 42 Kan. 465, 16 Am. St. R. 490; Banks v. Everest, 35 Kan. 687; Winchell v. Nat. Expr. Co., 64 Vt. 15; Hirschorn v. Bradley, 117 Iowa, 130; Pacific Biscuit Co. v. Dugger, 40 Oreg. 302; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Higdon, 94 Ala. 286, 33 Am. St. R. 119, 14 L. R. A. 515; LaFayette Ry. Co. v. Tucker, 124 Ala. 514; Rosenberger v. Marsh, 108 Iowa, 47; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Clifton Mfg. Co., 56 S. Car. 320; Allis v. Voigt, 90 Mich. 125; Hamill v. Ashley, 11 Colo. 180; Wilson v. Assur. Co., 51 S. Car. 540, 64 Am. St. R. 700; Ruggles v. Ins. Co., 114 N. Y. 415, 11 Am. St. R. 674; Wachter v. Assur. Co., 132 Pa. 428, 19 Am. St. R. 600; Brown v. Ins. Co., 165 Mass. 565, 52 Am. St. R. 534; Sanford v. Ins. Co., 174 Mass. 416, 75 Am. St. Rep. 358; Austrian v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343, 34 Am. St. R. 350; Hall v. Hopper, 64 Neb. 633; Smith v. Droubay, 20 Utah, 443; Shaw v. Williams, 100 N. Car. 272; Dispatch Printing Co. v. National Bank, 109 Minn. 440.

¹⁵ See post, § —; Hubbard v. Tenbrook, 124 Pa. 291, 10 Am. St. 585, 2 L. R. A. 823; Watteau v. Fenwick, L. R., [1893] 1 Q. B. 346; McCracken v. Hamburger, 139 Pa. 326; Lamb v. Thompson, 31 Neb. 448; Patrick v. Grand Falls Merc. Co., 13 N. Dak. 12; Ernst v. Harrison, 86 N. Y. Supp. 247; Napa Valley Wine Co. v. Casanova, 140 Wis. 239; Mississippi Valley Const. Co. v. Abeles, 87 Ark. 374; Allison v. Sutlive, 99 Ga. 151.

which is more fully considered in a later chapter where the obligations of an undisclosed principal are discussed.

712. Distinction between authority and power.—Although the two terms are constantly used synonymously, there are occasions in which it may be helpful to draw a distinction between authority and power. There are undoubtedly many cases in which the agent may have it in his power to bind his principal when it is not within his authority as between the principal and the agent. Thus as has just been pointed out, the agent may often bind his principal to third persons by doing the very acts which the principal has expressly forbidden the agent to do. So, although the agent's authority has terminated or been revoked, as the agent knows, the agent may have it in his power to continue to bind his principal to third persons until notice of the revocation has been given to them, in accordance with rules considered in a preceding chapter. Many other illustrations will also suggest themselves.

§ 713. What constitutes authority.—The point has now been reached at which it becomes necessary to ascertain what constitutes the authority of an agent. Enough has already been said to show that this is a question which cannot be given a categorical answer. Authority is almost if not quite always a conglomerate, made up of a variety of elements which must be pointed out. It is also usually like a figure with two unequal dimensions,—it has a narrower and a wider aspect, the former of which is usually presented when looked at from the standpoint of the agent's relations to his principal, and the latter—the wider one,—when the question concerns the relations of third persons to the principal.

§ 714. Elements of authority—I. Authority intentionally and directly conferred.—In determining the question of the existence and extent of the agent's authority, the starting point must, of course, always be to ascertain the authority, if any, which was expressly, consciously and intentionally conferred by the principal upon the agent. Any act so authorized binds the principal upon the clearest doctrines of agency, and for this reason questions in this field very rarely arise.

Where the declared authority was a single and specific one, the ascertainment of this starting point is usually not difficult. What was the thing which the principal in terms authorized the agent to do?

Where the declared authority was not thus to do a single and specific act, but a series of acts or a group of acts or a class of acts, the question is still the same, though it is often less definite and more difficult to state in terms.

Where, however, there never was any express or declared authorization, but the question whether the agent was authorized to act at all, and if so in what field, must be determined from more or less confused or conflicting acts or circumstances, the task of finding this central body becomes often one of great difficulty. Nevertheless it must be found, and segregated as in the preceding cases.

When this central authority has thus been ascertained, the determination of the authority has usually just begun, for, around this nucleus of central or main authority, there usually gathers an area of additional authorities just as important to be determined as the nucleus itself.

§ 715. — II. Incidental powers — Ordinary and necessary acts.—It is a fundamental principle in the law of agency that every delegation of authority whether "general" or "special," carries with it, unless the contrary be expressed, implied authority to do all of those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, which are reasonably necessary and proper to be done in this case in order to carry into effect the main authority conferred. This doctrine rests upon the presumed intention of the principal that the main authority shall not fail because of the lack of express authority to do the incidental acts reasonably necessary to make that authority effective,¹⁶ and also upon the presumption that the principal expects the business to be done in the usual and ordinary way.

The determination of this incidental authority is not a matter which lends itself readily to any hard and fast rule. It is almost wholly a question of fact. The authority here involved is not that which arises from proof of a specific usage, or the existence of any special necessity or emergency,—both of which will soon be considered. The acts which are to be deemed authorized under this rule are those which are naturally and ordinarily necessary,—which therefore are the usual incidents of the act in question,—the acts which the principal presumptively would have included without question if his attention had been called to them,—the acts which the ordinary competent person already familiar with the situation and with the ordinary methods of business, or a similar person having the situation made clear to him,—like a juror,—and considering the matter in the light of every day experi-

¹⁶ "An agent to conduct a given business for his principal necessarily has authority to do everything which is essential to the performance of his duties as agent." Baldwin v. Garrett, 111 Ga. 876; National Bank v. Old Town Bank, 50 C. C. A. 443; Bayley v. Wilkins, 7 Com. B. 886.

ence, would say without serious hesitation formed a natural and ordinary part of the main act authorized.¹⁷

This is the most common and most familiar principle involved in the construction of authority. The authority of an agent, for the sale and conveyance of land, to make the conveyance; of an agent, for the sale and delivery of chattels, to receive so much of the price as is to be paid at the time of delivery; of a broker, to make the necessary memorandum; of an auctioneer, to accept a bid; of the general manager of a hotel, to contract for necessary supplies,—these are but few of the almost countless illustrations of this rule, many more of which will be found in the following chapter.

This rule ordinarily operates equally as between principal and agent and between the principal and third persons. As to either the principal may narrow the range by express notice, but prohibitions given to the agent alone, against the exercise of such incidental powers, could not affect third persons reasonably dealing with the agent in ignorance of them.

§ 716. — III. Authority conferred by custom or usage.—A particular usage or custom also may operate to affect the range of an agent's powers. Where the principal confers upon his agent an authority of a kind, or empowers him to transact business of a nature, in reference to which there is a well defined and publicly known usage, it is the presumption of the law, in the absence of anything to indicate a contrary intent, that the authority was conferred in contemplation of the usage. This presumption affects agent and third persons alike, but third persons who deal with the agent in good faith and in the ex-

¹⁷ See the elaborate discussion in St. Louis Gunning Adv. Co. v. Wannamaker, 115 Mo. App. 270.

"Reasonably necessary."—"To be necessary, in this sense," it is said in Murphy v. K. of C. Bldg. Co., 155 Mo. App. 649, 658, "the act need not be so indispensable that without it the agent can not move toward achieving the main object of the agency, or having commenced to move, must stop; but it must have been requisite for such achievement, according to the desire and intention of the principal—necessary in the sense that the main scope and object of the agency must fail unless it is done. Whether it was necessary in that sense is a question to be submitted to the jury under proper instructions, where the conclusion to be drawn from the facts and circumstances is not obvious."

But in United States Bedding Co. v. Andre, — Ark. —, 150 S. W. 413, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1019, it is said: "It is not sufficient that the act of the agent is advantageous to or convenient for his alleged principal, or even effectual in transacting the business in which he is engaged. The act of the agent must be practically indispensable and essential, in order to execute the duty actually delegated to him." There is also elaborate discussion of the question in Rexroth v. Holloway, 45 Ind. App. 36, which, however, was a tort case.

ercise of reasonable prudence, will be protected against limitations upon the usual authority, of which they had no notice.¹⁸

In order to give the usage this effect it must be reasonable;¹⁹ it must not violate positive law;²⁰ it must be shown by clear and satisfactory evidence;²¹ and it must have existed for such a time, and become so widely and generally known, as to warrant the presumption that the principal had it in his view at the time of the appointment of the agent.²² But if the usage was a purely local and particular one, the principal may ordinarily repel this presumption of knowledge by showing that in fact he had no notice of it.²³ Where, however, the

¹⁸ Watts v. Howard, 70 Minn. 122; Western v. Page, 94 Wis. 251; Milwaukee Invest. Co. v. Johnston, 35 Neb. 554; Durkee v. Carr, 38 Oreg. 189; Rohrbough v. U. S. Expr. Co., 50 W. Va. 148, 88 Am. St. R. 849; Reese v. Bates, 94 Va. 321; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Higdon, 94 Ala. 286, 33 Am. St. 119, 14 L. R. A. 515; Mabray v. Kelly-Goodfellow Shoe Co., 73 Mo. App. 1; Cawthorn v. Lusk, 97 Ala. 674; Bailey v. Bensley, 87 Ill. 556; Phillips v. Moir, 69 Ill. 155; Adams v. Pittsburgh Ins. Co., 95 Penn. St. 348, 40 Am. Rep. 663; Williams v. Getty, 31 Penn. St. 461, 72 Am. Dec. 757; Chouteaux v. Leech, 18 Penn. St. 224, 57 Am. Dec. 602; McMasters v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 69 Penn. St. 374, 8 Am. Rep. 264; York County Bank v. Stine, 24 Md. 447; Wright v. Solomon, 19 Cal. 64, 79 Am. Dec. 196; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46, 7 L. Ed. 47; Mount Olivet Cemetery v. Shubert, 2 Head (Tenn.), 116; Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 359, 17 L. Ed. 642; Greely v. Bartlett, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 172, 10 Am. Dec. 54; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Daylight Burner Co. v. Odlin, 51 N. H. 56, 12 Am. Rep. 45; Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36, 5 Am. Dec. 22; Frank v. Jenkins, 22 Ohio St. 597; Willard v. Buckingham, 36 Conn. 395; Randall v. Kehlror, 60 Me. 37, 11 Am. Rep. 169; Upton v. Suffolk County Mills, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 586, 59 Am. Dec. 163; Pickert v. Marston, 68 Wis. 465, 60 Am. Rep. 876; Larson

v. Aultman, 86 Wis. 281, 39 Am. St. R. 893; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. McLanathan, 11 Kan. 533; Brady v. Todd, 9 C. B. (N. S.) 592; Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; Sutton v. Tatham, 10 Ad. & El. 27.

The other party, of course, cannot rely on the usage in the face of a known limitation. Smith v. Provident L. Ass'n Co., 65 Fed. 765, 13 C. C. A. 234.

The authority of a public agent cannot be enlarged by custom. State v. Chilton, 49 W. Va. 453; Walters v. Senf, 115 Mo. 524.

¹⁹ Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Prince, 50 Minn. 53, 36 Am. St. 626; Knowles v. Dow, 22 N. H. 387, 55 Am. Dec. 163; Minnesota Cent. R. R. Co. v. Morgan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; Wadley v. Davis, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 500.

²⁰ Commonwealth v. Cooper, 130 Mass. 285; Raisin v. Clark, 41 Md. 158, 20 Am. Rep. 66; Farnsworth v. Hemmer, 1 Allen (Mass.), 494, 79 Am. Dec. 756.

²¹ Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Waterman, 54 Fed. 839, 4 C. C. A. 600; Rhodes v. Belchee, 36 Oreg. 141.

²² Adams v. Pittsburgh Ins. Co., 95 Pa. 348, 40 Am. Rep. 662; Citizens' Bank v. Grafflin, 31 Md. 507, 1 Am. Rep. 66; Smith v. Wright, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 43, 2 Am. Dec. 162; Porter v. Hills, 114 Mass. 106; Fowler v. Pickering, 119 Mass. 33; Milwaukee Invest. Co. v. Johnston, 35 Neb. 554.

²³ Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 464, 10 Am. Rep. 407; Bradley v. Wheeler, 44 N. Y. 495; Higgins v. Moore, 34 agent, for example a broker or factor, is authorized to deal in a particular place or market, as upon a certain stock exchange, at which particular rules or usages prevail, it is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the principal expected and intended that the agent should conform to such rules and usages, although in fact the principal may have been ignorant of what they were. This is upon the ground that the principal as a reasonable man must have anticipated that such rules and usages were likely to prevail and therefore must have authorized the dealing in contemplation of them, where no contrary intention was disclosed.²⁴

The same doctrine, with some conflict as to its application to the usage of a single bank rather than to the usages of the place, has been extended to the case of banks authorized to collect.²⁵

Usage may also operate to limit authority, as well as to enlarge it, under the same conditions as in the latter case.²⁶

Usage, however, cannot operate to change the intrinsic character of the relation,²⁷ nor will it be permitted as between the principal and the agent, or as between the principal and third persons having notice of them, to contravene express instructions,²⁸ or to contradict an express

N. Y. 417; Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 383, 19 L. Ed. 987; Fisher v. Sargent, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 250; Caldwell v. Dawson, 4 Mete. (Ky.) 121; Pennell v. Delta Transp. Co., 94 Mich. 247.

In Gould v. Cates Chair Co., 147 Ala. 629, it is said that it cannot be presumed that a manufacturer doing business in North Carolina had knowledge of customs prevailing at one place in Alabama.

²⁴ Taylor v. Bailey, 169 Ill. 181; Cothran v. Ellis, 107 Ill. 413; Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73; Union Stock Yards Co. v. Mallory, 157 Ill. 554, 48 Am. St. R. 341; Bailey v. Bensley, 87 Ill. 556; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33, 25 Am. Rep. 349; U. S. L. Insurance Co. v. Advance Co., 80 Ill. 549; Byrne v. Schwing, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 199; Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L. R. A. 102; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Naive, 112 Tenn. 239, 64 L. R. A. 443; Bayley v. Wilkins, 7 Com. B. 886.

²⁵ See 1 Morse on Banks, § 221; Mills v. U. S. Bank, 11 Wheat. (U. S.)

431, 6 L. Ed. 512; Washington Bank v. Triplett, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 25, 7 L. Ed. 37; Farmers' Bank v. Newland, 97 Ky. 464; Carolina Nat. Bank v. Wallace, 13 S. Car. 347, 36 Am. Rep. 694.

Compare Jefferson County Bank v. Commercial Bank, 98 Tenn. 337; Sahlien v. Lonoke Bank, 90 Tenn. 221; Grissom v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 87 Tenn. 350, 10 Am. St. 669, 3 L. R. A. 273; Mahaiwe Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 170; Bank of Commerce v. Miller, 105 Ill. App. 224.

²⁶ Where the principal relies upon custom to impose restrictions he must show that it was so universal that the other party can well be presumed to have known of it. Bentley v. Doggett, 51 Wis. 224, 37 Am. Rep. 827.

²⁷ Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. of L. 802; Gates Iron Works v. Denver Engine Works, 17 Colo. App. 15.

²⁸ Barksdale v. Brown, 1 Nott. & M. (S. C.) 517, 9 Am. Dec. 720; Hall v. Storrs, 7 Wis. 253; Blies v. Arnold, 8 Vt. 252, 30 Am. Dec. 467; Hutchings v. Ladd, 16 Mich. 493; Leland contract²⁹ to the contrary. So a usage not known to the principal, cannot operate to authorize the making of an invalid instead of a valid contract, or to bind him to take one thing when he has ordered another.³⁰

These doctrines apply to "special" as well as to "general" agents.

§ 717. ——— IV. The customs of the particular business, or an established course of dealing in it.—The customs of a particular trade, or the habits of dealing of the particular parties, may also, in accordance with well settled rules, be material where the parties are found to have dealt with reference to them.

But more than this is true. The methods of dealing of the particular principal may be material, frequently by way of estoppel as shown in a later section, but often also to show actual authority. For it is entirely clear that the continued conduct of the principal may be used to show how a grant of power was intended to be interpreted, and, further, the voluntary acquiescence of the principal in the known course of conduct of the agent may serve to show that such conduct was in fact authorized.³¹ This does not depend upon estoppel but is an inference of fact to be drawn from conduct. It is, therefore, not essential—as it is in cases resting upon estoppel—that the other party shall have known of the facts at the time and relied upon them, but he may, as in other cases of actual authority, prove the authority though he was ignorant of it at the time of the act.³² A very good statement of this rule by Justice Pitney may be found in a late case³³ in New Jersey: "Normally, an agency arises from some contract or other transaction or transactions that are between the principal and the agent, and not ordinarily known to outside parties, and a third party is entitled to hold the principal on a contract made by the agent in the name of the principal, even though the party does not at the time of making the contract know the particular source of the agent's authority. In cases of the class now before us the third party, when

v. Douglass, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; Clark v. Van Northwick, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 343; Catlin v. Smith, 24 Vt. 85; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Parsons v. Martin, 11 Gray (Mass.), 111.

²⁹ Brown v. Foster, 113 Mass. 136, 18 Am. Rep. 463; Randall v. Smith, 63 Me. 105, 18 Am. Rep. 200; Rogers v. Woodruff, 23 Ohio St. 632, 13 Am. Rep. 276; Grinnell v. Western Union Tel. Co., 113 Mass. 299, 18 Am. Rep. 485.

³⁰ Perry v. Barnett, 15 Q. B. Div. 388.

³¹ Murphy v. Cane (N. J. L.), 82 Atl. 854; Blake v. Domestic Mfg. Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 480; Fifth Ward Savings Bank v. First National Bank, 48 N. J. L. 513; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Navassa Phosphate Co., 119 N. Y. 256; Martin v. Webb, 110 U. S. 7, 28 L. Ed. 49.

³² See Murphy v. Cane, supra; Blake v. Domestic Mfg. Co., supra.

³³ Murphy v. Cane, supra.

litigation necessitates proof of the agency, may adduce evidence of the customary exercise by the alleged agent of the authority appropriate to such an agent under circumstances that give rise to the inference of knowledge and acquiescence on the part of the principal—not necessarily to show that the principal is estopped in favor of the third party to deny the agency, but rather to show that such agency was in fact created.”

This rule has undoubtedly been usually applied to cases in which the principal was a corporation, but it does not depend upon that fact.

§ 718. ——— V. Authority by necessity—Emergency.—Within a limited area, more sharply defined in England than in the United States, the authority of an agent may be enlarged by some particular necessity or by some sudden emergency, arising under circumstances in which it is still the duty of the agent to act, and in which the advice or directions of his principal cannot be obtained. It is, of course, ordinarily for the principal to determine what shall be done in such cases of necessity or emergency as were not provided for by the original authorization. He may prefer that nothing shall be done, or, if something must be done, that the situation shall be met by means of his own devising. He certainly will be vitally interested in being informed of the situation and given an opportunity to deal with it himself. If, however, there be a real necessity or emergency, and the principal cannot be communicated with because of the limitations of time or place or means, and something must be done to protect the interests of the principal, authority to do a fair and reasonable act, apparently adapted to the needs, and not going beyond the demands of the occasion, may properly be implied.³⁴

³⁴ See ante, § 339 et seq.; Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Propst, 85 Ala. 203; Tennessee Riv. Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, 101 Ala. 1; Sloan v. Central Iowa Ry. Co., 62 Iowa, 728; Fox v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 86 Iowa, 368, 17 L. R. A. 289; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. McMurray, 98 Ind. 358, 49 Am. Rep. 752 (for other cases of this sort, see post, § 994); Short v. Del. & Hud. Co., 41 Pa. Super. 141; Evans v. Crawford County Mut. F. Ins. Co., 130 Wis. 198, 118 Am. St. R. 1009, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 485.

“The emergency of an accident or an unusual condition which requires prompt action, may invest the representative of the company highest in authority who is then present with power to do such things as are reasonable to meet the emergency.” Short v. Del. & Hud. Co., supra (citing Bank v. Reed, 1 W. & S. 101; Quinn v. Ry. Co., 7 Pa. Super. 19; Heinrich v. Ry. Co., 36 Pa. Super. 612; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. McMurray, supra; Northern Ry. Co. v. State, 29 Md. 420).

In Jackson v. Bank, 92 Tenn. 154, 36 Am. St. R. 81, it is said: “No authority will be implied from an express authority. Whatever powers are strictly necessary to the effectual exercise of the express powers will

All of these conditions are essential. There must be a real necessity or emergency, judged by the reasonable interpretation of the facts as they appear to those who have to deal with them. Inability to communicate with the principal is an indispensable condition.³⁵ The need of action for the principal's protection must be apparently unquestionable. The means adopted to meet the situation must not be extreme or fanciful or unreasonable. The act must go no further than to reasonably meet the exigency,³⁶ and the implied authority must cease with the passing of the emergency.

The necessity here considered is obviously not the ordinary necessity of doing the business in the usual way, which has previously been considered, but some special and unusual necessity or emergency.

Neither, it would scarcely seem necessary to say, is it the necessity of dealing with a particular person in a particular way simply because he happens to be unwilling to deal upon any other basis. It must be a general necessity,—a necessity inhering in the situation or in the very nature of the case.

The authority here involved, as will also be obvious, is one implied in fact from the general act of the principal, and does not rest for its validity upon any doctrine of "appearances" or upon the doctrine of be conceded to the agent by implication. In order, therefore, that the authority to make or draw, accept and indorse commercial paper as the agent of another may be implied from some other express authority, it must be shown to be strictly necessary to the complete execution of the express power. The rule is strictly enforced that the authority to execute and indorse bills and notes as agent will not be implied from an express authority to transact some other business, unless it is absolutely necessary to the exercise of express authority."

Where the transaction of business absolutely requires the power to borrow money in order to carry it on, then the power is conferred as an incident to the employment. But it must be absolutely necessary not merely more effectual, convenient or advantageous. Consolidated Nat. Bank v. Pac. Coast Steamship Co., 95 Cal. 1, 29 Am. St. R. 85.

"There is no rule of law that an agent may, in a case of emergency suddenly arising, raise money and pledge the credit of his principals for its repayment." Per Alderson, B., in Hawtayne v. Bourne, 7 M. & W. 595.

³⁵ "The impossibility of communicating with the principal is the foundation of the doctrine of an agent of necessity." Per Smith, L. J., in Gwilliam v. Twist, [1895] 2 Q. B. 84. So in Hawtayne v. Bourne, 7 M. & W. 595, Alderson, B., said of an agent's alleged power to borrow money because of emergency suddenly arising, that it could not arise in that case because "there was ample time and opportunity for him to have applied to his principals."

³⁶ "This power must be prudently exercised, and must not be carried beyond the real or apparent necessity." Tennessee Riv. Transp. Co. v. Kavanaugh, supra.

estoppel. It may be just as applicable to a "special" as to a "general" agent.

§ 719. — It is to be observed also that emergency may conceivably operate to diminish rather than to enlarge authority; for it may be entirely clear, in view of the special circumstances in question, that it could never fairly have been within the contemplation of the principal that so wide an authority, as that originally conferred, should continue to be exercised in the face of the emergency which has radically changed the contemplated conditions. This is a matter of which both agent and third persons may fairly be required to take notice.

§ 720. — VI. Apparent authority.—It is also frequently said that the principal will be bound to third persons by acts within the "apparent authority" of the agent, even though they would not be within his real authority. The expression "apparent authority," however, though one of constant use in this connection, seems unfortunately to have no fixed meaning. It seems naturally to suggest a distinction between what is real and what is only apparent; though such a distinction is not essential, since what is apparent may be real and what is real may be apparent. Another use is, to designate that class of incidental authorities which are implied from the express or declared authority, and which the third person dealing with the agent may properly assume to go with the declared authority unless the contrary is made known. Another use is that of the California code (followed in several of the neighboring states) that "an agency is ostensible [apparent] when the principal intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes a third person to believe another to be his agent who is not really employed by him." Other authorities, still, divide the cases covered by this statutory definition into two classes, thus: "Apparent authority is that which, though not actually granted, the principal knowingly permits the agent to exercise, or holds him out as possessing;" while "Agency, or authority, by estoppel arises in those cases where the principal by his culpable negligence permits his agent to exercise powers not granted to him, even though the principal have no notice or knowledge of the conduct of the agent." "Apparent authority is not founded in negligence of the principal, but in the conscious permission of acts beyond the powers granted, whereas the rule of estoppel has its basis in the negligence of the principal in failing properly to supervise and control the affairs of the agent."³⁷

³⁷ Dispatch Printing Co. v. National Bank, 109 Minn. 440, s. c. 115 Minn. 157. In Columbia Mill Co. v. National Bank, 52 Minn. 224, however, cited by the court, it is said: "The rule

§ 721. — The distinction last mentioned, however, is not entirely satisfactory. Either sort of act,—if amounting to a course of conduct as opposed to an isolated instance, at least,—is undoubtedly enough to actually create a new authority or enlarge an existing one; and there can probably be no doubt, as a matter of contract, that a contract may be formed either by consciously or by negligently assenting to terms, and this is true whether it be done in person or through an agency or an agent.

Unless the conduct therefore is such as to raise an inference of agency in fact, or unless the act can be treated as the direct act of the principal, it is difficult to see how the act can be sustained as the act of an agent, where the person who did it was not an agent of the alleged principal. If, for example, A is really the broker of Y and knows nothing of X, but X sends B to A to make a contract upon the assurance that A is the agent of X, and a contract is made which A intends and supposes to be for Y, but which B intends and supposes to be for X, can B hold X upon the contract? Must not B's remedy against X be based upon some theory of estoppel, or else upon some other theory of misrepresentation?

If, in the cases contemplated by the rule quoted, it be assumed that the agent is implicated in the "appearance;"—that is, if with the latter's consent he is being treated by the alleged principal as his agent, is there not the foundation for the inference of real agency and not merely an "apparent" one?

The only legitimate use of this expression, then, if it has any, would be either, (1) that referred to in the preceding section, namely, to designate that class of incidental and usual powers, already considered, which, it is presumed, attach to the express authority, unless the principal has made known a contrary intention. (These, however, as has been pointed out, are not simply apparent: they are objectively real until the contrary has been made known.) Or, (2) and more properly, to designate the class of cases referred to in the following section.

If the conclusions here presented are sound, there is no room for the proposed classification, i. e., as a separate and distinct class, and the cases which can not be disposed of on the other grounds suggested must be referred to the following section.

§ 722. — VII. Liability by estoppel.—So far as powers depend upon what is usual or necessary in special cases, and so far as as to apparent authority rests essentially on the doctrine of estoppel."

In North Dakota, see Corey v. Hunter, 10 N. Dak.

they are regarded as incidental to the main authority conferred because that is the regular and ordinary way of doing the business, they do not rest upon any doctrine of estoppel, but are inferences of fact tracing their origin to the same source as the main power itself. So far as third persons are concerned, who can know only that which is open to be learned, they constitute part of the actual authority though commonly included under the description of apparent authority. In other words, so far as third persons are concerned, this apparent authority is included in the real authority. There seems to some to be an inconsistency here which has given rise to considerable discussion,³⁸ but the situation is believed to be no more anomalous than in the numerous other cases in the law of contract and of crime wherein for practical purposes it is essential that the law shall determine intention from the voluntary manifestations of it by the person concerned.³⁹ It is said in one case,⁴⁰ "To lead a person reasonably to suppose that you assent to an oral arrangement, is to assent to it, wholly irrespective of fraud. Assent, in the sense of the law, is a matter of overt acts, not of inward unanimity in motives, design, or the interpretation of words."

When, however, the authority is not one included within the foregoing categories, but is one sought to be deduced from special circumstances of recognition, acquiescence or holding out, the principle of estoppel or something akin to it at least, must be invoked. The act is not within either the real or the apparent authority (using apparent in the sense above indicated) but the party insists that he was led by the special circumstances reasonably to believe that the authority existed in that particular case and that he has acted upon that belief in such a way that he will be prejudiced if the authority be denied.

The chief practical difference between the two cases is found in the fact that in the former it is not essential that the person seeking to enforce the authority should actually have known and relied upon the circumstances from which the inference of authority in fact is based⁴¹ (any more than it is essential in any case of authority that the person ³⁸ See 13 Green Bag, 50; 15 Harvard Law Review, 324; 16 Harvard Law Review, 186; 5 Columbia Law Review, 36; 5 Columbia Law Review, 354; 5 Columbia Law Review, 456; 5 Columbia Law Review, 261; 6 Columbia Law Review, 34.

³⁹ See Holland's Jurisprudence (9th ed.) p. 250; Pollock on Contract (7th ed.) pp. 2, 5.

⁴⁰ O'Donnell v. Clinton, 145 Mass. 461.

⁴¹ See Murphy v. Cane, — N. J. L. —, 82 Atl. 854; Blake v. Domestic Mfg. Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 480. Compare Jackson Paper Mfg. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 199 Ill. 151, 59 L. R. A. 657.

who ultimately seeks to enforce it shall have relied upon it at the time as, for example, in the case of an undisclosed principal), while in the latter case it is the essence of his complaint that he was led by the circumstances in question to rely upon the existence of the authority, and proof of his knowledge and reliance upon them must be made.⁴²

In this respect the case is like that of the liability of an "apparent" partner; where knowledge of the "appearances" and reliance upon them is essential to the plaintiff's case.⁴³

Estoppel, it may be noticed, may operate as strongly between the principal and the agent, as between the principal and third persons, though the occasion for its exercise is not so frequent.

§ 723. — There is, in many places, a tendency to include under the one head of "apparent powers" those deduced from usage or from the character in which the agent is authorized to act, and also those resulting from estoppel. In very many cases it is entirely immaterial practically, because there is enough in the proof to satisfy the requirements of either rule; and in many cases also usage and estoppel may unite to account for the powers exercised.

In its legitimate sphere, however, there is a distinct field for the operation of estoppel, and it is constantly relied upon to sustain powers in whose existence the party complaining has reasonably been led to believe by the words or conduct of the alleged principal.

§ 724. — Inasmuch as the whole doctrine of powers by estoppel rests upon the theory that the other party has been led to rely upon appearances to his threatened detriment, it is obvious that the doctrine can apply only in those cases in which this element of reliance was present. It can therefore apply only to cases in which credit has been extended, action has been induced, delay has been obtained, or some other change of position has occurred, in reliance upon the appearance of authority,⁴⁴ and not to cases of mere tort, such as negligence, trespass, assault. Actions based upon the contract furnish, of course, the most frequent opportunity, but actions for deceit or misrepresentation may also be included within the category.⁴⁵ Re-

⁴² See Domasek v. Kluck, 113 Wis. 336; Gosliner v. Grangers' Bank, 124 Cal. 225; Rodgers v. Peckham, 120 Cal. 238; Maxey v. Heckethorn, 44 Ill. 437; Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 456; Cash v. Taylor, 8 L. J. K. B. 262.

⁴³ See Thompson v. First National Bank, 111 U. S. 536, 23 L. Ed. 507; Hahlo v. Mayer, 102 Mo. 93.

⁴⁴ It is perhaps questionable whether the mere making of an executory contract can be regarded as a prejudicial act within the rule. Mr. Ewart in his article seems to be of opinion that it is enough.

⁴⁵ See Griswold v. Gebbie, 126 Pa. 353, 12 Am. St. R. 878.

liance upon appearances, however, does not ordinarily induce to assault, slander, trespass, or negligent injury, and the cases must be very rare, if any, in which it could be an element.⁴⁶

§ 725. — It is indispensable to keep in mind here that, as against the principal, there can be reliance only upon what the principal himself has said or done, or at least said or done through some other and authorized agent. The acts of the agent in question can not be relied upon as alone enough to support an estoppel. If his acts are relied upon there must also be evidence of the principal's knowledge of and acquiescence in them.⁴⁷

§ 726. — Moreover, in any case, the reliance must have been a reasonable one, consistent with the exercise of reasonable prudence, and the party who claims reliance must not have closed his eyes to warning or inconsistent circumstances. Authority is not "apparent" simply because the party claiming has acted upon his conclusions. It is not "apparent," in contemplation of law, simply because it looked so to him. It is not a situation where one may read while he runs. It is only where a person of ordinary prudence, conversant with business usages and the nature of the particular business, acting in good faith, and giving heed not only to opposing inferences but also to all restrictions which are brought to his notice, would reasonably rely, that a case is presented within the operation of the rule. If the inferences against the existence of the authority are just as reasonable as those in favor of it, there can be no reliance within this rule.⁴⁸

§ 727. — VIII. Liability by ratification.—And, lastly, it must be kept in mind, in making up the extent of the liability which may exist in a given case, that subsequent ratification may supply the lack of prior authorization. What the circumstances are under which this principle may be invoked have been so fully treated in another place that they do not need to be considered here.⁴⁹

§ 728. What constitutes authority—Recapitulation.—Putting all of these principles together, it will be seen that the authority of the ⁴⁶ Stables v. Eley, 1 C. & P. 614, did of course give some color to the opposite view, but that case has long since been repudiated. See Pollock's Dig. Partn. (6th ed.) 54; Lindley, Partn. 214; Smith v. Bailey, [1891] 2 Q. B. 403. Compare Sherrod v. Langdon, 21 Iowa, 518; Maxwell v. Gibbs, 32 Iowa, 32; Shapard v. Hynes, 104 Fed. 449, 45 C. C. A. 271, 52 L. R. A. 675.

⁴⁷ See Farmers' Co-operative Shipping Ass'n v. Adams, 84 Neb. 752, and many other cases cited in earlier chapters.

⁴⁸ See Johnston v. Milwaukee Investment Co., 46 Neb. 480; General Cartage Co. v. Cox, 74 Ohio St. 284, 113 Am. St. R. 959; Corey v. Hunter, 10 N. Dak. 5.

⁴⁹ See ante, Book I, Chapter VII.

agent, so far as it concerns the rights of third persons, may be a composite matter made up of a number of elements. It may consist:

First, and primarily, of the authority directly and intentionally conferred by the voluntary act of the principal.⁵⁰

Second, of those incidental powers which naturally and ordinarily attend such an act, and which are reasonably necessary and proper to carry into effect the main power conferred and which are not known to be prohibited.

Third, of those powers which particular usage or custom has added to the main power, and which the parties are to be deemed to have had in contemplation at the time of the creation of the agency, and which are not known to have been forbidden.

Fourth, of powers justified by the particular course of dealing or the customs of the particular business.

Fifth, of those powers which some special necessity or emergency may justify the agent in exercising.

Sixth, of all such other powers as the principal has, by his direct act or by negligent omission or acquiescence, caused or permitted the person dealing with the agent reasonably to believe that the principal had conferred, and upon which that person has relied.

Seventh, (so far as result is concerned, though ratification is a means of curing the lack of authority rather than a means of conferring it) of all those other powers whose exercise by the agent, the principal has subsequently, with full knowledge of the facts, ratified and confirmed.

This may, perhaps, be rendered somewhat clearer by the diagram on the following page.

§ 729. — For the acts done in pursuance of those powers which were directly conferred or which were incidental to those powers and not prohibited, the principal is of course responsible, because they are the direct result of his voluntary and intentional act. He is likewise responsible, and for the same reasons, for those acts which he has intentionally led third persons to believe that he had authorized. He is responsible for the acts of the agent which he has, by negligent omission or acquiescence, led the persons dealing with the agent to believe he has authorized, because to deny them would be a fraud upon innocent persons.⁵¹ He is responsible for those acts which he ⁵⁰ This of course follows directly as the result of the maxim, Qui facit per alium, facit per se.

⁵¹ The general rule is so well stated by Depue, J., in Law v. Stokes,

3 Vroom (N. J.), 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655, as to warrant its full quotation: "A principal is bound by the acts of his agent within the authority he has actually given him, which includes has subsequently ratified and confirmed, upon the ground that such a ratification is equivalent to a precedent authority.

As between the agent and the principal, the authority would consist of the same elements as in the case of third persons, with the exception that the forbidden powers and secret limitations, which would not affect third persons who were ignorant of them, bind the agent who must necessarily have knowledge of them.

not only the precise act which he expressly authorizes him to do, but also whatever usually belongs to the doing of it or is necessary to its performance. Beyond that he is liable for the acts of the agent within the appearance of authority which the principal himself knowingly permits the agent to assume, or which he holds the agent out to the public as possessing. For the acts of his agent, within his express authority, the principal is liable, because the act of the agent is the act of the principal. For the acts of the agent within the scope of the authority he holds the agent out as having, or knowingly permits him to assume, the principal is made responsible; because to permit him to dispute the authority of the agent in such cases would be to enable him to commit a fraud upon innocent persons. In whichever way the liability of the principal is established, it must flow from the act of the principal. And when established it cannot, on the one hand be qualified by the secret instructions of the principal, nor on the other hand be enlarged by the unauthorized representations of the agent."

§ 730. The province of "instructions"—Authority cannot be limited by secret instructions.—As has already been pointed out, a conflict is often deemed to arise between "authority" and "instructions," and the rule is constantly declared to be that "an apparent authority cannot be limited by secret instructions." Many cases have already been cited in which such a rule, though in varying forms, has been declared.

§ 731. ——— What constitute instructions.—When, however, it is thus said that an apparent authority cannot be limited by secret instructions, it still remains to determine what is meant by "secret instructions" within the purview of the rule. In the first place it is necessary to free the case of any odium necessarily to be attached to the word "secret." To do this, the meaning and import of "instructions" must be determined. Here, as in so many other cases, it will be found that the same word is used in a variety of senses. Thus, a master who has a servant already employed and authorized generally to act, may give him "instructions" as to the manner in which he shall act either regularly or upon particular occasions. In this case the instructions constitute no part of the authority: they are simply directions as to how an authority already existing shall be exercised. They may or may not be designed to be kept secret. If, for example, a master puts into the charge of his servant a team of horses and directs him, because the day is hot or the load heavy, to drive slowly, or cautions him, on meeting other teams, to keep to the right, these directions have no secret character, they do not go to the root of the authority, and the master would undoubtedly be liable to a third person injured because the servant negligently disregarded his instructions and drove too rapidly or ignored the rule of the road. If, on the other hand, a master, who manufactures goods by a secret process, directs his servant how to act but enjoins secrecy as to methods, the secrecy of the instructions may be material to the preservation of the master's monopoly, but that fact neither makes the instructions the authority, nor changes the master's liability for injuries caused by their violation.

§ 732. ——— Suppose also that an insurance company puts an agent into the field with apparent authority to accept applications, issue policies, receive payment of premiums, and the like, but then or later instructs him not to accept certain risks, not to make oral contracts to insure, not to waive certain conditions, and the like; these directions are instructions merely, they are designed merely to control the manner of acting, and a disobedience of them, while it might make the agent liable to the company, would not relieve the company of liability to a third person who had dealt with the agent in ignorance of them.⁵²

Suppose that an implement company sends out an agent to make ordinary contracts of sale, and supplies him with a blank form of contract which by reason of its protective phraseology it directs him to use; the agent nevertheless makes a contract of sale in the usual terms and of the general sort contemplated but writes it on other blanks or uses no blank at all. Certainly the direction to use the printed form supplied must usually be regarded as a mere instruction, and the company will be bound to a person who was ignorant of it.⁵³

So if a person puts another in general charge of his store with authority to carry it on in the usual way, but directs him not to buy goods of a certain person, not to exceed a certain amount, not to carry certain ordinary goods in stock, and the like, these directions are usually simply instructions and not limitations upon authority.⁵⁴

Further illustrations of this sort are needless, as an indefinite number will immediately suggest themselves. The instructions in these cases have no necessarily secret character. The principal's purposes would be furthered rather than hindered by their disclosure, and he may have relied upon the agent to make them known.

§ 733. — But suppose that a principal who has a horse for sale authorizes an agent to sell it, but because of certain unsoundness, "instructs" him to be careful not to say or do anything which may be construed as a warranty, or not voluntarily to disclose the age or defects of the horse; these instructions may well be intended only for the secret ear of the agent, but they like the others do not go to the matter of the authority to sell.

Suppose again that a principal who has a horse for sale employs an agent to sell it, and as to the price directs him to endeavor to get $150, but, if he cannot get that, to sell for $100; these directions as to price are certainly mere instructions and are as certainly designed to be kept secret, because the principal never intended that the agent should say to a prospective purchaser, "the price is $150, but if you will not pay that, you may have the horse for $100."

⁵² See, for example, Brown v. Franklin Mut. Ins. Co., 165 Mass. 565, 52 Am. St. R. 534; Sanford v. Orient Ins. Co., 174 Mass. 416, 75 Am. St. R. 358; Ruggles v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 114 N. Y. 415, 11 Am. St. R. 674; Wachter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 132 Pa. 428, 19 Am. St. R. 600; Wilson v. Commercial Un. Assur. Co., 51 S. Car.

540, 64 Am. St. R. 700. See also Van Santvoord v. Smith, 79 Minn. 316.

⁵³ See Armour v. Ross, 110 Ga. 403.

⁵⁴ Harrington v. Bronson, 161 Pa. 296; Hubbard v. Tenbrook, 124 Pa. 291, 10 Am. St. R. 585, 2 L. R. A. 823; Watteau v. Fenwick, L. R., [1893] 1 Q. B. 346; Rhodes Furniture Co. v. Weeden, 108 Ala. 252.

On the other hand, suppose one man to say to another, whom he has not previously employed and who is not a horse buyer or dealer, "Buy for me A's black horse." Here clearly is not authority to buy a horse with instructions to buy a certain one, but the authority is to buy a certain one only, and the purchase of any other would not bind the principal. Suppose again that one man says to another, whom he has not previously employed and who is not a horse buyer, "Buy for me a black horse, five years old, fifteen hands high, of Morgan stock, for not more than $150." What have we here? Is there authority to buy a horse, with instructions that it shall be black, of certain age, height, breed and price, or is there authority to buy such a horse and none other? Test it in this way: A proposed seller, endeavoring, as he must, to ascertain the agent's authority, may ask the agent for his authority. What will the agent say? "I am instructed to buy a horse," or "I am instructed to buy a certain sort of horse?" But inasmuch as what the agent may say as to his authority is not conclusive, the proposed seller may inquire of the principal. What will the latter naturally say? "I instructed him to buy me a horse," or, "He is authorized to buy only a horse with these characteristics, etc." If the principal is likely to say the former, he clearly regards the specifications as mere instructions. If he is likely to say the latter, as it is believed he would be, then we have a different case. Here the instructions constitute the "authority." They are not secret because the agent's authority can only be shown by disclosing them, they bound and limit the authority, and a departure in any particular would not bind the principal. The instructions here, then, would constitute a real limitation upon the authority.

§ 734. — It will be apparent upon reflection that directions are more frequently mere instructions (rather than limitations upon authority) in the case of an agent already authorized to do the act than in the case of an agent then for the first time authorized; and more frequently in the case of a "general" agent than a "special" one;⁵⁵ but neither of these facts after all is the test. The test is, Were the alleged instructions designed and calculated to fix and determine the character of the agent, or merely to prescribe the manner in which he should exercise the powers incident to a character already or otherwise imposed? As bearing upon this, were the alleged instructions on the part of the principal to direct them in the exercise of it," are properly regarded as instructions and not as limitations. Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400.

⁵⁵ Letters which amount merely to a "communication of speculation and advice from the principal to his brokers, which presume a general authority in the brokers, with a desire

designed to be made known to those dealing with the agent or concealed, and, as bearing upon this, would their disclosure promote or defeat the purposes which the principal had in mind? Where their disclosure would defeat his purposes, as it pretty clearly would in some of the cases supposed, it is certain that the principal never intended them to be made known. They are in such a case simply instructions and not limitations upon authority.

§ 735. — Within the same category must be included such attempted limitations upon authority as, according to the usual practice and experience of mankind, are not to be anticipated in such a case. Agency is pre-eminently a practical matter. Agents are appointed to be dealt with, and third persons must be able, in the exercise of reasonable prudence, to deal with them with ordinary safety. A principal who sends an agent out to deal with third persons must be deemed to represent that there are no unusual, whimsical or fanciful limitations upon the agent's authority, unless the principal makes that fact known. Most authorities are not unlimited; many kinds of limitation are so usual and to be expected that there is nothing unreasonable in the assumption that the person who deals with the agent will anticipate their possibility, and protect himself against them; others may be so unusual and so unexpected that it is only fair to require the principal to disclose them, if he desires them to be observed. His failure to do so may fairly be regarded as a representation that none of that sort exist.

III.

UNIVERSAL, GENERAL AND SPECIAL AGENTS.

§ 736. In general.—The common classification of agencies, based upon the extent of the authority conferred, into universal, general and special, has already been referred to in another place.⁵⁶ As has been stated, cases of true universal agency are very rare. They can only be created by clear and unequivocal language and will not be inferred from any general expressions, however broad.⁵⁷ No special attention therefore will be given to them in this connection, what may be said in reference to general agencies applying a fortiori to the universal.

The more or less vague nature of the distinction between the general and the special agency, and the difficulty experienced in defining ⁵⁶ See ante, § 58 et seq.

⁵⁷ Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463,
97 Am. Dec. 728.

it, have also been referred to in another place. Notwithstanding this difficulty, however, the distinction has a root in a certain real difference—albeit a difference of degree and not of kind—though, as will be seen, the distinction has doubtless often been too greatly magnified. It has, at any rate, such a place in our law that any general discussion of the existence, nature and extent of an agent's authority must take it into account.

§ 737. General and special agents.—Consideration has already been given to the question of the general nature of authority, and the elements which compose it, and some general principles have been stated which were deemed applicable to the subject. These principles apply to all cases. If by express appointment, or by long acquiescence, recognition or course of dealing, one man has conferred upon another the character of one possessing the requisite authority to represent him in a general way during some more or less continuous period in the transaction of all of his business of a certain kind, or at a particular place, or to perform all acts of a certain kind or class, he must be held to have conferred upon him the attributes and powers inherent in the character so bestowed. Such an agent, the law denominates, for convenience sake, a general agent.

But if, on the other hand, in a single instance, either by express terms or by his conduct, he confers upon the other the character of one having authority to do a single thing, perhaps in a specific way, he must be held to have conferred upon him those attributes and powers, and those only, which are inherent in that character. This agent, for the same convenience, is termed a special agent.

In either case, the question of the authority of the agent must depend, so far as it involves the rights of innocent third persons who have relied thereon, upon the character bestowed and not merely upon the instructions given or upon the authority as it was declared to the agent in express terms. In other words, the principal is bound to third persons who have acted in good faith and in justifiable ignorance of any limitations or restrictions, by the authority he has apparently given to the agent, and not by the express or declared authority where that differs from the apparent, and this, too, whether the agency be a general or a special one.⁵⁸

⁵⁸ Smith v. McGuire, 3 H. & N. 554; Whitton v. Sullivan, 96 Cal. 480. It has been said by a learned judge: "The authority of a general agent may be more or less extensive; and he may be more or less limited in his action within the scope of it. The limitation of his authority may be public or private. If it be public, those who deal with him must regard it, or the principal will not be bound. If it be private the principal will be § 738. ——— Distinctions made.—The distinction between a general and a special agency has been deemed to be one of great importance, and a large number of decisions have been made to turn upon it. It is believed, however, that the distinction, as it is ordinarily drawn, is highly artificial and unsatisfactory, if not positively misleading, and that it might well be dispensed with.

The importance of this distinction, has been said by Mr. Parsons,⁵⁹ whose language has been much quoted, to lie in the rule that "if a particular agent exceed his authority, the principal is not bound; but if a general agent exceed his authority, the principal is bound, provided the agent acted within the ordinary and usual scope of the business he was authorized to transact, and the party dealing with the agent did not know that he exceeded his authority." This rule, however, cannot be regarded as strictly accurate. So far as the rights of third persons, who have no knowledge of limitations on his authority are concerned,—and this is what the rule given contemplates,—the agent must be deemed to have authority to do those acts which are bound when agent is acting within the scope of his authority, although he should violate his secret instructions. A special agent is one employed for a particular purpose only. He also may have a general authority to accomplish that purpose, or be limited to do it in a particular manner. If the limitation respecting the manner of doing it be public or known to the person with whom he deals, the principal will not be bound if the instructions are exceeded or violated. If such limitation be private, the agent may accomplish the object in violation of his instructions, and yet bind his principal by his acts." Shepley, J., in Bryant v. Moore, 26 Me. 84, 45 Am. Dec. 96. And by another: "Where the authority is limited in a bona fide manner, and the limitation is to be disclosed by the agent and is disclosed either with or without inquiry, any departure from such authority or instructions will not bind the principal; but where the authority or instructions given are in the nature of private instructions and so designed to be, they will not be binding upon the parties dealing with the agent. And if the instructions are of such a nature that they would not be communicated if an inquiry was made (even though it be the duty of the person dealing with the agent to make the inquiry), it is not necessary that it should be made for it would not be communicated if made." Eastman, J., in Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195.

"While the rule is that an agent must act within the scope of his authority, yet when the agent's act affects innocent third parties the principal will be bound to the extent of the apparent authority conferred by him on his agent. A principal is bound equally by the authority which he actually gives, and by that which by his own act he appears to give." Webster v. Wray, 17 Neb. 579. See also Van Duzer v. Howe, 21 N. Y. 531; Redlich v. Doll, 54 N. Y. 234, 13 Am. Rep. 573; Garrard v. Haddan, 67 Pa. 82, 5 Am. Rep. 412; Hatch v. Taylor, 10 N. H. 538; Carmichael v. Buck, 10 Rich. (S. C.) 332, 70 Am. Dec. 226.

⁵⁹ Parsons on Contracts (9th Ed.) Vol. I, p. 42. Same, Broom on Common Law (8th Ed.) 575.

within the ordinary and usual scope of the business he was empowered to transact. Such an act therefore cannot be deemed to be in excess of his authority.

But many statements of the rule go still further and it is frequently declared that if the special agent exceeds his instructions the principal is not bound; while if the general agent exceeds his instructions, the principal will be bound. This statement is still more misleading than the other, and no little confusion has crept in to the books because of it. As has been seen instructions, even in case of a special agent, are not in every case the measure of authority. They may exactly encompass the authority, but they do not necessarily do so. They may be intentionally or negligently waived or disregarded by the act of the principal. Even in the case of a special agent, it is the character bestowed,—the authority apparently conferred,—which is the test, and not the instructions given.

Mr. Parsons himself says further on: "We think the distinction between a general agency and a special agent useful, and sufficiently definite for practical purposes, although it may have been pressed too far, and relied upon too much in determining the responsibility of a principal for the acts of an agent. It may, indeed, be said that every agency is, under one aspect, special, and under another, general. No agent has authority to be in all respects and for all purposes an alter ego of his principal, binding him by whatever the agent may do in reference to any subject whatever; and, therefore the agency must be special so far as it is limited by place or time, or the extent or character of the work to be done. On the other hand every agency must be so far general that it must cover not merely the precise thing to be done, but whatever usually and rationally belongs to the doing of it. Of late years, courts seem more disposed to regard this distinction and the rules founded upon it, as altogether subordinate to that principle which may be called the foundation of the law of agency, namely, that a principal is responsible, either when he has given to an agent sufficient authority, or, when he justifies a party dealing with his agent in believing that he has given to this agent this authority."⁶⁰

⁶⁰ Contracts (9th Ed.) Vol. I., pp. 43, 44, quoted with approval in Gore v. Canada L. Ins. Co., 119 Mich. 136. "There are in the books many loose expressions concerning the distinction between a general and a special agency. The distinction itself is highly unsatisfactory and will be found quite insufficient to solve a great variety of cases. It is unprofitable to dwell on that distinction." Comstock, J., in Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599. See also Cross v. Atchison, etc., Ry. Co., 141 Mo. 132.

§ 739. ——— The true distinction.—But it is none the less true that the scope of the authority of a special agent is ordinarily much more restricted than that of a general agent. The fact that the authority is conferred not for a continuing term but in a special instance, to do a specific act naturally leads to, if it does not positively require, much more minuteness of direction and much greater restrictions and limitations. From the very nature of the case, particularity of instructions and singleness of method are to be expected, and of this persons dealing with the agent may well be required to take notice.⁶¹

On the other hand, where the agent is authorized to transact all the principal's business of a certain kind, or all the acts of a certain class, the very breadth of the employment, the duration of time involved and the variety of the duties to be performed necessarily involve more or less of discretion and choice of methods, and render impracticable, if not impossible, much of particularity or precision, either as to the exact means and method to be employed, or as to the scope or extent of the authority itself. Where so little is expressed, more may well be implied. The fact of such an authority, of itself, presupposes a general confidence bestowed upon the agent, and a general committal to his discretion and judgment of all beyond the essential objects to be attained and the outlines of the course to be pursued. It may not unreasonably be presumed, where nothing is indicated to the contrary, that such an agent possesses those powers which are commensurate with his undertaking, and which are usually and properly exercised by other similar agents under like circumstances. This presumption may well be and is constantly relied upon by persons dealing with such agents, and so reasonable, proper and necessary is this reliance, that it may justly be required that if the principal would impose unusual restrictions upon the authority of such an agent, he should make them known to persons who may have occasion to deal with the agent.

And herein, it is believed, lies the true distinction between these two classes of authority. One is in its nature temporary, special and naturally suggests limitations of power. Of these limitations thus suggested third persons must inform themselves, unless the principal has by his words or conduct held out the agent as one upon whose authority such limitations are not imposed.⁶² The other is, in its nature, general, continuing and unrestricted by other limitations than those which confine the authority within the bounds of what is usual, proper and necessary under like circumstances. If there are other limitations, the principal must disclose them.⁶³

⁶¹ Quoted with approval in Bleeker v. Satsop R. Co., 3 Wash. 77.

⁶² Dyer v. Duffy, 39 W. Va. 148, 24 L. R. A. 339; Ferguson v. Davis, 118 N. C. 946; Cleveland v. Pearl, 63 Vt. 127, 25 Am. St. R. 748; Brown v.

West, 69 Vt. 440; Montgomery Furniture Co. v. Hardaway, 104 Ala. 100; Yates v. Yates, 24 Fla. 64; Baldwin Fertilizer Co. v. Thompson, 106 Ga. 480.

Neither of these rules denies even to the special authority its natural and ordinary incidents, and neither dispenses with that which devolves upon every person the duty of ascertaining not only the fact of the agency but also the nature and extent of the authority which the principal has apparently conferred. And neither of them permits that authority to be defeated by secret limitations.

§ 740. General agency not unlimited.—It is not, however, to be supposed that the general agent's authority is entirely unlimited. He is far from being a universal agent or a mere autocrat, and while his apparent authority is not to be restricted by undisclosed limitations, it must, on the other hand, be confined to such transactions and concerns as are incident and appurtenant to the business of his principal and to that branch of the business which is entrusted to his care;⁶⁴ unusual and unnatural acts are not to be tolerated; strained constructions are to be avoided; inferences of fact are to be limited to those which are reasonable, natural and ordinary; and, as has been so often pointed out, inferences are to be drawn only from facts for which the ⁶³ Hirschhorn v. Bradley, 117 Iowa, 130; Liddell v. Sahline, 55 Ark. 627; Catholic Bishop v. Troup, 61 Ill. App. 641; Harrington v. Bronson, 161 Pa. 296; Hall v. Hopper, 64 Neb. 633; Potter v. Springfield Milling Co., 75 Miss. 532; Whaley v. Duncan, 47 S. Car. 139; Smith v. Droubay, 20 Utah, 443; Hall v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 23 Wash. 610, 51 L. R. A. 288, 83 Am. St. R. 844; Allis v. Voigt, 90 Mich. 125; Hamill v. Ashley, 11 Colo. 180; Ruggles v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co., 114 N. Y. 415, 11 Am. St. R. 674; Brown v. Franklin Mut. L. Ins. Co., 165 Mass. 565, 52 Am. St. R. 534; Wachter v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 132 Pa. 428, 19 Am. St. R. 600.

Presumption that known agency general rather than special.—As has already been seen (§ 69), it is sometimes said that agency is presumed to be general rather than special. But the law never makes an abstract presumption one way or the other. If, however, agency is admitted, but nothing more is known, the court can not, without proof, presume any particular limitations, except such as inhere in the very nature of such an agency as this is admitted to be. In that sense only, it would be presumed to be general. See Trainer v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; Sharp v. Knox, 48 Mo. App. 169; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Simons, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 621; Oak Leaf Mill Co. v. Cooper, — Ark. —, 146 S. W. 130; Austrian v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343, 34 Am. St. R. 350; Hillyard v. Hewitt, 61 Or. 58; Midland Sav. & L. Co. v. Sutton, 30 Okla. 448.

⁶⁴ See Odiorne v. Maxcy, 13 Mass. 178; Stewart v. Woodward, 50 Vt. 78, 28 Am. Rep. 488; Shaw v. Stone, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 228; Holloway v. Stephens, 2 Thomp. & Cook (N. Y.), 562; Ricker Nat. Bank v. Stone, 21 Okla. 833; Pacific Lumber Co. v. Moffatt, 67 C. C. A. 442, 134 Fed. 836; and many other cases.

principal is responsible and not from mere considerations of convenience or policy. The mere fact that one is found to be a general agent justifies neither court nor jury in guessing that given acts are within the scope of his authority.⁶⁵

§ 741. General agent binds principal only within the scope of his authority.—The general agent, therefore, binds his principal when, and only when, his act is justified by the authority conferred upon him. This authority being in its nature general and not specific, being often gathered from a variety of sources and composed of different elements, the question of its sufficiency becomes largely one of fact, and may be stated thus:

Having in mind the powers expressly conferred, making all justifiable inferences, taking into consideration the object to be attained and the means open to adoption, giving due weight to such usages as were had in contemplation, considering whatever of extension or of modification has been wrought by subsequent conduct, is the act in controversy fairly included within the limits, or, as it is ordinarily stated, within the scope, of this authority? If it is, the principal is bound; if it is not, the act of the agent binds himself alone or no one.⁶⁶

§ 742. Special agent's authority must be strictly pursued.—The authority of the special agent being in its nature limited,—suggesting restrictions and qualifications which may be discovered upon investigation,—its scope is much more easy of determination and must not be exceeded; or, as the rule is ordinarily stated, his authority must be strictly pursued, and if it is not, the principal will not be bound.⁶⁷ A ⁶⁵ Gore v. Canada Life Assur. Co., 119 Mich. 136.

⁶⁶ Munn v. Commission Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 44, 8 Am. Dec. 219; Rossiter v. Rossiter, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 494, 24 Am. Dec. 62; Jeffrey v. Bigelow, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 518, 28 Am. Dec. 476; Goodloe v. Godley, 13 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 233, 51 Am. Dec. 159; Keener v. Harrod, 2 Md. 63, 56 Am. Dec. 706; McCoy v. McKowen, 26 Miss. 487, 59 Am. Dec. 264; Carmichael v. Buck, 10 Rich. (S. C.) L. 332, 70 Am. Dec. 226; Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Pa. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Coweta Falls Mfg. Co. v. Rogers, 19 Ga. 416, 65 Am. Dec. 602; Asher v. Sutton, 31 Kan. 286; Robinson v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 86 N. Y. 404; Reed v. Ashburnham R. R., 120 Mass. 43; Abrahams v. Weiller, 87 Ill. 179; Lewis v. Shreveport, 108 U. S. 282, 27 L. Ed. 728; Booth v. Wiley, 102 Ill. 84; Nicholson v. Moog, 65 Ala. 471; American Express Co. v. Milk, 73 Ill. 224; Kelton v. Leonard, 54 Vt. 230; Lewis v. Bourbon, 12 Kans. 186; Dodge v. McDonnell, 14 Wis. 553; Rhoda v. Annis, 75 Me. 17, 46 Am. Rep. 354; Ward's, etc., Co. v. Elkins, 34 Mich. 439, 22 Am. Rep. 544; New York Life Ins. Co. v. McGowan, 18 Kan. 300; Morton v. Scull, 23 Ark. 289; Massachusetts Life Ins. Co. v. Eshelman, 30 Ohio St. 647; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Sorrells, 1 Baxter (Tenn.), 352, 25 Am. Rep. 780; Noble v. Cunningham, 74 Ill. 51.

⁶⁷ Blane v. Proudfit, 3 Call. (Va.) 207, 2 Am. Dec. 546; Thompson v.

person dealing with a special agent, it is constantly said, "acts at his own peril,"⁶⁸ he is "put upon inquiry,"⁶⁹ he is "chargeable with notice of the extent of his authority,"⁷⁰ "it is his duty to ascertain,"⁷¹ "he is bound to inquire,"⁷² "and if he does not, he must suffer the consequences."⁷³

It is none the less true, however, as has been seen, that the scope of the general agent's authority must not be exceeded. Each acting within the scope of the authority conferred, binds his principal; each acting beyond that scope binds himself only or no one. But while these rules applying to the two classes are alike in kind, they differ, as has been shown, in degree. It is believed, however, that the difference is one of degree only, and not of principle.⁷⁴

IV.

ASCERTAINING THE EXISTENCE OF AUTHORITY.

§ 743. Person dealing with agent must ascertain his authority.—

In approaching the consideration of the inquiry whether an assumed authority exists in a given case, there are certain fundamental prin-

Stewart, 3 Conn. 171, 8 Am. Dec. 168; Beals v. Allen, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 363, 9 Am. Dec. 221; Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Baring v. Peirce, 5 Watts & Serg. (Penn.) 548, 40 Am. Dec. 534; Brown v. Johnson, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 398, 51 Am. Dec. 118; Pursley v. Morrison, 7 Ind. 356, 63 Am. Dec. 424; Carmichael v. Buck, 10 Rich. (S. C.) L. 332, 70 Am. Dec. 226; Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Pa. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Thomas v. Atkinson, 38 Ind. 248; Blackwell v. Ketcham, 53 Ind. 184; Baxter v. Lamont, 60 Ill. 237; Adams v. Bourne, 9 Gray (Mass.), 100; Silliman v. Fredericksburg, etc., R. R. Co., 27 Gratt. (Va.) 119; Wooding v. Bradley, 76 Va. 614; Strawn v. O'Hara, 86 Ill. 53; Campbell v. Sherman, 49 Mich. 534; Saginaw, etc., R. R. Co. v. Chappell, 56 Mich. 190; Cleveland v. Pearl, 63 Vt. 127, 25 Am. St. R. 748; Yates v. Yates, 24 Fla. 64; Montgomery Furniture Co. v. Hardaway, 104 Ala. 100; Baldwin Fertilizer Co. v. Thompson, 106 Ga. 480; Sioux City, etc., Co. v. Magnes, 5 Colo. App. 172; History Co. v. Flint (Tex. Civ. App.), 15 S. W. 912; Cox v. Albany Brewing Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.), 489; Americus Oil Co. v. Gurr, 114 Ga. 624; Brown v. West, 69 Vt. 440.

⁶⁸ Sioux City, etc., Co. v. Magnes, 5 Colo. App. 172; Cleveland v. Pearl, 63 Vt. 127, 25 Am. St. Rep. 748; Montgomery Furniture Co. v. Hardaway, 104 Ala. 100; Schaeffer v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 38 Mont. 459; Moore v. Skyles, 33 Mont. 135, 114 Am. St. R. 801, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 136.

⁶⁹ Michael v. Eley, 61 Hun (N. Y.), 180.

⁷⁰ Baldwin Fertilizer Co. v. Thompson, 106 Ga. 480.

⁷¹ Yates v. Yates, 24 Fla. 64; Americus Oil Co. v. Gurr, 114 Ga. 624.

⁷² Michael v. Eley, supra; Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 455.

⁷³ Young v. Harbor Point Club Ass'n, 99 Ill. App. 290.

⁷⁴ See the discussion in Manchester Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Allee, 81 N. J. L. 605.

ciples which must not be overlooked. Among these are, as has been seen, (1) that the law indulges in no bare presumptions that an agency exists: it must be proved or presumed from facts; (2) that the agent cannot establish his own authority, either by his representations or by assuming to exercise it; (3) that an authority cannot be established by mere rumor or general reputation; (4) that even a general authority is not an unlimited one; and (5) that every authority must find its ultimate source in some act or omission of the principal. An assumption of authority to act as agent for another of itself challenges inquiry. Like a railroad crossing, it should be in itself a sign of danger and suggest the duty to "stop, look and listen." It is therefore declared to be a fundamental rule, never to be lost sight of and not easily to be overestimated, that persons dealing with an assumed agent, whether the assumed agency be a general or special one, are bound at their peril, if they would hold the principal, to ascertain not only the fact of the agency but the nature and extent of the authority, and in case either is controverted, the burden of proof is upon them to establish it.⁷⁵

§ 744. — What is meant by this rule.—It is material, however, in dealing with this rule to see what is meant by it. As has already been seen, the person who asserts agency has usually the burden of proving it. Where he can prove an actual authority, under any of the rules above referred to, it is not usually necessary that he should have known of it, or relied upon it, at the time of dealing with the ⁷⁵ "Whoever deals with an agent is put on his guard by that very fact, and does so at his risk. It is his right and duty to inquire into and ascertain the nature and extent of the powers of the agent, and to determine whether the act or contract about to be consummated comes within the province of the agency and will or not bind the principal." Bermudez, C. J., in Chaffe v. Stubbs, 37 La. Ann. 656. It is the duty of third persons at their peril to ascertain what kind of an agent one is who represents himself as such and the extent of his powers. Tompkins Mach. & Imple. Co. v. Peter, 84 Tex. 627.

To same effect: Gore v. Canada L. Ins. Co., 119 Mich. 136; Rice v. Peninsular Club, 52 Mich. 87; Busch v. Wilcox, 82 Mich. 336, 21 Am. St. 563;

Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531; Snow v. Warner, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 132, 43 Am. Dec. 417; Metzger v. Huntington, 139 Ind. 501; Dickinson County v. Mississippi Valley Ins. Co., 41 Iowa, 286; Roberts v. Rumley, 58 Iowa, 301; Beringer v. Meanor, 85 Penn. St. 223; Weise's Appeal, 72 Pa. 351; Dozier v. Freeman, 47 Miss. 647; Davidson v. Porter, 57 Ill. 300; Reitz v. Martin, 12 Ind. 306, 74 Am. Dec. 215; Bleeker v. Satsop R. Co., 3 Wash. 77; Rosendorf v. Poling, 48 W. Va. 621; Lester v. Snyder, 12 Colo. App. 351; LaFayette Ry. Co. v. Tucker, 124 Ala. 514; and scores of others too numerous to mention.

Judge Philips says: "An exception to this general rule is found in the dealings of insurance agents." Potter v. Phenix Ins. Co., 63 Fed. 382.

agent. Even a then undisclosed principal may ordinarily be held, when subsequently discovered. Where the person asserting agency can not prove an actual authority, but relies upon an apparent one to estop the principal, it is then part of his case that he so relied at the time.

But the difficulty at which the rule of the preceding section is aimed, does not usually arise in the cases just referred to, but attends upon this situation:—In many of the cases which come before the courts, the act in controversy can not be shown to have been authorized; the actual or apparent authority is not enough to sustain it, neither are there any of the ordinary elements of estoppel. The act in fact was not authorized, yet the party seeking to recover believed it was authorized, and acted upon that belief. Not to enforce it now, causes disappointment or loss to him. To enforce it now, causes disappointment or loss to the principal. Which one shall suffer? Over this question, a perpetual warfare wages; it is urged, on one side, that the party dealing with the agent shall be protected; on the other, that the principal who has not authorized the act can not be held; and the victory goes here to one party and there to the other, as one or the other of these demands secures recognition. The party dealing with the agent says to the principal, "You selected this agent and sent him out, and you should answer for his defaults." The principal replies, "Even if I did, it was lawful to employ him; I used due care; and the loss you complain of would not have happened if you had used due care not to trust him without investigating his authority, as you might have done." The situation, in some respects, is not dissimilar to cases of negligence. The plaintiff charges the defendant with negligence. The defendant replies, "If it had not been for your contributory negligence, my alleged negligence would not have harmed you." It is here that the rule laid down in the preceding section is invoked. The party dealing with the agent must ascertain his authority; if he had made due investigation, he would have found that there was no authority, and he would thus have saved himself from loss.

§ 745. ——— What such person is bound to ascertain.—Under this rule, the person dealing with an alleged agent is bound to ascertain, i. e., be prepared to prove, (1) that the alleged agent is really such, (2) that he is an agent of the sort he purports to be (or at least of the sort that the third person deals with him as being), and (3) that the act done is within the limits of his authority, as already explained. This includes (a) the observance of known limitations, and (b) the ascertainment and observance of those limitations with the knowledge of which third persons are charged. These, as has been pointed out, include, but go no further than, such limitations as, according to the ordinary experience and practice of mankind, may not unreasonably be expected to exist in such a case. Even in the case of the so-called special agent this is true. A third person, dealing with a special agent to sell, may fairly be charged with notice that there may be limitations as to kind, amount, price, or credit, because such limitations are not unusual; but he is not bound to anticipate or inquire after unusual, whimsical or fantastic limitations, as that the agent shall deal only with people of an arbitrary class, or write his contracts only upon paper of a certain hue, or, to borrow an illustration from Justice Cowen, to write his acceptances only with a steel pen. If the principal wishes such limitations observed, he must make them known.

§ 746. — Not an unfair rule.—This is not, in general, an unfair or unreasonable rule. In many cases the persons dealing with an alleged agent are in a much better situation to protect themselves than the principal is to protect either himself or them. In the case of the mere pretender this is most strikingly true. The alleged principal may have had no sort of dealings with the pretended agent, and be wholly ignorant of his claims to authority or of his very existence. Unless the party dealing with the pretended agent in such a case protects himself, nobody can protect him. It is, moreover, in any case entirely within the power of the person dealing with the agent to satisfy himself that the agent has the authority he assumes to exercise, or to decline to enter into relations with him.

So far as the law imposes upon the person dealing with an alleged agent the burden of ascertaining that he is an agent, there seems to be but little room for question.

But our actual law goes further. It requires not only that the person so dealing shall ascertain the fact of the agency, but also,—subject to the rules respecting “general agents,” “apparent authority,” and “secret limitations,” as already explained,—imposes upon such person the burden of observing the nature and the extent of the authority conferred, within the limits stated in the preceding section.

It is here, as has been seen, that the real difficulty presents itself, and many other methods of dealing with it have been suggested.

§ 747. — Other theories.—It is frequently said that if the person acting be in fact an agent, and especially if he be in fact an agent of the sort which he pretends to be, the question whether he keeps within the limitations prescribed by his principal ought to be one to be solved between the principal and the agent alone. If such an agent exceeds his authority, where the other party has acted in good faith, let the principal be bound and seek redress against the agent. Such a rule, it is urged, will make the principal more careful in the selection of his agents, and principals, if such a rule be enforced, will learn to protect themselves by requiring security from their agents, and thus the loss caused by their agents' defaults will be made to fall—where of course it belongs,—upon the agent through the principal, rather than primarily upon the other party who may then seek redress from the agent.

This suggestion has plausibility. In the case of agents who are regularly employed, it would be entirely feasible for the principal to require security; but in the case of the occasional agent, or the one casually employed,—and it is as to this class that the need of the rule is greatest, since they are almost always “special” agents whose authority is narrowest and most strictly construed,—it would put such an impediment of inconvenience, expense and delay in the way of the employment of a most natural and useful instrumentality, as to either make it impracticable or lead the principal to take the risk without security.

It is not to be forgotten also that this means of protection is open to the party who deals with the agent as well as to the principal.

It is also to be borne in mind that, if a rule is unfair or unjust, its nature is not changed by the fact that people may learn how to guard themselves against its consequences.

§ 748. — It is often suggested that the case of an agent exceeding his authority should be dealt with like the case of the servant who is guilty of negligence in the course of his employment. Making an unauthorized contract or otherwise exceeding or violating his authority, it is urged, is simply a wrongful act, and like other wrongful acts of a servant or agent should be dealt with under the tort rule rather than the contract one. Let the principal respond for this as he responds for other torts in the course of the employment.

Two answers to this suggestion may be made: 1. It would be a marked extension of an already over-worked rule. 2. It is inappropriate.

The distinction between the case of a person having contractual relations with an agent and that of the person injured by the tort of a servant, is usually an obvious and significant one. The person injured by the trespass or negligence of the servant is frequently, if not generally, a total stranger to the servant. He may never have consented to come into any relations either with the servant or his master. He has ordinarily no warning, and no time or opportunity to protect himself, by stipulation or otherwise. He usually has no expectation of profit to himself from any aspect of the situation, but is merely an unwilling, unconsenting victim of another's wrongful act.

The case of the person dealing with an alleged agent is very different. He need not deal with the agent unless he so desires. The whole matter is voluntary. He has ample time to investigate. He can require the alleged agent to produce his credentials or refuse to treat with him. He may exact warranties, pledges or assurances to suit his wishes. He decides to deal, presumably, because he thinks it advantageous to himself to do so. He anticipates profit or gain to himself as the result of the transaction. It surely is no hardship to require him to exercise care for his own protection.

§ 749. — The dilemma of choosing between two innocent persons.—It is also frequently said that these cases are to be solved by the "general principle" that "when one of two innocent persons must suffer the loss should be borne by him whose act made the loss possible," or, "who first trusted," etc., etc., practically all of which forms hark back to the statement of Holt, C. J., in Hern v. Nichols,⁷⁶

⁷⁶ 1 Salk. 289. In Mussey v. Beecher, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 511, Shaw, C. J., stating the maxim as being that "where one of two innocent persons must suffer, he who reposed confidence in the wrongdoer must bear the loss," held that the person who so reposed the confidence in that case was not the principal, but the person dealing with the agent. Wilde, J., however, stating the maxim in the form given in Lickbarrow v. Mason, following, held that it was the principal who was affected. Various statements of the maxim have been made as will be seen in the following, which are a few of the many cases.

In Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63, at page 70, Ashhurst, J., says: "Wherever one of two innocent persons must suffer by the acts of a third, he who has enabled such third person to occasion the loss must sustain it." This is a most common form. In County of Macon v. Shores, 97 U. S. 272, 279, "Where a loss is to be suffered through the misconduct of an agent, it should be borne by those who put it in his power to do the wrong, rather than by a stranger." And in Bank of Kentucky v. Schuylkill Bank, 1 Parsons' (Pa.) Eq. Cas. 180, 248: "Where one of two innocent persons is to suffer from the tortious act of a third, he who gave the aggressor the means of doing the wrong must alone bear the consequences of the act." In O'Connor v. Clark, 170 Pa. 318, 321, 29 L. R. A. 607, "Where one of two innocent persons must suffer loss by reason of the fraud or deceit of another, the loss should fall upon him by whose act or omission the wrongdoer has been enabled to commit the fraud." In Bartlett v. First Nat. Bank, 247 Ill. 490, 498, "Where one of two innocent parties must suffer loss by reason of the wrongful acts of a third party, the rule is almost universal that the party who has made it possible, by reason of his negligence, for the third party to commit the wrong must stand the loss."

How easy it is to misapply as well as to misstate the rule in question, is shown in the recent case of Higin-

“for, seeing somebody must be a loser by this deceit, it is more reason that he who employs and puts a trust and confidence in the deceiver should be a loser, than a stranger.” A moment’s reflection, however, will suffice to show that, as stated in some of its most common forms, there is no such general principle. The simple case of the conflict between the innocent bailor—lender, hirer, conditional seller—of a chattel, which is wrongfully sold by the bailee to an innocent purchaser, will suffice as an illustration. Here, according to many statements of the alleged “principle,” the innocent purchaser ought to succeed, whereas every one knows that in our law the precisely opposite result is reached. The maxim is often put in the form of “one of two equally innocent parties,” etc.; but for this case it is clear that, in general, there is no reason for preferring one of two equally innocent parties, and the loss must in general lie where it has fallen. It seems perfectly clear that the incidence of the loss can only be shifted where the parties were not equally innocent, and that, before the loss can be thrown upon the principal, he must be shown to have been guilty of some misconduct,—that his conduct must have contributed in some way, which reasonable care would have avoided, to the perpetration of the wrong. Certainly the mere employment of an agent in the ordinary way is not such misconduct, unless we are prepared to say that one avails himself of this common, useful and supposedly lawful instrumentality at his risk, and this has not hitherto been deemed to be the law.

§ 750. — Through whom must ascertainment be sought.— Attention must also be given to the question, Of whom shall inquiry as to authority be made? Must the other party go to the principal or may he rely upon the statements of the agent or of strangers? To this question, the law in general gives but one answer: The party dealing with the agent must not rely on what the agent alone may say or do, and a fortiori not on what mere strangers say or do, but he must be able to trace the authority on which he relies back to some word or deed of the principal.

botham v. Pauch, 232 Pa. 620. “It was said in the charge, that if one of two innocent parties must suffer loss, the loss must be borne by the one least to blame, and that it was for the jury to determine which of the parties to the action was least to blame and to find a verdict accordingly. This was an inaccurate statement of the rule that where one of two equally innocent parties must suffer by reason of the fraud of another, the loss should fall upon him whose negligent act or omission has enabled the wrongdoer to commit the fraud, and it was a misapplication of the rule to the facts of the case.”

It is not meant by this that the party dealing with the agent must always go and make inquiries of the principal in person. Such a rule would often be inconvenient and impracticable. What is meant, as has been stated, is, that the party dealing with the agent must be able to deduce the authority relied upon from the acts of the principal whom he seeks to charge. He may rely on evidence furnished by the principal, and that evidence may consist of facts and circumstances, of things done and things omitted, of words and acts,—provided always that it can be shown that the principal did in fact supply this evidence, that it was adequate to the purpose, and that it had not spent its force. What the agent himself said or did is ordinarily immaterial, unless the principal's assent or acquiescence in it can also be shown. Limitations upon the agent's authority cannot be defeated simply because the agent failed to disclose them or even denied their existence.⁷⁷ There must be some act of the principal reasonably to be construed as waiving their operation or as indicating their non-existence.

Ordinarily in our law it is not within the power of an agent to bind his principal by the evidence which he alone puts forward as to his own authority. The principal may, of course, give him that power. He may supply him with documentary or other evidence to be exhibited; he may refer persons to him to disclose his authority; he may agree to be bound by whatever the agent may assume to do; and all this may be done expressly or impliedly, and where it is done the principal will be bound accordingly. These cases, however, are exceptional and anomalous.

§ 751. Persons dealing with agent must act in good faith.—It is evident that the rules which have been discussed are established for the protection of third persons who act in good faith. Collusion with the agent to take advantage of the apparent at the expense of the real authority, the willful shutting of eyes to restrictions which would otherwise be obvious, or any other practice or device to pervert the rules of law to a purpose not contemplated by them, should be fatal to a recovery. This is especially true where the party seeking to recover claims the benefit of an apparent authority, a holding out, or any conduct alleged no Fruit Packing Co., 123 Cal. 379. Neither can the principal be bound merely because the agent falsely asserts that a given act is within his authority. Edwards v. Dooley, 120 N. Y. 540.

⁷⁷ Since an agent cannot bind his principal by any express statement as to his authority he "cannot by mere silence concerning limitations on his authority, render such limitations ineffective." Mitrovich v. Fres-

to work an estoppel: only those who have relied in good faith are entitled to protection.⁷⁸

§ 752. Persons dealing with agent must exercise reasonable prudence.—The person dealing with the agent must also act with ordinary prudence and reasonable diligence. Obviously, if he knows or has good reason to believe that the agent is exceeding his authority, he can not claim protection.⁷⁹ So if the suggestions of probable limitations be of such a clear and reasonable quality, or if the character assumed by the agent is of such a suspicious or unreasonable nature, or if the authority which he seeks to exercise is of such an unusual or improbable character, as would suffice to put an ordinarily prudent man upon his guard, the party dealing with him may not shut his eyes to the real state of the case, but should either refuse to deal with the agent at all, or should ascertain from the principal the true condition of affairs.⁸⁰

This is particularly true where the agent is a stranger or one with whom the party has not dealt as agent. Care should be taken in such a case not to rely upon appearances which may be as consistent with ⁷⁸ Schneider v. Lebanon Creamery Co., 73 Ill. App. 612; Rail v. City Nat. Bank, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 557; Jacoby v. Payson, 85 Hun (N. Y.), 367; Peabody v. Hoard, 46 Ill. 242; Proctor v. Benuis, 36 Ch. Div. 740.

⁷⁹ "No principle is better settled in law, nor is there any founded on more obvious justice, than that if a person dealing with an agent knows that he is acting under a circumscribed and limited authority, and that his act is outside of and transcends the authority conferred, the principal is not bound, and it is immaterial whether the agent is a general or a special one, because a principal may limit the authority of the one as well as that of the other." Quinlan v. Providence, etc., Ins. Co., 133 N. Y. 356, 28 Am. St. 645. Same effect: Brown v. West, 69 Vt. 440; Wood Mow. & Reap. Mach. Co. v. Crow, 70 Iowa, 340; In re Kern's Estate, 176 Pa. 373; Lewis v. Lewis, 203 Pa. 197; Littleton v. Loan Ass'n, 97 Ga. 172; Carter v. Aetna Loan Co., 61 Mo. App. 218; National Union F. Ins. Co. v. Spry Lumber other conditions as with the relation of principal and agent. Thus the mere fact that a stranger has in his possession and offers for sale the property of another as his agent, is as consistent with the fact that the pretended agent is a mere bailee or perhaps a thief, as that he actually has the authority which he assumes to possess.

Co., 235 Ill. 98; Ryan v. American Steel & Wire Co., 148 Ky. 481.

⁸⁰ "The law is well settled," says Champlin, J., in Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531, "that a person who deals with an agent is bound to inquire into his authority, and ignorance of the agent's authority is no excuse. * * * The principal may be careless in reposing confidence in his agent, yet this does not make him liable to a third party, who, in dealing with such agent fails to exercise the diligence usual with good business men under the circumstances. If there is anything likely to put a reasonable business man upon his guard as to the authority of the agent, it is the duty of the third party to inquire how far the agent's acts are in pursuance of the principal's limitation." See also National Bank v. Munger, 95 Fed. 87, 36 C. C. A. 659 (approving text); The Thos. Gibson Co. v. Carlisle, 1 Ohio N. P. 398 (approving text); Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 57 L. R. A. 451; Savage v. Pelton, 1 Colo. App. 148.

§ 753. ——— Notice of limitations.—No particular method of giving notice of limitations upon the agent's authority can be insisted upon. Express and actual notice will, of course, suffice, but where the principal relies upon something less than that it must be of such a nature that failure to observe it is not consistent with the good faith and reasonable prudence which the law requires. It is frequently attempted to give notice by terms inserted in or warnings printed upon the contracts, orders, bill-heads or other papers made or used by the parties. Such a notice is efficacious if actually observed, or if so plain and obvious that the other party, as a reasonable man, cannot be heard to say that he did not observe it.⁸¹

§ 754. ——— Notice of adverse interests.—It is fundamental that an agent, without the full knowledge and consent of his principal,⁸² will not be permitted to act as agent in transactions in which he is personally interested. It is often said that his endeavor to do so operates as an immediate revocation of his authority.⁸³ That an agent undertakes to do so is therefore enough to put the other party on his guard. This is clearly so where they are negotiating directly, and even where the other party claims rights traced through an agent's acts he must take warning when the chain of title shows that the agent has been exercising his powers in his own behalf.⁸⁴

⁸¹ Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655; McKindly v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515, 42 Am. Rep. 740; Gorham v. Felker, 102 Ga. 260; Reeves v. Corrigan, 3 N. D. 415; Wood Mow. & Reap. Mach. Co. v. Crow, 70 Iowa, 340. Not when obscurely printed or otherwise not reasonably noticeable. Kinsman v. Kershaw, 119 Mass. 140; Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402, 38 Am. Rep. 682; Trainer v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; Luckie v. Johnston, 89 Ga. 321.

⁸² "If such a power is intended to be given it must be expressed in language so plain that no other interpretation can rationally be given it, for it is against the general law of reason that an agent should be intrusted with power to act for his principal and for himself at the same time." Per Peckham, J., in Bank of N. Y. v. Am. Dock & Trust Co., 143 N. Y. 559.

⁸³ "As long as the agent is conducting negotiations for his principal with third parties, he may act on his behalf: but the moment he undertakes, without the knowledge of his principal, to conduct them with himself, his agency ceases and the powers and liabilities of that relation no longer exist." Pine Mt. Iron & Coal Co. v. Bailey, 94 Fed. 258, 36 C. C. A. 229. See also Metzger v. Huntington, 139 Ind. 501.

⁸⁴ Corn Exchange Bank v. Amer. Dock & Trust Co., 163 N. Y. 332;

§ 755. ——— Effect of principal's negligence.—It has been said in one or two cases that "the scope of an agency is to be determined not alone from what the principal may have told the agent to do, but from what he knows, or in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence ought to know, the agent is doing in the transaction."⁸⁵ On the other hand, where the trial court had charged the jury that if the principal knew the agent was violating his instructions "or could have known it by the exercise of ordinary diligence, he is estopped to deny the authority," the supreme court of Alabama said, "Though mere negligence, mere want of ordinary diligence, may furnish the agent an opportunity of undue assumption of authority, it does not of itself work an estoppel. A principal is not required to distrust his agent, nor to keep a vigilant watch over the manner in which he exercises his authority, and to see that his instructions are obeyed. He may act on the presumption that third parties, dealing with his agent, will not be negligent in ascertaining the extent of his authority, as well as the existence of his agency. And negligence, to constitute a ground of liability, must have caused the plaintiff to repose trust on the authority of the agent, and the negligence of plaintiff must not have proximately contributed to the loss. The charge exacts of the principal a degree of diligence not required by the law."⁸⁶

The truth of the matter undoubtedly lies in the combination of these rules. The principal is not obliged to suspect his agent or to set another agent to watch him. He has a right to rely upon the other

Bank of N. Y. v. Am. Dock & Trust Co., 143 N. Y. 559; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Am. Dock & Trust Co., 148 N. Y. 612, 51 Am. St. R. 721; Gerard v. McCormick, 130 N. Y. 261, 14 L. R. A. 234; Wilson v. Metropol. El. Ry. Co., 120 N. Y. 145, 17 Am. St. R. 625; Farrington v. South Boston R. Co., 150 Mass. 406, 15 Am. St. R. 222, 5 L. R. A. 849; Moores v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156, 28 L. Ed. 385; Lee v. Smith, 84 Mo. 304, 54 Am. Rep. 101; State v. Miller, 47 Or. 562, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 365; Hier v. Miller, 68 Kan. 258, 63 L. R. A. 952; Stainback v. Bank, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 269; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. 281, 62 Am. Dec. 648.

But see Cheever v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 150 N. Y. 59, 55 Am. St. R. 646, 34 L. R. A. 69; where it was held that the mere fact that a note drawn by the president of a corporation had later been endorsed by the firm of which he was a member (but which was not the payee) was not enough to charge a holder with notice.

⁸⁵ Kingsley v. Fitts, 51 Vt. 414; quoted with approval in Little Pittsburgh Mine Co. v. Little Chief Min. Co., 11 Colo. 225, 7 Am. St. R. 226.

⁸⁶ Wheeler v. McGuire, 86 Ala. 398, 2 L. R. A. 808. The court quotes the rule laid down by Mr. Wharton in his work on Agency, § 123: "When a principal conducts his affairs so negligently as to lead third persons to reasonably suppose that his agent has full powers, then if the agent exceeds his authority the principal must bear the loss. It is true that the principal is not chargeable with culpa levis-sima. He is not chargeable, in other words, with the consequences of party's diligence to protect his own interests. He is not charged with knowledge of every departure by the agent from his authority. But it must be held that he is aware of the general method in which his business is being conducted, and if he leads reasonably prudent men to believe that such method meets with his approval, he cannot complain if they are held entitled to rely upon it.⁸⁷

§ 756. Must ascertain whether necessary conditions exist.—Again, where the nature of the authority is such that it must have been conferred by written instrument, or must be a matter of public record, the party dealing with the agent must, at his peril, take notice of this fact, and ascertain whether the instrument or record is sufficient for the purpose.

For similar reasons, if the authority is known to be open for exercise only in a certain event, or upon the happening of a certain contingency, or the performance of a certain condition, the occurrence of the event or the happening of the contingency or the performance of the condition, must ordinarily be ascertained by him who would avail himself of the results ensuing from the exercise of the authority.⁸⁸

The subjects to which these conditions may relate may, of course, be of great variety. Thus, there may be conditions of time, amount, interest, person, territory, and the like. In many cases the question, whether the condition is being complied with, will, the facts being known, be entirely obvious. If it be one of a fixed and ascertained territory, for example, there can usually be no difficulty in observing whether the act is being done within that territory.⁸⁹ If the condition those negligences into which good business men are liable to fall. But, if he is negligent to an extent beyond what is usual with good business men in his department, and if in consequence of his negligence, third parties repose trust on the supposed agent, then the loss, if loss accrue, must fall on the principal."

⁸⁷ See St. Louis Packet Co. v. Parker, 59 Ill. 23; Golding v. Merchant, 43 Ala. 705; Martin v. Webb, 110 U. S. 7, 15, 28 L. Ed. 49; Hanover Nat. Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 148 N. Y. 612, 51 Am. St. R. 721.

A principal may be bound by the authority which through culpable negligence he permits the agent to appear to have. Columbia Mill Co. v. National Bank, 52 Minn. 224; Eggle- ston v. Advance Thresher Co., 96 Minn. 241.

⁸⁸ Baines v. Ewing, 4 H. & C. 511, L. R., 1 Exch. 320; Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278, 1 M. & R. 66; Mussey v. Beecher, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 511; Craycraft v. Selvage, 10 Bush (Ky.), 696; Weise's Appeal, 72 Pa. 351.

⁸⁹ Territorial limitations.—Authority may be subject to territorial limitations or it may not. Some such limitations must be express; some would be implied; some would naturally be anticipated; others would not be. Much would depend upon circumstances and the established methods of procedure. Would the state agent of an insurance company be thought to have equal authority be one of a prescribed amount, and the agent is attempting in the given case to exceed that amount, the case is equally clear. So, of a fixed time limit, which is plainly being exceeded.

On the other hand, there may be many cases in which, though the limit is known, the fact whether it is being exceeded may not be easy to ascertain. Thus, though it may be known that an agent is authorized to borrow a certain sum only, and he attempts to borrow that sum or part of it of X, the question whether he is exceeding the known limit may depend upon whether he has already borrowed part or all of that sum of other persons, who are unknown to X, and whom he would have no means of identifying if he should seek to make inquiries. The same situation may exist in a great variety of other cases which will at once suggest themselves.

§ 757. — Agent's representations as to his authority not to be relied upon.—And not only must the person dealing with the in another state? Would a local agent, residing and appointed in Portland, Maine, be thought to have the same authority in Portland, Oregon, if he should chance to be there? Would a clerk in a department store or the ticket agent of a railroad company be thought to have the same authority to sell goods or tickets when he was at his home, as when he was in his appointed place behind the counter or in the ticket office?

In Insurance Co. v. Thornton, 130 Ala. 222, 89 Am. St. R. 30, 55 L. R. A. 547, it was held that the local agent of a fire insurance company appointed for the town of Dothan "and vicinity" could not be deemed to have authority to do business in the town of Enterprise, thirty-five miles away, unless it could fairly be found under the circumstances that the latter place was within the "vicinity."

But in Lightbody v. North Am. Ins. Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 18, an insurance agent appointed for "Troy and vicinity" was held to have power to bind the company by a policy upon property in Utica, one hundred miles away, the policy being issued at Troy, and the agent claiming to have authority to issue it, and the insured not being shown to have known that the company had an agent at Utica.

Where the insured knows of the territorial limitation, there can be no recovery in violation of it. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 108 Ga. 191. So where he knows of the statutory policy of the state to require local agents, who have been appointed, he may not deal with agents in other states. Potter v. Phenix Ins. Co., 63 Fed. 382.

In several cases policies issued upon property outside the actual territory of the agent have been held binding, upon proof of recognition by the company of the policy as a valid one. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Maguire, 51 Ill. 342.

An agent subsequently appointed may act with reference to a policy upon property now in his territory, though it was not within his territory when the policy was issued. St. Paul, etc., Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 47 Minn. 352; Hahn v. Guardian Assur. Co., 23 Or. 576, 37 Am. St. R. 709.

Mr. Wood's statement in § 529 of his work on Insurance quoted in some of the cases is surely too broad.

In German F. Ins. Co. v. Columbia Tile Co., 15 Ind. App. 623, sometimes cited in this connection, there was no express territorial limit prescribed.

agent ascertain the existence of the conditions, but he must also, as in other cases, be able to trace the source of his reliance to some word or act of the principal himself if the latter is to be held responsible. As has often been pointed out, the agent alone can not enlarge or extend his authority by his own acts or statements, nor can he alone remove limitations or waive conditions imposed by his principal. To charge the principal in such a case, the principal's consent or concurrence must be shown.

§ 758. — Notwithstanding this difficulty in ascertaining, however, the general rule is that the person who deals with the agent takes the risk. To the objection that no one would be willing to deal with the agent upon this basis, it was replied by Chief Justice Shaw (in a case⁹⁰ in which the agent was known to have authority to buy goods upon credit, provided he did not exceed a certain amount at any one time): "This objection, we think, is answered by the consideration that no one is bound to deal with the agent; whoever does so is admonished of the extent and limitation of the agent's authority, and must, at his own peril, ascertain the fact upon which alone the authority to bind the constituent depends. Under an authority so peculiar and limited, it is not to be presumed that one would deal with the agent who had not full confidence in his honesty and veracity, and in the accuracy of his books and accounts. To this extent the seller of the goods trusts the agent, and, if he is deceived by him, he has no right to complain of the principal. It is himself, and not the principal, who trusts the agent beyond the expressed limits of the power; and therefore the maxim, that where one of two innocent persons must suffer, he who reposed confidence in the wrongdoer must bear the loss, operates in favor of the constituent, and not in favor of the seller of the goods."

§ 759. — Facts peculiarly within agent's knowledge.—An exception to this general rule has been established in New York after "an inquiry of the most exhaustive character, and an assault remarkable for its persistence and vigor." Stated in the language of one of the leading cases⁹¹ it is that "where the principal has clothed his agent with power to do an act upon the existence of some extrinsic fact, necessarily and peculiarly within the knowledge of the agent, and of the existence of which the act of executing the power is itself a representation, a third person dealing with such agent in entire good faith, pursuant to the apparent power, may rely upon the representation, and the principal is estopped from denying its truth to his prejudice."

⁹⁰ Mussey v. Beecher, supra. etc., R. Co., 106 N. Y. 195, 60 Am. Rep.

⁹¹ Bank of Batavia v. New York, 440.

This, obviously, is not intended to be a general rule. On the contrary it is an exceptional one. It rests upon the hypothesis that, in certain cases, the question of the existence of the conditions is so "necessarily and peculiarly" within the knowledge of the agent that the principal must be deemed to have authorized third persons to rely upon the agent's representations concerning it. Unless this situation exists, the exception would not be made.

It must also be kept in mind that the question here is not as to the terms or extent of the authority,—that is not a matter necessarily or peculiarly within the knowledge of the agent. It is only as to the existence of extrinsic facts or conditions, upon the presence of which the proper exercise of the authority depends, and of the existence of which the agent, because he is the man in charge, the man on the ground, must be deemed to have peculiar, if not exclusive, knowledge, that the exception here considered applies.

The typical cases have been those wherein an agent, authorized to issue notes only in his principal's business and for his account, has issued notes ostensibly for the principal's account but really for his own,⁹² or wherein the freight agent of a railroad company, authorized to issue bills of lading for goods received for carriage, has issued one when no goods were in fact received,⁹³ or where the transfer agent of a corporation authorized to issue new certificates upon the surrender of old ones has issued certificates when no old one was in fact surrendered,⁹⁴ and the note, bill of lading or new certificate has come into the hands of a bona fide holder who relied upon its recitals. Warehouse receipts for goods not deposited raise the same question, and much the same situation is presented where the cashier of a bank authorized to certify as good a check drawn upon funds certifies to one when no funds are present, though some courts distinguish upon the true negotiable character of the check which the bill of lading, warehouse receipt or certificate of stock does not possess.

There seems to be very little question respecting the strictly negotiable instruments, like promissory notes and bills of exchange, as will be seen in the cases referred to above. But with reference to such ⁹² North River Bank v. Aymar, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 362.

See also the elaborate discussion in In re Troy & Cohoes Shirt Co., 136 Fed. 420, aff'd on opinion below, 142 Fed. 1038. See also Fillebrown v. Hayward, 190 Mass. 472.

⁹³ Bank of Batavia v. New York, etc., R. Co., supra; Armour v. Michigan Central R. Co., 65 N. Y. 111, 22 Am. Rep. 603.

⁹⁴ New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Fifth Ave. Bank v. Forty-Second St. Ry. Co., 137 N. Y. 231, 33 Am. St. R. 712, 19 L. R. A. 331.

matters as the bill of lading, the warehouse receipt, and the certificate of stock, there is much question.

§ 760. — The views of the New York courts have been approved in several of the other states in the bill of lading cases,⁹⁵ and have been adopted in the Uniform Bills of Lading Act,⁹⁶ but they are opposed by the English and Canadian courts,⁹⁷ the supreme court of the United States,⁹⁸ and a number of the state courts,⁹⁹ and these opposing courts undoubtedly represent the weight of authority. Nevertheless the New York rule is believed to be sound. Although not strictly negotiable, the bill of lading has a well known commercial character which can not be ignored. The companies which issue them are not ignorant of it. The agent is put there to receive goods and issue bills of lading. His act of issuing one is a representation of a fact peculiarly within his own knowledge and which he is put there to determine. It is an act apparently within his actual authority. There is nothing to apprise a person relying upon it of the real state of the case. Suppose he undertakes to investigate: of whom shall he inquire whether the goods have actually been received? He would naturally go to the very agent who has already made a written certificate that the goods have been received. Why ask for further assurances? If he goes to the railroad company, at its principal office, and inquires, the course of business would be for a superior agent to inquire of the ⁹⁵ Brooke v. New York, etc., R. Co., 108 Pa. 529, 56 Am. Rep. 235; Sioux City R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Neb. 556, 35 Am. Rep. 488; Wichita Savings Bank v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 20 Kan. 519; Fletcher v. Elevator Co., 12 S. D. 643 (a warehouse receipt case). See also St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Larned, 103 Ill. 293; Sears v. Wingate, 3 Allen (Mass.), 103. By statute: Lazard v. Merchants' Transp. Co., 78 Md. 1.

The same principle has been approved in Wisconsin, though in cases involving different facts. Arnold v. Waupaca Bank, 126 Wis. 362, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 580.

⁹⁶ Section 23.

⁹⁷ Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B. 665; Hubbersty v. Ward, 8 Ex. 330; McLean v. Fleming, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 128; Brown v. Powell, L. R. 10 C. P. 562; Cox v. Bruce, 18 Q. B. Div. 147. In Canada: Erb v. Gt. West. Ry. Co., 42 U. C. Q. B. 90, 3 Ont. App. 446, 5 Can. S. C. 179.

⁹⁸ Friedlander v. Railway Co., 130 U. S. 416, 32 L. Ed. 991; St. Louis, etc., Railway Co. v. Knight, 122 U. S. 79, 30 L. Ed. 1077; Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 26 L. Ed. 998; The Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. (U. S.) 182, 15 L. Ed. 341; American, etc., Co. v. Maddock, 36 C. C. A. 42, 93 Fed. 980.

⁹⁹ National Bank of Commerce v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 44 Minn. 224, 20 Am. St. R. 566, 9 L. R. A. 263; Williams, Black & Co. v. Wilmington R. Co., 93 N. Car. 42, 53 Am. Rep. 450; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkens, 44 Md. 11, 22 Am. Rep. 26 (immediately changed by statute); Louisiana Nat. Bank v. Laveille, 52 Mo. 380 (see Smith v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. App. 48); Hunt v. Railroad Co., 29 La. Ann. 446; Dean v. King, 22 Ohio St. 118.

very agent who issued the bill of lading. Why inquire of him again when his assurance is already in hand?

Suppose an agent is placed in charge of a store with authority to buy, upon his principal's credit, such goods as are needed to keep up the stock. He buys of A all the goods which are actually needed, and then buys more of B telling him that the goods are needed and B relies in good faith upon his statement. Should not B recover of the principal, even though the goods were not needed and never came to his use?¹ Suppose an agent is authorized to issue notes in his principal's name for use in his business. He issues one in his principal's name, saying to the person who receives it, and who acts in good faith, that it is for use in the principal's business. Should not the principal be liable although the note was really put to an unauthorized use?²

The rule of the New York courts does not apply where it appears upon the face of the transaction that the agent was dealing with himself.³

§ 761. — Fixed pecuniary limit.—It is not infrequently said that, however sound the New York rule may be when applied to the sort of cases already referred to, it should have no application to cases in which there is a fixed pecuniary or numerical limit, as where the agent is authorized to buy or borrow or obtain credit to a certain prescribed amount but no further. It is true that where the limit is so fixed it is easier to compare the act with the authority, but there seems to be no other essential difference. A striking case in which the stricter rule was applied, though the New York rule might have been

¹ A partner in a firm of harness-makers who buys bits, ostensibly for the firm, binds the firm even though he appropriates the bits, when bought, to his own use. Bond v. Gibson, 1 Camp. 185.

² One who loans money to an agent authorized to borrow it, is not obliged to follow the money to see that it is properly applied. Donnell v. Lewis County Sav. Bank, 80 Mo. 165.

³ See Corn Exchange Bank v. American Dock & Trust Co., 163 N. Y. 332; Hanover National Bank v. Am. Dock & Trust Co., 148 N. Y. 612, 51 Am. St. R. 721; Bank of New York v. Am. Dock & Trust Co., 143 N. Y. 559; Gerard v. McCormick, 130 N. Y.

261, 14 L. R. A. 234; Wilson v. Metropolitan El. Ry. Co., 120 N. Y. 145, 17 Am. St. R. 625.

Same: Farrington v. South Boston R. Co., 150 Mass. 406, 15 Am. St. R. 222, 5 L. R. A. 849; Moore v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156, 28 L. Ed. 385.

But in Cheever v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 150 N. Y. 59, 55 Am. St. R. 646, 34 L. R. A. 69, it was held that the mere fact that a note, drawn in the name of a railroad company by its president, was subsequently indorsed by a firm (not the payee) of which he was a member, was not enough to defeat the rights of an otherwise bona fide holder.

fitted to the facts, is the early case of Mussey v. Beecher ⁴ already referred to. There Beecher had, by formal writing, with whose terms plaintiff was acquainted, authorized one Pierce to buy goods upon Beecher's credit for a certain business carried on in another town, "provided, however, that said Pierce shall not make purchases or incur debts exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of two thousand dollars." Pierce bought goods from time to time of the plaintiff, whose contention was that he inquired on these occasions of Pierce whether the limit had been reached, and Pierce had replied that it had not. As a matter of fact it had been exceeded, at the time of the purchase in question, and this was the defense relied upon. The trial court instructed the jury, in effect, that if plaintiff inquired of Pierce and relied upon his statement in good faith he could recover even though the limit had then been exceeded. This was held to be erroneous in an opinion written by Chief Justice Shaw, who relied upon the general rule that such a known limit must be observed by the person dealing with the agent, and that the agent could not enlarge his authority by his own statements. One judge dissented. It will be observed that, under the circumstances, this was a case in which the essential fact, namely, of the extent of the credit already obtained, was one peculiarly within the knowledge of the agent. If plaintiff had inquired of defendant, the principal, in person, the latter could only reply by inquiring of Pierce, and plaintiff had no other means of learning, except by an examination of Pierce's books and accounts which might easily have been misleading even if he could have obtained access to them. To the argument that no one could safely deal with the agent under such a rule, Chief Justice Shaw replied that nobody was bound to deal with him, but that if any one chose to deal with him, with this limitation in his mind, he must be deemed to deal at his own risk of the agent's honesty and not at the principal's risk.

§ 762. — Corporate agents.—A doctrine somewhat similar to that employed in the New York cases has sometimes been applied to corporations. Thus where the authority of the corporation, or of its chief officers or agents, to act in a given situation depends upon some fact or condition which concerns what may be called the internal ⁴ Mussey v. Beecher (1849), 3 Cush. (Mass.) 511. Persons who deal with an agent knowing that his authority is subject to a fixed pecuniary limit are bound by it, even though they do not actually find out what it is. Baines v. Ewing, 4 Hurl. & C. 511.

This case, however, is clearly distinguishable from Mussey v. Beecher, because here, if the third person had ascertained the limit, the act on its face would have shown that it was in violation of it.

management of the corporation, such as the passing of a certain resolution, the giving of a certain notice, the existence of a certain need or exigency and the like—matters peculiarly within the knowledge of the corporation and concerning which outsiders would ordinarily have no opportunity to know,—it is held in many cases that the undertaking to act, where the act can only be lawful and regular if the necessary condition exists, may fairly be regarded as a representation by the corporation that it does exist, and that the corporation will be estopped to deny that representation as against a third person who in good faith and the exercise of reasonable prudence has acted in reliance upon it.⁵

Unguarded statements may sometimes be found to the effect that such a principle attends all of the acts of any of the agents of a corporation.⁶ These statements doubtless mean no more than is already stated; but if they do they are certainly unsound, for, in general, the rules which govern the authority of the ordinary agents of a corporation are not different from those which apply in the case of any other principal.

§ 763. Authority of public agents must be ascertained.—This rule imposing upon third persons the duty to ascertain the condition upon which the agent's authority may be exercised, is particularly true in the case of public agents. Here the authority is usually a matter of public record or of public law of which every person interested is bound to take notice, and so far as it is so, there is no hardship in confining the scope of such an agent's authority within the limits of the express grant and necessary implication.⁷ The fact that the same act

⁵ Royal British Bank v. Turquand, 6 El. & Bl. 327; Louisville, etc., Ry. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 174 U. S. 552, 574, 43 L. Ed. 1081; Hackensack Water Co. v. DeKay, 36 N. J. Eq. 548; Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 57, 3 Am. Rep. 322.

⁶ A rather loose proposition was laid down by Swayne, J., in Merchants Bank v. State Bank, 77 U. S. (10 Wall.) 19 L. Ed. 1008, at p. 644, that "where a party deals with a corporation in good faith—the transaction is not ultra vires—and he is unaware of any defect of authority or other irregularity on the part of those acting for the corporation, and there is nothing to excite suspicion of such defect or irregularity, the corporation is bound by the contract, although such defect or irregularity in fact exists," which is certainly too wide as applied to the acts of the ordinary agents of a corporation unless the act in question be one ordinarily within the authority of such an agent as the one who assumes to act. Nevertheless it has been widely quoted. See, for example, Gano v. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co., 60 Wis. 12, s. c. 66 Wis. 1; Arnold v. National Bank of Waupaca, 126 Wis. 362, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 580.

⁷ Mayor of Baltimore v. Eschbach, 18 Md. 276, 282; Mayor of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1, 83 Am. Dec. 535; State v. Bank, 45 Mo. 528; Lee v. Munroe, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 366, 3 L. Ed. 373; Curtis v. United States, 2 Nott. & Hunt (U. S. Ct. Cl.) 144; might have bound the principal if he were a private individual is not conclusive.⁸

Thus in a case involving the validity of a contract made by the city commissioner of Baltimore, the court said: "Although a private agent acting in violation of specific instructions yet within the scope of a general authority, may bind principal, the rule as to the effect of a like act of a public agent is otherwise. The city commissioner was the public agent of a municipal corporation, clothed with duties and powers specially defined and limited by ordinances bearing the character and force of public laws, ignorance of which can be presumed in favor of no one dealing with him on matters thus conditionally within his official discretion. For this reason the law makes a distinction between the effect of the acts of an officer of a corporation and those of an agent of a principal in common cases. In the latter the extent of the authority is known only to the principal and agent, while in the former, it is a matter of record in the books of the corporation or of public law."⁹

Pierce v. United States, 1 U. S. Ct. Cl. 270; State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518; Hull v. Marshall County, 12 Iowa, 142; Silliman v. Fredericksburg, etc., R. R. Co., 27 Gratt. (Va.) 119; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666, 19 L. Ed. 169; Clark v. Des Moines, 19 Iowa, 199, 87 Am. Dec. 423; State v. Hays, 52 Mo. 578; Delaware v. State, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 192; People v. Bank, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 431, 35 Am. Dec. 634; Whiteside v. United States, 93 U. S. 247, 23 L. Ed. 882.

⁸ Mayor v. Eschbach, supra; Mayor v. Reynolds, supra.

"By the law of agency at the common law, there is this difference between individuals and the government; the former are liable to the extent of the power they have apparently given to their agents, while the government is liable only to the extent of power it has actually given to its officers." Loring, J., in Pierce v. United States, supra.

Same: State v. Des Chutes Land Co., — Or. —, 129 Pac. 764.

⁹ Mayor of Baltimore v. Eschbach, supra.

CHAPTER II

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE AUTHORITY IN GENERAL

§ 764. Purpose of this chapter.

I. WHEN AUTHORITY IS CONFERRED BY WRITING

765. Construction of writing for court.

766. Intention to govern.

767. How intention discovered—Language used.

768. Entire writing—Other writings.

769. When drawn with reference to statute, to be interpreted in light of statute.

770. Admissibility of parol evidence—To show surroundings of the parties.

771. — Latent and patent ambiguities.

772. — Identifying subject-matter.

773. — To show usage of business or of agents of a particular class.

774. — Parol evidence cannot enlarge authority.

775. — Parol evidence cannot contradict writing.

776. Effect must be given to every word and clause.

777. Transaction to be upheld rather than defeated.

778. Authority to be interpreted in light of lex loci.

779. Authority limited by ordinary meaning of words and by plain import of language.

780. General powers limited by specific object or recital.

781. Authority by joint principals usually to be exercised only in behalf of all jointly.

782. Power of attorney referring to several interests can not be applied to joint interests.

783. Power construed to apply only to principal's private business.

784. Formal powers strictly construed—Only those powers expressly given or necessarily implied.

785. Practical construction by the parties may aid.

II. WHERE AUTHORITY IS UNWRITTEN OR IMPLIED

786. Where authority is unwritten but express.

787. Where authority is unwritten but implied.

788. Authority to be construed in the light of established usages.

789. Authority carries with it every power necessary to accomplish object.

790. Implied authority not to be extended beyond its legitimate scope.

791. Implied power limited to principal's business.

III. WHERE AUTHORITY IS AMBIGUOUS.

792. Duty of principal to make his instructions clear.

793. When ambiguous, construction adopted in good faith sufficient.

§ 764. Purpose of this chapter.—An authority having been conferred and an attempt made to exercise it, it becomes important to determine whether the act assumed to be done by virtue of the given power is, in reality, embraced within it. This leads to the necessity of construction or interpretation of the authority.

In the main, the principles governing the construction of a power do not differ from those which prevail in regard to the interpretation of contracts generally. It is proposed in this chapter, to refer briefly to some of these and also to consider in full some of the more important rules that apply to it. In pursuance of this purpose the subject will, for convenience sake, be divided thus: I. When authority is conferred by written instrument. II. When authority is unwritten or arises from implication, and III. When authority is ambiguous.

I.

WHEN AUTHORITY IS CONFERRED BY WRITING.

§ 765. Construction of writing for court.—The construction or interpretation of writings is for the court. Hence where the authority is created by a written instrument, the writing must, in general, be produced, and the nature and extent of the authority thereby conferred must be determined by the court.¹

§ 766. Intention to govern.—As has been seen, agency is, in general, the creature of intention. Courts sit, not to make contracts between parties, but to construe and enforce the contracts which the parties have themselves made. The same principle applies to instruments conferring authority. Hence the first and most important rule, in the construction of writings creating an authority, is to ascertain what authority the parties intended to create, and to give that intention effect,² provided it can be done consistently with the language used. But even though the intention to convey a certain power may be clear, the court can not read it into the instrument where the plain and unambiguous language used will not support it.³

§ 767. How intention discovered—Language used.—The intention of the parties is primarily to be determined from the language

¹ Savings Fund Society v. Savings Bank, 36 Pa. 498, 78 Am. Dec. 390; Keating Implement Co. v. Terre Haute Carriage Co., 11 Tex. Civ. App. 216; Tarbox v. Cruzen, 68 Minn. 44; White v. Furgeson, 29 Ind. App. 144; Petteway v. McIntyre, 131 N. C. 432.

² Marr v. Given, 23 Me. 55, 39 Am.

Dec. 600; Vanada v. Hopkins, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 285, 19 Am. Dec. 92; Commonwealth v. Hawkins, 83 Ky. 246; White v. Furgeson, 29 Ind. App. 144; McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457.

³ Minnesota Stoneware Co. v. McCrossen, 110 Wis. 316, 84 Am. St. R. 927.

used by them. And as a mistake of law does not ordinarily constitute a valid objection, parties cannot usually be heard to complain that they did not contemplate the legal effect of the language which they have deliberately chosen.⁴

§ 768. Entire writing—Other writings.—In this, as in other cases, the intention is to be gathered from the whole instrument, whether it be made up of one piece of paper or of many, provided that the several papers are either so physically attached, or so connected by reference, or so obviously relating to the same subject, that they must all be read together.⁵ However much the agent might be bound by them, a third party dealing with the agent in good faith, and in the exercise of reasonable prudence, in reliance upon an apparently complete document, could not be bound by limitations contained in other writings of which he had no notice.⁶

§ 769. When drawn with reference to statute, to be interpreted in light of statute.—Where the authority is given to do some act provided for by a statute, or is otherwise related to the terms or purposes of the statute, the language and object of the statute are to be taken into account in determining the intent and the extent of the power.⁷

§ 770. Admissibility of parol evidence.—To show surroundings of the parties.—And so, in doubtful cases, resort must be had to evidence of the situation, surroundings, and relations of the parties; for though the writing cannot, in general, be contradicted by oral evidence,

⁴ Hunt v. Rousmanier, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 1, 7 L. Ed. 27; Holmes v. Hall, 8 Mich. 66, 77 Am. Dec. 444.

⁵ Mexican National Coal Co. v. Frank, 154 Fed. 217 (power of attorney and contemporaneous letter); McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457.

⁶ In Farrington v. Hayes, 65 Vt. 153, a principal telegraphed B, his agent to "Employ Farrington & Post. Letter will follow." B showed the telegram to the plaintiffs and employed them. Plaintiffs did not inquire for the letter or see it; the letter contained limitations as to compensation. It was held that the telegram was sufficient authority for plaintiffs retainer, and that as reasonable business men the plaintiffs were not put on inquiry as to the terms of the letter. To same effect on facts practically identical is Haubelt v. Rea & Page Mill Co., 77 Mo. App. 672. But in Butler v. Standard Guaranty Co., 122 Ga. 371, a party dealing with an agent was held bound by limitations upon the agent's authority printed on the back of the contract made with him.

⁷ McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457.

Authority to sign "any and all remonstrance or remonstrances" against granting licenses for the sale of liquor is a continuing power and will justify signing a remonstrance against a renewal as well as in the first instance. McClanahan v. Breeding, supra; White v. Furgeson, 29 Ind. App. 144.

yet the circumstances may properly be used as aids, and, by putting the court more or less fully into the exact situation of the parties, to enable it to see the subject-matter as they saw it.

§ 771. ——— Latent and patent ambiguities.—In the same manner, an ambiguity or uncertainty not arising upon the face of the instrument, may be explained by parol.⁸ Where, however, the ambiguity is in the writing itself, resort cannot thus be had to the aid of parol explanation.⁹

§ 772. ——— Identifying subject-matter.—If the subject-matter be not identified with sufficient certainty, parol evidence may be allowed to apply the description and identify the thing intended.¹⁰

But this would not ordinarily be true where there is an entire absence of any description whatever.¹¹ There is then nothing to apply.

§ 773. ——— To show usages of business or of agents of a particular class.—In as much as authority is ordinarily to be exercised in conformity with the established usages of business or of particular classes of agents, and may usually be supposed to have been conferred with such usages in view, parol evidence of these usages would ordinarily be admissible, not for the purpose of adding to or altering the writing, but for the purpose of showing the situation with reference to which the language used is to be interpreted.¹²

§ 774. ——— Parol evidence cannot enlarge authority.—In general, parol evidence is not admissible for the purpose of enlarging or extending the powers conferred by the written instrument, and the nature and extent of the authority must be ascertained from the instru-

⁸ Bishop on Contracts, § 374.

⁹ Idem, § 375.

¹⁰ Pope v. Machias, etc., Co., 52 Me. 535; Norris v. Spofford, 127 Mass. 85; Linton v. Moorhead, 209 Pa. 646; Janney v. Robbins, 141 N. C. 400; Rownd v. Davidson, 113 La. 1047; McDonald v. Hanks, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 140.

¹¹ A power to sell land which contains no description is void, at least in the absence of some showing that the land claimed was the only land the maker owned. Stafford v. Lick, 13 Cal. 240. In Ashley v. Bird, 1 Mo. 640, 14 Am. Dec. 313 the power ran "to act in all my business, as if I was present myself, and to stand good in law in all my land and other business in the Missouri Territory." Said the court: "We are entirely at a loss to know what effect this power of attorney is to have. Shall we say that this gives any power to sell land, or to make any covenant for the sale of land? The power does not give the least hint as to what this business is. Shall we guess at it? If the court should undertake to guess, we might entirely fail. There is such a thing as a power of attorney being void for uncertainty, and this one is nearly so." And they held it gave no authority to sell lands though it might, perhaps, give authority to pay taxes and take possession of land.

¹² See Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296.

ment itself.¹³ But, except where writing is indispensable, the principal may, notwithstanding this general rule, expressly extend or change the agent's powers by parol; or he may hold the agent out as possessing greater powers than those conferred by the writing; or he may so conduct himself as to be estopped from asserting that they were not greater.¹⁴

§ 775. — Parol evidence cannot contradict writing—Parol limitations on written powers.—It is also a familiar rule that, in the absence of fraud or mistake, parol evidence cannot be admitted for the purpose of varying or contradicting the written instrument.¹⁵ This rule however, in its application to the law of agency, is substantially the same as the preceding, and is subject to the same exceptions.

So also secret reservations, qualifications or conditions cannot be set up to affect apparently unlimited powers conferred by the instrument.¹⁶

¹³ Ashley v. Bird, 1 Mo. 640, 14 Am. Dec. 313; State v. Bank, 45 Mo. 528; Mechanics' Bank v. Schaumburg, 38 Mo. 228; Pile v. Bright, 156 Mo. App. 301.

Where a power is "plain and unambiguous," parol evidence of its purpose or meaning is inadmissible. Rogers v. Tompkins (Tex. Civ. App.), 87 S. W. 379.

A power of attorney, in plain terms, "to sell and convey" lands, can not, upon parol proof of intention, be construed to authorize a mortgage. Minnesota Stoneware Co. v. McCrossen, 110 Wis. 316, 84 Am. St. R. 927.

¹⁴ Hartford Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 57 Ill. 180; Williams v. Cochran, 7 Rich. (S. C.) 45; Coleman v. National Bank, 53 N. Y. 388.

¹⁵ Bishop on Contracts, § 169. In Plano Co. v. Eich (Iowa), 97 N. W. 1106, an action by the principal against the agent, it was held that parol evidence was inadmissible on behalf of the agent to prove that the principal consented to accept three notes in payment, when the written authority provided for an acceptance of but two. (See also Superior Drill Co. v. Carpenter, 150 Mich. 262.)

In an action by an agent against his principal for commissions for services performed under a written contract parol evidence of different terms agreed upon at the time of the execution of the contract is not admissible. Loxley v. Studebaker, 75 N. J. L. 599; McFadden v. Pyne, 46 Col. 319. See also Welke v. Wacker-shauser, 143 Iowa, 107.

In Haas v. Malto-Grapo Co., 148 Mich. 358, it was held that letters antedating and leading up to the execution of a written contract are inadmissible to vary its terms.

In Alvord v. Cook, 174 Mass. 120, parol evidence was held admissible to show the situation of the parties at the time the writing was made, in order to aid in its interpretation, but not admissible to enlarge, vary or contradict the writing itself.

¹⁶ See Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 413; Kilpatrick v. Wiley, 197 Mo. 123; Furnace Run, etc., Lumber Co. v. Heller, 84 Ohio St. 201 (where the court said: "Certainly the plaintiffs in error are estopped to assert a limitation upon the written authority with which they clothed their agent, by proof of a parol understanding neither carried into the § 776. Effect must be given to every word and clause.—Wherever it is possible, effect is to be given to every word and clause used by the parties. It is to be presumed that the parties used the word or clause with some purpose, and that purpose is, if possible, to be ascertained and enforced.¹⁷

The mere fact that powers conferred are wide, or are subject to abuse, is no ground for not sustaining them, if they have clearly been conferred.¹⁸

§ 777. Transaction to be upheld rather than defeated.—So the intention of the parties is to be sustained rather than defeated if it can be done consistently with sound rules of construction.¹⁹ If the writing be open to two reasonable constructions, one of which would uphold while the other would overthrow the contract, the former is, where possible without extending the scope of the power, to be chosen.²⁰ So if by one construction the contract would be illegal, and by another equally permissible construction it would be lawful, the latter is always to be chosen, as it will not be presumed that the parties intended to violate the law.²¹

So, in accordance with well settled rules, if the authority will justify the performance of a portion of an act but not the whole of it, and if the authorized portion can be separated from the residue, and given an effect consistent with the principal's purpose, that much will ordinarily be allowed to stand. So, if there be an excessive execution, but the excess can be severed from the residue, and there will then be left a proper execution of the power, that will be done.²² And so, although the principal has attempted to authorize more, if execution instrument, nor communicated to one who relied upon it").

¹⁷ McClanahan v. Breeding, 172 Ind. 457.

¹⁸ Daughters of Amer. Revolution v. Schenley, 204 Pa. 584.

¹⁹ Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 606, 22 L. Ed. 187.

But of two constructions, one of which enlarges the power and the other of which confines it strictly to the powers conferred and those necessarily to be implied, the latter is to be adopted. Stokes v. Dewees, 24 Pa. Super. 471.

²⁰ Muth v. Goddard, 28 Mont. 237, 98 Am. St. Rep. 553; Hemstreet v. Burdick, 90 Ill. 444; Wapples-Plat- ter Grocer Co. v. Kinkaid, 86 Kan. 167. In the Illinois case, it is said: "But it is said the power must be strictly construed. This may be true, but it does not require that it shall be so construed as to defeat the intention of the parties. Where the intention fairly appears from the language employed, that intention must control. A strained construction should never be given to defeat that intention, nor to embrace in the power what was not intended by the parties."

²¹ Bishop on Contracts, §§ 391, 392.

²² Commonwealth v. Hawkins, 83 Ky. 246.

to the full extent contemplated is found to be impossible or unjustified, an act less than full execution, but within the general act contemplated and consistent with the principal's purpose, may be allowed to stand.²³

§ 778. Authority to be interpreted in light of lex loci.—With respect of the construction of powers of attorney, it must be assumed, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention, that the parties intended the power to be construed in accordance with the law under which it was made and with which they were presumptively familiar.²⁴ Where the authority is to be executed under a different law or where it is to deal with immovable property in another jurisdiction, the law of that place may be deemed to have been intended.²⁵ With respect of shipmasters, the general rule seems to be that the extent of the master's authority is to be determined by the law of the country to which the ship belongs, of which country the ship's flag is deemed to give notice.²⁶

With respect of the manner of execution every authority given to an agent to transact business for his principal, must, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intent, be construed to empower him to transact it according to the laws of the place where it is to be done, of which laws the principal is presumed to have knowledge.²⁷

§ 779. Authority limited by ordinary meaning of words and by plain import of language.—Formal instruments conferring power are, as will be seen, ordinarily, subject to a strict construction.²⁸ Words used will be presumed to have their ordinary meaning, and the authority itself will be confined to the plain import of the language, and will not be extended by mere construction to embrace that which is not fairly included within the terms of the instrument.²⁹

²³ Thus a power of attorney to make a conveyance of realty, but defective because of improper acknowledgment, may be upheld to the extent of authorizing the agent to make an executory contract and to receive the purchase price. Joseph v. Fisher, 122 Ind. 399.

²⁴ See Hastings v. Hopkinson, 28 Vt. 108; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 24, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Chatenay v. Brazilian Telegraph Co., [1891] 1 Q. B. 79; In re Cunningham, 36 Ch. Div. 532; Kerslake v. Clark, More's Notes 6.

See also Bar's Private International Law, (2d Ed.) 591; Savigny's

Private International Law, (2d Ed.) 234.

²⁵ Morris v. Linton, 61 Neb. 537; Linton v. Moorhead, 209 Pa. 646.

²⁶ See Pope v. Nickerson, Fed. Cas. No. 11,274, 3 Story, 465; Lloyd v. Guibert, 6 B. & S. 100; The Karnak, L. R. 2 P. C. 505; The Gaetana, 7 P. Div. 137; The August, [1891] P. Div. 328.

²⁷ Owings v. Hull, 9 Peters (U. S.), 607, 9 L. Ed. 246.

²⁸ See post, § 784.

²⁹ Porges v. United States Mortgage Co., 203 N. Y. 181; Henry v. Lane, 62 C. C. A. 625, 128 Fed. 243; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84

§ 780. General powers limited by specific object or recital.—The meaning of general words used in the instrument must be construed with reference to the specific object to be accomplished and be limited by the recitals made in reference to such object.³⁰ Thus, in a case already referred to, the recital by the principal in the preamble of the power of attorney, that he designed appointing an agent to act for him during his absence from England, was held to limit the general words used in the appointing part of the instrument to the period of his ab-

Am. Dec. 611; Skaggs v. Murchison, 63 Tex. 348; Wynne v. Parke, 89 Tex. 413; Skirvin v. O'Brien, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1; Frost v. Erath Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831; Gouldy v. Metcalf, 75 Tex. 455, 16 Am. St. R. 912; Baker v. Baird, 79 Mich. 255; Golinsky v. Al-lison, 114 Cal. 458.

In Porges v. United States Mortgage Co., supra, the court said: "The power of attorney, like any other contract, is to be construed according to the natural meaning of the words in view of the purpose of the agency and the needs to its fulfillment. The authority within it under such construction is not to be broadened or extended and the sole right of a court is to ascertain, through the rule stated, and apply the authority. The extent to which a principal shall authorize his agent is completely within his determination, and a party dealing with the agent must ascertain the scope and reach of the powers delegated to him and must abide by the consequences if he transcends them."

³⁰ Rountree v. Denson, 59 Wis. 522; Berry v. Harnage, 39 Tex. 638; Coquillard v. French, 19 Ind. 274; Hodge v. Combs, 1 Black (U. S.), 192, 17 L. Ed. 157; Frost v. Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831; Reynolds v. Rowley, 4 La. Ann. 396; Taylor v. Burns, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. Ed. 116; Mexican National Coal Co. v. Frank, 154 Fed. 217; First National Bank v. Kirkby, 43 Fla. 376; Perry v. Holl, 2 DeGex, F. & J. 48; Esdaile v. La Nauze, 1 Y. & C. 394;

Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278; Geiger v. Bolles, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 129.

In White v. Young, 122 Ga. 830, 51 S. E. 28, it was held that a power of attorney authorizing the agent to institute suits for the recovery of certain land did not authorize him to take steps to defend suits in relation to the same land. "This was a formal power of attorney, apparently deliberately executed, attested and recorded. It will therefore be strictly construed in view of the controlling purpose; and the addition of general words will not be construed to extend the authority, so as to add new and distinct powers different from those expressly delegated." In Welch v. McKenzie, 66 Ark. 251, a general power of attorney, given by a widow, "to represent me and my interest in the estate of my late husband," was held not to authorize the agent to relinquish dower in lands her husband had conveyed in his lifetime. In Harrison v. Magoon, 14 Hawaiian, 418, a general power to act "in all matters connected with" a certain partnership business, was held not to authorize the formation of a new partnership including the old and new members. In Jacobs v. Morris, [1901] 1 Ch. 261, a power of attorney in very general terms to act with reference to purchases, and giving wide authority to execute bills, notes, etc., was held to be confined to such bills, etc., as might be made in purchasing, and not to warrant the borrowing of money.

sence.³¹ So where an agent was appointed to accomplish the adjustment of his principal's affairs in the state of New York, and the instrument concluded with a general authority "to do any and every act in his name which he could do in person," it was held that this broad general power must be limited to the doing of those acts only which were contemplated by the specific object of the appointment.³² And a power of attorney granting authority to the agent to ask, demand and receive of a debtor all money due from him to the principal, will be limited to this specific object, although it also confers in general terms power "to transact all business;" the words "all business" must be confined to business necessary for the receipt of the money.³³

§ 781. Authority by joint principals, usually to be exercised only in behalf of all jointly.—As has already been seen in a preceding section,³⁴ an authority conferred by two or more principals jointly is usually deemed to be one to be exercised only in the name of all jointly, and with reference to property or other interest in which they are jointly interested. Thus a power of attorney to convey lands, executed by two or more jointly, is usually deemed to be confined in its operation to lands in which they are jointly interested, and does not justify the conveyance of lands belonging to one of them only.³⁵

Where husband and wife join in the execution of a power of attorney, the wife apparently joining for the purpose of authorizing the release of her dower interest, the case falls within this rule and a conveyance of the husband's land, in which the wife has a dower interest, is justified.³⁶

³¹ Danby v. Coutts, L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 500. But this case was distinguished in Fell v. Puponga Coal Co., 24 New Zeal. 758, where the grantor in a power of attorney recited that he was about to leave the colony, and was desirous of appointing an agent to act for him in relation to certain affairs, but did not state that such agent was to act only in his absence.

³² Rossiter v. Rossiter, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 494, 24 Am. Dec. 62.

³³ Hay v. Goldsmidt, cited in Hogg v. Snaith, 1 Taunt. 349.

³⁴ Ante, § 194.

³⁵ See Gilbert v. How, 45 Minn. 121, 22 Am. St. R. 724 (where the power of attorney gave authority to sell all lands "to which we are or may be in any way entitled or interested" and "for us and in our names" to execute and deliver deeds, it was held that no authority was conferred to deal with land owned by either principal separately); Dodge v. Hopkins, 14 Wis. 630 (where husband and wife gave a power to sell "our right" in any land, particularly certain lots "conveyed to us," and the agent sold land belonging to the husband, the contract was held invalid in the absence of any evidence "that there was no joint estate to which the letter of attorney could be applied").

³⁶ Tuman v. Pillsbury, 60 Minn. 520 (where the power referred to

Such a power of attorney would not however authorize the conveyance of land which the wife owned alone.³⁷ But where a statute requires the husband to join in a deed of the wife's land, and he joins in a power of attorney, apparently for that reason, authority is conferred to sell her land, in which he has no interest, and to sign his name to the deed.³⁸

§ 782. Power of attorney referring to several interests can not be applied to joint interests.—On the other hand, it has been held that a power of attorney, in which a single principal authorizes an agent in terms to deal with his interest, must, unless there is something to indicate a wider scope, be deemed to refer to his separate and individual interest only.³⁹ Thus it is stated as the general rule that "where in powers, covenants, releases, or other contracts, a several interest is alone expressed and referred to, no general terms will allow the meaning to be extended to a joint interest."⁴⁰ land which "we may hereafter acquire" or become "in any way interested" under act of congress granting homesteads to soldiers); Snell v. Weyerhauser, 71 Minn. 57 (a similar power); Finnegan v. Brown, 90 Minn. 396 (certain land, described as in "our possession," owned by husband as homestead, and also a similar homestead conveyed under joint authority from husband and wife to sell land which should come into "his possession"); Platt v. Finck, 60 N. Y. App. Div. 312 (where the power was to "our attorney" to sell and convey "my real or personal property," giving deeds "in our names," and there was no evidence that the wife had any interest except her dower rights in any property such as was described).

But in Holladay v. Daily, 86 U. S. (19 Wall.) 606, 22 L. Ed. 187, where the wife had no dower, owing to a peculiar statute, it was held that a power, specifically referring to land vested in the husband, authorized a sale of his separate interest notwithstanding that the authority read from husband and wife to "our agent."

³⁷ Roy v. Harrison Iron Mining Co., 113 Minn. 143, in which case the husband and wife "have appointed * * * attorney for me * * * [to sell land] which I now own" and it appeared that only the wife owned any land. The trial court considered this to be "the ordinary case of a married woman joining with her husband in the execution of an instrument affecting his lands and her dower interest therein" and a deed of her land was held invalid.

³⁸ Ellison v. Branstrator, 153 Ind. 146, where a deed of the wife's land, made under a joint power, was considered in equity to be valid under the statute, in spite of the neglect of the agent to sign for the husband.

³⁹ Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281, 62 Am. Dec. 648.

⁴⁰ Johnston v. Wright, 6 Cal. 373 (release of rent due to tenants in common, executed under power referring to debts "due to me"). In Attwood v. Munnings, 7 Barn. & Cres. 278, 1 M. & R. 66, there was a power of attorney by the principal to accept bills "for him and on his behalf," which should be drawn "by his agents or correspondents." The bills in question had been drawn by

So, where authority is separately conferred upon the same agent by several principals having distinct interests, the agent would not ordinarily be justified in binding them by a joint obligation, and thus make one liable for the performance of the others.⁴¹

§ 783. Power construed to apply only to principal's private business.—A power of attorney given to an agent to act in the name and on behalf of his principal, though couched in general language, must, in the absence of anything showing a contrary intent, be construed as giving authority to act only in the separate, individual business of the principal and for his benefit. It cannot be construed as permitting the agent to engage in transactions foreign or repugnant to that business, or to bind the principal by acts done not for his benefit and in his behalf, but for the private benefit of the agent himself or of third persons.⁴² his partner and were drawn to take up other bills, the proceeds of which had been applied to the partnership debts. It was held that there was no authority to accept these bills, both because the bills had been drawn by a partner, not by an agent or correspondent, and because they were for the benefit of the partnership. Bayley, J., said, "The power gave an express authority to accept bills for the defendant and on his behalf. No such power was requisite as to partnership transactions, for the other partners might bind the firm by their acceptance. The words, therefore, must be confined to that which is their obvious meaning."

⁴¹ Servant v. McCampbell, 46 Colo. 292 (several stockholders authorizing same agent to sell stock of each). Where each of several tenants in common makes a power of attorney to the same agent to sell his interest, and, if he takes a note for him for part of the purchase price, to endorse and sell it; and the agent takes a note payable to them all jointly, he is not authorized to endorse it by them all jointly. Harris v. Johnston, 54 Minn. 177, 40 Am. St. R. 312. See also, The Guiding Star, 10 C. C. A. 454, 62 Fed. 407, where the masters of several vessels attempted to authorize one agent to bind them by joint bills of lading. Held, that he could not create a joint maritime lien without regard to whether one or the other carried the goods.

⁴² Platt v. Francis, — Mo. —, 152 S. W. 332; Lewis v. Lewis, 203 Pa. 194; Stainback v. Read, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 281, 62 Am. Dec. 648; North River Bank v. Aymar, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 262; Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800, 42 Am. Dec. 612; Wallace v. Branch Bank, 1 Ala. 565; Adams Express Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; Gulick v. Grover, 33 N. J. L. 463, 97 Am. Dec. 728; Camden Safe Dep. Co. v. Abbott, 44 N. J. L. 257; Sewanee Mining Co. v. McCall, 3 Head (Tenn.), 619; Hazeltine v. Miller, 44 Me. 177; Robertson v. Levy, 19 La. Ann. 327; Bank of Hamburg v. Johnson, 3 Rich. (S. C.) L. 42; Attwood v. Munings, 7 Barn. & Cres. 278.

In Muth v. Goddard, 28 Mont. 237, 98 Am. St. R. 553, one C, expecting to be absent during the winter had given to his son a power of attorney in very comprehensive terms, authorizing among other things the execution of notes and mortgages. Nine years later, while the principal was in his last illness, the affairs of § 784. Formal powers strictly construed.—Only those powers expressly given or necessarily implied.—Formal instruments conferring authority will be strictly construed⁴³ and can be held to include only those powers which are expressly given and those which are necessary, essential and proper to carry out those expressly given.⁴⁴ It will indeed be presumed that the principal in conferring a power, intended to confer with it the right to do those things without which the object contemplated could not be accomplished, but beyond this the authority will not be extended by construction. The principle is analogous to the one which applies to the powers of corporations, i. e. those powers only which are expressly given or which arise from necessary implication. The rule has been thus stated by a learned judge:—"A formal instrument delegating powers is ordinarily subjected to strict interpretation, and the authority is not extended beyond that which is given in terms, or which is necessary to carry into effect that which is expressly given. They are not subject to that liberal interpretation which is given to less formal instruments, as letters of instruction, etc. in commercial transactions which are interpreted most strongly against the writer, especially when they are susceptible of two interpretations, and the agent has acted in good faith upon one of such interpretations."⁴⁵

a partnership of which he and one R were members, became involved, a creditor of the firm demanded immediate adjustment, and threatened immediate attachment of C's property. In order to meet this demand, notes for the amount due were executed in the firm name, and endorsed by the son under this power of attorney, and the son as such agent made a deed of trust of his father's land to secure the notes. At substantially the same time the other partner, R, made an assignment of all of his interest in the property of the firm to C, which assignment was accepted by the son as agent for his father, this, however without any assumption of the debt by C. In an action after C's death to restrain an enforcement of the deed of trust, it was held that this exercise of the power by the son did not conflict with the principle stated in this section. The court distinguished the present case from that of Attwood v. Munnings, resting its finding on the practical emergency in which the agent found his principal involved, and said: "Such action [immediate attachment] might have entailed great loss upon the solvent partner, Clarke; and it appears that this state of affairs would inevitably have resulted, had it not been for the prompt action of Clarke's attorney in fact, and, under these circumstances, it seems clear, that he acted for his principal's use and benefit."

⁴³ Mexican, etc., Iron Co. v. Frank, 154 Fed. 217; Welch v. McKenzie, 66 Ark. 251; White v. Young, 122 Ga. 830; Young v. Harbor Point Club House Ass'n, 99 Ill. App. 290; Penfold v. Warner, 96 Mich. 179, 35 Am. St. Rep. 591; Kuite v. Lage, 152 Mich. 638; Gilbert v. How, 45 Minn. 121, 22 Am. St. Rep. 724; Coulter v. Portland Trust Co., 20 Oreg. 469; Campbell v. Foster Home Ass'n, 163 Pa. 609, 40 Am. St. R. 818, 26 L. R. A. 117; Wilson v. Wilson-Rogers, 181 Pa. 80; Union Trust Co. v. Means, 201 Pa. 374; MacDonald v. O'Neil, 21 Pa. Sup. Ct. 364; Califf v. First Nat. Bank, 37 Pa. Sup. Ct. 412; Frost v. Erath Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831; Skirvin v. O'Brien, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1; Teagarden v. Patten, 48 Tex. Civ. App. 571; Hotchkiss v. Middlekauf, 96 Va. 649, 43 L. R. A. 806; Winfree v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Va. 83; Bowles v. Rice, 107 Va. 51; Dimmick v. Sprinkel, 59 Wash. 329.

⁴⁴ Vanada v. Hopkins, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 285, 19 Am. Dec. 92; Wood v. Goodridge, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 117, 52 Am. Dec. 771; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Craighead v. Peterson, 72 N. Y. 279, 28 Am. Rep. 150; Franklin v. Ezell, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 497; Strong v. Stewart, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137; Farrar v. Duncan, 29 La. Ann. 126; McAlpin v. Cassidy, 17 Tex. 449; Mechanics' Bank v. Schaumburg, 38 Mo. 228.

§ 785. Practical construction by the parties may aid.—Even though authority be conferred by written instrument, its meaning may often be made more clear by showing what the parties have uniformly recognized as acts properly falling within it. Where, though the authority was conferred by writing, an oral authorization would have sufficed, the field for the application of this rule is wider, for conduct may often serve to show an enlarged authority, as has been already seen. But even where writing is required, a long practical construction may serve to aid in the interpretation of the language, though of course not to so change it that it can no longer be deemed to be an authority in writing.

II.

WHERE AUTHORITY IS UNWRITTEN OR IMPLIED.

§ 786. Where authority is unwritten but express.—Where the authority, though not conferred by written instrument, is express and limited, it is, so far as the meaning of the words is concerned, subject to the same general rules of construction that apply to a written power. When not so expressly limited, a more liberal rule of construction applies than in those cases wherein the authority is conferred by a formal instrument in writing. The rules, however, which are based merely upon the fact that the instrument is in writing, would have no application here.

⁴⁵ Craighead v. Peterson, supra; cited and followed in Porges v. United States Mortgage Co., 203 N. Y. 181.

Informal documents, like letters, are more liberally construed. American Bonding Co. v. Ensey, 105 Md. 211, 11 Ann. Cas. 883.

§ 787. Where authority is unwritten but implied.—As has been seen, a large part of the authority exercised in the modern business world is not expressly conferred, but arises from the conduct and relations of the parties. Some of the rules which govern in determining whether an agency has been created or not, have heretofore been referred to. When it has been found that an agency has been so created, it then becomes as necessary to rightly interpret the authority so conferred, as in those cases in which it is evidenced by a written instrument. And in general the same rules apply. But it is obvious from the very nature of the case that greater liberality of construction may often be indulged in. If the principal desires to set exact and definite limits to the authority, he may do so by conferring it only by express and definite action; but where he leaves it to be inferred from his conduct, he cannot complain if the rules of interpretation applied are more flexible than might have governed had the authority been express.

If from his neglect to make the limits certain, it is difficult to determine exactly along what lines they lie, it is but just to innocent persons who may be misled thereby, to give them the benefit of the doubt, and construe the authority most strictly against him.

§ 788. Authority to be construed in the light of established usages. In determining the extent of the authority of the agent, it is often necessary and proper to take into account the usages and customs prevailing in similar cases. Mere usage, of course, does not of itself confer power, nor can usage contravene express terms; but where authority is given, either expressly or by implication, to do an act of a certain sort, it is frequently necessary to determine what are the limits of the act so authorized. In such a case, a determination of what is usually, ordinarily or by the established custom deemed to be a part of such an act, is directly pertinent in deciding what was the scope of the authority conferred in the case at hand.⁴⁶ The doctrine is one of ⁴⁶ See Keith v. Atkinson, 48 Colo. 480, 139 Am. St. R. 284 (a traveler who goes to an hotel has the right to assume, until notified to the contrary, that the clerk and bell boys have the authority usually exercised by such employees at similar hotels, and may prove such usage in order to enforce liability for loss of baggage having given his check to a bell boy to be delivered to the clerk in order that the latter might cause the baggage to be delivered at the hotel); Lauchheimer v. Jacobs, 126 Ga. 261 (proof of custom was held admissible to show that a traveling salesman, at the close of a season, has implied authority to sell his samples); Gould v. Cates Chair Co., 147 Ala. 629 (authority to take orders, subject to confirmation, could not be enlarged by proof of a custom in Alabama, the principal residing in North Carolina; nor by wide application. In determining the authority of a partner, for example, it is often necessary to determine the "scope" of the business carried on. By "scope," in that case and in this, is meant the range of such a business as ordinarily carried on at that time and place.

Moreover, not only the general usages prevailing in similar cases may be thus used, but also the established and customary method, if any, of dealing between the particular parties. Thus a recognized course of dealing may determine, as to other like cases between the same parties, how the authority in the given case is to be construed.⁴⁷

It is, of course, true that, notwithstanding the existence of such a general or particular custom or course of dealing, the parties may, in the particular case, have attempted to exclude its operation; and such an exclusion will be effective as between the parties themselves and those having knowledge of the facts; but, as has been often pointed out, secret limitations upon established methods of procedure are not effective against those who deal in ignorance of them.

It will be obvious that the question here is not the same as that considered in the following section. Here the question is, what was the authority conferred; in the next section, how wide a range of means for executing that authority will be permissible.

§ 789. Authority carries with it every power necessary and proper to accomplish object.—As has already been pointed out, every delegation of authority, whether it be general or special, express or implied, unless the contrary be made known, carries with it, as an incident, the power to do all those acts, naturally and ordinarily done in such cases, and which are necessary and proper to be done in the case in hand in order to effectuate the purpose for which the authority in question was created. It embraces all the necessary and appropriate means to accomplish the desired end. This principle is founded on the manifest intention of the party creating such authority and is in furtherance of such intention.⁴⁸ proof of a custom prevailing simply among agents. The custom must in some way have been brought home to the principal); Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 147 Cal. 393 ("Where an agent is expressly authorized to deliver deeds absolute on their face as security for his own indebtedness, as is admitted here, and no express limitation is placed upon him as to the particular indebtedness to be secured thereby, as the court was at liberty to conclude was the case here, any arrangement as to amount, terms, and character of his indebtedness to be secured which under the circumstances existing would not be unreasonable would appear to be within the authority conferred"). See also Hopkins v. Armour, 8 Ga. App. 442.

⁴⁷ See ante, § 716.

⁴⁸ LeRoy v. Beard, 8 How. (U. S.) 451, 12 L. Ed. 1151; National Bank

§ 790. Implied authority not to be extended beyond its legitimate scope.—But while, as has been seen, authority is often to be implied from the conduct of the parties, yet, as has often been pointed out, it is a necessary and logical limitation upon the construction of such an authority, that the power implied shall not be greater than that fairly and legitimately warranted by the facts. The reason of this rule is so apparent and so just that it needs no argument to support it.

If the authority arises by implication from acts done by the agent with the tacit consent or acquiescence of the principal, it is to be limited in its scope to acts of a like nature; if it arises from the general habits of dealing between the parties it must be confined in its operation to dealings of the same kind; if it arises from the previous employment of the agent in a particular business, it is, in like manner, to be limited to that particular business. In other words, an implied agency is not to be extended by construction beyond the obvious purpose for which it is apparently created.⁴⁹

§ 791. Implied power limited to principal's business.—So, too, where authority is implied, as well as where it is express, it is to be construed as conferring authority to act only in the separate, individual business of the principal and for his benefit unless there be something to give it a wider scope, as stated in a previous section.⁵⁰

v. Old Town Bank, 50 C. C. A. 443, 112 Fed. 726; Roach v. Rector, 93 Ark. 521; St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Jones, 96 Ark. 58; Benjamin v. Benjamin, 15 Conn. 347, 39 Am. Dec. 384; Kearns v. Nickse, 80 Conn. 23, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1118, 10 Ann. Cas. 420; Bass Dry Goods Co. v. Granite City Mfg. Co., 119 Ga. 124; McDonald v. Pearre Bros., 5 Ga. App. 130; Halladay v. Underwood, 90 Ill. App. 130; Shackman v. Little, 87 Ind. 181; Hardee v. Hall, 12 Bush (Ky.), 327; Joyce v. Duplessis, 15 La. Ann. 242, 77 Am. Dec. 185; Farrar v. Duncan, 29 La. Ann. 126; Star Line v. Van Vliet, 43 Mich. 364; Despatch Printing Co. v. Bank, 109 Minn. 440; Hackett v. Van

Frank, 105 Mo. App. 384; Murphy v. Knights, 155 Mo. App. 649; Huntley v. Mathias, 90 N. C. 101, 47 Am. Rep. 516; Craighead v. Peterson, 72 N. Y. 279, 28 Am. Rep. 150; Benninghoff v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 93 N. Y. 495; Ricker National Bank v. Stone, 21 Okl. 833; Lauer Brewing Co. v. Schmidt, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 396; Macke v. Camps, 7 Philip. 553; Boyd v. Satterwhite, 10 S. C. 45; McAlpin v. Cassidy, 17 Tex. 449; Birge-Forbes Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 53 Tex. Civ. App. 55.

⁴⁹ McAlpin v. Cassidy, 17 Tex. 449; Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66, see ante, § 273.

⁵⁰ Ante, § 783.

III.

WHERE AUTHORITY IS AMBIGUOUS.

§ 792. Duty of principal to make his instructions clear.—It is the duty of the principal, if he desires an authority to be executed in a particular manner, to make his terms so clear and unambiguous that they cannot reasonably be misconstrued. If he does this, it is the agent's duty to the principal to execute the authority strictly and faithfully; and third persons who know of the limitations, or who from the circumstances of the case ought to have known of them, can claim no rights against the principal based upon their violation.⁵¹

§ 793. When ambiguous, construction adopted in good faith, sufficient.—But if, on the other hand, the authority be couched in such uncertain terms as to be reasonably susceptible of two different meanings, and the agent in good faith and without negligence adopts one of them, the principal cannot be heard to assert, either as against the agent or against third persons who have, in like good faith and without negligence, relied upon the same construction, that he intended the authority to be executed in accordance with the other interpretation.⁵² If in such a case, the agent exercises his best judgment and an honest discretion, he fulfills his duty, and though a loss ensues, it cannot be cast upon the agent.⁵³

An instrument conferring authority is generally, it is said, to be construed by those having occasion to act in reference to it, "as a plain man, acquainted with the object in view, and attending reasonably to the language used, has in fact construed it. He is not bound to take the opinion of a lawyer concerning the meaning of a word not technical and apparently employed in a popular sense."⁵⁴

⁵¹ See ante, §§ 751, 752.

⁵² Ireland v. Livingston, L. R. 5 H. L. 395; Falsken v. Falls City Bank, 71 Neb. 29; Anderson v. First Nat. Bank, 4 N. D. 182; Oxford Lake Line v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Fla. 349; Berry v. Haldeman, 111 Mich. 667; Hopwood v. Corbin, 63 Iowa, 218.

⁵³ Bessent v. Harris, 63 N. C. 542; National Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 91 U. S. 92, 104, 23 L. Ed. 208; LeRoy v. Beard, 8 How. (U. S.) 451, 12 L. Ed. 1151; Very v. Levy, 13 How. (U. S.) 345, 14 L. Ed. 173; Marsh v.

Whitemore, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 178; Loraine v. Cartwright, Fed. Cas. No. 8,500, 3 Wash. (U. S. C. C.) 151; DeTastett v. Crousillat, Fed. Cas. No. 3,828, 2 Wash. (U. S. C. C.) 132; Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 13; Foster v. Rockwell, 104 Mass. 167; Long v. Pool, 68 N. C. 479; Shelton v. Merchants' Dispatch Transportation Co., 59 N. Y. 258.

⁵⁴ Curtis J., in Very v. Levy, supra, citing Withington v. Herring, 5 Bing. 442.

CHAPTER III

OF THE CONSTRUCTION OF AUTHORITIES OF CERTAIN KINDS

§ 794. Purpose of this chapter.

795. In general.

I. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL LAND.

796. What here included.

797. — Authority to sell rather than merely to find a purchaser—Mere broker no authority to make a binding contract.

798. — But authority to make a binding contract may be found to exist.

799. Agent usually a special agent—Authority strictly construed.

800. Mere preliminary correspondence or negotiations not enough to confer authority.

801. Conditional authority.

802, 803. Authority to sell land not ordinarily to be inferred from mere general authority to act.

804, 805. What may be sold.

806. When authority to be exercised.

807, 808. What execution authorized.

809. Authority to make representations as to value, quantity, location, boundaries or title.

810. Authority to make contract of sale justifies written contract, in usual form.

811. Authority to sell and dispose of land implies right to convey.

812. To insert usual covenants of warranty.

813. Authority to sell does not justify a mortgage.

814. Authority to receive payment.

815. Conveyance must be for consideration moving to principal.

816. Authority to give credit.

817. Authority to sell does not authorize exchange or barter.

818. — Or gift.

819. — Or giving option to buy.

820. — Or permitting waste or sale of timber separate from land.

821. — Or changing boundaries of land.

822. — Or partition.

823. — Or dedication to public use.

824. — Or conveyance to pay principal's debts, or assignment for creditors.

825. — Or conveyance in payment of agent's debts.

826. — Or conveyance in trust for support of principal's child, etc.

827. — Or rescinding or altering contract.

828. — Or discharge of mortgage.

829. — Or investment of proceeds of sale.

II. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO LEASE LAND.

830. In general.

831. What execution authorized.

832. Authority to execute a lease, in the usual form, with usual terms.

833. Authority to make representations as to condition of premises, ownership, etc.

834. Authority to receive payment of rent.

835. Authority to lease does not authorize lease to begin in future.

836. Authority to change terms, substitute tenants, accept surrender of lease, or give notice to quit.

837. — To renew or extend a lease.

838. Authority to bind principal to furnish irrigation, supplies, stock, etc.

839. Authority to waive liens.

840. Authority to mortgage, or to impair or defeat the principal's title.

III. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE LAND.

841. When authority exists.

842. Authority to make a binding contract.

843. Authority to agree upon terms.

844. Authority to bind principal for ordinary expenses in purchase.

845. Authority to receive the deed.

846. Authority to assume mortgages.

847. No authority to sell or mortgage land purchased.

IV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL PERSONAL PROPERTY.

848. When authority exists.

849. — Limited or qualified authority.

850. What may be sold—All—Part.

851. — Commingling with other goods for sale.

852. Authority when to be executed.

853. No authority to sell at auction—When.

854. Authority to fix price and terms of sale.

855-857. — Further as to price.

858, 859. — Terms or conditions attached.

860. — Failure to impose conditions prescribed by principal.

861. Authority to make binding contract.

862. — To execute and deliver necessary documents or memoranda.

863. Authority of selling agent to receive payment—In general.

864. Authority to receive payment not implied from possession of bill.

865. Agent authorized to deliver possession may receive payment.

866. Payment to general sales-agent.

867, 868. Payment to agent as ostensible owner.

869. Agent to sell merely or to solicit orders, without possession of goods, not authorized to receive payment.

870. When traveling salesman may receive payment.

871. — When payment to agent part of terms of sale.

872. — Notice of want of authority.

873. — What may be received in payment when receipt is authorized.

874. — Purchaser cannot set off debt due from agent.

875-877. Implied authority of traveling salesman to hire horses.

878. — Authority to procure personal supplies.

879. — No implied authority to sell his samples.

880. Implied authority to warrant quality.

881. — Authority to warrant as a necessary incident.

882. — Authority to warrant because warranty usual.

883. Authority to give warranties which the law would imply.

- 884. Authority to warrant in accordance with descriptions furnished by principal.
- 885. Illustrations of rules—Commercial paper — Agricultural implements—Sample, etc.
- 886. — Horses.
- 887, 888. — Limitations upon custom.
- 889. Limits of this rule—No extraordinary warranty.
- 890. Authority to make representations concerning goods.
- 891. Authority to warrant title.
- 892. Authority to advertise the property.
- 893. No implied authority to give credit.
- 894. No authority to appropriate to his own use.
- 895. No implied authority to exchange or barter.
- 896. No authority to buy goods.
- 897. No authority to pledge goods.
- 898. No authority to mortgage.
- 899. No authority to promise commissions for sub-sales.
- 900. Authority to guarantee exclusive markets, particular prices, etc.
- 901. No implied authority to compromise, release principal's rights, or pay his debts.
- 902. Authority to rescind the sale.
- 903. Authority to waive performance of terms of contract.
- 904, 905. — Alterations of contract.
- 906. May not sell to or deal with himself.
- 907. Authority to receive notice.

V. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE PERSONAL PROPERTY.

- 908. When authority exists.
- 909. — Authority from conduct.
- 910. — Limitations.
- 911. — Ratification.
- 912. Powers and limitations incident to authority to purchase.

- 913. Agent with general authority may buy on credit.
- 914-917. May not buy on credit, when furnished with funds.
- 918. May buy on credit when not supplied with funds.
- 919. Agent with general authority to purchase has authority to agree upon price and terms.
- 920. May not exceed limits as to quantity.
- 921. Must observe limits as to quality or species.
- 922. Must observe limits as to price.
- 923. May be restricted as to persons with whom to deal.
- 924. May make representations as to principal's credit.
- 925. May not borrow money to pay for goods.
- 926. May not execute negotiable paper.
- 927. May not guarantee payment by his vendor.
- 928. May not sell goods.
- 929. Authority to alter or cancel contract.
- 930. Authority to make admissions after the purchase.
- 931. Agent can buy only for principal.

VI. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO COLLECT OR RECEIVE PAYMENT.

- 932. What here involved.
- 933. What constitutes such authority.
- 934. When implied from making the loan or negotiating the contract.
- 935. When implied from possession of the securities.
- 936. — Possession by agent who negotiated loan evidence of authority.
- 937. — Possession indispensable.
- 938. Authority by conduct independent of possession.
- 939. — Estoppel to deny authority.

940. — Limitations.

941. Payment to agent of the owner of record.

942. Payment to agent as ostensible principal.

943. Authority to receive proceeds of securities entrusted to agent for delivery.

944. When authority implied from having sold the goods or land.

945. Authority to receive interest does not authorize receipt of principal.

946. Can receive nothing but money.

947. — Debt payable in goods.

948. — Enlarged authority—Authority by conduct or ratification.

949-951. No authority to take checks, certificates of deposit, etc.

952, 953. If authorized to take check or note, has no authority to indorse and collect it.

954. No authority to release or compromise the debt.

955. Authority to receive part payment.

956. May not extend time.

957. Or otherwise change the terms of the contract.

958. Not authorized to receive before due.

959. Not authorized to accelerate maturity.

960. Authority to collect does not authorize sale of debt.

961. No authority to deal with funds collected.

962. May give receipt or discharge.

963. Authority to sue.

964. Authority to sue in his own name.

965. Authority to foreclose mortgages.

966. May not submit claim to arbitration.

967. May employ counsel.

968. Authority to employ sub-agents.

VII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO MAKE OR INDORSE NEGOTIABLE PAPER.

969. An important power, not lightly inferred.

970. How authority conferred.

971, 972. When authority implied.

973. Authority strictly construed.

974. — Illustrations of acts not authorized.

975. — Illustrations of acts authorized.

976. Must be confined to principal's business.

977. Execution must be confined to limits specified.

978. Negotiable paper delivered to agent in blank.

VIII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO MANAGE BUSINESS.

979. What is meant.

980. Extent of authority depends on nature of business.

981. Execution must be confined to principal's business and for his benefit.

982. Authority to pledge principal's credit—Supplies for store or business.

983. — Supplies for hotel.

984. — Supplies for farm or plantation.

985. — Board and provisions for help.

986. — Supplies procured by husband as manager of wife's business.

987. — Supplies procured by wife as domestic manager.

988. — Hiring help.

989. Other incidental contracts.

990, 991. Authority to waive liens, rights, conditions, notices, etc.

992. Contracts by architects, superintendents, etc.

993. Contracts by station and ticket agents.

994. Contracts for medical aid or nursing.

995. Implied authority to sell product of business.

996. Authority to collect or receive payment.
997. Authority to revive debt barred by limitation.
- 998-1000. Authority to make negotiable instruments.
- 1001, 1002. When may borrow money.
1003. May not make accommodation paper.
1004. May not pledge or mortgage the property of his principal.
1005. May not sell or lease principal's land.
1006. May not embark in new and different business.
1007. May not sell the business or property.
1008. Authority to pay debts.
1009. Authority to make assignment for creditors.
1010. Authority to sue.
1011. — To employ attorney.
- IX. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SETTLE.
1012. Of the nature of the authority.
1013. Burden of proof.
- 1014-1016. When authority exists.
- 1017, 1018. What terms of settlement binding.
- 1019-1021. — Illustrations.
1022. May receive the proceeds.
1023. May not submit to arbitration.
1024. May not assign the demand.
1025. May not assign or transfer proceeds.
- X. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO BORROW MONEY.
1026. When the authority exists.
1027. What execution authorized.
1028. Authority to give necessary securities.
1029. Authority to receive the money.
1030. Liability of principal for money borrowed without authority.
- XI. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO LEND MONEY.
1031. When authority exists.
1032. What execution authorized.
1033. Authority to take usurious interest.
1034. Authority to receive payment.
1035. Authority to extend time or change terms.
1036. No authority to loan to himself.
1037. Authority to purchase securities.
- XII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO BIND PRINCIPAL AS SURETY.
1038. When authority exists.
1039. Authority strictly construed.
- XIII. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO EMPLOY.
1040. What here included.
- 1041, 1042. When authority exists.
1043. What employment authorized.
- XIV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SHIP GOODS.
1044. How authority arises.
1045. How authority to be exercised — Agreeing upon terms of shipment.
1046. — Agreements limiting liability of carrier.
1047. —.
- XV. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO CARE FOR PROPERTY.
1048. Nature and extent of authority.
- XVI. OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO REPRESENT INSURERS.
1049. What here included.
1050. How classified.
1051. How appointed.
1052. Whose agent is he.
1053. What kind of an agent is he.
1054. Authority to appoint sub-agents.
1055. Authority to make oral contracts.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1056. Authority to renew issuance. | 1067, 1068. — Facts affecting the risk. |
| 1057. Authority to make alterations — Waiver — Estoppel—In general. | 1069, 1070. — Statements in application. |
| 1058. Authority at time of issuance to alter policy or waive provisions therein. | 1071. — Express restrictions. |
| 1059, 1060. — By parol. | 1072. — Subsequent causes of forfeiture. |
| 1061. — Waiving prepayment of premiums. | 1073. — Collusion. |
| 1062. — Restrictions on authority. | 1074. Authority to adjust losses. |
| 1063. Authority after issuance — Waiver of forfeitures. | 1075. Miscellaneous cases—Instituting legal proceedings. |
| 1064. — Waiving proofs of loss. | 1076. Authority to bind principal by admissions, representation. |
| 1065. — Express restrictions on authority. | 1077. Territorial limitations. |
| 1066. Knowledge of agent imputed to principal. | 1078. May not act in his own behalf. |

§ 794. Purpose of this chapter.—Having in the preceding chapters considered the question of what constitutes authority, as well as some of the rules which govern its construction and interpretation, it is now proposed to see how these principles are applied.

It is obviously impossible, however, within the limits of such a work as this, to treat at length of all the various matters which may involve this question. What will be attempted is to consider those classes of cases which most frequently arise, and to deal with the most important points which arise in them.

§ 795. In general.—In considering the questions discussed in this chapter, the rules already referred to must be kept in mind. Prominent among these, as has been seen, are, that express and formal grants of power are strictly construed;¹ that every grant of power is to be interpreted, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intent, as conferring authority to act only in the private, individual business of the principal, and for his benefit;² that grants of power, though couched in general language, are to be limited to the particular object contemplated by the power;³ that every power carries with it, as an incident, where no limitations appear, the implied authority to do those things which are necessary and proper to be done in order to accomplish the object sought and which are usually done in the execution of a like authority;⁴ and that a well-defined and publicly known usage may confer incidental powers unless the parties have excluded it.⁵

¹ See ante, § 784.

⁴ See ante, § 789.

² See ante, § 783.

⁵ See ante, § 281.

³ See ante, § 780.

I.

OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL LAND.

§ 796. What here included.—It will be borne in mind that the question here to be considered is not in what form, or in what manner, authority to sell land may be conferred, e. g., whether it must be by writing or may be by word or act, but whether an authority properly created and unquestionably existing for some purpose will include this one, whether authority unquestionably relating in some form to land confers authority to sell it, and whether an authority clearly authorizing a sale of land confers authority to do some other act relating to it.

So far as form is concerned, it will be recalled that parol authorization ordinarily suffices for a mere broker; usually, but not universally, written authority is requisite for a binding contract to sell; while authority under seal is usually requisite for the execution of instruments necessarily under seal, as usually in the case of deeds of conveyance of land.

§ 797. ——— Authority to sell rather than merely to find a purchaser—Mere broker no authority to make a binding contract.—It is to be noted also that the case here contemplated is that in which the agent is really authorized to sell, and not merely employed to find a purchaser to whom the principal may sell. The distinction is one of consequence, because one employed as a mere real estate broker to “sell” land, even though employed by writing, is usually held to have no power to make a binding contract (much less a deed of conveyance), but is confined to the finding of a person ready, willing and able to buy from the principal on the terms proposed by him.⁶ The cases taking vendsen, 9 N. D. 285; Brandrup v. Britten, 11 N. D. 376; Campbell v. Galloway, 148 Ind. 440; Furst v. Tweed, 93 Iowa, 300; Balkema v. Searle, 116 Iowa, 374; Halsey v. Monteiro, 92 Va. 581; Simmons v. Kramer, 88 Va. 411, 13 S. E. 902; Kramer v. Blair, 88 Va. 456; Chadburn v. Moore, 61 L. J. Ch. 674, 67 L. T. (N. S.) 257, 41 Wkly. Rep. 39; Glentworth v. Luther, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 145; Gilmour v. Simon, 37 Can. S. C. 422, s. c. again, 15 Manitoba, 205; Boyle v. Grassick, 6 Terr. L. R. 232, 2 West L. R. 284. Contra: Compare cases cited in first note to following section.

⁶ Carstens v. McReavy, 1 Wash. 359 (distinguished in Littlefield v. Dawson, 47 Wash. 644); McReavy v. Eshelman, 4 Wash. 757; Armstrong v. Oakley, 23 Wash. 122 (see also Scully v. Book, 3 Wash. 182); Donnan v. Adams, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 615; Dickinson v. Updike (N. J.), 49 Atl. 712; Stengel v. Sergeant, 74 N. J. Eq. 20; Scull v. Brinton, 55 N. J. Eq. 489; Lindley v. Keim, 54 N. J. Eq. 418; Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448; Morris v. Ruddy, 20 N. J. Eq. 236; McCullough v. Hitchcock, 71 Conn. 401; Armstrong v. Lowe, 76 Cal. 616; Grant v. Ede, 85 Cal. 418, 20 Am. St. R. 237; Lambert v. Gerner, 142 Cal. 399; Ballou v. Berg-

this view proceed upon the theory that the character of the undertaking of the real estate broker is well known, and presumptively his employment, though by writing, is in his capacity as a negotiator merely, and not as an agent to close a contract in writing.⁷

§ 798. — But authority to make a binding contract may be found to exist.—But even if it be conceded that the mere employment of a real estate broker does not confer upon him the power to make a binding contract, it is still true that the language employed or the circumstances of the case may be such as to show that such a power was intended.⁸ Of course a mere request to "list" property,⁹ a mere request to endeavor to find a purchaser,¹⁰ mere inquiries as to the possibility of a sale, the mere stating of terms upon which the owner

⁷ Thus in McCullough v. Hitchcock, 71 Conn. 401; Halsey v. Monteiro, 92 Va. 581, and many other cases, in practically identical language, it is said: "A real estate broker or agent is one who negotiates the sales of real property. His business, generally speaking, is only to find a purchaser who is willing to buy the land upon the terms fixed by the owner. He has no authority to bind his principal by signing a contract of sale. A sale of real estate involves the adjustment of many matters besides fixing the price. The delivery of the possession has to be settled; generally the title has to be examined, and the conveyance with its covenants is to be agreed upon and executed by the owner. All of these things require conferences and time for completion. These are for the determination of the owner, and do not pertain to the duties and are not within the authority of a real estate agent. For these obvious reasons, and others which might be suggested, it is a wise provision of the law which withholds from such agent as we think it does, any implied authority to sign a contract of sale in behalf of his principal."

One of several tenants in common authorized to sell the whole property is not a broker within the meaning of this rule: Vermont Marble Co. v. Mead, — Vt. —, 80 Atl. 852.

⁸ See Pringle v. Spaulding, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 17; Jackson v. Badger, 35 Minn. 52; Stewart v. Wood, 63 Mo. 252; Smith v. Allen, 86 Mo. 178; Glass v. Rowe, 103 Mo. 513; Farrell v. Edwards, 8 S. D. 425; Colvin v. Blanchard, 101 Tex. 231; Donnell v. Currie, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 88; Peabody v. Hoard, 46 Ill. 242; Haydock v. Stow, 40 N. Y. 363; Rosenbaum v. Belson, [1900] 2 Ch. 267.

⁹ In Halsey v. Monteiro, 92 Va. 581, a letter from the owner telling the broker to list it for twelve months on certain terms, or that he would take so much cash, was held not to suggest an authorization to bind the owner by contract.

See also Ballou v. Bergvendsen, 9 N. Dak. 285; and Brandrup v. Britten, 11 N. Dak. 376 (where the language used was "I hereby grant to [the agent] the sale of the following described property," etc.).

¹⁰ In McCullough v. Hitchcock, 71 Conn. 401, this language was held insufficient to authorize a sale. "I have a building lot I would like to sell. * * * I do not know the value of said lot, but could you not look at the lot and give me an idea of its value, and if possible find a purchaser for same."

would be willing to sell,¹¹ and the like, will not of themselves constitute an authority to sell. It is, however, entirely clear that the correspondence or negotiations between the parties may be such as to create the authority to make a binding contract to sell.¹² It is not necessary that ¹¹ In Watkins Land Mortgage Co. v. Campbell, 100 Tex. 542, real estate brokers submitted to their principal an offer and said: "Shall we close the deal?" The principal replied that if the brokers could get the cash payment increased "we would be willing to accept the offer. * * * Awaiting your further report we are, etc." Held, not to authorize the making of a binding contract. So in Simmons v. Kramer, 88 Va. 411, the broker wrote to his principal reporting an offer; the principal replied that he would not accept the offer, but stated the price and terms at which he would be willing to sell, concluding thus: "Will give you 2 per cent. commission, awaiting a reply." Held, not to be sufficient to justify the making of a contract.

See also Lambert v. Gerner, 142 Cal. 399; Armstrong v. Oakley, 23 Wash. 122 (where a letter of the owner was held to merely express the terms upon which the owner would be willing to enter into a contract with a purchaser); Kramer v. Blair, 88 Va. 456; Campbell v. Gallo-way, 148 Ind. 440.

An attorney wrote asking the defendant if he would accept $350. Defendant telegraphed that he would take $450, whereupon the attorney sold the property for $500 and converted it to his own use. In action for specific performance, Held, that the correspondence did not amount to an authorization to sell. Prentiss v. Nelson, 69 Minn. 496.

In answer to a letter inquiring at what price the defendant would sell, written by real estate brokers, the defendant replied, "$4200 on time * * * or $4100 cash is the lowest price I will take." Brokers sold on terms given; Held, that the sale was unwarranted, the correspondence having amounted only to an offer. Jahn v. Kelly, 58 Ill. App. 570.

In Donnan v. Adams, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 615, it was held that a memorandum, containing description and price, executed and signed by the owner and accompanied by oral instruction to sell, did not constitute an authority in the agent to make a contract binding the principal.

In Sullivan v. Leer, 2 Colo. App. 141, it was held that following correspondence under the circumstances did not constitute authority to sell. March 30, defendant wrote the agent "I will be in Denver last of April—wish you would have a purchaser, think I ought to get $17,000 for the house." April 20th, agent telegraphed: "Lot sold for $16,000 cash." Owner replied April 24th: "Won't sell for less than $17,000—be there May 1st." On May 3rd, the day of the defendant's arrival in Denver, the agent telegraphed: "Sold property, $17,000."

In Jones v. Howard, 234 Ill. 404, defendant wrote to real estate agents, "please assist me to sell my property described below until sale is made and properly closed. I hereby authorize you to sell same." Held, that an authority of this sort should be strictly construed, and that the letter in question did not confer authority to make a contract. Followed in Thorne v. Jung, 253 Ill. 584, where the principal, having been advised of a prospective buyer, wrote that he would sell on certain terms, that the papers should be made out and earnest money received by a title and trust company, "to whom I will give the necessary instructions," and that he gave this information, "to save time, should the deal be made."

any particular phraseology be used, or that the authorization be in any formal terms. The question is, does the language used sufficiently indicate that the party is authorized to close a binding contract of sale? This may be merely a question of the construction of the words used, or it may be an inference of fact as to intention to be decided like other similar questions. Naturally enough, as in other similar cases, different courts may draw different inferences from substantially similar facts, and many instances are to be found of apparently irreconcilable conclusions, although the courts purported to apply the same principles. It is not to be denied, however, that there are some cases in which the courts have proceeded upon wholly irreconcilable theories, ¹² In Jackson v. Badger, 35 Minn. 52, a letter reading, "You may sell my 40 acres, $2,000 hand money, and the balance in three years with interest," was held to authorize a binding contract, though not sufficient to authorize a conveyance.

In Stewart v. Wood, 63 Mo. 252, it was held that this language in a letter conferred power to make a binding contract: "Sell my farm for me at ten dollars per acre, or as much more as you can get."

In Smith v. Allen, 86 Mo. 178, the defendant, residing in Chicago, wrote to W, a real estate agent in Kansas City, in response to an inquiry about selling defendant's property there: "I am sick and not able to write; * * * I will leave the sale of the lots pretty much with you; if the party or anyone is willing to pay * * * I think I am willing to have you make out a deed and I will perfect it. * * * If you think I better try the spring market, hold till then." W showed this letter to the plaintiffs, executed a contract of sale and received earnest money. W then wrote defendant that he had sold on the terms submitted, "subject to your approval." In subsequent correspondence, it appeared that W, through misapprehension or equivocation, led his principal to believe he had not made a binding contract. Held, that the defendant's letter was a sufficient authorization to the agent to bind his principal, and that the letters thereafter did not explain the meaning of the authority but indicated merely the opinions of the writers, as to the consequences of their act.

In Glass v. Rowe, 103 Mo. 513, a letter in these words was held to confer a power to bind the principal by contract: "Will now sell $350 per foot. A regular commission of two and a half per cent. to you after sale is made and closed. Terms, * * *."

In Farrell v. Edwards, 8 S. D. 425, sufficient authority was found in two letters, the substantial portions of which are as follows: "If you find a buyer, you can fix up the papers at any of the banks. I want 300 down, and my share of the crop; balance, 900, at 8 per cent." and "if you make the deal, you better write me before making out the papers to send to me to sign." The court also relied upon a ratification.

In Colvin v. Blanchard, 101 Tex. 231, the principal wrote to a firm of real estate dealers in whose hands the property had been placed for sale: "I will sell the lots for $19,000 and pay you a 5 per cent. com. plus $50, or $1,000 com. in all for making the sale. * * * Terms, $3,000 cash, bal. long time." Held, that the letter conferred a power to contract. There was evidence of subsequent assent on part of the and, of course, have reached conflicting results.¹³ Thus, in a few cases, express authority to sell, even though all the terms were specified, has been held to be a mere authority to "sell" as a broker, that is, to find a purchaser, but not to close a binding contract with him.¹⁴ seller, but as matter of ratification it was not noted by the court.

See also Donnell v. Currie, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 88.

In Hawaiian Agricultural Co. v. Norris, 12 Haw. 229, the principal wrote to the agent, "I wish to sell," he refused to make contracts himself and referred all purchasers to the agent, and never objected when letters of the agent indicated that he was negotiating for a contract. It was held that authority to make a binding contract had been shown. The court reviewed many cases from the United States, on both sides, and concluded that "an authority to sell may very naturally in any particular case be intended to carry with it a power to contract and that such intention may be shown by slight circumstances."

In Winch v. Edmunds, 34 Colo. 359, W, living in Chicago had H in Colorado in general charge of his real estate there. On request, W sent H prices on certain parcels, one of which was sold by contract according to the price quoted. On similar prior occasions W had confirmed such sales. Held, that H had authority to make a binding contract of sale.

¹³ Thus, for example, an undoubted majority of the courts, generally following the case of Duffy v. Hobson, 40 Cal. 240, 6 Am. Rep. 617, have put such a construction upon the employment of the ordinary real estate broker as to exclude his authority to make a binding contract unless there be something in the case to alter the ordinary presumption. (See also Armstrong v. Lowe, 76 Cal. 616; Grant v. Ede, 85 Cal. 418, 20 Am. St. R. 237; Lambert v. Gerner, 142 Cal. 399.)

McCullough v. Hitchcock, 71 Conn. 401; Buckingham v. Harris, 10 Colo. 455; Ryon v. McGee, 2 Mack. (D. C.) 17; Mannix v. Hildreth, 2 App. D. C. 259; Jones v. Holladay, 2 App. D. C. 279; Balkema v. Searle, 116 Iowa, 374; Campbell v. Galloway, 148 Ind. 440; Milne v. Kleb, 44 N. J. Eq. 378; Lindley v. Keim, 54 N. J. Eq. 418; Dickinson v. Updike (N. J.), 49 Atl. 712; Scull v. Brinton, 55 N. J. Eq. 489; Tyrrell v. O'Connor, 56 N. J. Eq. 448; Ballou v. Bergvendsen, 9 N. Dak. 285; Donnan v. Adams, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 615; Halsey v. Monteiro, 92 Va. 581; Carstens v. McReavy, 1 Wash. 359; Barnes v. German Sav. Soc., 21 Wash. 448; Armstrong v. Oakley, 23 Wash. 122.

¹⁴ In Armstrong v. Lowe, 76 Cal. 616, the defendant employed real estate agents to sell property and gave them this memorandum: "You are hereby authorized to sell my property and to receive deposit on the same, situated * * * for the sum of two hundred dollars per acre, cash. I hereby agree to pay you the sum of five per cent. for your services in case you effect a sale or find a purchaser for the same, or will pay you two and one-half per cent. of above commission should I sell the same myself or through another agent." Held, that this writing did not authorize the making of a binding contract.

On the other hand, in Haydock v. Stow, 40 N. Y. 363, a writing in language almost identical was held to confer a power to make a contract. "I hereby authorize and empower Peck, Hellman and Parks, agents for me, to sell the following described property [described and terms]."

Where authority to make a binding contract can be conferred only by writing,¹⁵ parol authority, which would suffice in many states, would not be adequate.¹⁶

§ 799. Agent usually a special agent—Authority strictly construed.—In all cases of this sort, in which written authority is requisite to justify a contract of sale, the person dealing with the agent, is, in contemplation of law, charged with knowledge of that fact and presumptively deals with the agent's credentials before him.¹⁷ These agents, moreover, are usually special agents,¹⁸ and their authority is to be deemed to be strictly limited to that which is either expressly given or necessarily implied.¹⁹

§ 800. Mere preliminary correspondence or negotiations not enough to confer authority.—It is obvious also that before the questions here suggested can be determined, the authority intended to be conferred must be completely agreed upon and vested. If, therefore, the dealings between the principal and the agent have not passed be-

See also Jackson v. Badger, 35 Minn. 52.

¹⁵ As to which, see ante, § 225.

¹⁶ Deed executed in blank.—In Blacknell v. Parish, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 70, 78 Am. Dec. 239, where the principal executed a deed of the lands, leaving the name of the grantee and the amount of the price in blank, and delivered the deed to an agent with parol authority to find a purchaser, put his name and the consideration in the deed, and deliver it, it was held that while this could not be a good deed, because he did not have authority under seal to fill the blanks, it was good as a contract to sell, for the making of which the agent might be authorized by parol, since the statute did not require that such an authority should be conferred by writing.

But where the statute required that an agent to execute written instruments shall be authorized by writing, such a deed, so executed and delivered, was held not sufficient to justify a binding contract in writing. Ballou v. Carter, — S. Dak. —, 137 N. W. 603, relying upon Lund v. Thackeray, 18 S. Dak.

113, and Dal v. Fischer, 20 S. Dak. 426.

Power of attorney insufficient to support deed may sustain contract to sell.—It has been held in several cases that a power of attorney intended, but insufficient in form, to authorize the execution of a deed of conveyance, may sustain a written contract to sell where its form is adequate for that purpose. Joseph v. Fischer, 122 Ind. 399 (where deed was enforced as contract); Littlefield v. Dawson, 47 Wash. 644; Vanada v. Hopkins, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 285, 19 Am. Dec. 92. See also Jones v. Marks, 47 Cal. 242.

¹⁷ Schaeffer v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 38 Mont. 459; Miller v. Wehrman, 81 Neb. 388; Coulter v. Portland Trust Co., 20 Or. 469; Rawson v. Curtiss, 19 Ill. 455.

¹⁸ Swift v. Erwin, — Ark. —, 148 S. W. 267, and cases in following note.

¹⁹ Pentold v. Warner, 96 Mich. 179, 35 Am. St. R. 591; Thomas v. Joslin, 30 Minn. 388; Schaeffer v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., supra; Moore v. Skyles, 33 Mont. 135, 114 Am. St. Rep. 801; 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 136; Brown v. Grady, 16 Wyo. 151.

yond the stage of preliminary correspondence, if the terms upon which the authority is to be executed or the property sold are not yet fully determined, if further communications are to be had with the principal, or further assent given, before the authority is to be exercised,²⁰ and the like, there can ordinarily be no present authority to sell in such wise as to bind the principal.²¹

²⁰ As for example, where the principal's approval is to be given before the sale is made. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Sherwood, 62 Iowa, 309; Alcorn v. Buschke, 133 Cal. 655; Johnson v. American Freehold L. Mtg. Co., 111 Ga. 490.

In Furst v. Tweed, 93 Iowa, 300, the principal wrote saying that he asked a certain sum; that he would sell "on almost any terms to suit purchaser," and "if you succeed in selling, I am willing to allow you" a certain commission. Held, that the language used respecting the terms indicated that this matter was to be referred to him, and that the agent had no authority to close a binding contract.

In Balkema v. Searle, 116 Iowa, 374, there was correspondence stating terms, part cash, "balance given on time," but the time was not stated. The court said: "In the correspondence, some matters were left indefinite, to be settled by defendant, doubtless, when the purchaser appeared." Held, that agent had no authority to make a binding contract.

In Grant v. Ede, 85 Cal. 418, 20 Am. St. R. 237, where the owners wrote, "we will sell" at a certain price at any time before a given date, the court said that the agent was not thereby authorized to sell, and in any event material terms were not agreed upon, e. g., the form of deed, the time of payment, and the time of delivery of possession.

²¹ See, for example, Stewart v. Pickering, 73 Iowa, 652. In this case the defendants, land brokers in Iowa, wrote to the plaintiff's attorney in fact: "Do you have charge of the lands in this county belonging to the estate of S? If so, are they for sale? * * * If the title is all right, we can possibly find a customer for the list this year. Let us hear from you as to prices, etc." The reply thereto was as follows: "I herewith inclose you a price-list of our lands in your county. My Mother is the widow of S, and is the sole devisee by will which is recorded in your county. I am executor of my father, and attorney in fact of my mother. The titles are all strictly clear and good." Attached to this letter was the following: "Western land for sale, Winnebago county, Iowa." [Here followed a list of the land with the prices.] "Apply to D. S., Falls City, Pa., etc. Terms ¼ down, balance in 4 equal annual payments, with 5 per cent. interest," etc. Held, that this correspondence gave no authority to the defendants to bind the owner by a sale at the prices named, but was at most an authority to sell only subject to her approval or that of her attorney in fact.

See also Stillman v. Fitzgerald, 37 Minn. 186, where a firm of real estate brokers wrote to the defendant saying: "We have a customer [meaning the plaintiff] who would buy your lot if offered at a fair price," and asking him to state best price and the terms, for which he would sell, and pay their commission, which was stated. The defendant answered by letter stating price, and, in part only, the terms, for which he would sell, and that he would pay their commission. It was held that the brokers were not thereby constituted the defendant's

§ 801. Conditional authority.—The authority may, of course, be a qualified or conditional one. As long as the conditions or limitations are lawful, there is no reason why the principal may not limit or qualify the authority to any extent which suits his pleasure. Such limitations or conditions, unless waived, will be operative against the agent, and also against third persons who have, or are charged with, notice of them. The authority may thus be limited as to time, price, subject-matter, terms, and the like, and many illustrations of such limitations will be found in the following sections. It may also require the principal's approval before a particular execution shall be deemed authorized.²²

§ 802. Authority to sell land not ordinarily to be inferred from mere general authority to act.—Authority to sell real estate must ordinarily be conferred in clear and direct language; for, although there are cases in which it may arise by implication,²³ it is not lightly to be inferred from express power to do other acts, or brought within the operation of mere general terms. A power of attorney, therefore, "to act in all my business, in all concerns, as if I were present, and to stand good in law, in all my land and other business," gives no authority to sell land;²⁴ nor does a power "to ask, demand, recover or receive the maker's lawful share of a decedent's estate, giving and granting to his said attorney his sole and full power and authority to take, pursue agents, with a power to bind him by a contract of sale.

Where an agent, after having negotiated a sale of the property and given a receipt, communicated the general terms of the sale to the owner and the latter replied requesting full information about the price, about the terms of the sale, and about the date when the deed should be made out, as well as requesting that a blank deed or two be sent him with the purchaser's name, it was held that such letter was no evidence of any authority in the agent to sell the property. Smith v. Browne, 132 N. C. 365.

An owner wrote, in reply to a broker's request for a price, that he would take $1,000, and, if the broker could sell or rent it, the owner would do what was right by him. The agent made a sale. Held, that there had been no authorization. Riley v. Grant, 16 S. D. 553.

²² See Alcorn v. Buschke, 133 Cal. 655.

²³ Comyns, Dig. VII, Pojar, A 2, declares, "So, if a man expresses the power only by implication, it is well; as, provided that he shall not have power to alien, etc., otherwise than to make a jointure, and leases for 21 years; it is a good power to make a jointure and leases. 1 Leo. 148." See also Marr v. Given, 23 Me. 55, 39 Am. Dec. 600.

Compare Bosseau v. O'Brien, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 395.

The mere fact that the owner of land gives an option to buy, does not make the one to whom the option is given the owner's agent if the latter sells his option. Reeves v. McCracken, 103 Tex. 416.

²⁴ Ashley v. Bird, 1 Mo. 640, 14 Am. Dec. 313.

and follow such legal course for the recovery, receiving and obtaining the same as he himself might or could do were he personally present; and upon the receipt thereof, acquittances and other sufficient discharges for him and in his name to sign, seal and deliver;"²⁵ nor does a power "to make contracts, to settle outstanding debts and generally to do all things that concern my interest in any way real or personal, whatsoever, giving my said attorney full power to use my name to release others or bind myself, as he may deem proper and expedient;"²⁶ nor does a power "to attend to the business of the principal generally," or "to act for him with reference to all his business;"²⁷ nor does authority to locate and survey land;²⁸ nor does a power to sell "claims" and "effects."²⁹

²⁵ Hay v. Mayer, 8 Watts (Penn.), 203, 34 Am. Dec. 453. A power of attorney "to ask, demand and receive of and from any person or persons all such real and personal estate as I may be entitled to by virtue of my being a son and heir at law of" a named person, does not authorize a sale and conveyance of the principal's real estate. Hotchkiss v. Middlekauf, 96 Va. 649, 43 L. R. A. 806. In Gee v. Bolton, 17 Wis. 604, a power "to bargain, purchase, sell, grant, release and convey, to accept and receive all sums of money, to collect and pay, to sue and be sued, to give notes and receipts and to accept the same, and in his name to make, seal, deliver and acknowledge," etc., nothing being said about land, was held not to give authority to sell and convey land. See also Bean v. Bennett, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 398.

²⁶ Billings v. Morrow, 7 Cal. 171, 68 Am. Dec. 235. Same power also construed to the same effect in Hunter v. Sacramento Valley Beet Sugar Co., 11 Fed. 15, 7 Sawy. 498.

²⁷ Coquillard v. French, 19 Ind. 274. Nor does a power of attorney appointing one "general and special agent to do and transact all manner of business" necessarily confer power upon the agent to sell bonds belonging to his principal. Hodge v. Combs, 1 Black (U. S.), 192, 17 L. Ed. 157. Such a power, said the court, "may be construed to confer almost any or no power."

²⁸ Moore v. Lockett, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 67, 4 Am. Dec. 683.

In Mitchell v. McLaren (Tex. Civ. App.), 51 S. W. 269, it was held that a power of attorney "to locate any such certificate in my name or sell and assign the same," did not authorize the agent to locate land upon the certificate and then to sell the land.

²⁹ DeCordova v. Knowles, 37 Tex. 19. See also Berry v. Harnage, 39 Tex. 638, where a power of attorney in the following terms was held sufficient to authorize a sale of real estate: "to ask, demand, sue for, recover and receive all such sum and sums of money, debts, goods, wares, dues, accounts and other demands whatever, which are or may be due, owing, payable, and belonging to me, or detained from me by any manner of ways and means whatever, in whose hands soever the same may be found; giving and granting unto my said attorney, by these presents, my whole and full power, strength and authority, in and about the premises, to have, use, and take all lawful ways and means, in my name and for the purposes aforesaid, upon the receipt of any such debts, dues or issues of money, acquittances or other sufficient discharge, for me,

§ 803. — But where A wrote to C, "I wish you to manage (my property) as you would with your own. If a good opportunity offers to sell everything I have, I would be glad to sell. It may be parties will come into San Antonio, who will be glad to purchase my gas stock and real estate," it was held that C was thereby authorized to contract for the sale of the real estate, but not to convey it.³⁰ So authority to "use" land to enable the donee of the power to extricate himself from his financial embarrassments, was held to authorize a sale or a mortgage of the land.³¹ A power "to do any lawful act for and in my name as if I were present," was held to authorize a sale and conveyance of land.³²

§ 804. What may be sold.—In order that the agent may lawfully sell any particular parcel of land it is essential that that parcel be included within the language of the power either expressly or by clear implication. It is sometimes said that the land must be described in the power with the same certainty which would be required in the conveyance itself; and, though this may perhaps be too strict a rule, it certainly is requisite that the instruments conferring the authority shall show with reasonable certainty not only what lands are to be the subject-matter of the power but also what interests or estates therein are to be sold. A number of illustrations, more or less consistent, of the actual holdings of the courts are appended.

A power of attorney authorizing the agent "to bargain, sell, grant, release and convey, and upon such sales, convenient and proper deeds with such covenants as to my said attorney shall seem expedient, in due form of law, as deed or deeds, to make, seal, deliver and acknowledge," although it is silent as to what the agent is to sell and convey, clearly contemplates a sale of lands, and is held to be sufficiently broad to authorize the agent to sell and convey whatever estate the principal then had.³³ and in my name, to make, seal, execute deeds of conveyance and deliver, and generally all and every act or acts, thing or things, device or devices, in the law whatsoever needful and necessary to be done in and about the premises, for me and in my name to do and execute and perform."

³⁰ Lyon v. Pollock, 99 U. S. 668, 25 L. Ed. 265.

³¹ Baker v. Byerly, 40 Minn. 489.

³² Veatch v. Gilmer (Tex. Civ. App.), 111 S. W. 746. The court said, "This is a universal power of attorney, but its operation will be by law restrained to the particular business in which it is presumed the intention was to delegate the authority."

³³ Marr v. Given, 23 Me. 55, 39 Am. Dec. 600. When a power of attorney executed by a husband and wife authorizes the agent to convey any

So a power of attorney in due form, authorizing the agent "to sell, bargain and convey three certain lots of land in the village of Pentwater belonging to me," but containing no other or further description, is sufficient where the principal had three such lots and only three in that village;³⁴ but an authority "to convey a piece of land in Colebrook belonging to the Bank," there being more than one such piece is too indefinite.³⁵

An authority to sell all the lands which the principal may own, or all which he may own and lying within a certain territory, is good without a more specific description.³⁶ And an authority to sell any or all of the principal's "property," and to execute all necessary instruments authorizes the sale of his real estate.³⁷ Where the lands are sufficiently described, the fact that the principal apparently intended to add a more specific description but failed to do so, will not defeat the power.³⁸

§ 805. — A power of attorney authorizing an agent to sell "the one-half" of a lot of land, without specifying which half, or

and all lands which may come into "his" possession by reason of certain homestead entries, "his" refers to the husband only, and land belonging to them jointly or to the wife alone cannot be included. Finnegan v. Brown, 90 Minn. 396.

³⁴ Vaughn v. Sheridan, 50 Mich. 155. See also Crimp v. Yokely, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 231.

³⁵ Lumbard v. Aldrich, 8 N. H. 31, 28 Am. Dec. 381.

³⁶ Munger v. Baldrige, 41 Kan. 236, 13 Am. St. Rep. 273; Roper v. McFadden, 48 Cal. 346; Kane v. Sholars, 41 Tex. Civ. App. 154.

A power to convey "all of our land in the State of North Carolina," held a sufficient description to admit evidence aliunde to identify. Janney v. Robbins, 141 N. C. 400. "Authority to sell any or all of plaintiff's land in the state, includes authority to sell any specific tract therein." Marshall v. Shibley, 11 Kan. 114.

Under a power to sell any of the principal's land "excepting the farm occupied by me * * * as a homestead in Green River Valley * * * to which land and farm this power of attorney does not extend," justifies the sale of a lot in that valley never occupied as a homestead. Cummings v. Dolan, 52 Wash. 496, 132 Am. St. R. 986.

³⁷ Gardiner v. Griffith (Tex. Civ. App.), 56 S. W. 558.

A power of attorney to sell and convey "any or all tracts, lots, pieces or parcels of land or real estate which have descended to, or have been acquired by, the said [plaintiff], in any of the States * * * of the United States of America, * * * excluding therefrom all lots in the city of Omaha, State of Nebraska," justifies a sale of land in Pennsylvania which the principal owns. Linton v. Moorhead, 209 Pa. 646.

A power to sell and convey all the land of the principal within a certain parish is a sufficient description. Rownd v. Davidson, 113 La. 1047.

³⁸ Bradley v. Whitesides, 55 Minn. 455.

whether in common or in severalty, empowers him to sell one-half in severalty and to exercise his own discretion as to which half.³⁹

An agent authorized to sell and convey a piece of land except such parts as his principal had previously conveyed, may convey a piece previously sold by his principal but not conveyed;⁴⁰ and under a general authority to sell any of his principal's real estate he may sell that which the principal subsequently acquires;⁴¹ especially where the power expressly refers to lands which the principal "does or may" own.⁴² But where the power clearly contemplated the inauguration of a business and authorized the agent to "buy and sell" lands, it was held that the power to sell was to be limited to lands bought under it.⁴³ And, clearly, where the power is limited to land which the principal owns or is interested in at the time of the execution of the power, a conveyance of subsequently acquired land is not authorized.⁴⁴

§ 806. When authority to be exercised.—Where a definite time is fixed by the clear language of the power, any sale after that time will be inoperative unless the principal waives the limitation or ratifies the sale.⁴⁵ An authority to sell lands at a given sum, if they can be sold "immediately," will not authorize a sale at that price a month afterwards, without any further authority;⁴⁶ nor can an agent empowered to sell real estate at a given price, without further instructions, sell it a considerable time later at the same price when the land

³⁹ Aleman v. Daly, 36 Cal. 90.

Although, where two parcels are described in the power, the sale of both, if any, may be required, the principal's parol consent to the sale of one before the other will justify such a sale. Campbell v. Beard, 57 W. Va. 501.

⁴⁰ Mitchell v. Maupin, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 185.

⁴¹ Fay v. Winchester, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 513. See also Benschoter v. Lalk, 24 Neb. 251; Benschoter v. Atkins, 25 Neb. 645.

⁴² Berkey v. Judd, 22 Minn. 287; Bigelow v. Livingston, 28 Minn. 57; Tuman v. Pillsbury, 60 Minn. 520 (where the authority was to enter upon, sell, and convey all land "which we now own, or which we may hereafter acquire or become seized of, or in which we may now or hereafter be in any way interested, under the act of congress" granting additional homesteads to soldiers and sailors); Snell v. Weyerhauser, 71 Minn. 57 (where a power to convey all land in which "we may now or hereafter be in any way interested" was held to authorize conveyance of land to which the husband subsequently acquired the title subject to the wife's right of dower).

⁴³ Greve v. Coffin, 14 Minn. 345, 100 Am. Dec. 229. See also Allis v. Goldsmith, 22 Minn. 123.

⁴⁴ Turner v. McDonald, 76 Cal. 177, 9 Am. St. R. 189 (even though the land was subsequently acquired by foreclosure of a mortgage which the principal then owned); Penfold v. Warner, 96 Mich. 179, 35 Am. St. R. 591.

⁴⁵ Henry v. Lane, 128 Fed. 243, 62 C. C. A. 625.

⁴⁶ Matthews v. Sowle, 12 Neb. 393.

has greatly increased in value.⁴⁷ An authority to an agent to sell real estate within "a short time" will authorize a sale made within two weeks, even though in the meantime the property has enhanced in value.⁴⁸

§ 807. What execution authorized.—The principal has the right, in cases of this sort, to prescribe the terms upon which he will sell, and persons having or charged with notice of these terms can acquire no rights against the principal upon a contract which ignores or substantially deviates from them. Thus, an agent authorized to make the purchase price payable "in three years," has no implied authority to make it payable "on or before three years."⁴⁹

So authority to sell real estate in "lots as surveyed by" a person named, does not empower the agent to sell the whole tract for a gross sum or at so much per acre;⁵⁰ a letter to an agent authorizing him to sell "for $5,000, one-half cash, is not satisfied by an agreement to sell for $5,000, $200 cash, $2,300 in three weeks and the balance on time,"⁵¹ nor does authority to sell on time with interest on deferred payments justify a sale for cash;⁵² an authority to sell lands if they could be sold ⁴⁷ (Nine months later). Wasweyler v. Martin, 78 Wis. 59 (three years later), Proudfoot v. Wightman, 78 Ill. 553. Same, where six years had elapsed and the land had changed greatly in value and state of improvement: Hall v. Gambrill, 88 Fed. 709 (aff'd 92 Fed. 32). But compare Hartford v. McGillicuddy, 103 Me. 224, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 431, 12 Ann. Cas. 1083.

⁴⁸ Smith v. Fairchild, 7 Colo. 510.

⁴⁹ Jackson v. Badger, 35 Minn. 52; to the same effect, see, Dana v. Turley, 38 Minn. 106; Jones v. Holladay, 2 App. D. C. 279; Coleman v. Garriques, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 60; Henry v. Lane, 128 Fed. 243, 62 C. C. A. 625, and Monson v. Kill, 144 Ill. 248.

⁵⁰ Rice v. Tavernier, 8 Minn. 248, 83 Am. Dec. 878.

⁵¹ De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 216, 39 L. Ed. 956; to the same effect, see, Speer v. Craig, 16 Colo. 478; Feld v. Small, 17 Colo. 386; Rundle v. Cutting, 18 Colo. 337; Monson v. Kill, 144 Ill. 248; Staten v. Hammer, 121 Iowa, 499.

In Hartenbower v. Uden, 242 Ill. 823.

434, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 738, the court says: "If the written authority to the agent to sell fixes the amount of the cash payment, and the amount and date of the deferred payments, he has no authority to make a contract for a different cash payment, or for deferred payments of different dates or amounts." See also Oliver v. Sattler, 233 Ill. 536; Hoyt v. Shipherd, 70 Ill. 309.

In Breese v. Lindsay, 8 Vict. L. R. Eq. 232, it was held that an agent to sell land for cash could not sell on a month's credit. And in Gilmour v. Simon, 15 Manitoba, L. R. 205, it was held that an agent to sell land on terms requiring "$1,000 cash" cannot sell on terms that this sum shall be paid "on acceptance of title." But in Maffey v. Hobart, 14 Vict. L. R. 880, where the authority was to sell land "one fourth cash," a sale permitting the buyer to pay the one fourth in two installments a few days apart was held to be substantially authorized.

⁵² Everman v. Herndon, 71 Miss.

for a certain price does not justify a sale partly for cash and partly on time and binding the seller to furnish an abstract of title and pay taxes and interest on an existing mortgage up to a future date;⁵³ an authority to sell at auction does not justify a private sale;⁵⁴ authority to sell to one person does not justify a sale to an entirely different person;⁵⁵ an authority to sell for one price does not justify a sale for a less price;⁵⁶ and an authority to sell, the vendee to pay certain mortgages, does not justify a sale, the vendee to "assume" the mortgages, unless, perhaps, where they are not yet due.⁵⁷

§ 808. — But where an agent is authorized to sell partly for cash and partly on time, the proportions not being fixed, a sale with more than one-third cash, one-half of the balance in three and the remainder in five years, with six per cent. interest, secured by a mortgage, is held to be within the terms of the authority;⁵⁸ where the authority is to sell, the payments to be made in three equal installments, a clause providing that if the installments are not paid at the time specified, the contract shall be forfeited at the option of the seller is within the authority;⁵⁹ where the agent is authorized to make "one-half payable on or before one year," a contract to sell for "one-half payable in one year," is within the terms of the authorization;⁶⁰ and where the authority is to sell for a certain sum, "about one-half cash," a sale for that sum in cash is held to be within the terms of the authority.⁶¹

⁵³ Staten v. Hammer, 121 Iowa, 499. To the same effect, see, Strong v. Ross, 33 Ind. App. 586. See also Brown v. Grady, 16 Wyo. 151; Morton v. Morris, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 262.

⁵⁴ Davis v. Gordon, 87 Va. 559.

⁵⁵ Breen v. Rives, 16 App. Div. (N. Y.) 632, to the same effect, see Graves v. Horton, 38 Minn. 66.

⁵⁶ Field v. Small, 17 Colo. 386, to the same effect, see, Philadelphia Mortgage and Trust Co. v. Hardesty, 68 Kan. 683; Holbrook v. McCarthy, 61 Cal. 216; Bush v. Cole, 28 N. Y. 261, 84 Am. Dec. 343; Wasweyler v. Martin, 78 Wis. 59. But otherwise, where the agent is given discretion, as where he is told that as soon as he was satisfied that he was getting "the top notch in price" he should "close the deal." Vermont Marble Co. v. Mead, 85 Vt. 20.

⁵⁷ Schultz v. Griffin, 121 N. Y. 294, 18 Am. St. Rep. 825.

Authority to sell subject to a certain lease, will not justify a sale with warranty, as that the title is free from all incumbrances. Thomas v. Joslin, 30 Minn. 388.

Authority to sell with part of the price to remain on mortgage, will not justify giving the buyer the option to pay off the mortgage before the time fixed. Jordan v. Walker, 11 Victorian L. R. 346.

See also Donaldson v. Noble, 14 Vict. L. R. 1021.

⁵⁸ Smith v. Keeler, 151 Ill. 518.

⁵⁹ McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. D. 497.

⁶⁰ Deakin v. Underwood, 37 Minn. 93, 5 Am. St. Rep. 827.

⁶¹ Witherell v. Murphy, 147 Mass. 417.

Under a power to convey when the sale has been made by certain other persons, a conveyance can only effectively be made when those persons have made the sale.⁶²

§ 809. Authority to make representations as to value, quantity, location, boundaries or title.—An agent authorized merely to sell land has thereby, ordinarily, no implied power to bind his principal by representations concerning the value of the land;⁶³ the same thing is ordinarily true concerning representations as to the quality, or, perhaps, the quantity, of the land, though such representations, while not furnishing ground for action against the principal, might be sufficient to justify a rescission of the contract.⁶⁴ Representations as to location may be within the scope of such an agent's authority as being either necessary or usual,⁶⁵ and the same thing may be true respecting boundaries. In a case of the latter sort it was said: "In the sale or exchange of a tract of land, it is usual and necessary that the seller point out to the prospective buyer the boundaries of the tract—that he exhibit the thing he offers for sale to the view and inspection of the prospective buyer."⁶⁶

Representations respecting title (other than the usual covenants of warranty, hereafter referred to), or waivers of the principal's claim of title are not usually within the power of an agent merely authorized to sell.⁶⁷

⁶² Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 33 L. Ed. 923.

⁶³ See, Mayo v. Wahlgreen, 9 Colo. App. 506; Sanford v. Handy, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 260; Lake v. Tyree, 90 Va. 719 (that lots were "good building lots and valuable"). Compare Mullens v. Miller, 22 Ch. Div. 194.

⁶⁴ Nat. Iron Armor Co. v. Bruner, 19 N. J. Eq. 331 (quantity and quality); Bennett v. Judson, 21 N. Y. 238 (location and quality); McKinnon v. Vollmar, 75 Wis. 82, 17 Am. St. R. 178, 6 L. R. A. 121 (amount of timber on it). In Griswold v. Gebbie, 126 Pa. 353, 12 Am. St. R. 878, the court holds that an agent to sell an estate has implied authority to represent its acreage. An agent authorized to sell has no authority to make representations as to the nature or quality of a foundation wall. Samson v. Beale, 27 Wash.

557. No rescission if there was no agency. Reeves v. McCracken, 103 Tex. 416. Here A, contracted to sell to X; X by misrepresentations induced B to agree to buy from X. At X's request, to save one conveyance, A conveyed directly to B. Held, A not responsible for fraud of X inducing the sale to B.

⁶⁵ See, Sanford v. Handy, supra; McKinnon v. Vollmar, supra; Porter v. Beattie, 88 Wis. 22.

⁶⁶ Green v. Worman, 83 Mo. App. 568.

Where principal refers a prospective buyer to the agent to ascertain the boundaries, he is bound by the agent's representations. Beatty v. Ireland, 152 N. Y. App. Div. 588.

⁶⁷ Tondro v. Cushman, 5 Wis. 279; Iowa R. R. Land Co. v. Fehring, 126 Iowa, 1.

So an agent authorized to sell has no authority to promise that the § 810. Authority to make contract of sale justifies written contract, in usual form.—An authority to make a binding contract for the sale of land will, where there is nothing to indicate a contrary intention, carry with it by implication the authority to make a contract, in writing, where that is requisite or proper;⁶⁸ to make it in the usual form, and to include within it all usual and reasonable terms and provisions to accomplish the desired end. Thus the common provisions in well drawn contracts of this nature respecting remedies, time and place of performance, the effect of failure to perform, and the like, would doubtless be deemed authorized under this rule.⁶⁹

§ 811. Authority to sell and dispose of land implies right to convey.—A mere authority to negotiate a sale of land, or even authority to make a binding contract for its sale, of itself, involves no authority to actually convey it.⁷⁰ But, on the other hand, unless there be something in the instrument, or in the circumstances surrounding its execution, by which its scope is limited, as to the mere finding of a purchaser or the negotiation of a contract of sale, a general power to sell and dispose of real estate, if executed with the necessary formalities, carries with it the power to execute all the instruments necessary and proper to complete the sale and carry it into effect in the ordinary way.⁷¹ Said Chief Justice Shaw, “where the term ‘sale’ is used in its buyer shall have a right of way over adjoining land, owned by his principal, or that such land will not be fenced. Noftsgger v. Barkdoll, 148 Ind. 531.

But where the vendor referred the vendee to his local agent as one acquainted with the land, and equipped to explain its qualities, and the agent in so doing misrepresented, it was held a ground for rescission. A sale of coal lands. Mather v. Barnes, 146 Fed. 1000.

⁶⁸ Johnson v. Dodge, 17 Ill. 433; Blacknall v. Parish, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 70, 78 Am. Dec. 239; Keim v. Lindley (N. J.), 30 Atl. 1063, s. c. 54 N. J. Eq. 418.

⁶⁹ See Kilpatrick v. Wiley, 197 Mo. 123; Gund Brew. Co. v. Tourtelotte, 108 Minn. 71, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 210. But in Funk v. Church, 132 Iowa, 1, an agent authorized to sell, made an agreement to reimburse the purchaser if he lost a half of the land, and it was held that authority to make such a contract was not to be implied; and in Gund Brew. Co. v. Tourtelotte, supra, it was held that an agent to sell had no implied authority to agree that the buyer might have the rents from the property during the pendency of the negotiations.

⁷⁰ See Delano v. Jacoby, 96 Cal. 275, 31 Am. St. R. 201; Dayton v. Nell, 43 Minn. 246.

⁷¹ Valentine v. Piper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 85, 33 Am. Dec. 715; Hemstreet v. Burdick, 90 Ill. 444; People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406, 68 Am. Dec. 331; Fogarty v. Sawyer, 17 Cal. 589; Marr v. Given, 23 Me. 55, 39 Am. Dec. 600; Alexander v. Walter, 8 Gill (Md.), 239, 50 Am. Dec. 688; Farnham v. Thompson, 34 Minn. 330, 57 Am. Rep. 59. Of these cases, 8 Cal. 406, and 8 Gill, 239 were official sales; 17 Cal. 589, was a sale under a power conferred by mort-ordinary sense, and the general tenor and effect of the instrument is to confer on the attorney a power to dispose of real estate, the authority to execute the proper instruments required by law to carry such sale into effect is necessarily incident."⁷²

It is, of course, true in many cases, that an oral or written authority may be sufficient to justify a written contract to sell, although it would not be sufficient in form, as for example because of the lack of a seal, to authorize the execution of a deed.

§ 812. To insert usual covenants of warranty.—Although the decisions are not entirely harmonious, the better rule seems to be that a general power to sell and convey land, without restrictions, as distinguished from a mere authority to release or quitclaim the principal's interest therein, carries with it authority to insert in the conveyance the ordinary covenants of general warranty, where such sales are usually made with such covenants,⁷³ but not to make any unusual or special warranty, as of the quantity or quality of the land sold.⁷⁴ A fortiori may the agent warrant where he is expressly authorized to sell on such terms as he shall deem most eligible.⁷⁵

The fact that the agent inserts an unauthorized warranty will not ordinarily prevent the deed from having effect as a conveyance.⁷⁶

§ 813. Authority to sell does not justify a mortgage.—A power to sell, however, conveys no implied authority to mortgage.⁷⁷ Said Judge gage; the others were sales under formal powers of attorney, all apparently, under seal.

⁷² In Valentine v. Piper, supra.

A person entrusted with a deed for the purpose of getting the grantor's signatures and then delivering it, is clothed with at least apparent authority "to close the deal" on their part. Bretz v. Connor, 140 Wis. 269.

Secret instructions as to the conditions upon which a deed is to be delivered do not bind purchaser who has no notice of them. Thornton v. Pinckard, 157 Ala. 206.

Authority given to A to convey land when sold by B, does not justify a conveyance of any land not so sold. Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 33 L. Ed. 923.

⁷³ Vanada v. Hopkins, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 285, 19 Am. Dec. 92; Peters v. Farnsworth, 15 Vt. 155, 40

Am. Dec. 671; Le Roy v. Beard, 8 How. (U. S.) 451, 12 L. Ed. 1151; Backman v. Charlestown, 42 N. H. 125; Farnham v. Thompson, 34 Minn. 330, 57 Am. Rep. 59; Dimmick v. Sprinkel, 59 Wash. 329; McLaughlin v. Wheeler, 1 S. D. 497; Schultz v. Griffin, 121 N. Y. 294, 18 Am. St. Rep. 825. Same rule applies to an authority to mortgage. Richmond v. Voorhees, 10 Wash. 316. See also Bronson v. Coffin, 118 Mass. 156; Cf. Yazel v. Palmer, 88 Ill. 597. Contra: Stengel v. Sergeant, 74 N. J. Eq. 20.

⁷⁴ National Iron Armor Co. v. Bruner, 19 N. J. Eq. 331.

⁷⁵ Le Roy v. Beard, supra.

⁷⁶ Kane v. Sholars, 41 Tex. Civ. App. 154; Robinson v. Lowe, 50 W. Va. 75.

⁷⁷ Hawxhurst v. Rathgeb, 119 Cal. 531, 63 Am. St. R. 142; Jeffrey v. Hursh, 49 Mich. 31; Wood v. Good-

Cooley, "The principal determines for himself what authority he will confer upon his agent, and there can be no implication from his authorizing a sale of his lands that he intends that his agent may at discretion charge him with the responsibilities and duties of a mortgagor."⁷⁸

§ 814. Authority to receive payment.—The receipt of so much of the purchase money as is to be paid down, is within the general scope of an authority to sell and convey,⁷⁹ or to make a binding contract to sell upon terms including a payment at the time of the execution of the contract, but is held not to be within the power of an agent authorized merely by parol to contract for the sale.⁸⁰ Mere authority to receive the immediate payment will not, however, warrant the receipt of subsequent payments.⁸¹ But an agent authorized to contract for the ridge, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 117, 52 Am. Dec. 771; Albany Fire Ins. Co. v. Bay, 4 N. Y. 9; Ferry v. Laible, 31 N. J. Eq. 566; Kinney v. Mathews, 69 Mo. 520; Patapsco, etc., Co. v. Morrison, Fed. Cas. No. 10,792, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 395; Devaynes v. Robinson, 24 Beav. 86; Morris v. Watson, 15 Minn. 212; Minnesota Stoneware Co. v. McCrossen, 110 Wis. 316, 84 Am. St. R. 927; Campbell v. Foster Home Association, 163 Pa. 609, 43 Am. St. R. 818, 26 L. R. A. 117; Salem Nat. Bank v. White, 159 Ill. 136; Morris v. Ewing, 8 N. Dak. 99; First Nat. Bank v. Hicks, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 269.

⁷⁸ In Jeffrey v. Hursh, supra.

⁷⁹ Peck v. Harriott, 6 Serg. & R. (Penn.) 146, 9 Am. Dec. 415; Carson v. Smith, 5 Minn. 78, 77 Am. Dec. 539; Mann v. Robinson, 19 W. Va. 49, 42 Am. Rep. 771; Alexander v. Jones, 64 Iowa, 207; Yerby v. Grigsby, 9 Leigh (Va.), 387; Johnson v. McGruder, 15 Mo. 365; Goodale v. Wheeler, 11 N. H. 424.

⁸⁰ Smith v. Browne, 132 N. C. 365; Dyer v. Duffy, 39 W. Va. 148, 24 L. R. A. 339. See also Mann v. Robinson, supra; Stewart v. Wood, 63 Mo. 252.

One of three tenants in common was given parol authority to agree to sell their land. In the presence of the other two, the deeds were made out; and one of the parties delivered them to the purchaser in the presence of the one acting as agent, but in the absence of the other. The deed recited, in the usual manner, the receipt of the purchase price. The purchaser paid to the one acting as agent, the share of the absent one, although he had been expressly directed not to receive it. Held that the absent one could recover her share of the price of the purchaser, because an authority to an agent to make a contract of sale, does not necessarily give an authority to receive payment. Shaw v. Williams, 100 N. C. 272. A fortiori a broker who has mere authority to bring the parties together, has no authority to receive payment. Halsell v. Renfrow, 14 Okl. 674, aff'd 202 U. S. 287.

⁸¹ Mann's Ex'rs v. Robinson, 19 W. Va. 49, 42 Am. Rep. 771. See Johnson v. Craig, 21 Ark. 533. No authority in the face of an express provision in the contract to the contrary. Metz v. Harbor, etc., Savings Ass'n, 117 N. Y. App. Div. 825. Of course, the agent's authority over the matter of the sale of his principal's land may be so general as to give him power to receive payments at any time, or to waive defaults in paying at the time fixed. McDonald v. Kingsbury, 16 Cal. App. 244.

sale, with the price to be paid in installments, and upon payment of the installments to execute the conveyance, is held to have implied power to receive the installments.⁸²

When authorized to receive payment he must, like other agents similarly empowered, accept cash only or its equivalent, and he has no implied power to receive in payment notes, checks, or other similar tokens,⁸³ and a fortiori not notes given by himself for which the principal is not responsible.⁸⁴ Authority to receive such payments as are to be made as incidents of the sale, does not justify the receipt of payments before any sale is entered into, and, obviously, does not justify the receipt of payments upon a contract which the agent had no authority to make.⁸⁵

§ 815. Conveyance must be for consideration moving to principal.—An agent authorized to sell and convey land will, unless the contrary appears, be deemed to be authorized to convey it only upon a sale, that is, upon a transfer for a consideration, and for a consideration which moves to the principal.⁸⁶ The land presumptively represents value and if the agent sells and conveys it, it must be expected that he is to obtain something like a substantial equivalent.⁸⁷

§ 816. Authority to give credit.—The power to sell land does not of itself imply an authority to sell on credit. The presumption is that the sale is to be for cash.⁸⁸ But where the agent is authorized to sell "on such terms as to him shall seem meet," he may grant a reasonable ⁸² Peck v. Harriott, supra; Carson v. Smith, supra.

⁸³ Ormsby v. Graham, 123 Iowa, 202; Wilkin v. Voss, 120 Iowa, 500; Runyon v. Snell, 116 Ind. 164, 9 Am. St. R. 893. But compare Galbraith v. Weber, 58 Wash. 132, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 341.

⁸⁴ Runyon v. Snell, supra.

⁸⁵ Schaeffer v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 38 Mont. 459; Brown v. Grady, 16 Wyo. 151 (receipt of earnest money upon an unauthorized contract does not bind principal); Jackson v. Badger, 35 Minn. 52 (same).

⁸⁶ Alcorn v. Buschke, 133 Cal. 655; Hunter v. Eastham, 95 Tex. 648. In Neill v. Kleiber, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 552, a power to sell and "to do with the said land as if the same were his own property," was held to authorize a sale on credit for the agent's own benefit.

⁸⁷ Hunter v. Eastham, 95 Tex. 648; Lewis v. Lewis, 203 Pa. 194; Alcorn v. Buschke, 133 Cal. 655.

⁸⁸ Lumpkin v. Wilson, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 555; to the same effect, see Alcorn v. Gieseke, 158 Cal. 396; Lightfoot v. Horst, 103 Tex. 643; Bowles v. Rice, 107 Va. 51; McKay v. McKinnon, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 122 S. W. 440; Edwards v. Davidson (Tex. Civ. App.), 79 S. W. 48; Staten v. Hammer, 121 Iowa, 499; Dyer v. Duffy, 39 W. Va. 148; Winders v. Hill, 141 N. Car. 694; and, as a matter of course, where the power of attorney itself authorizes only a sale for cash, a sale on credit may be treated as void by the principal. Whitley v. James, 121 Ga. 521.

The power will be strictly con-credit.⁸⁰ An authority to sell on credit, but not fixing the time to be given, implies a power to grant a reasonable time.⁹⁰

§ 817. Authority to sell does not authorize exchange or barter.—Neither will a power to sell and convey land imply an authority to barter or exchange it for other property, or to take the pay in merchandise, services, and the like. It is presumed, in the absence of anything showing a contrary intent, that the land is to be sold only, and sold for cash.⁹¹

§ 818. — Or gift.—A fortiori has the agent no authority to give the land away, or to convey it without any consideration moving to the principal.⁹²

strued. A power to sell for cash at any time within thirty days, will not justify giving a credit for not more than thirty days. Bowles v. Rice, supra.

⁸⁰ Carson v. Smith, 5 Minn. 78, 77 Am. Dec. 539.

In Morton v. Morris, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 262, the agent was given authority to sell on such terms as "to him shall seem meet." He sold the land and took as part of the consideration a non-negotiable note not due until one year after the removal of an attachment lien in which the purchaser was interested and of which the owner had no notice. The court said: "Were it not for the fact that it [the power], empowers the agent" to sell on such terms as to him shall seem meet, "there could be no implication that authority was to sell on credit, but the presumption would be that the sale should be for cash. As it is he was authorized to sell on reasonable credit. * * * Is twelve months after * * * the ending of a lawsuit a reasonable credit to be given by an agent for the payment of the purchase money due for the sale of his principal's property? As a matter of law, we think not."

⁹⁰ Brown v. Central Land Co., 42 Cal. 257.

⁹¹ Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Trudo v. Anderson, 10 Mich. 357, 81 Am. Dec. 795; Mann v. Robinson, 19 W. Va. 49, 42 Am.

Rep. 771; Lumpkin v. Wilson, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 555; Rhine v. Blake, 59 Tex. 240; Morrill v. Cone, 22 How. (U. S.) 75, 16 L. Ed. 253; Hampton v. Moorhead, 62 Iowa, 91; Dupont v. Wertheman, 10 Cal. 354; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Paul v. Grimm, 165 Pa. 139, 44 Am. St. R. 648; s. c. 183 Pa. 326; Mora v. Murphy, 83 Cal. 12; Chapman v. Hughes, 134 Cal. 641; Edwards v. Davidson (Tex. Civ. App.), 79 S. W. 48; Kemper v. Rosenthal, 81 Tex. 12.

An agent, to whom a deed has been given with the name of the grantee in blank, and who is authorized to insert the name of a purchaser and deliver the deed to him, has therefrom no implied authority to deliver the deed upon an unauthorized exchange for other land, or to bind his principal by an agreement that the principal will assume and pay a mortgage upon such other land. Pease v. Fink, 3 Cal. App. 371.

⁹² In Randall v. Duff, 79 Cal. 115, 3 L. R. A. 754, it was conceded that, where the authority was to sell, a conveyance by way of gift passed no title, but that a bona fide mortgagee of the donee had a valid lien upon the land to the extent of his money advanced; and in Van Zandt v. Furlong, 63 Hun, 630, it was held that, although an attorney with mere authority to sell could not make a valid transfer without valuable consideration, yet a subsequent purchaser from the transferee

§ 819. — Or giving option to buy.—An agent with authority to sell has, thereby, no implied authority to give an option to buy. Such an option would usually be a hindrance rather than a help. It would, during its term, prevent a sale to any other person, and, at the same time, a sale to the one holding the option would not be insured.⁹³

§ 820. — Or permitting waste or sale, of timber separate from land.—An agent or attorney who has power only to bargain and sell land subject to confirmation, has no authority to license anyone to enter thereon and commit waste or cut timber, nor has he power to sell the timber apart from the land.⁹⁴

§ 821. — Or changing boundaries of land.—Nor has an agent, authorized to sell or rent real estate, any implied authority to agree with an adjoining land owner upon a change of the boundaries of the principal's land.⁹⁵

§ 822. — Or partition.—Authority to sell and convey land does not authorize a partition of the land, in which the principal has an interest as tenant in common.⁹⁶

§ 823. — Or dedication to public use.—Mere authority to sell and convey land does not imply power to dedicate any part of it to the public use;⁹⁷ but a power "to sell, convey, plat and subdivide in such manner as to make the property marketable and to acknowledge and record such plat," implies a power to dedicate such portion as may be necessary to the public use.⁹⁸ So a power to lay out land in order to dispose of it, implies authority to dedicate the necessary highways,⁹⁹ and authority to purchase a town site and lay it out, implies power to dedicate proper and appropriate streets.¹

§ 824. — Or conveyance to pay principal's debts, or assignment for creditors.—Authority to sell land does not authorize a conveyance of it in settlement of a pre-existing claim against the princi-could not recover back his consideration by offering to prove, simply that the prior conveyance had been made by an agent with mere authority to sell and had, in fact, been made without consideration, where he himself had not been disturbed.

⁹³ Field v. Small, 17 Colo. 386; Tibbs v. Zirkle, 55 W. Va. 49, 104 Am. St. R. 977; Swift v. Erwin, — Ark. —, 148 S. W. 267; Wynkoop v. Shoemaker, 37 App. D. C. 258. See also Dyer v. Duffy, 39 W. Va. 148, 24 L. R. A. 339.

⁹⁴ Hubbard v. Elmer, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 446, 22 Am. Dec. 590; St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Bramlette (Tex. Civ. App.), 35 S. W. 25.

⁹⁵ Fore v. Campbell, 82 Va. 808.

⁹⁶ Borel v. Rollins, 30 Cal. 408; Wirt v. McEnery, 21 Fed. 233.

⁹⁷ Wirt v. McEnery, 21 Fed. 233; Gosselin v. Chicago, 103 Ill. 623; Anderson v. Bigelow, 16 Wash. 198.

⁹⁸ Wirt v. McEnery, supra.

⁹⁹ State v. Atherton, 16 N. H. 203.

¹ Barteau v. West, 23 Wis. 416.

pal,² nor an assignment of it for the benefit of the principal's creditors.³ But where the authority was to sell the land and pay the proceeds to the principal's creditor, it was held that a conveyance of the land directly to the creditor in satisfaction of the debt, was within the terms of the power.⁴

§ 825. — Or conveyance in payment of agent's debts.—An agent authorized to sell and convey real estate can do so only for and in behalf of his principal.⁵ He may not convey it in trust for the payment of his own debts;⁶ nor may he make the conveyance directly, for the payment of his own debt, or the joint debt of himself and one of his principals.⁷

§ 826. — Or conveyance in trust for support of principal's child, etc.—Where a wife was authorized to transact any business in connection with buying, selling, transferring or mortgaging real estate as agent of her husband, it was held that a conveyance in trust for the support of their infant daughter for a period of fifteen years was not within the authority given.⁸ Neither may she convey it in satisfaction of advances made to her by their son.⁹

§ 827. — Or rescinding or altering contract.—An agent, authorized merely to make a contract for the sale of land, exhausts his

² Skirvin v. O'Brien, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 1; Frost v. Erath Cattle Co., 81 Tex. 505, 26 Am. St. R. 831.

³ Gouldy v. Metcalf, 75 Tex. 455.

Neither does it authorize a conveyance in satisfaction of a debt which has been barred by limitations. Smith v. Powell, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 373. Nor does an authority to one of several heirs to sell real estate, authorize a conveyance of it in satisfaction of a judgment against such heir and his mother. Folts v. Ferguson (Tex. Civ. App.), 24 S. W. 657. But where the agent had a partnership interest in the land, and had the complete management and control of it, it was held that a conveyance by him in consideration of a cancellation of the partnership notes was authorized. Kempner v. Rosenthal, 81 Tex. 12. And where the authority was "to make a sale or other disposition of the" property, and "to execute all deeds," etc., it was held that a conveyance to an attorney for legal services in locating and establishing a town site on the land, was within the terms of the power. Jones v. Gibbs, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 626.

⁴ Bertschy v. Bank of Sheboygan, 89 Wis. 473.

⁵ Agent to sell and take part payment in notes, may accept only notes payable to his principal. Gourlay v. Carson, 16 Victorian L. R. 850.

⁶ Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296; Runyon v. Snell, 116 Ind. 164.

⁷ Hunter v. Eastham, 95 Tex. 648. Same case again (Tex. Civ. App.), 81 S. W. 336.

⁸ Coulter v. Portland Trust Co., 20 Or. 469. Same case, 23 Or. 131.

There is good discussion of the cases.

⁹ Lewis v. Lewis, 203 Pa. 194. The wife here was authorized to collect certain debts, etc., for her support. She was also authorized to sell certain land. She made the conveyance in question in consideration of certain payments made by the son, out of his earnings, for her support.

power with the completion of that contract; and has thereafter no implied power to revoke or rescind it, or to release the purchaser from its obligations.¹⁰ So an agent, who has made a contract to sell and received a part payment thereon, has no implied power to return the money because he is erroneously led to believe that the principal's title was imperfect.¹¹

Such an agent will, moreover, have ordinarily no power to change or alter the completed contract or to substitute another in its place,¹² though his authority over the subject-matter may be sufficiently comprehensive to justify it.¹³

§ 828. — Or discharge of mortgage.—An agent authorized merely to sell land has therefrom no implied power to release or discharge mortgages belonging to his principal;¹⁴ but an agent having general authority to deal in land, may bind his principal by the assumption of a mortgage as part of the purchase price.¹⁵

§ 829. — Or investment of proceeds of sale.—A power of attorney authorizing the agent to take possession of and sell all the property of his principal, and collect his debts, does not authorize the agent to re-invest the funds of his principal or to engage therewith in any schemes of speculation, however tempting.¹⁶

¹⁰ Luke v. Grigg, 4 Dak. 287, 30 N. W. 170; West End Hotel & Land Co. v. Crawford, 120 N. C. 347.

¹¹ Montgomery v. Pacific Coast Land Bureau, 94 Cal. 284, 28 Am. St. R. 122.

¹² In Hill v. Bess (Tex. Civ. App.), 40 S. W. 202, it was held that authority to sell land and accept and collect notes in payment therefor does not authorize an agent, after the deed had been delivered and the original purchase money notes forwarded to the principal, to secure and collect duplicate notes in substitution for the originals upon the erroneous but honest supposition that the originals had been lost in the mail.

¹³ Thus in Francis v. Litchfield, 82 Iowa, 726, it was held that where a general agent in the state had authority to sell the lands of a non-resident principal, collect the payments, and transact business generally in connection therewith, he had implied authority to make a contract with a purchaser whereby the principal was to take a second mortgage on the land instead of a first mortgage, in consideration that the purchaser would make a part payment to the principal out of the proceeds of the first mortgage, and give some additional security. There was also evidence of ratification.

So in Neppach v. Oregon & Cal. R. Co., 46 Or. 374, it was held that a general agent, intrusted with the entire management and control of the land business of a corporation, might bind his principal by extending the time for deferred payments and waiving a forfeiture for the delay.

¹⁴ Barger v. Miller, Fed. Cas. No. 979, 4 Wash. (U. S. C. C.) 280.

¹⁵ Schley v. Fryer, 100 N. Y. 71.

¹⁶ Stoddart v. United States, 4 Ct. Cl. 511. See Porges v. U. S. Mortgage & Trust Co., 203 N. Y. 181, re-

II.

OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO LEASE LAND.

§ 830. In general.—It has been seen in an earlier section how authority to lease land may be conferred.¹⁷ If the lease is required to be under seal, authority under seal would at common law be requisite.¹⁸ Authority to make leases for certain periods is, by statute, often required to be in writing.¹⁹ In other cases, oral authority will suffice.²⁰

Whatever the method employed, the authority must contemplate a leasing.²¹ Authority to sell, therefore, would not suffice; authority to care for property, or to collect rents, or exhibit the property to prospective tenants, would not ordinarily suffice;²² authority to "manage" property would be more comprehensive, and might under many circumstances justify the making of leases.²³ versing 135 N. Y. App. Div. 484, and holding that where a power to sell was accompanied by express power to use proceeds in effecting a redemption of mortgaged land, the agent may not convert proceeds of a sale in the form of a check payable to his principal into cash and deposit the same in his individual banking account.

¹⁷ See ante, § 229.

¹⁸ See ante, § 212.

¹⁹ See ante, § 229. Acceptance of rent does not ratify the making of a lease for more than the statutory period where the principal was ignorant that it was so made. Larkin v. Radosta, 119 App. Div. 515. Mere knowledge that the tenant is making improvements is not enough unless they are of the sort which a tenant for the shorter term would not be likely to make. Clement v. Amusement Co., 70 N. J. Eq. 677, 118 Am. St. R. 747. The written authority required may be made up of several writings. Paris v. Johnstone, 155 Ala. 403.

²⁰ See ante, § 229.

²¹ See Bonnazza v. Schlitz Brewing Co., 155 Mich. 36, where the case failed because there was held to be no evidence upon this point. See also Howard v. Carpenter, 11 Md. 259.

²² In Owens v. Swanton, 25 Wash. 112, a non-resident owner of lands left them in charge of his brother who being temporarily absent deputized another person to "collect rents, procure tenants and otherwise look after the property." Held that this deputy had no power to bind the owner by a lease for a definite term, in this case eighteen months.

The mere power to collect rent does not confer authority to lease (Dieckman v. Weirich, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2340, 73 S. W. 1119); or to make a new lease or change an existing one (Indianapolis Mfg. Carpenters' Union v. Cleveland, etc., Ry. Co., 45 Ind. 281).

Authority to lease premises for a certain year is not inferable from facts that the alleged agent had sometimes collected rent drafts of the landlord on the lessee or given his own receipt for other rent due, or that he had previously leased the same premises. Well v. Zodiac, 34 La. Ann. 982.

²³ In Duncan v. Hartman, 143 Pa. 595, 24 Am. St. R. 570 (149 Pa. 114), an agent was authorized to "act as

§ 831. What execution authorized.—In order to bind his principal, the agent to lease must, like other agents, confine his acts within the terms and conditions of his authority. Thus an agent authorized to lease an entire tract of land for a given period for a stated rent beginning at a certain time, may not bind his principal by a lease of a part of the land for a different rent and for a term beginning at a different time,²⁴ nor may an agent authorized to lease for a certain term, bind his principal by a lease for that term but which gives the lessee the option of a renewal for a longer period.²⁵ Neither does a power of attorney to a life tenant to make a lease for twenty-one years or one for one, two or three lives, authorize a lease for ninety-nine years determinable upon three lives.²⁶ But where the authority of a life tenant was to lease the property for such term or terms of years as she may deem proper, provided that no such term or terms should exceed the period of fifteen years, or should contain any clause of renewal, and that nothing in the power should be construed to authorize a lease for a longer period than fifteen years, it was held that the power of the tenant was not exhausted by one lease for fifteen years, but that she might, at the expiration of the first term, make a new lease for a term not to exceed fifteen years.²⁷

An agent to take a lease may not bind his principal by covenants to repair the premises so as to make them suitable for his principal's purposes, or to rebuild them in case of fire;²⁸ but where the agent, who resided in another state, was authorized to take a lease of lands our agent for our properties * * * and honestly and diligently manage said properties" for the term of one year. The properties embraced farms, mineral lands and wild lands. "It is conceded," said the court, "that it would not authorize the sale of the land, while on the other hand it is equally clear that it would authorize leases in the ordinary form for ordinary terms." It was, however, held not to authorize an exclusive grant to quarry, take and sell stone from the lands for a term of fifteen years.

The general agent of a corporation in charge of its lands, buildings, etc., cannot, in virtue of his authority to manage the affairs of the corporation, make a lease for the purpose of trying the title to land upon which he has entered for condition broken, under a vote of the corporation authorizing him to so enter but silent as to the lease. Gillis v. Bailey, 17 N. H. 18.

A lease made for three years by an agent of an owner abroad having authority from the owner "to take charge of the land while he was gone and make it pay the best way he could," is terminable by the owner upon his return. Antoni v. Belknap, 102 Mass. 193.

²⁴ Borderre v. Den, 106 Cal. 594.

²⁵ Schumacher v. Pabst Brewing Co., 78 Minn. 50.

²⁶ Roe d. Brune v. Prideaux, 10 East, 158.

²⁷ Taussig v. Reel, 134 Mo. 530.

²⁸ Halbut v. Forrest City, 34 Ark. 246.

in that state, it was held that he might, upon the lessor's refusal to accept the principal's credit, give his own note and, after it was paid, recover the amount from his principal.²⁹

Acts of the agent, within the apparent scope of his authority, would, as in other cases, bind the principal, though they were in violation of his secret instructions.³⁰

§ 832. Authority to execute a lease, in the usual form, with usual terms.—Authority to actually lease premises would carry with it, by implication, the power to execute and deliver the necessary or usual documents, to make them in the ordinary form, and to insert in them the usual and ordinary terms, covenants and conditions. Under a general power of this sort, the agent would be justified in making a necessary and usual covenant to repair the premises,³¹ or to furnish heat.³²

§ 833. Authority to make representations as to condition of premises, ownership, etc.—It has been seen in an earlier section that an agent authorized to sell land has, under many circumstances, power to bind his principal by representations concerning the location and boundaries of the land sold.³³ Hence, it is said, "if an agent authorized to sell has authority to point out the location of land he desires to sell, it is difficult to see why an agent to lease has not authority to describe the building and its surroundings which he desires to lease." It was therefore held that an agent, authorized to lease a building, who falsely represents that a partition wall in the building was fire proof makes his principal liable for damages.³⁴ It was conceded that ²⁹ Irons v. Cook, 33 N. C. 203.

Where an agent had authority to lease upon taking security for the payment of the rent, but there was no provision as to what security or in what form, and the agent made a lease to begin at a future date and arranged for security to be given before the term began, and the tenant offered to give the security so agreed upon, it was held that the principal was bound. Paris v. Johnson, 155 Ala. 403.

³⁰ As where an agent, who apparently had general authority, made a lease for a year though he had been instructed to rent by the month only. Babin v. Ensley, 14 N. Y. App. Div. 548. See also Johnson v. Ehrman Brewing Co., 66 N. Y. App. Div. 103.

³¹ In White v. Clow, 135 Ill. App. 464, the court said: "Authority to rent the property included authority to make a lease with such conditions as are customary in leases and to bind [the principal] by such a contract."

But in McMichen v. Brown, 10 Ga. App. 506, it was held that an agent to rent had no implied authority to agree that the landlord would pay a certain sum for improvements made by the tenant.

³² See National Loan Co. v. Bleasdale, 140 Iowa. 695.

³³ See ante, § 809.

³⁴ Matteson v. Rice, 116 Wis. 328. Agent to lease has apparent authority to describe the lands to be leased. Wilson v. Sale, 41 Pa. Super. 566.

In Daley v. Quick, 99 Cal. 179, it the facts might not justify an inference of authority to warrant the fire proof quality of the wall, but it was said that "cases may and frequently do arise where the agent may have no authority to warrant, and yet, from the character of his agency, his principal may be held liable in tort for false representations made by him."

An agent to make leases would also undoubtedly have implied authority to make such representations concerning the general ownership of the premises, the right to lease them at that time, the determination of previous interests, and the like, as are naturally and usually involved in such transactions.³⁵ So, also, doubtless, to make representations and give information as to the facts concerning those matters which it is important for a prospective tenant to know, which are usually inquired about, and which are not open to the tenant's observation.³⁶

§ 834. Authority to receive payment of rent.—An agent authorized to make a lease, would, like the agent authorized to sell, have implied authority to receive so much of the rent as was to be paid as a part of that transaction; but he would not thereby necessarily have authority to receive payment of subsequent installments. That would depend upon the general and continuing character of his authority.

Where he is authorized to receive payment of rent, he must as in other cases receive it in money only, and certainly has no authority to

was held that the principal was not liable for the representations of an agent (not authorized to lease the premises, but having merely authority to make repairs when requested by the tenants), that the premises did not need repairs, the tenants being in as good a position to discover the defects as the agent.

But in Martin v. Richards, 155 Mass. 381, it was held that where the agent who leased the premises referred to one H as the person authorized to make repairs, the knowledge of H of offensive odors which made the premises unfit for occupancy, was imputable to the principal, and the latter was liable to the tenant for injuries caused thereby.

In Williams v. Goldberg, 58 Misc. 211, the principal was held liable to tenant for injuries caused by the falling of plastering, after she had remained in possession relying upon the rental agent's false representations that the plastering had been examined and found safe.

³⁵ Mullens v. Miller, 22 Ch. Div. 194; Finch v. Causey, 107 Va. 124; Crump v. Mining Co., 7 Gratt. (Va.) 352, 56 Am. Dec. 116.

But not after the transaction is closed. Finch v. Causey, supra; Lake v. Tyree, 90 Va. 719.

No general authority to bind by representations as to the title so as to give a defence to an action for rent against a tenant who has not been disturbed by any outstanding claims. Tondro v. Cushman, 5 Wis. 279.

³⁶ See Matteson v. Rice, 116 Wis. 328; Cornfoot v. Fowke, 6 M. & W. 358.

allow it to be used to pay his own debts.³⁷ He must also obtain rent, and has no authority to permit tenants to remain without paying.³⁸

§ 835. Authority to lease does not authorize lease to begin in future.—Authority to lease lands must ordinarily, when nothing is said as to the term, be deemed to contemplate only the making of a lease which shall begin immediately or substantially so; and therefore one made to begin at some future time would ordinarily be beyond the agent's authority.³⁹ It seems to be immaterial, in this respect, that the power under which the lease is made is one which is irrevocable during the life time of the agent.⁴⁰

§ 836. Authority to change terms, substitute tenants, accept surrender of lease, or give notice to quit.—An agent having authority merely to make a lease would have, thereby, no implied power to subsequently change the terms of the lease so made; consent to a substitution of tenants; or accept a surrender of the lease.⁴¹ But an agent having general power to manage premises, lease them when vacant, and collect accruing rents, would have implied power to consent to the surrender of a lease⁴² or to the substitution of tenants,⁴³ or to extend the term of a lease,⁴⁴ or to reduce the rent, if done within reasonable limits,⁴⁵ or to waive payment entirely during a time when the premises are untenable as the result of a fire, if, by so doing, he induces the tenants to remain after the repairs are made.⁴⁶ Such an agent would also have implied power to terminate a tenancy and give notice to quit.⁴⁷

§ 837. ——— To renew or extend a lease.—Authority to make a particular lease, or to lease upon a particular occasion would not justify a subsequent renewal of the lease or an extension of the term.

³⁷ National Loan Co. v. Bleasdale, 140 Iowa, 695.

³⁸ Johnson v. Hulett, 56 Tex. Civ. App. 11.

³⁹ Taussig v. Reel, 134 Mo. 530.

⁴⁰ Roe d. Brune v. Prideaux, 10 East, 158.

⁴¹ See Wallace v. Dinniny, 11 N. Y. Misc. 317 (aff'd 12 Misc. 635); Wilson v. Lester, 64 Barb. 431; Faville v. Lundvall, 106 Iowa, 135; Hamm Brewing Co. v. Wiggam, 27 S. D. 613.

⁴² Lillian Realty Co. v. Erdurm, 120 N. Y. Supp. 749. But not where the lease expressly requires the consent of some other specified person.

Berry v. Broadway Co., 148 N. Y. App. Div. 159.

⁴³ Amory v. Kanoffsky, 117 Mass. 351, 19 Am. Rep. 416. Or consent to a sub-letting. Underwood Typewriter Co. v. Century Realty Co., 165 Mo. App. 131.

⁴⁴ Pittsburg Mfg. Co. v. Fidelity Title & Trust Co., 207 Pa. 223. See also Noble v. Burney, 124 Ga. 960.

⁴⁵ Goldsmith v. Schroeder, 93 N. Y. App. Div. 206.

⁴⁶ Ireland v. Hyde, 34 Misc. (N. Y.) 546.

⁴⁷ Doe v. Mizem, 2 Moo. & Rob. 56; Benton v. Stokes, 109 Md. 117. See also McClung v. McPherson, 47 Or. 73.

But such an act would fall within the power of an agent having a general and continuing authority to let premises or make leases. He might renew or extend an old lease wherever he could have made a new lease to the same parties and upon the same terms.⁴⁸

§ 838. Authority to bind principal to furnish irrigation, supplies, stock, etc.—An agent authorized to lease lands would thereby have, ordinarily, no authority to agree to such an unusual stipulation as that the principal shall, without charge, irrigate the lands,⁴⁹ or to bind his principal to furnish agricultural supplies to the tenant for putting in his crop.⁵⁰ Where the authority was general in its nature and authorized a lease on such terms as the agent should deem best, it was held that the agent might bind his principal separately to furnish stock; but he could not, by leasing his own lands with those of his principal, make her jointly liable with him for such stock.⁵¹ An authority to lease does not include the power to bind the principal on a partnership agreement in respect to the use of the land;⁵² nor does authority to lease land ordinarily justify an agreement to make improvements thereon.⁵³

§ 839. Authority to waive liens.—An agent authorized merely to lease lands would clearly have no implied authority, ordinarily, to waive or release his principal's lien upon the crops or other property, whether the lien was contractual or statutory: but where the evidence showed that the agent had authority to lease, collect rents, direct repairs, authorize a tenant to sell crops to pay taxes and purchase fencing, etc., and otherwise indicated the general scope of his authority, it was held sufficient to justify the jury in finding a general agency which would include authority to release the principal's lien on a part of the crop which he permitted the tenant to sell.⁵⁴

§ 840. Authority to mortgage, or to impair or defeat the principal's title.—An authority to lease lands, even though given in broad terms and including a power to sell, does not justify the making of a ⁴⁸ Pittsburg Mfg. Co. v. Fidelity Title & Trust Co., 207 Pa. 223; Sten-erwald v. Jackson, 123 App. Div. 569.

⁴⁹ Durkee v. Carr, 38 Or. 189; Anderson v. Adams, 43 Or. 621.

⁵⁰ Loftin v. Crossland, 94 N. C. 76.

⁵¹ La Point v. Scott, 36 Vt. 603.

Nor may an agent to lease construct ditches on the land of his principal, for the purpose of draining the agent's own land adjoining, and thus render the principal liable for injuries caused by the negligent construction of the ditches. Harvey v. Mason City R. Co., 129 Iowa, 465, 113 Am. St. R. 483, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 973.

⁵² Providence Machine Co. v. Browning, 72 S. C. 424.

⁵³ Peddicord v. Berk, 74 Kan. 236.

⁵⁴ Fishbaugh v. Spunaugle, 118 Iowa, 337.

mortgage upon the lands.⁵⁵ Neither does authority to lease lands and collect the rents justify licensing a telegraph company to erect poles in the highway in front of the lands.⁵⁶ Nor does authority to lease a particular piece of property confer authority to recognize an outstanding title asserted by a third person.⁵⁷ Nor does a formal power of attorney to lease lands and to compromise claims (but which expressly withholds the power to sell the same) authorize a conveyance of the land in settlement of the claims.⁵⁸

III.

OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE LAND.

§ 841. When authority exists.—The authority of an agent to purchase land is subject to many of the considerations applicable to the authority to purchase personal property, considered in the following subdivision. Like that authority, it may be conferred expressly or may arise from implication.⁵⁹ Land being much less frequently the subject of commercial transactions, and usually involving considerable amounts, authority for its purchase is more frequently specially conferred and less commonly results from implication.⁶⁰ It is not, however, impossible that the authority should arise by implication. Thus, the managing officer of a railway in process of construction would undoubtedly in many cases have implied authority to buy necessary land for right of way.⁶¹ The managing agent of a principal generally engaged in buying and selling real estate, might often be found to have such authority;⁶² and the managing agent of other enterprises might also have the authority when found to be essential to the accomplishment of the objects confided to his care.

§ 842. Authority to make a binding contract.—As in the case of the agent authorized to sell, it may be found that the authority to pur-

⁵⁵ First Nat. Bank v. Hicks, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 269.

⁵⁶ American Telegraph & Tel. Co. v. Jones, 78 Ill. App. 372.

⁵⁷ MacDonald v. O'Neil, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 364; Cameron & Co. v. Blackwell, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 414.

⁵⁸ Wells v. Heddenburg, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 3.

⁵⁹ As has been seen in § 230, ante, authority to purchase land is not usually required to be conferred by writing. But see Davis v. Brigham, 56 Or. 41, Ann. Cas. 1912, B, 1340.

⁶⁰ Authority to purchase an execution which has been levied upon land does not justify a purchase of the land itself. Hood v. Hendrickson, 122 Ga. 795.

⁶¹ See Johnson v. Railway Co., 116 N. Car. 926.

⁶² See Schley v. Fryer, 100 N. Y. 71.

chase is, under the circumstances, merely a power of negotiation, authorizing the agent to find the seller but not authorizing him to make a binding contract. Where, however, it is evident that he was expected to consummate the negotiations, the agent could bind his principal by a definite contract of purchase.⁶³

§ 843. Authority to agree upon terms.—Authority to purchase land will usually be a special one, confined to a particular piece of land to be purchased on specified terms. Where it is so, the rules governing special authority will apply to it. Where the agent has not been limited as to subject-matter or terms, he would have implied authority to select the land and agree upon the terms, within the range of what is usual and reasonable.⁶⁴ Where he is authorized to agree upon the terms, his authority will ordinarily be regarded as so far personal that he could not delegate it, or agree that the price should be fixed by arbitration.⁶⁵

§ 844. Authority to bind principal for ordinary expenses in purchase.—An agent authorized to purchase would have, as incident to this authority, power to bind the principal for the ordinary and necessary expenses involved in the purchase, and not expected to be paid in the first instance by the agent himself: as, for example, for necessary recording fees, abstract charges, or the charges of an attorney reasonably employed to pass upon the title.⁶⁶

⁶³ A mere authority to use one's name as the holder of the legal title, does not justify pledging his credit for the purchase price. Cowan v. Curran, 216 Ill. 598.

⁶⁴ See Brock v. Pearson, 87 Cal. 581; Johnson v. Railway Co., 116 N. Car. 926.

The mere fact that the principal thought the agent was buying the whole of a piece of land, where the agent had in fact bought but part of it, will not relieve the principal, there being no fraud, and the other party having no notice that the agent was not following his instructions. Corbit v. Kimball, 107 Cal. 665.

In Kickland v. Menasha Co., 68 Wis. 34, 60 Am. Rep. 831, the agent in buying the plaintiff's land promised as part of the price one-half of any excess in price at any later sale over the cash price paid. The deed, however, mentioned only the cash price and there was no proof of any notice to the company of the additional promise; but upon selling the land four years later the company was held bound to divide the profit with the plaintiff. This case is quoted and approved in Windsor v. St. Paul, etc., Ry. Co., 37 Wash. 156, 3 Ann. Cas. 62, where the right of way agent of the railway and an emissary employed by him agreed with the plaintiff that if he would sell his land for a certain price, the railway would provide fences and guards, and the company was held bound by these oral promises not mentioned in the deed.

⁶⁵ Talmadge v. Arrowhead Reservoir Co., 101 Cal. 367.

⁶⁶ In Egan v. DeJonge, 113 N. Y. Supp. 737, an agent employed to purchase land was held to have authority to engage attorneys as an im-

§ 845. Authority to receive the deed.—Where the agent is authorized to close the transaction, and especially where he is authorized to pay the purchase price upon the delivery of the deed, he would be authorized to receive the conveyance and to pay the price. The deed should, of course, be taken in the principal's name.

§ 846. Authority to assume mortgages.—An agent having general authority to purchase, who buys subject to an existing mortgage, may, it is held, bind his principal by accepting a deed which provides that the purchaser shall assume and pay the mortgage.⁶⁷

§ 847. No authority to sell or mortgage land purchased.—Authority to purchase land would ordinarily be exhausted when the purchase was consummated, and the agent would have no implied authority to afterwards sell or mortgage the land bought.

IV.

OF AGENT AUTHORIZED TO SELL PERSONAL PROPERTY.

§ 848. When authority exists.—Authority to sell personal property need not be conferred in any particular manner. It may, of course, be expressly conferred, but it may also be implied from circumstances. Where the authority results from construction, or is deduced from circumstances, the circumstances must be such as fairly to warrant the inference of an authority to sell.⁶⁸ Such authority, plied power incident to the general purpose of his employment.

⁶⁷ Schley v. Fryer, 100 N. Y. 71 (but see, Deering v. Starr, 118 N. Y. 665).

There is a dictum to the contrary in Metzger v. Huntington, 139 Ind. 501, though there was an adverse interest in that case which was held of itself to disqualify the agent.

⁶⁸ See Limestone Mine Co. v. Lehman (Ky.), 76 S. W. 328, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 703; Chiles v. Southern Ry. Co., 69 S. Car. 327; Mahrt v. Hyman, 17 Wash. 415; Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Watson, 90 Minn. 100; Rosendorf v. Poling, 48 W. Va. 621; Antrim Iron Co. v. Anderson, 140 Mich. 702, 112 Am. St. R. 434.

In Blaisdell v. Bohr, 77 Ga. 381, an agent who had bought and had possession of stock, and who had a power of attorney, "to attend to any and all descriptions of business in which I may be interested or concerned in a real or personal manner and to receive for me any sum or sums of money which may be due to me and to receipt therefore," was held authorized to sell it.

But in Camden Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Jones, 53 N. J. L. 189, an agent who had acted as general business agent for his principal and had collected dividends on the stock in question, and who had a power of attorney to collect all debts, compound same, and do whatever was necessary about the premises, "as well as to sign my name in all business transactions," was held not to be authorized to sell the principal's stock.

Authority from relationship.—As has already been seen in an earlier however, cannot ordinarily be inferred from mere possession of the property⁶⁹ even though the alleged agent be a dealer in property of that kind,⁷⁰ but the principal must have done something more; he must have so acted as to clothe the agent with apparent authority to sell, or must have conferred upon him, or permitted him to assume, the apparent indicia of ownership.⁷¹

A distinction must be observed between an apparent ownership, and an apparent agency to sell.⁷² Many things might be done by an apparent owner which would not be justified in an apparent agent—for example, the use of the property to pay the debts owed or secure the advances obtained by the apparent agent. It is agency and not apparent ownership which is to be considered here.

§ 849. — Limited or qualified authority.—The authority of the agent may be limited or qualified with respect of subject-matter, time, terms or other elements to any degree which may serve the principal's purposes, and such qualifications or limitations will be operative not only as between the principal and the agent, but as to third persons also provided they are not waived or are not secret limitations within the rules already discussed.⁷³ Thus where the agent, as in the familiar case of the traveling salesman, is authorized simply to solicit chapter, authority to sell does not arise from mere relationship. The wife, has no inherent authority to sell her husband's chattels, or the child to sell his parent's chattels, and the like. So, in the case of uncle and nephew. Moffet v. Moffet, 90 Iowa, 442.

Suspicious circumstances. — The circumstances under which the alleged agent assumes to act may be sufficient to charge the buyer with notice of his lack of authority. See Clark v. Haupt, 109 Mich. 212.

⁶⁹ Anderson v. Patten, — Iowa, —, 137 N. W. 1050; Edwards v. Dooley, 120 N. Y. 540; Peerless Mfg. Co. v. Gates, 61 Minn. 124; Warder v. Rublee, 42 Minn. 23; Greene v. Dockendorf, 13 Minn. 70; Roberts v. Francis, 123 Wis. 78; Sloan v. Brown, 228 Pa. 495, 139 Am. St. R. 1019.

⁷⁰ Levi v. Booth, 58 Md. 305, 42 Am. Rep. 332; Bachr v. Clark, 83 Iowa, 313, 13 L. R. A. 717; Gilman Linseed Oil Co. v. Norton, 89 Iowa, 434, 48 Am. St. R. 400, citing other cases.

⁷¹ Smith v. Clews, 105 N. Y. 283, 59 Am. Rep. 502, distinguished in Saunders v. Payne, 12 N. Y. Supp. 735; Wilson v. Loeb, 69 Ill. App. 445; Farquharson v. King, [1901] 2 K. B. 697; Heath v. Stoddard, 91 Me. 499.

See the fuller discussion, post. Book IV, Chap. VII.

⁷² See a good discussion of this distinction in Sloan v. Brown, 228 Pa. 495, 139 Am. St. R. 1019.

⁷³ Where a reorganization committee is entrusted with bonds with power of sale "til Jan. 1, '06" a sale thereafter does not pass title. Smith & Co. v. Collins, 91 C. C. A. 182, 165 Fed. 148.

orders which are to be transmitted to and passed upon by the principal, he can not usually bind his principal by a present contract.⁷⁴

So where the authority is to sell "upon terms to be agreed upon," or "subject to confirmation," and the like, the agent can not make a valid contract otherwise,⁷⁵ unless the qualification has been waived or concealed.⁷⁶

§ 850. What may be sold—All—Part.—Where the authority specifies what it is that the agent is to sell, he cannot bind his principal thereunder by undertaking to sell something else.⁷⁷ Where he is authorized to sell a certain amount, he would have therefrom no

⁷⁴ See post, § 861; Elfring v. New Birdsall Co., 16 S. Dak. 252; Becker v. Clardy, 96 Miss. 301.

Where the agent's authority is limited to soliciting written proposals, the principal is not bound by a contemporaneous verbal agreement not in the writing and unknown to him. Inman v. Crawford, 116 Ga. 63.

⁷⁵ Johnson R. Signal Co. v. Union Switch & Signal Co., 51 Fed. 85; Chauche v. Pare, 75 Fed. 283, 21 C. C. A. 329; Bronson v. Implement Co., 135 Mo. App. 483 (representations by the agent that the printed terms of the order blank were mere formality do not alter the case); Alcorn v. Buschke, 133 Cal. 655.

⁷⁶ Where the local custom justifies an agent, empowered as the one in question, to make a present sale without confirmation, the principal will be bound although his instructions were not to sell until terms were confirmed. Cawthon v. Lusk, 97 Ala. 674.

⁷⁷ An agent for the sale of groceries has no implied authority to bind his principal by agreeing to sell nails in which as the buyer knows, the principal does not deal. Brown Grocery Co. v. Becket (Ky.), 22 L. Rep. 393, 57 S. W. 458.

An agent known to be acting for the packers of Alaska salmon has no implied authority to bind them to furnish salmon produced elsewhere. Reid v. Alaska Packing Co., 47 Or. 215.

Agent for the sale of beer in kegs, which kegs, as the buyer knew, were not ordinarily sold but were to be returned when empty to the principal, can not pass title to the kegs to such a buyer in violation of his actual authority. Schlitz Brew. Co. v. Grimmon, 28 Nev. 235.

A written authority to sell "new patterns of furniture" gives no authority to sell old patterns. McCord Furniture Co. v. Wollpert, 89 Cal. 271. An agent acting under a formal and recorded power of attorney which authorizes him to sell mortgages of which the principal is "now possessed" is limited to the sale of the mortgages which the principal had at time of giving the power. Union Trust Co. v. Means, 201 Pa. 374.

Where the principal by telegram authorizes his broker to sell goods of a certain grade and the broker makes a sale to a bona fide purchaser by exhibiting the telegram, the principal cannot escape by showing instructions to the agent to sell only goods of an inferior grade. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Shreveport Cotton Oil Co., 111 La. 387. Where a seller wrote to a broker in Memphis, offering to sell "fifteen cars good mixed corn, * * * weather wet, and will not guaranty grade," which letter is shown to the purchaser, a contract to sell corn of No. 2 grade, as known at Memphis, was unauthorized. Galbreath v. Condon, 48 Kan. 748.

implied authority to sell more.⁷⁸ Whether he may sell less or may sell a part only of that which he is authorized to sell will depend upon a variety of circumstances. The situation may be such as to clearly indicate that the authority is to be regarded as an entirety. Thus, for example, if he, the agent, be authorized to sell a team, it would usually be difficult to see that he was authorized to sell the horses separately, and especially to sell one horse without selling the other.⁷⁹ In one case it was said, "An agent authorized to sell a house might not be justified in selling half of it. But unless special directions to the contrary were given, an agent who had shares of stock to sell might sell in parcels, or might sell a part if he could not sell the whole; or he might sell a part to one person and the rest to another. Each sale would be valid, and within his authority."⁸⁰

§ 851. — Commingling with other goods for sale.—Similar questions might arise respecting the commingling of the principal's goods with the goods of other principals or of the agent in making ⁷⁸ Authority to sell a yacht does not justify a sale of a launch, merely because it was sometimes used as a tender for the yacht. Forrest v. Vanderbilt, 46 C. C. A. 611, 107 Fed. 734, 52 L. R. A. 473.

An employment of a person as sole salesman of a coal mining company for one year, with power to sell "all coal mined," and which provides for fitting up an office for him at a certain place, contemplates the sale, on the market, of the coal as produced from time to time and does not justify a single sale of the entire output for ten months. Blackmer v. Summit Coal & Mining Co., 187 Ill. 32.

But where a salesman authorized to contract for the sale of cement to be manufactured by his principal and who had no actual limitation upon his authority as to the quantity he might sell to one customer, agreed to sell a large quantity, viz.: 35,000 barrels, but this amount was not beyond the limits of the principal's production, there was held to be nothing in the quantity so sold to show that it was beyond his authority, though he had never sold more than 7,500 barrels at one time before. Jenkins v. Alpena Cement Co., 77 C. C. A. 625, 147 Fed. 641.

An agent to sell stock on which a dividend has been declared but not paid has no implied authority to sell or throw in the dividend. Wheeler v. Northwestern Sleigh Co., 39 Fed. 347. But see Cronan v. Hornblower, 211 Mass. 538.

⁷⁹ In Henry v. Buckner, 13 Colo. 18, it was held that a written contract to sell for the owner a team of horses with a wagon and harness for a certain sum is an entire contract and does not authorize the sale of the wagon and harness without the team. The action was between the principal and agent only and did not involve the rights of third persons.

Compare Hatch v. Taylor, 10 N. H. 538, where various directions about trading or disposing of a team of horses, and about parting the span, were held to be apparently mere private instructions.

⁸⁰ Ulster County Sav. Inst. v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 Hun, 638, 8 N. Y. Supp. 162. Here 194 shares of stock were sent to a correspondent to be sold "at a price not less than $20 a share." The agent made a the sale. Ordinarily it would be the duty of the agent not to commingle them, but to keep them separate and to sell them separately and to give to his principal the benefit of a several rather than a joint contract and obligation.⁸¹ The general custom of the trade or the particular customs of a given market might, however, easily be such as not only to justify but perhaps to require that the goods should be so united with others as to make salable lots or groups.

§ 852. Authority when to be executed.—An authority to sell the property upon a particular day specified confers no power to sell it upon a subsequent or different day;⁸² neither is there any presumption that an authority to sell goods in a single instance continues for several years afterward.⁸³

§ 853. No authority to sell at auction—When.—An agent authorized to sell property is presumptively empowered to sell it only in the usual way, and therefore cannot, without special authority, sell it at auction; and a purchaser at such a sale, can ordinarily acquire no title.⁸⁴ So under a power of attorney authorizing a sale only at auction, a private sale is void and confers no title on the purchaser,⁸⁵ even though the full price fixed for the auction sale is realized.⁸⁶

§ 854. Authority to fix price and terms of sale.—An agent clothed with general power to sell personal property without restrictions, has sale of 144 shares, and the sale was sustained, one judge dissenting. The latter said: "I am unable to accept the theory that in the absence of an express direction not to sell a lesser number than 194 shares, the agent possessed an implied authority to sell as many shares, and in such parcels, as was deemed expedient, as the practical effect of such doctrine would seem to be to allow an agent to substitute for an express direction an implied authority. Suppose an agent should be directed to sell a farm, at not less than a fixed price per acre, would the agent be authorized to divide the farm and sell a portion thereof without the knowledge or consent of the owner? I think not."

⁸¹ In Coe v. Nash, 28 Mich. 259, it was held in an action by the agent against his principal, that a commission merchant to whom hops had been consigned for sale had no right to sell them in a lot with others for a gross sum.

In Cameron v. Paxton, 15 Can. Sup. Ct. 622, it was held that an agent of two independent and unconnected principals has no authority to bind his principals or either of them by the sale of the goods in one lot, when the articles included in such sale are different in kind and are sold for a single lump price not susceptible of a ratable apportionment except by the mere arbitrary will of the agent.

⁸² Bliss v. Clark, 16 Gray (Mass.), 60.

⁸³ Reed v. Baggott, 5 Ill. App. 257.

⁸⁴ Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195.

⁸⁵ The G. H. Montague, 4 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 464, Fed. Cas. No. 5,377.

⁸⁶ Daniel v. Adams, 1 Amb. 495; Jaques v. Todd, 3 Wend. 83.

implied authority to select the purchaser,⁸⁷ to fix the price, and to agree upon such ordinary incidental matters as the time and place of delivery, and the other ordinary and usual terms of a sale.⁸⁸ The price so fixed, however, should not be less than the market price, if there be a market price, and in any event should not be less than a reasonable price.⁸⁹ And so as to the terms of the sale where the principal has not prescribed them: they should be the usual terms, if there be any particular usage, and, if not, they should not exceed the natural and ordinary terms, reasonably necessary and proper in selling similar goods under similar circumstances at the time and place in question.⁹⁰

The principal may lawfully prescribe the price and terms upon which the sale is to be made, and these regulations will be binding upon the agent,⁹¹ and, where they are charged with notice of them⁹² upon third persons.⁹³ Private instructions as to price and terms cannot, how-

⁸⁷ Where the principal writes to his agent "Of course, I want a reliable purchaser, one whom you think would make his payments promptly," he clearly leaves this matter to the discretion of the agent. Peay v. Seigler, 48 S. Car. 496, 59 Am. St. R. 731 (a land case).

⁸⁸ Galbraith v. Weber, 58 Wash. 132, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 341; Daylight Burner Co. v. Odlin, 51 N. H. 56, 12 Am. Rep. 45; Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402, 38 Am. Rep. 682; Flanders v. Putney, 58 N. H. 358; French Piano & Organ Co. v. Cardwell, 114 Ga. 340; Stirn v. Hoffman House Co., 8 (N. Y.) Misc. 246; Smith Table Co. v. Madsen, 30 Utah, 297; Smith v. Droubay, 20 Utah, 443. As incident to the general authority to sell, the agent has "power to fix the terms of sale, including the time, place, and mode of delivery and the price of the goods, and the time and mode of payment, and to receive payment of the price, subject of course, to be controlled by proof of the mercantile usage in such trade or business." Daylight Burner Co. v. Odlin, supra.

In Smith v. Droubay, supra, a traveling salesman was held to have implied authority to agree that the goods for which he took the order would be delivered in a certain number of days, and that the principal was bound though he knew nothing about this undertaking,—certainly a doubtful proposition.

But a mere broker has no implied authority to fix terms of delivery. Molloy v. Cement Co., 116 N. Y. App. Div. 839.

⁸⁹ Bigelow v. Walker, 24 Vt. 149, 58 Am. Dec. 156.

⁹⁰ Putnam v. French, supra. Such an agent, it is there held, has apparent authority "to make terms of payment as to time and place, to the extent at least of what was customary and not extraordinary."

⁹¹ See Wolfe v. Luyster, 1 Hall (N. Y.), 146; Steele v. Ellmaker, 11 Serg. & R. (Penn.) 86.

⁹² As to this, see ante, § 743 et seq.

⁹³ A special agent cannot bind his principal by terms different from those prescribed. Sloan v. Brown, 228 Pa. 495, 139 Am. St. R. 1019; McManas v. Fortescue, [1907] 2 K. B. 1; Hardwick v. Kirwan, 91 Md. 285; Nester v. Craig, 69 Hun (N. Y.), 543; Lucas v. Rader, 29 Ind. App. 287.

Instructions to sell for "net cash" are not violated by permitting the buyer to postpone payment until the goods are delivered. Bristol v. Mente, 79 App. Div. 67, aff'd 178 N. Y. 599.

ever, affect those who, with no notice of them, have dealt with the agent in good faith, relying upon an apparent general authority.⁹⁴ But such third persons must have exercised reasonable prudence, and if the price or terms fixed by the agent were so unusual or so unreasonable as to fairly put a prudent man upon his guard, they will not be protected.⁹⁵ ⁹⁴ Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Clews v. Reilly, 53 Hun (N. Y.), 636; Hatch v. Taylor, 10 N. H. 538.

Where a letter authorizing the agent to sell and exhibited to the buyer, is silent as to the price, the agent has apparent authority to fix the price and the buyer is not bound by oral limitations given to the agent of which the buyer was ignorant. Bass Dry Goods Co. v. Granite City Mfg. Co., 119 Ga. 124.

In Ludlow-Saylor Wire Co. v. Fribley Hdw. Co., 67 Kan. 710, a traveling salesman sold wire ties in February for payment in May. He reported the price to his principal as being $1.10 per bale. In an action for the price, defendant was permitted to prove that the agent on the sale "had guaranteed the price" as on the date of payment, and that on that date the price was only ninety-five cents per bale. Held, proper, as the agent had merely violated secret instructions.

⁹⁵ See ante, § 751. Where the purchaser was informed, by the terms of the contract which he signed, that the agreement upon which he now relies was outside the agent's authority, he can not base a case upon any doctrine of "apparent" or implied authority. Metropolitan, etc., Co. v. Law, 61 N. Y. Misc. 105. (Here the buyer relied upon an alleged agreement that he might countermand the order; the contract expressly provided that it should not be countermanded; and that no agent had authority to agree to the contrary unless it was made a part of the written contract and was approved by the principal.) To same effect: Fulton v. Sword Medicine Co., 145 Ala. 331; Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Grimmon, 28 Nev. 235. But compare Author's, etc., Ass'n v. O'Gorman, 147 Fed. 616.

Where the agent offers to sell a $300 piano for $120, and to take the buyer's note running to the agent, there is enough to put the buyer on his guard. Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1538, 57 L. R. A. 451. So, where there was known to be a "list-price," an offer by the agent to allow a rebate which the agent was to pay in person because he did not wish it known that the house was discounting the list price, the buyer is put upon inquiry. Taylor Mfg. Co. v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.), 14 S. W. 1071. The same conclusion was reached where the buyer knew that the seller-principal was under contract to maintain list prices but the agent offered to sell at a discount to be allowed by the agent when the bill was collected. Brown v. West, 69 Vt. 440.

But where there was no collusion between the buyer and the agent, and the price was not so low as to reasonably arouse suspicion, and the buyer had no notice of limitations except a clause in the contract requiring the agent to sell at "proper prices," it was held that the principal was bound. The court thought the expression "proper prices" was "too flexible and indefinite to bind or even put upon inquiry." U. S. School Furn. Co. v. Board of Education (Ky.), 38 S. W. 864, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 948.

§ 855. — Further as to price.—As is pointed out in an earlier chapter, the question whether the communications between the principal and the agent respecting price are to be regarded as mere private instructions, or as an effective limitation upon the agent's authority, is one not always easy of determination. Neither is it easy to determine whether fixing the price,—as distinguished from stating the price fixed by some one else,—appears to be within the agent's authority. Neither is it easy to decide what should be the consequences if the agent does not correctly state the price fixed by his principal. If I go to a railway ticket office, for example, and ask the price of a ticket to New York, I cannot, in the first place, reasonably suppose that the ticket agent is the one who decides that matter. I must assume that the price has been set for him by a higher authority, and that he is authorized to sell only at that price. If, now, by mistake, he names a lower price, which I pay and receive the ticket, but, before I have changed my position to my detriment, he discovers the mistake and demands its correction, have I a legal right to retain the ticket—have I a contract to carry me to New York at the price paid? If I go to a great department store and ask the clerk at a particular counter what is the price of a certain article, and he, by mistake, states the wrong price, but it is discovered when the sale is checked up and before I leave the counter, have I a contract for the purchase at that price? I have clearly no right to think that the clerk fixes the price. What is he put there for? What is the offer made to me by the proprietor? Two answers are possible: One, that the proprietor offers to sell only at the price which he has fixed,—which I may learn by asking the clerk,—and that the proprietor will be liable for any loss I have sustained by reason of misinformation given me by the clerk, but that no contract to sell at the mistaken price results. The other that the proprietor offers to sell the goods at the price which the clerk shall name,—the proprietor having instructed him what price to name,—and, therefore, that I make a contract by accepting the offer as made by the clerk, even though he violates his instructions, if I am ignorant of that fact, and am not put upon my guard by any suspicious circumstances. The logic of the first view seems to the present writer to be unanswerable: practical convenience may, perhaps, be better subserved by the second. Certainly, however, from the standpoint of equity or morals, the person who thus seeks to take advantage of a clear mistake, seems to be entitled to but very little consideration.

If the departure from the price fixed was the result, not of error but of intent, on the part of the agent, the other party's situation does not seem to be improved.

It is doubtful whether it could be contended that the clerk or salesman in these cases has any authority to give information as to price except as part of a negotiation for a present sale,—he doubtless has no authority ordinarily to quote future prices, or to agree that prices for the future shall be what they now are.

Other more or less similar cases will at once present themselves. The traveling salesman who solicits orders for merchandise or machinery or implements may furnish an illustration. He is usually well known to be quoting the prices which have been named to him, and hence no one would ordinarily suppose that he is authorized to offer the goods for any other prices than those which have actually been prescribed for him.⁹⁶

⁹⁶ An ordinary "commercial traveller," of the sort who usually sell at prescribed or list prices, has no apparent authority to bind his principal by agreeing to give rebates or reductions. Tollerton v. Gilruth, 21 S. D. 320; Taylor Mfg. Co. v. Brown, supra.

In Scudder-Gale Grocer Co. v. Russell, 65 Ill. App. 281, the court held the principal liable for non-performance of a contract of sale made by a salesman who had mistakenly quoted the wrong price. The court said that the circumstances as well as former dealings justified the buyer in believing that the salesman had power to fix the price.

In Ohio, etc., Ry. Co. v. Savage, 38 Ill. App. 148, it appeared that a local freight agent had named to the plaintiff a rate for transporting grain less than the usual rate. The agent purported to do this on the authority of the division freight agent, one Hodgdon. Plaintiff loaded his grain in reliance upon the rate so named, but when he came to get his receipt, the agent informed him that some question had arisen about the rate, and that he could not allow it to him. Plaintiff thereupon sent his grain at the regular rate and brought this action to recover the difference. Held, that he could recover. The court said: "In the case of a railroad company the agent who is put up to represent the company in a particular capacity is, for that purpose, the company itself. In this instance the station agent held such a position that the plaintiff was justified in relying upon his representation in reference to the shipment of this grain, while the plaintiff knew that this agent had, necessarily, limited powers, yet he knew that he was the mouth-piece of the company, and more particularly of Hodgdon, at that place, in regard to matters of local business, and the company should not be permitted to say that the agent misunderstood or misinterpreted his instructions." It will be observed in this case, however, that the plaintiff had loaded his grain before he was advised of the mistake.

In Stirn v. Hoffman House Co., 8 N. Y. Misc. 246, a "general salesman" in a store was held to have apparent authority to agree to give a discount of ten per cent. from fixed prices upon a large bill of goods then bought. It does not clearly appear whether this was actually beyond the agent's prescribed authority or not.

In Smith Table Co. v. Madsen, 30 Utah, 297, a general salesman in a § 856. — Where the agent is given possession of the chattel and authorized to sell it, restrictions as to price may still be effective if the circumstances of the sale are such as, according to ordinary experience, would naturally suggest the probability of such restrictions. But where the agent is given possession and is sent out to sell to any buyer he can find, it is doubtless a natural and proper inference that he is authorized to sell for such price as he may be able to obtain, subject only to the limitation of what is unusual or extraordinary and therefore sufficient to excite suspicion.⁹⁷ furniture salesroom was held to have apparent authority to give a "trade discount," rather than a mere "cash discount." There was evidence here that the agent had no such prescribed authority. The cases relied upon are Banks v. Everest, 35 Kan. 687 and Potter v. Springfield Milling Co., 75 Miss. 532, both cited in a following section, § 861. The first case is readily distinguishable; the second is more in point.

There is also some comment about price in Authors', etc., Association v. O'Gorman, 147 Fed. 616.

In Galbraith v. Weber, 58 Wash. 132, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 341 (in all respects a most extraordinary case) it appeared that Galbraith had sent out one B, as agent to sell an imported horse. Galbraith valued the horse at $3,000, but there was no evidence of any instructions to B not to sell for less. B took the horse to a town about 100 miles away, where for six or eight weeks he tried to sell the horse for $3,000, but without success. Defendants then offered $1,000 for him. B said he had no authority to sell for that sum, but would telegraph to Galbraith to see if he would accept it. B did not in fact send any telegram, but next day falsely reported to defendants that he had done so, and had received authority from Galbraith to accept the $1,000, and defendants bought at that price, giving B two promissory notes for $500 each, in payment. B did not send these notes to Galbraith, but discounted them at a bank and kept the money, at the same time forging and sending to Galbraith three notes for $900 each, which he reported that defendants had given in payment for the horse. Galbraith accepted these notes and held them until he learned of the forgery, thus, as the court held, indicating that he did not insist rigidly upon $3,000, but was willing to accept $2,700 in notes. Galbraith testified that the horse was worth $3,000, but there was also evidence of a less value. In view of these facts, the court said: "We do not think that these circumstances were so extraordinary as to enable us to say, as a matter of law, they showed want of authority on the part of B to agree upon a sale at $1,000." But if B truthfully told defendants that he was not authorized to sell for $1,000, his subsequent untrue statement that he had received that authority was not binding upon his principal. Clark v. Haupt, 109 Mich. 212.

⁹⁷ In McManus v. Fortescue, [1907] 2 K. B. 1, where an auctioneer had been given a reserve price and the sale was advertised as subject to a reserve price, the auctioneer at first struck off an article at less than the reserved price and then discovering or recollecting that the reserve was more than the bid refused to go on with the sale of the article, it was said by one of the judges (Moulton, L. J.): "The employment of an auctioneer is as an § 857. — On the other hand, the authority of the agent over the subject-matter may be so general, so long recognized or so customary that no one could well say that communications respecting price were intended to be other than mere advice or directory instructions.⁹⁸ Would the directions as to prices given by the board of directors of a great department store to the general manager, for example, stand upon the same footing as the general manager's directions given to the clerks respecting the prices at which they should sell the goods?

So if the agent is expected to bargain,—to use his judgment or skill in securing the best obtainable price,—but not to disclose the agent for special purposes, and falls under the general law of agency by which the employer may restrict the authority given to the agent, subject to certain well-known exceptions not material to this case. The limitation of an auctioneer's authority, by his principal fixing a reserve price, is a perfectly valid and effectual limitation. It is in no wise inconsistent with his employment as an auctioneer, because an auctioneer is as frequently employed to sell subject to a reserve as without one, and indeed in certain markets it may be said to be the more usual practice. A principal, therefore, who gives authority to an auctioneer to sell subject to a reserve price gives no power to the auctioneer, either expressly or impliedly, to accept a less price." Rainbow v. Howkins, [1904] 2 K. B. 322, was doubted.

In Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400, a manuscript case is referred decided in 1792 or 1793, to the following effect: "A servant was sent with a horse to a fair with an express order from the master not to sell it under a certain sum; the servant, notwithstanding, sold it for a less sum; upon which the master immediately gave notice and brought trover against the purchaser; and it was held that he might recover, because the servant was not his general agent."

But, on the other hand, it is said by Pollock, C. B., arguendo, in Smith v. McGuire, 3 H. & N. 554, "If a man sends his servant to market to sell goods, or a horse, for a certain price, and the servant sells them for less, the master is bound by it. There, even the violation of a particular authority does not render the sale null and void." Same effect: United States v. Torres, 11 Philipp. 606.

In Galbraith v. Weber, 58 Wash. 132, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 341, it is said: "Where the agent has exclusive possession of the property of his principal with authority and for the express purpose of selling it to any purchaser he may find, we think a purchaser from such agent would clearly have the right to rely upon the agent having power to agree upon the purchase price; but in that case the principal had not fixed the price, though he valued the article at a certain sum. See also, Cooper v. Coad, 91 Neb. 840.

⁹⁸ See the leading case of Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400, where prices named by the principals in a series of letters written to their agents to sell (held to be general agents), were held to be mere suggestions or advices and not limitations upon authority. The court distinguished the case from a MS. case referred to in argument and given in the preceding note.

limits prescribed by his principal, the limitations so fixed must usually be regarded as mere instructions.

With respect of price, therefore, the situation seems to be this: If the principal has not fixed the price, the agent may do so, within ordinary and reasonable limits, because it must be fixed in order to effect the sale. If the principal has prescribed the price, his limitations are binding upon the agent, and upon third persons also, unless the principal's provisions as to price are to be regarded as mere private instructions to the agent or unless the principal has in some way held the agent out as one having authority to fix the price. Merely intrusting an agent with the possession of the property he is to sell, is not necessarily such a holding out, though it will be where such an agent so intrusted has ordinarily the authority to sell upon such terms as he can secure.

§ 858. — Terms or conditions attached.—With respect of the terms or conditions which may be attached to contracts of sale, it has been held that it is within the apparent scope of an agency for the sale of goods, to stipulate that if the property is not satisfactory to the purchaser, or if the machinery sold does not do good work, and the like, it may be returned.⁹⁹ A stipulation that if it be found not marketable within a reasonable prescribed time, it may be returned, has also been upheld; at least, the principal cannot enforce the residue of the contract, and repudiate this portion of it.¹ An agent selling a furnace to be shipped in detached parts has implied authority to agree that they shall be put together and placed in the building where they are to be used.² So a traveling salesman has been held to have implied authority to undertake to transmit instructions to his principal to cause the goods shipped to be insured, where it is the custom of the principal to effect such insurance on the request of purchasers.³

§ 859. — But, on the other hand, it has been held that a traveling salesman has no implied authority to make such an unusual

⁹⁹ Oster v. Mickley, 35 Minn. 245 (agricultural implement, see also post, § 885; Zaleski v. Clark, 44 Conn. 218, 26 Am. Rep. 446 (a bust to be made by a sculptor); French Piano Co. v. Cardwell, 114 Ga. 340 (a piano); Eastern Mfg. Co. v. Brenk, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 97 (jewelry).

¹ Babcock v. Deford, 14 Kan. 408. But see cases cited in following section.

² Boynton Furnace Co. v. Clark, 42 Minn. 335. In Lamon v. Speer Hardware Co. (C. C. A.), 198 Fed. 453, it is held to be within the implied authority of an agent to sell a cotton ginning plant to agree to erect it and put it in running order. But this, of course, cannot be a universal rule.

³ McDonald v. Pearre, 5 Ga. App. 130. Where an agent was sent out to sell a horse and was given a writ-contract as that all of the goods unsold by the purchaser may, after the season is ended, be returned by him on or before the day of settlement;⁴ or that the principal would receive and allow for imperfect goods previously purchased by the buyer from other parties;⁵ or which he might subsequently purchase from the same principal;⁶ or that he need pay for the goods only as he resells them, and that the agent will find buyers for him,⁷ or that for every sample article which the buyer gives away, he will sell a certain number of accessories within a given time,⁸ or that the principal will pay for fitting up a place in which to sell the goods.⁹

Oral conditions attempted to be attached to written contracts, will be excluded by the rules relating to that subject.¹⁰

§ 860. — Failure to impose conditions prescribed by principal.—A sales agent who fails or neglects to impose conditions upon the sale which have been prescribed to him by his principal, makes himself liable to his principal, but whether his failure or neglect will ten statement by his principal that the latter would be bound by any contract the agent made, he was held bound by an agreement that if the horse did not earn his cost the principal would make allowance for the deficiency. Worsley v. Ayres, 144 Iowa, 676.

⁴ Friedman v. Kelly, 126 Mo. App. 279, or that the buyer may countermand the order at his pleasure. Metropolitan, etc., Co. v. Lau, 61 N. Y. Misc. 105. Compare Babcock v. Deford, supra.

In Clayton v. Western Nat. Wall Paper Co., — Tex. Civ. App. —, 146 S. W. 695, an agreement by a sales agent that, if the buyer would buy more goods, the seller would take back certain undesirable and inferior goods previously purchased from him, was held to be within his implied authority.

In Kinser v. Calumet Fire Clay Co., 165 Ill. 595, a salesman who desired to furnish goods to one bidding for public work, agreed that if the latter would lower his bid and thus secure the contract, the agent's principal would guaranty him against loss on the contract. Held, unauthorized.

⁵ Phoenix Pottery Co. v. Perkins, 79 N. J. L. 78.

⁶ Ide v. Brody, 156 Ill. App. 479. Same effect, where bargain was to allow on price of goods now sold, the price of goods previously purchased and paid for. Lindow v. Cohn, 5 Cal. App. 388. The court treated such an arrangement as a barter or exchange—in any event, not a sale for cash. But see Clayton v. Western Nat. Wall Paper Co., supra.

⁷ Ball v. Freund, 117 N. Y. Supp. 193.

⁸ Sale of "talking machines," purchased to be given away as advertisements, with guaranty that for every machine given away the buyer would sell, on the average, twenty-five "records," within four months. Johns v. Jaycox, 67 Wash. 403, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1151.

⁹ Salesman of brewery undertook to pay for fitting up a saloon in which to sell the beer. Schoenhofen Brew. Co. v. Wengler, 57 Ill. App. 184.

¹⁰ Written orders secured by agent and sent to principal who accepts them are not affected by parol agreements with the agent of which affect the title of the purchaser will depend upon a variety of circumstances. A purchaser with notice of the conditions could acquire no title in violation of them; but a purchaser who buys in ignorance of the conditions and upon terms which are usually within the power of such an agent to make, would be protected.¹¹ Thus one who buys a book of an agent in the ordinary way, receives it and pays for it, is held not charged with conditions restricting its resale which are printed on the inside of the cover and which he neither saw nor had called to his attention until after the purchase was completed, even though it was the duty of the agent to make the sale only upon that condition.¹²

§ 861. Authority to make binding contract.—As in the case of real estate, a so-called authority to sell may confer power to actually make the sale, or it may be confined to the mere preliminary negotiation—the finding of a purchaser with whom the principal may deal in person, or the solicitation of orders which the principal may accept or reject at his pleasure.

Authority merely to solicit orders and transmit them to the principal, as is usually the case with the so-called “drummer” or traveling solicitor, clearly confers no power to accept the orders so taken or to make a binding contract of sale.¹³ Such a power may, however, be principal is ignorant. McCaskey Register Co. v. Curfman, 45 Ind. App. 297; Holt Mfg. Co. v. Odenrider, 61 Wash. 555; Bybee v. Embree-McLean Carriage Co., — Tex. Civ. App. —, 135 S. W. 203.

Buyer has no right to rely on conditions which, as he sees, are repugnant to the contract or order which he signs. Metropolitan, etc., Co. v. Lau, supra.

¹¹ Authors', etc., Ass'n v. O'Gorman, 147 Fed. 616.

¹² Authors' etc., Ass'n v. O'Gorman, supra.

The court also says that a rule which would require the purchaser upon learning of it either to observe the restriction or return the book is “impractical and unsound.” A principal however who insists upon retaining an article bought upon unauthorized conditions, or who seeks to enforce a contract with unauthorized terms, after he learns of the facts, is usually held to ratify the act. He must either repudiate the transaction or stand by its terms.

¹³ Bensberg v. Harris, 46 Mo. App. 404; Bauman v. McManus, 75 Kan. 106, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1138; Mathews Apparatus Co. v. Renz (Ky.), 22 Ky. Law Rep. 1523, 61 S. W. 9; Brown Grocery Co. v. Becket (Ky.), 22 Ky. L. Rep. 393, 57 S. W. 458; Ryan v. American Steel & Wire Co., 148 Ky. 481, 146 S. W. 1099; Elfring v. New Birdsall Co., 16 S. Dak. 252; Becker v. Clardy, 96 Miss. 301, Ann. Cas. 1912 B. 355.

See also Abrahams v. Weiller, 87 Ill. 179.

Notice of the lack of authority may be communicated by the terms of the order. Deane v. Everett, 90 Iowa, 242. Salesman may insert stipulation requiring acceptance by principal, even though he had authority to make a binding contract. Gilman v. Stock, 95 Me. 359.

A “drummer” or soliciting agent is not a peddler or merchant. City v. Collins, 34 Kan. 434; State v.

conferred expressly,¹⁴ or it may arise by implication from a course of dealing,¹⁵ or from the general custom of the trade.¹⁶

An agent having an apparently general power to sell may bind his principal by accepting the order, and the contract will not be affected by the principal's reservation of a right to reject all orders taken by him, where such reservation was not known to the other party and was not suggested by the circumstances.¹⁷

Miller, 93 N. C. 511, 53 Am. Rep. 469; Com. v. Farnum, 114 Mass. 267.

¹⁴ In Pittsburg Sheet Mfg. Co. v. West Penn. Sheet Steel Co., 197 Pa. 491, a written contract of employment between a steel company and a salesman which had express stipulations respecting performance, commissions, prices, and the like, but contained no provision that orders should be subject to ratification or approval of the company, was held to give the salesman authority to bind his employer by an absolute contract of sale. Compare McKeige v. Carrol, 120 N. Y. App. Div. 521; Falihee v. Simmons, 121 N. Y. App. Div. 839.

¹⁵ Brennan v. Dansby, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 7.

See Spooner v. Browning, [1898] 1 Q. B. 528, 67 L. Jour. Q. B. 339, where it was held that the fact that a principal allows an agent to obtain orders for him which the principal may fill or not as he sees fit—this being well known to the party who gives the order—and the fact that he has on two occasions filled such orders, does not afford any evidence from which the inference of fact can reasonably be drawn that the principal holds the agent out either as having authority to bind him by contracts or as representing that the principal will fill orders brought him by the agent so as to make the principal liable for an order subsequently given to the agent but not submitted to the principal and apparently accepted by documents forged by the agent.

In Hopkins v. Armour, 8 Ga. App. 442, a sale was upheld because it appeared that in previous dealings the orders as given by the buyer to the salesman had been filled, and because of a custom alleged to prevail among such salesman to make binding contracts, although there appeared no facts bringing home to the principal any knowledge either of the prior dealings or of the custom.

But compare with Gould v. Cates Chair Co., 147 Ala. 629, where it is said that a principal in North Carolina is not bound by customs prevailing in Alabama, especially where the customs urged prevailed among salesmen only.

¹⁶ Such a custom shown. Mabray v. Kelley-Goodfellow Shoe Co., 73 Mo. App. 1; Friedman v. Kelly, 126 Mo. App. 279; Austrian v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343, 34 Am. St. Rep. 350; Cawthon v. Lusk, 97 Ala. 674.

¹⁷ Banks v. Everest, 35 Kan. 687 (where there was a long course of dealing with the agent of a law book publisher thought to justify the conclusion that he was authorized to make binding contracts); Potter v. Springfield Milling Co., 75 Miss. 532 (a case doubtful upon its facts).

See also Nebraska Bridge Supply Co. v. Conway, 127 Iowa, 237.

A salesman who is supplied by his principal with blank forms of bills of sale including the principal's name as seller, may make a binding contract. Watterson v. Beaudry, 35 Que. Super. 450.

In Dreyfus v. Goss, 67 Kan. 57, a traveling salesman sold goods by sample, sending the order to his principal. The goods were shipped but on arrival were found not to be like the sample. When the agent came again, he admitted that the § 862. ——— To execute and deliver necessary documents or memoranda.—As incident to the power to make a binding contract of sale or to sell, the agent would have implied power to make, execute and deliver any necessary and usual bill of sale, or any necessary and usual note or memorandum in writing, which may be required to give his act effect, or to satisfy the statute of frauds, and the like.¹⁸ These he may, of course, couch in the usual and appropriate language.

§ 863. Authority of selling agent to receive payment—In general. Whether an agent authorized to sell personal property has implied authority to receive payment, is a question upon which there has been much difference of opinion. It will be obvious that its solution must depend largely upon the nature of the particular transaction and the usages if any in relation thereto.

If a merchant places behind his counters a clerk to sell goods, it could not be doubted that, in the absence of a known custom to pay a cashier or other person, the clerk would have implied power to receive, at the time of the sale, payment for the goods sold by him.¹⁹ Whether he would have authority at some subsequent time to receive payment for the goods sold, after the account had gone upon the books, and the matter had passed into other hands, is evidently not so clear. If payment were made to him at his usual place in the store, the case would present a different aspect than if it had been made to him at his own home or upon the street. So, too, if he were one of many salesmen in a large establishment in the metropolis, a different case would be presented than if he were the only clerk in a country store combining in himself salesman, bookkeeper and collector.²⁰ goods were not equal to the sample, and made a new contract that the buyer should keep them at a less price and on a longer credit. Held, that this contract was a present binding sale, and within the authority of the agent. Sed quare.

¹⁸ Potter v. Springfield Milling Co., 75 Miss. 532.

¹⁹ See Hirshfield v. Waldron, 54 Mich. 649, where Champlin, J., says: "The usual employment of a clerk in a retail store is to sell goods to customers or purchasers, and it is implied from such employment that he has authority to receive pay for them on such sale. But there is no implication from such employment that he has authority, after the goods are delivered and taken from the store, to present bills and collect money due to his employers, because it is not in the scope of the usual employment of such clerks."

²⁰ See Davis v. Waterman, 10 Vt. 526, 33 Am. Dec. 216, where it is held that a clerk in a country store with whom are left the goods and demands of his employer, has charge of both, and in the absence of his principal, has power to receive pay on the demands and to institute suits for their security when an emergency arises.

Again if he were sent about the country with authority to sell goods entrusted to his possession for that purpose, authority to receive payment therefor would be implied, as it would not be presumed that the principal intended that they should be parted with without payment.²¹ But if his authority was simply to solicit orders for goods, a sample of which he had in his possession, it being left for the principal to deliver the goods in pursuance of the orders taken, the question whether the agent might subsequently collect payment merely as an incident of the authority to take orders, would present other considerations.²²

§ 864. Authority to receive payment not implied from possession of bill.—The mere fact that one claims to be authorized to receive payment is no evidence of his authority, nor can such authority be implied from the mere possession by the assumed agent of the bill or account, though made out upon the principal's bill-head and in his own handwriting.²³

But where the principal sends to a traveling agent, a bill for goods sold by him, and also, a bill for goods sold to the same purchaser by the principal himself, and the purchaser, in reliance upon these facts, pays the agent, a jury may properly find that the agent had apparent authority to receive the payment.²⁴

§ 865. Agent authorized to deliver possession may receive payment.—Where the principal entrusts the agent with the possession of the goods to be sold and authorizes him to sell and deliver them, authority to receive payment of so much of the purchase price as is to be paid at the time of such delivery, will be implied, and a payment made to the agent at the time of the sale and delivery, or as part of the same transaction, will be binding upon the principal;²⁵ of course, ²¹ See following section.

²² See post, § 864.

²³ Hirshfield v. Waldron, 54 Mich. 649; Dutcher v. Beckwith, 45 Ill. 460, 92 Am. Dec. 232. See also Kornemann v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36; Grover & Baker Sew. Machine Co. v. Polhemus, 34 Mich. 247; Reynolds v. Continental Ins. Co., 36 Mich. 131; McDonough v. Heyman, 38 Mich. 334.

²⁴ Luckie v. Johnston, 89 Ga. 321.

²⁵ Bailey v. Pardridge, 134 Ill. 188; Adams v. Fraser, 82 Fed. 211, 27 C. C. A. 108; Sumner v. Saunders, 51 Mo. 89; Brooks v. Jameson, 55 Mo. 505; Rice v. Groffman, 56

Mo. 434; Birch Tree Bank v. Brown, 152 Mo. App. 589; Capel v. Thornton, 3 Car. & P. 352.

Some of the broader dicta in the Missouri cases cited above, that the power to receive payment is an incident to the power to sell in any case, are properly withdrawn in Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298, 30 Am. Rep. 795.

Receiving payment upon sale on trial.—Under a contract, held by the court to create a general agency, it was held that the agent of a piano company, intrusted with possession, could select the purchaser and agree upon terms of sale, which in the absence of any knowledge on the part of the purchaser that the agent was not authorized to receive payment. It is to be presumed in such a case that payment and delivery are to be substantially concurrent acts, and the agent who is authorized to deliver must be presumed to be authorized to complete the sale by receiving payment, either simultaneously or so soon thereafter as to be really a part of the same transaction.

Where, however, the price is to be paid in installments, the agent, though having thus implied authority to receive the installment to be paid at the time of delivery, would ordinarily thereby exhaust his authority, and would have no implied authority to subsequently receive the remaining installments.²⁶ Such authority might, of course, be inferred from a more general authority over the subject-matter, or from a course of conduct or a holding out reasonably indicating such a wider power.²⁷

§ 866. Payment to general sales-agent.—Carrying the doctrine of the preceding section a step further, it is clear that where the principal establishes a general sales agency, of which he puts the agent in charge, authorizing him to sell the goods, fix the terms and conditions of sale and to receive the proceeds of sales, payments made to such agent for goods purchased of him are apparently within the scope of his authority, and will bind the principal in the absence of any limitation upon his authority known to the person who makes the pay-might be either for cash or on credit, and deliver the property in completion of the sale or on trial looking to a completion in the future, and receive money in advance to be applied on the purchase price if the sale was completed. French Piano Co. v. Cardwell, 114 Ga. 340.

Receiving payment before delivery.—In Shull v. New Birdsall Co., 15 S. D. 9, it was held that a special agent to sell machinery had no implied authority to receive payment before delivery. To same effect see, Case Thresh. Mach. Co. v. Eichinger, 15 S. D. 530.

²⁶ See Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. St. 513; Clark v. Smith, 83 Ill. 298; Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655; Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298, 30 Am. Rep. 795; Adams v. Fraser, 82 Fed. 211, 27 C. C. A. 108; and cases cited in § 869, post.

American Sales Book Co. v. Crowdy, 100 Ark. 325, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 700, is contra. There the agent sold apparatus upon terms of part cash and balance in six installments; at the time of the sale he agreed to come back at a later date and instruct the buyer in the use of the apparatus. On that later date, he collected the balance of the price, giving a discount for cash. Held, that the payment was good. One judge dissented, and the case is certainly questionable. There was also a notice on the statement sent by the seller "Pay no money to agents."

²⁷ See Howe Machine Co. v. Ballweg, 89 Ill. 318; Brooks v. Jameson, 55 Mo. 505; Sumner v. Saunders, 51 Mo. 89; Lamb v. Hirschberg, 1 N. Y. Misc. 108; Baldwin v. Tucker, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 222, 75 S. W. 196.

ment.²⁸ In pursuance of this view, it has been held that where such an agent has taken a note for the price, as he was authorized to do, and has sent it to his principal, payments afterwards made to the agent will be effective against the principal where the buyer was ignorant of any limitation on the agent's authority.²⁹

Such an agent has, however, as will be seen hereafter,³⁰ no authority to take notes payable to himself,³¹ or to accept in payment property transferred to himself or the discharge of debts or notes due from himself.³²

§ 867. Payment to agent as ostensible owner.—And so where an agent authorized to sell and entrusted with possession of the property to be delivered upon the sale, is expressly or by implication authorized or permitted to sell in his own name as though he were the owner, and makes a sale in his own name to one who does not know and has no good reason to believe that he is not the owner, a payment made to the agent or a set off acquired against him before the principal is disclosed will be effective against the principal.³³ An agent so situated is ostensibly the owner of the goods and the principal who has per-

²⁸ Kasson v. Noltner, 43 Wis. 646; Estey v. Snyder, 76 Wis. 624; Sumner v. Saunders, 51 Mo. 89; Brooks v. Jameson, 55 Mo. 505; Howe Machine Co. v. Ballweg, 89 Ill. 318; Sawin v. Union Bldg. Ass'n, 95 Iowa, 477.

²⁹ Kasson v. Noltner, supra; Sumner v. Saunders, supra; Brooks v. Jameson, supra. So in case of a chattel mortgage. Estey v. Snyder, supra.

³⁰ See post, § 949 et seq.

³¹ Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1538, 57 L. R. A. 451 (same case, aff'd 75 S. W. 196, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 222).

³² Walton Guano Co. v. McCall, 111 Ga. 114; Hoffman v. Ins. Co., 92 U. S. 161, 23 L. Ed. 539; Stewart v. Woodward, 50 Vt. 78, 28 Am. Rep. 488; Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Givan, 65 Mo. 89; Bertholf v. Quinlan, 68 Ill. 297; Aultman v. Lee, 43 Iowa, 404.

³³ Rabone v. Williams, 7 T. R. 360, n; George v. Clagett, 7 T. R. 359; Fish v. Kempton, 7 C. B. 687; Cooke v. Eshelby, 12 App. Cas. 271; Mon- tagu v. Forwood, [1893] 2 Q. B. 350; Semenza v. Brinsley, 18 C. B. (N. S.) 467; Borries v. Imperial Ottoman Bank, L. R. 9 C. P. 38; Ex parte Dixon, 4 Ch. D. 133; Capel v. Thornton, 3 Car. & P. 352; Hogan v. Shorb, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 458; Judson v. Stilwell, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 513; Pratt v. Collins, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 126; Maxfield v. Carpenter, 84 Hun, 450; Baxter v. Sherman, 73 Minn. 434, 72 Am. St. Rep. 631; Rice v. Groffman, 56 Mo. 434; Hutchinson Mfg. Co. v. Henry, 44 Mo. App. 263; Tripp, etc., Shoe Co. v. Martin, 45 Kan. 765; Eclipse Wind Mill Co. v. Thorson, 46 Iowa, 181; Bennett v. Williamson, 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 107, 6 Ohio C. D. 59; DuBois v. Perkins, 21 Or. 189; Peel v. Shepherd, 58 Ga. 365; Lumley v. Corbett, 18 Cal. 494; Ohio Pottery Co. v. Talbert, 87 S. Car. 194; Hook v. Crowe, 100 Me. 399.

See also Pickering v. Busk, 15 East, 38; Greely v. Bartlett, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 172, 10 Am. Dec. 54; Goodnow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36, 5 Am. Dec. 22.

mitted him to assume that appearance is estopped to assert his ownership as against one who has relied upon the contrary appearance.³⁴ The case of the factor³⁵ or commission merchant³⁶ who usually sells in his own name is the typical one, and is sharply in contrast with that of the broker³⁷ who usually has not possession and sells in the name of his principal.

The situation presupposes not only an agent in possession authorized to sell (whose duty it is ordinarily to sell only as agent and in the name of his principal), but also a real or apparent authority to sell in the agent's own name.³⁸ The failure to observe this last requirement has

So where the agent is permitted to carry on the business as though it was his own, his acts in taking and disposing of notes cannot be disturbed by the unknown principal. Gardner v. Wiley, 46 Or. 96.

³⁴ In Semenza v. Brinsley, 18 C. B. (N. S.) 467, 477, it is said by Willes, J., to be one of the essentials to the set-off that the agent "sold them as his own goods in his own name as principal with the authority of the plaintiff." [Italics in these quotations are mine, F. R. M.]

In Montagu v. Forwood, [1893] 2 Q. B. 350, supra, it is said by Bowen, L. J.: "The case is, in my judgment, governed by the principle of the decision in George v. Clagett, by the rules of common sense and justice, and I think also by the law of estoppel. The principle is not confined to the sale of goods. If A employs B as his agent to make any contract for him, or to receive money for him, and B makes a contract with C, or employs C as his agent, if B is a person who would be reasonably supposed to be acting as a principal, and is not known or suspected by C to be acting as an agent for any one, A cannot make a demand against C without the latter being entitled to stand in the same position as if B had in fact been a principal. If A has allowed his agent B to appear in the character of a principal, he must take the consequences."

In Cooke v. Eshelby, 12 App. Cas. 271, it is said by Lord Halsbury: "The ground upon which all these cases have been decided is that the agent has been permitted by the principal to hold himself out as the principal, and that the person dealing with the agent has believed that the agent was the principal and has acted on that belief." By Lord Watson: "It must also be shown that the agent was enabled to appear as the real contracting party by the conduct or by the authority express or implied of the principal. The rule thus explained is intelligible and just; and I agree with Bowen, L. J., that it rests upon the doctrine of estoppel."

In Brown v. Morris, 83 N. Car. 251, it is said: "The proposition that because the defendant thought, without being misled by any one, that the goods belonged to the agent, the principal and owner could not recover, is without support in reason or authority." See also Baxter v. Sherman, 73 Minn. 434, 72 Am. St. Rep. 631.

³⁵ See Rabone v. Williams; George v. Clagett.

³⁶ As in Hogan v. Shorb; Tripp, etc., Shoe Co. v. Martin.

³⁷ See Maxfield v. Carpenter, supra; Bassett v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 671.

³⁸ See second note to this section supra.

undoubtedly led in a number of cases to the extension of the rule beyond its legitimate boundaries.

§ 868. — It is indispensable to the operation of this rule that the other party, exercising reasonable prudence, shall not know and shall have no good reason to believe that the agent is not the owner at the time he makes the payment or becomes entitled to make the set-off.³⁹ Hence if, before such event, the principal intervenes and requires performance to himself,⁴⁰ or if, from the terms of any bill, invoice or other similar document,⁴¹ or from any other source,⁴² the other party is fairly apprised that the ostensible owner is merely an agent, the rule protecting the other party will not apply.

It is not enough that the other party merely has the means of knowing. "He may have the means of knowing and not know that he has the means, nor be able to discover it in the exercise of reasonable diligence."⁴³ The circumstances must be such as fairly to apprise him. That he did not read or heed would then be immaterial,⁴⁴ though if he could not read, he would not necessarily be charged with notice where there was nothing to indicate to him that the paper unread was germane to the transaction.⁴⁵

Where the character in which the sale is made is equivocal, as where the buyer knows that the seller sometimes sells as agent and sometimes on his own account, the buyer must inquire.⁴⁶

§ 869. Agent to sell merely or to solicit orders, without possession of goods, not authorized to receive payment.—Where however, the agent is not entrusted with possession, the mere fact that he negotiated the sale of the goods, or the fact that he is, or acts as, agent to solicit orders for the goods, will not, in the absence of a controlling usage to the contrary, authorize him to receive payment therefor.⁴⁷

³⁹ See cases cited in preceding section; also Dresser v. Norwood, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 466; Baxter v. Sherman, 73 Minn. 434, 72 Am. St. Rep. 631; Henderson v. McNally, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 134, aff'd 168 N. Y. 646; Wilson v. Groelle, 83 Wis. 530.

⁴⁰ Henderson v. McNally, supra; Wilson v. Groelle, supra.

⁴¹ Henderson v. McNally, supra; Bassett v. Lederer, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 671; Gallup v. Lederer, Id. 710; Smith v. Morrill, 39 Kan. 665.

In Lumley v. Corbett, 18 Cal. 494, it was held that the fact that the order for delivery was signed by the principal was not enough to charge the buyer with notice of his interest. Compare Capel v. Thornton, 3 Car. & P. 352.

⁴² Notice to the buyer's agent is enough. Dresser v. Norwood, supra.

⁴³ Eclipse Wind Mill Co. v. Thorson, 46 Iowa, 181.

⁴⁴ Bassett v. Lederer, supra.

⁴⁵ Eclipse Wind Mill Co. v. Thorson, supra.

⁴⁶ Miller v. Lea, 35 Md. 396, 6 Am. Rep. 417; Baxter v. Sherman, 73 Minn. 434, 72 Am. St. Rep. 631.

⁴⁷ Meyer v. Stone, 46 Ark. 210, 55 Am. Rep. 577; Sioux City Nursery

And where a traveling salesman has sold goods for the price of which a note has been taken in the principal's name, the agent will have, from the fact of the sale, no implied authority to afterwards receive payment of the note.⁴⁸

Of course, this rule is not an inflexible and invariable one, and it may give way before a course of dealing, and a violation of it may be cured by ratification.⁴⁹

§ 870. When traveling salesmen may receive payment.—The practice of selling goods through the agency of traveling salesmen who go from place to place exhibiting samples and soliciting orders, has become so universal, that the question of the authority of such an agent to subsequently receive payment for the goods, has become very important and has been much discussed, but the decisions have not been entirely uniform. A few cases have held that such an agent has implied authority to collect the price of the goods supplied in pursuance of orders taken by him.^{49a} The overwhelming preponderance of authority, however, is undoubtedly in harmony with the principles stated in the preceding section, that mere authority to solicit orders for goods, or subscriptions for books and other articles sold by subscription, the orders or subscriptions to be accepted and filled by the principal, implies no authority in the agent to subsequently receive pay-

Co. v. Magnes, 5 Colo. App. 172; Lakeside Press, etc., Co. v. Campbell, 39 Fla. 523; Collins v. Crews, 3 Ga. App. 238; Abrahams v. Weiler, 87 Ill. 179; Clark v. Smith, 88 Ill. 298; Greenhood v. Keator, 9 Ill. App. 183; Kane v. Barstow, 42 Kan. 465, 16 Am. St. Rep. 490; Dreyfus v. Goss, 67 Kan. 57; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush. (Ky.) 12; Clark v. Murphy, 164 Mass. 490; Kornemann v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36; Janney v. Boyd, 30 Minn. 319; Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298, 30 Am. Rep. 795; Chambers v. Short, 79 Mo. 204; Hayes v. Colby, 65 N. H. 192; Law v. Stokes, 3 Vroom (N. J. L.), 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655; Bernshouse v. Abbott, 16 Vroom (N. J.), 531, 46 Am. Rep. 789; Higgins v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 417; Wright v. Cabot, 89 N. Y. 570; Hurd v. Consolidated Steel Co., 47 App. Div. (N. Y.) 467; Dunn v. Wright, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 244; Maxwell v. Carpenter, 84 Hun (N. Y.), 450; Hahnenfeld v. Wolff, 15 N. Y.

Misc. 133; Crosby v. Hill, 39 Ohio, 100; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. 513; Giltinan v. Bergey, 5 Pa. Dist. Rep. 20; Schull v. New Birdsall Co., 15 S. D. 8; Fabian Mfg. Co. v. Newman (Tenn. Ch.), 62 S. W. 218; Kohn v. Washer, 64 Tex. 131, 53 Am. Rep. 745; McKindly v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515, 42 Am. Rep. 740; Adams v. Fraser, 27 C. C. A. 108, 82 Fed. 211.

⁴⁸ Holland v. Von Beil, 89 Ga. 223.

⁴⁹ See Goldstein v. Tank, 149 N. Y. App. Div. 341.

^{49a} Hoskins v. Johnson, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 469; Collins v. Newton, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 269. [But these cases are admitted to be contrary to the weight of authority in Kuhlman v. Hart (Tenn. Ch.), 59 S. W. 455, and are practically overruled in Fabian Mfg. Co. v. Newman (Tenn. Ch.), 62 S. W. 218, orally affirmed by Supreme Court.] See also Trainer v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; Walton Guano Co. v. McCall, 111 Ga. 114.

ment, and payment made to such an agent will not be payment to the principal, unless the agent be in fact authorized or the principal has held him out as so authorized.^{49b} If however, payment in whole or in part is to be made at the time the order or subscription is taken, authority to receive such payment will be implied, as has been already seen,^{49c} and so, of course, if such has been the course of dealing between the particular parties, or if the principal has held the traveling salesman out as authorized to receive it, a payment made to him subsequent to the sale will be payment to the principal.^{49d} Subsequent dealings or the terms of the employment may also give the authority.^{49e}

^{49b} Simon v. Johnson, 101 Ala. 368, 105 Ala. 344, 53 Am. St. R. 125; Meyer v. Stone, 46 Ark. 210, 55 Am. Rep. 577; Sioux City Nursery Co. v. Magnes, 5 Colo. App. 172; Lakeside Press, etc., Co. v. Campbell, 39 Fla. 523; Clark v. Smith, 88 Ill. 298; Greenhood v. Keator, 9 Ill. App. 183; Williams v. Anderson, 107 Ill. App. 32; Kane v. Barstow, 42 Kan. 465, 16 Am. St. R. 490; Dreyfuss v. Goss, 67 Kan. 57; Clark v. Murphy, 164 Mass. 490; Kornemann v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36; Brown v. Lally, 79 Minn. 38; Sumrall v. Kitselman, — Miss. —, 58 So. 594; Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298, 30 Am. Rep. 795; Chambers v. Short, 79 Mo. 204; Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655; Hahnenfeld v. Wolff, 15 N. Y. Misc. 133; Zilberman v. Friedman, 54 Misc. 256; Scarritt Furn. Co. v. Hudspeth, 19 Okl. 429, 14 Ann. Cas. 857; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. 513; Fabian Mfg. Co. v. Newman (Tenn. Ch. App.), 62 S. W. 218; Crawford v. Whittaker, 42 W. Va. 430; McKindley v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515, 42 Am. Rep. 740. The fact that the agent falsely represents himself to be a member of the selling firm is immaterial. Crawford v. Whittaker, supra.

^{49c} See ante, § 864.

^{49d} See Luckie v. Johnston, 89 Ga. 321 (principal sent the bills for the goods to the agent, and buyer paid in reliance thereon); Hutchison Mfg. Co. v. Henry, 44 Mo. App. 263

(principal clothed agent with apparent authority by entrusting him with possession of the goods); Warren v. Halley, 107 Mich. 120 (buyer asked where he should pay; principal replied that he preferred to have payments at the office, but would send a man; later selling agent came with a receipt on one of principal's printed blanks, though made out by the agent, and buyer paid to him).

A general agent for the sale of property held to have implied authority to receive payment either before or after delivery. Sawin v. Union Bldg. Ass'n, 95 Iowa, 477.

See also Lorton v. Russell, 27 Neb. 372.

^{49e} Where a salesman who had taken an order from a purchaser who did not pay, was offered the account by his principal at a discount, and was authorized to sell the account to any one at a discount, instead of selling it wrote directly to the debtor that he might have the same discount if he would pay the debt to the agent, and the debtor did so pay it, but the agent did not pay the principal, it was held that these offers of the principal were sufficient to authorize the agent to collect the amount as he did, and that the principal could not recover the amount from the debtor. Superior Mfg. Co. v. Russell, 127 Ga. 151.

So where the contract between the principal and the agent makes

A merely local custom, however, to make such payments can not be operative in the absence of some evidence that the principal knew of and assented to it.^{49f}

§ 871. — When payment to agent part of terms of sale.— But it has been held that an agent authorized to take the order has the implied authority to make terms of payment as to time and place, to the extent at least of what was customary and not extraordinary; and that where it is made one of the terms of sale that payment may be made to the agent at the purchaser's place of business, to save the expense and trouble of remittance, payment to the agent was payment to the principal.^{49g}

So where a traveling salesman agreed, though without authority, to receive certain goods in part payment for those sold by him, the purchaser being ignorant of his want of authority, it was held that the agreement was binding upon the principal who had shipped the goods to the purchaser, and sued for the price.^{49h}

These cases, however, are to be sustained upon the ground of ratification rather than that of implied authority. The defendant had agreed to pay the price only upon the understanding that it could be paid in a certain manner. If the agreement in that respect was unauthorized, the principal might refuse to deliver, or might recover his goods, but he could not sue on the contract and enforce it, so far as it was favorable to himself, and repudiate it as to the residue.

§ 872. — Notice of want of authority.—But whatever inference of authority might otherwise be drawn, its effect may be neutralized by an adequate notice to the purchaser that the agent has no authority to receive payment. Express notice of such a limitation actually delivered to the purchaser would of course be sufficient;⁴⁹ⁱ him liable for the price of the goods sold by him, it is said that he has thereby implied authority to collect the price [sed quære as a universal rule] though another term in the contract providing that the principal should have the right to make collections if he desired was held conclusive of the agent's power in the absence of an election by the principal to collect. Diebold Safe & Lock Co. v. Dunnegan, 135 Mo. App. 135.

^{49f} Simon v. Johnson, 101 Ala. 368.

^{49g} Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402, 38 Am. Rep. 682; Trainor v. Mori- son, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; Scott v. Hopkins, 41 Hun, 637.

^{49h} Billings v. Mason, 80 Me. 496 (distinguishing Clough v. Whitcomb, 105 Mass. 482, and Finch v. Mansfield, 97 Mass. 89, and likening the case to Wilson v. Stratton, 47 Me. 120).

So also Hook v. Crowe, 100 Me. 399; Shoninger v. Peabody, 57 Conn. 42, 14 Am. St. Rep. 88.

⁴⁹ⁱ See Metz v. Savings Association, 117 App. Div. 825 (a land case) where it was a term in the contract that the agents had not power to receive payment.

but it need not always be express: it is enough if the facts brought to the buyer's attention reasonably apprise him of the limitation.^{49j}

It is frequently attempted to give notice to the purchaser that the agent is not authorized to receive payment, by printing or writing upon the bill or invoice, a warning to that effect. Whether such a warning can be held to be constructive notice seems to depend largely upon the degree of prominence given it. Thus, it is said by a Wisconsin judge, "On the face of the bill sent to the defendant, and directly under his address, there appears in large, legible print in red ink, as if stamped upon it, the words 'Agents not authorized to collect.' * * * If these words so legible and prominent on the face of the bill, would not be notice, it would seem to be impossible to give a purchaser such a notice. By all authorities he must be presumed to have observed these words, and to have had such notice when they were so prominent on the face of the bill of goods in his possession, and in which he alone was interested as purchaser. It might as well be said that the contents of any written or printed notice of any kind, or for any purpose, were not presumed to have been brought home to, and to be known by, a party on his receipt of the notice."⁵⁰

In a Vermont case above referred to it is said: "It is further insisted by the plaintiffs' counsel that the defendants were charged with notice that they must pay the plaintiffs and not Allen (the agent) by reason of the words 'payable at office' written on their bill rendered, when the last invoice was sent. The defendants did not see those ^{49j} Williams v. Anderson, 107 Ill. App. 32.

In Lamb v. Hirschberg, 1 App. Div. (N. Y.) 519, it is said: "If there is notice direct or implied to pay to a principal, and, therefore, not to the agent, payment to the latter will not bind the principal." In this case one Beaumont as agent for Bradley sold goods to defendant. At the time of sending the invoice Bradley wrote to defendant. "Kindly favor me with your remittance on receipt of the goods, and oblige," and later, "will you kindly send check for above amount by return, or in case you have remitted part, kindly send balance to cover." Held, subsequent payment to Beaumont not binding. In Stanwood v. Trefethen, 84 Me. 295, plaintiff, the owner of a cargo of fish, wrote to defendant, who purchased such fish: "Should the schooner, Midnight, * * * sell fresh fish in Portland, will you please see that the check is made payable to my order as the captain is a stranger to me? By so doing you will confer a favor." Held, notice was sufficient. In Lakeside Press & Photo-Engraving Co. v. Campbell, 39 Fla. 523, after a sale and the receipt of the goods plaintiff sent the following notice to defendants: "Agents are not authorized to make collections." Held, sufficient notice.

⁵⁰ Orton, J., in McKindly v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515, 42 Am. Rep. 740. To same effect is Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655, though there was also a letter of warning in this case.

words. Therefore they had no notice in fact. Should they be held chargeable with notice? The plaintiffs sent that bill without any letter, when the goods were sent, which was three months before the time of payment agreed upon. The defendants examined it as to items charged and amount of same, and filed it away,—never noticing those words; and when Allen came around at about the time he was to come for the pay by the terms of the sale, they paid him the balance due,—supposing all the while that he was, as he claimed to be, a member of the firm. In view of the obscure manner in which those words were written on the bill-head; and of the circumstances under which, and the purposes for which in other respects that bill was sent, and of the terms of the contract as to whom and when and where payment was to be made, we do not think the defendants were guilty of such negligence, in not seeing those words, as to be chargeable with notice which they did not in fact have. It was a matter which the plaintiffs might easily have made plain. They saw fit to undertake to give the notice in an obscure way which was likely to be ineffectual. It turned out so and they should bear the consequences.”⁵¹

So goods ordered of an agent were delivered as agreed, accompanied by a bill with the words, “All bills must be paid by check to our order or in current funds at our office,” printed in red at the top. About two weeks afterward, the agent called for and received payment, giving to the purchasers a receipted bill bearing the same notice in red letters that appeared upon the bill sent with the goods. The agent embezzled the money. The court said: “The plaintiff seeks to charge the defendants with knowledge that payment was required to be made according to the terms of the notice in red letters upon the bill sent with the goods. The defendants did not see the notice, nor taking into consideration the care ordinarily exercised by prudent men, are they at fault for not observing it. It is not so prominent upon the bill as to become a distinctive feature of it, one that would be likely to attract attention in the hurry of business and that ought to have been seen by the defendants. It would have been an easy matter for the plaintiff to have inclosed the bill in a letter of advice, calling the attention of the defendants to the fact that he was unwilling to intrust collections to his agent.”⁵²

⁵¹ Veazey, J., in Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402, 38 Am. Rep. 682. To same effect: Luckie v. Johnston, 89 Ga. 321.

⁵² Trainor v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, 57 Am. Rep. 790; see also Kinsman

v. Kershaw, 119 Mass. 140; Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 655.

A notice mailed but not received would be of no effect. Scott v. Hopkins, 41 Hun, 637.

§ 873. ——— What may be received in payment when receipt is authorized.—The question of what a selling agent, who is authorized to receive payment, may accept as payment, is included within the discussion in a later subdivision dealing with agents generally who are authorized to collect or receive payment;⁵³ and it will not be separately considered here.

§ 874. ——— Purchaser cannot set off debt due from agent.—For reasons similar to those preventing payment to an agent authorized merely to sell, the purchaser cannot set off against the principal a debt due him from the agent,⁵⁴ except where the agent is permitted to appear as ostensible owner as has been seen in a preceding section.⁵⁵

§ 875. Implied authority of traveling salesmen to hire horses.—It has been held that an agent authorized to travel from place to place to sell his principal's goods, has implied authority to hire horses and carriages, when necessary for use in the course of his employment, to transport himself and his samples;⁵⁶ and for that purpose may use his principal's funds in his hands, or pledge his principal's credit. And even though the agent may have been supplied by the principal with money for that purpose, and forbidden to pledge the credit of the principal therefor, the principal, it is said, will be liable to one who in good faith has supplied the agent with horses, without knowledge of those instructions.⁵⁷

⁵³ See post, §§ 946 et seq.

⁵⁴ Bernshouse v. Abbott, 16 Vroom (N. J.), 531, 46 Am. Rep. 789; Talboys v. Boston, 46 Minn. 144; Zelenka v. Port Huron Mach. Co., 144 Iowa, 592; Grubel v. Busche, 75 Kan. 820.

⁵⁵ See ante, § 867.

⁵⁶ Bentley v. Doggett, 51 Wis. 224, 37 Am. Rep. 827.

See also Huntley v. Mathias, 90 N. Car. 101, 47 Am. Rep. 516, where the principal was held liable because his agent, who had hired a horse to transport his samples, had overdriven the same. Same effect: Rexroth v. Holloway, 45 Ind. App. 36.

But in Alabama it is held that "authority to sell and canvass for the sale of sewing-machines, does not, per se, confer the power to purchase or hire a horse or mule to aid the agent's locomotion and thus fasten a liability on the principal." Howe Ma- chine Co. v. Ashley, 60 Ala. 496. See also Nicholson v. Pease, 61 Vt. 534.

⁵⁷ Bentley v. Doggett, supra.

"The defendants not having furnished their agent the necessary teams and carriages for transportation, he clearly had the right to hire the same and pay their hire out of the funds in his hands belonging to them. This is admitted by all parties. The real question is, can the agent, having the money of his principals in his possession for the purpose of paying such hire, by neglecting to pay for it, charge them with the payment to the party furnishing the same, such party being ignorant at the time of furnishing the same that the agent was furnished by his principals with money and forbidden to pledge their credit for the same?"

"There can be no question that, from the nature of the business re-

The reasoning of the court, more fully set forth in the margin, was that the agent had apparent authority to hire the horses, and that he might hire them upon the basis that payment should be made after the service had been performed. He thus created a valid debt against his principal, and, if he then failed to pay it with the money supplied him for that purpose, the principal must suffer, as he would in any other case in which an agent commissioned to pay a debt had failed to do so. Evidence that it was the custom in Chicago, where the principal did business, to furnish traveling salesmen with funds for their expenses was held to be immaterial, unless it was so universal that the other party in Wisconsin could fairly be charged with notice of it.

§ 876. — There being no express authority to hire the horses and carriage in this case, upon the principal's credit, the conclusion reached by the court can be sustained only on the ground that the authority to do so was (a) incidental, (b) usual, or (c) warranted by the principal's previous conduct, as, for example, a course of dealing or a "holding out." The last two may, however, be eliminated from this case. There was no proof of such conduct, course of dealing or "holding out:" and there was no proof that it was usual to do so. The only proof of usage was that it was customary in Chicago to supply such agents with funds. Was the authority, then, "incidental," within the meaning of the rule that every authority carries with it, unless the contrary be made known, implied authority to do those things which are reasonably necessary and proper to carry into effect the main authority conferred?⁵⁸ The question may be stated in two ways: (1) Is quired to be done by their agent, the defendants held out to those who might have occasion to deal with him that he had the right to contract for teams and carriages necessary and convenient for doing such business, in the name of his principals, if he saw fit, in the way such service is usually contracted for; and we may, perhaps, take judicial notice that such service is usually contracted for, payment to be made after the service is performed. It would seem to follow that as the agent had the power to bind his principals by a contract for such service, to be paid for in the usual way, if he neglects or refuses to pay for the same after the service is performed, the principals must pay. The fault of the agent in not paying out the money of his principal, in his hands cannot deprive the party furnishing the service of the right to enforce the contract against them, he being ignorant of the restricted authority of the agent. If the party furnishing the service knew that the agent had been furnished by his principal with the money to pay for the service, and had been forbidden to pledge the credit of his principals for such service, he would be in a different position. Under such circumstances, if he furnished the service to the agent, he would be held to have furnished it upon the sole credit of the agent, and he would be compelled to look to the agent alone for his pay."

⁵⁸ See ante, § 715.

authority to pledge the principal's credit, in hiring horses to transport the agent and his samples, to points not reached by railroad, reasonably necessary and proper as an incident to the authority of an agent authorized to go about the country to sell goods for his principal? (2) Is such an authority an incident if the agent is not supplied with funds? If the former can be said, then it would be immaterial, so far as the third person ignorant of the fact was concerned, that the principal had, in the given case, supplied the agent with funds and forbidden him to obtain credit. That would be in the nature of a secret limitation upon apparent authority. If the latter is to be said, the principal would not be bound, unless the case were thought to fall within the rule, not recognized by all courts, that the agent's act was a representation as to a condition peculiarly within his own knowledge upon which the party dealing with him may rely.⁵⁹ The Wisconsin court took the first view.

